3 Neither let my enemies laugh at me: for none of them that wait on thee shall be confounded.

4 Let all them be confounded that act unjust things without cause.

Show, O Lord, thy ways to me, and teach me thy paths.

5 Direct me in thy truth, and teach me; for thou art God, my Saviour; and on thee have I waited all the day long.

But these terms are used synonymously, and denote that God gives a just reward; "when he crowns our merits, he crowns his own gifts." S. Aug. Theod. C.—Mercy goes before; good works must follow, to obtain eternal glory. W.

VER. 6. The face. Heb. "Thy face, O Jacob, always." S. Jer.—Prot. (marg. God of) Jacob. Selah. H.—Thus they intimate that the Heb. is imperfect. All the preceding virtues belong to Jesus Christ, who obtained mercy for us. M.

VER. 7. Princes; or, "Lift up your chief or highest gates:" portas principes. Heb. "gates, lift up your heads." Here the gates themselves are addressed, while the Sept. and Vulg. turn the discourse to the porters or princes. Bert.—The tops of the gates must be raised, to let the triumphal car pass through. Isa. vi. 4; Amos viii. 3, and ix. 1. The Church has constantly understood this passage of Christ's ascension. The saints in his train address the angels, who appear to be filled with astonishment. Theod. Euseb. C.—The gates of heaven are more properly styled eternal, than those of the temple, which were not yet erected; or of Jerusalem, which should be (Bert.) soon demolished. H.—This apostrophe to the gates is very striking, commanding them to allow more room for the crowd to pass in the train of the conqueror, who was usually seated on a lofty chariot. C.

VER. 8. Who. This is the question of the Levites, when the ark approached, or of the angels in heaven, who hold a dialogue with the attendants of Christ. These return a satisfactory answer only at the second demand, having first given four titles to their great King. Bert.—The angels express their admiration of the glory with which Christ, (W.) in our human nature, (H.) was environed; and the prophet replies, that he had overcome all his opponents, and again orders the gates to open. W.

VER. 10. Hosts of all heavenly powers, (W.) and the arbiter of war. H.—Both Jews and foreigners were convinced that God granted victory to his people, if they had not forfeited his favour by their crimes, as in the case of Achan and of the sons of Heli. Jos. vii., and 1 Kings iv.; Judith v. 24. The title of Lord of hosts was very applicable to Christ after his victory. C.

PSAL. XXIV., &c. VER. 1. David. This word alone occurs in Heb. Sept. and S. Jerom add also Psalms. H.—S. Aug. and Theod. agree with the Vulg. C.—These variations prove that we cannot depend much on the titles; and the learned do not look upon them as the word of God. This is the first of the seven alphabetical psalms. The 33rd, 35th, 110th, 111th, 118th, and 144th, are of the same description, being written in this manner (C.) on account of their importance, (Kimchi,) or to help the memory, (Bert.,) or for copies, to teach young people to write. Grot.—Each verse forms a distinct sentence, not much connected with the rest. We perceive some derangement in the present Heb. copies of this psalm, as the letters are not in proper order, though it might easily be restored by altering the divisions, &c.—The Sept. and S. Jerom seem to have had better copies.

VER. 2. In thee. Heb. doc. Thus the second verse will properly begin with b, (Capel., Honbige,) though the Jews place my God first, as it is in the Vulg. Deus meus, in te, &c. H.—As I am. Sept. Compl. adds, "for ever."

VER. 3. Laugh, saying, scornfully, Where is their God? C.—Wait. This is often urged (Isa. xlii. 23) as comprising all the science of a spiritual life. We must neither despair nor omit the means of salvation. Bert.—Those who hope for the accomplishment of God's promises will not be disappointed. C.

VER. 4. All, is not expressed in Heb., or some copies of the Sept. Bert. Cause. No one can have reason to do so. But those who injure their harmless brethren, are more reprehensible, (H.) and the psalmist foretells that they will be put to shame. S. Jer.—This manner of praying frequently occurs in the psalms, to signify the event, and the approbation of the just. W.

6 Remember, O Lord, thy bowels of compassion; and thy mercies that are from the beginning of the world.

7 The sins of my youth and my ignorances do not remember.

According to thy mercy remember thou me: for thy goodness sake, O Lord.

8 The Lord is sweet and righteous: therefore he will give a law to sinners in the way.

9 He will guide the mild in judgment: he will teach the meek his ways.

10 All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth, to them that seek after his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For thy name's sake, O Lord, thou wilt pardon my sin: for it is great.

12 Who is the man that feareth the Lord? He hath appointed him a law in the way he hath chosen.

13 His soul shall dwell in good things: and his seed shall inherit the land.

14 The Lord is a firmament to them that fear him: and his covenant shall be made manifest to them.

15 My eyes are ever towards the Lord: for he shall pluck my feet out of the snare.

16 Look thou upon me, and have mercy on me; for I am alone and poor.

17 The troubles of my heart are multiplied: deliver me from my necessities.

18 See my abjection and my labour; and forgive me all my sins.

VER. 6. World. God's truth or fidelity in performing his promises, and his tender mercies towards his people, are the motives most frequently urged. C.

VER. 7. Ignorances. Heb. "defects," as youth is more apt to omit duties than to act very wickedly. Yet it is difficult to decide how grievous such sins may be. Bert.—Passion and ignorance then concur to lead the unexperienced astray. H.—From the first use of reason, many are careless, and neglect to learn their duty. W.—Ignorance is sometimes a sin, though it may be more pardonable. 1 Tim i. M.

VER. 8. Righteous. Though he is always ready to receive the penitent, he will punish the obstinate with severity. C. W.—Yet he points out the means of obtaining his favour. S. Aug.—A law. Heb. "will instruct." C.

VER. 9. Mild. Only rebels are made the victims of justice. H.

VER. 10. Seek. Heb. "keep." But no one seeks after the law, who does not strive to keep it. Bert.—Jesus Christ showed mercy at his first coming, and he will display truth at his second, judging all with equity. S. Aug.

VER. 11. Great. "Original sin is common to all, and will not be washed away, except God be pleased to destroy it in baptism." S. Jer.—David had committed adultery; and all must acknowledge their manifold guilt. C.—Though the guilt had been remitted, the punishment due to David's crimes was to be endured in this life, and he ought daily to pray for pardon. Bert.

VER. 12. He hath. This may be understood either of God, or of man, who has chosen a state of life. Bert.—Provided he be guided by the fear of the Lord, (C.) all things will turn to his advantage. H.

VER. 13. Dwell. Heb. intimates, "all night" at rest; yet so that he must only enjoy temporal goods like a traveller. Bert.—We ought to look up to heaven as to our true country, (C.) of which Palestine was only a figure. Psal. lxxviii. M.—The land, is not expressed in Heb. "his seed shall receive (good) for an inheritance." H.—Five blessings are here promised to those who fear God: instruction, a supply of necessities, a progeny to imitate his virtues, protection, and heaven. W.

VER. 14. Firmament, or strong support. H.—Heb. "the secret of the Lord is for them," &c. He conceals nothing from his friends. C.—Both these senses are good, (Bert.,) and the Heb. words are nearly allied. Robertson.—All who fear God, ought to interest themselves, and pray that he would enlighten the ignorant, and convert sinners. Bert.—The uncertain and hidden things of thy wisdom thou hast made manifest to me. Psal. i. M.

VER. 15. Lord. Our prayers are not heard, because they are not like this; fervent, incessant, and humble. We have all to fear from our passions, which are the most dangerous snares. Bert.

VER. 16. Alone. Desolate, (Psal. xxi. 21,) without any assistant. H.—Such a man destitute of God's grace. W.

VER. 17. Multiplied. Heb. "enlarged."

VER. 19. Unjust. Heb. also, "cruel," (H.) or "violent." But S. Jerom agrees with the Sept. Our spiritual enemies are the most dangerous and unrelenting, and we are too often off our guard. Bert.—The wicked, through hatred of God, (H.) seek to draw others into sin. W

19 Consider my enemies, for they are multiplied, *and have hated me with an unjust hatred.

20 Keep thou my soul, and deliver me: I shall not be ashamed, for I have hoped in thee.

21 The innocent and the upright have adhered to me: because I have waited on thee.

22 Deliver Israel, O God, from all his tribulations.

PSALM XXV.

JUDICA ME DOMINE.

David's prayer to God in his distress, to be delivered, that he may come to worship him in his tabernacle.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

JUDGE me, O Lord, for I have walked in my innocence: and I have put my trust in the Lord, and shall not be weakened.

2 Prove me, O Lord, and try me; burn my reins and my heart.

3 For thy mercy is before my eyes: and I am well pleased with thy truth.

4 I have not sat with the council of vanity: neither will I go in with the doers of unjust things.

5 I have hated the assembly of the malignant; and with the wicked I will not sit.

6 I will wash my hands among the innocent: and will compass thy altar, O Lord.

7 That I may hear the voice of thy praise: and tell of all thy wondrous works.

* John xv. 25.

VER. 22. Deliver. Heb. pode, "redeem." All the twenty-two (H.) letters of the alphabet are complete without this supplication for all Israel, or for the Church. W.—It might form a part of the last verse, or belong to the next psalm; unless it be a conclusion like that of Psal. xxxiii., (C.) out of the alphabetical order. Houbigant.—Israel. S. Aug. and some ancient psalters read "Me, O God of Israel, from all my tribulations." C.

PSAL. XXV., &c. VER. 1. David. Heb. and the most correct copies of the Sept., &c., have only "Of David." H.—The Comp. and Ald. edit. add indeed A psalm. But these form no rule, as the Vat. Sept. is allowed to be the best. Bert.

VER. 2. Burn, like gold in the furnace. Bert.—Purify all my affections and thoughts with the fire of divine love. S. Aug. S. Jer.—Make my dispositions known to the world. I have done no one any harm. C.

VER. 3. Truth. Before such a judge I fear no calumny. I have always endeavoured to imitate these divine perfections. C.—Heb. "I have walked constantly in thy truth," which could not be without loving it. Bert.

VER. 4. Council. Heb. "men."—Doers. Heb. "men of darkness," which means the wicked, (Bert.,) who love darkness. Prot. "dissemblers." H.—The sacred minister ought to avoid evil company. C.—David had often people of this description, like Joab and Abner, in his train; but he did not approve of their conduct.

VER. 6. Innocent. Heb. "in innocence," avoiding every thing which may defile and render me unfit to approach thy holy altar. Many things, (C.) of themselves innocent, (H.) excluded the priests of the old law from officiating, and if they had partaken of any idolatrous sacrifices, they lost their dignity for ever. Ezech. xlv. 12. How much greater ought to be the sanctity of Christian priests! The Jews carefully abstained from eating what the law forbade. Dan. i. 8; Tob. i. 12. David would not sit down to a feast with the proud. Psal. c. 5. It was customary to wash before meat (Matt. xv. 2; Mark vii. 3) and prayer. Deut. xxi. 6. M.—People entering the house of God, and priests at the altar, adopt the same symbols of interior purity, and ought to be penetrated with the like sentiments. H.—David opposes the society of the good to that of the wicked, knowing that the former is a great inducement to virtue, and he declares that he will wash or converse with such. Bert.

VER. 7. Hear. Heb. with points, "publish." Bert.—S. Jerom agrees with the Sept.—Thy praise. The former word is not expressed in the Vulg. or Heb., (H.) but it is understood; and occurs in some edit. of the Sept., as well as in the Syr., Houbig., &c.

VER. 8. Beauty. The ark. 1 Kings iv. 22. Sym. "the palace." C.—Heb. "the dwelling." The psalmist desires to imitate those fervent Levites, who chose always to attend the tabernacle. Deut. xviii. 6. C.—Mæn, when applied to the "dwelling" of God, may be properly rendered a temple, heaven, &c. Deut. xxvi. 15. Bert.—No one who reflects on the blessings dispensed in God's house, can fail to be struck with admiration. W.

VER. 9. Take; lit. "destroy," (H.) or suffer me not to be contaminated or lost. W.—Heb. "gather." Prot. or "take not away." Marg. and S. Jer. H.—Heb. may be more expressive, and agrees with the parable, where God orders the 8 I have loved, O Lord, the beauty of thy house ; and the place where thy glory dwelleth.

9 Take not away my soul, O God, with the wicked : nor my life with bloody men :

10 In whose hands are iniquities : their right hand is filled with gifts.

11 But as for me, I have walked in my innocence : redeem me, and have mercy on me.

12 My foot hath stood in the direct way : in the churches I will bless thee, O Lord.

PSALM XXVI.

DOMINUS ILLUMINATIO.

David's faith and hope in God.

1 The psalm of David before he was anointed.

THE Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear ?

The Lord is the protector of my life ; of whom shall I be afraid ?

2 Whilst the wicked draw near against me, to eat my flesh.

My enemies that trouble me, have themselves been weakened, and have fallen.

3 If armies in camp should stand together against me, my heart shall not fear.

If a battle should rise up against me, in this will I be confident.

4 One thing I have asked of the Lord, this will I seek after ; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life.

cockle to be gathered into bundles, to be burnt. Bert.—Treat me not like the wicked and murderers, who are cut off before their time. C.—David alludes to a future state, as he knew that the wicked were not always punished here. Bert.—O God is not in Heb., Sept., or S. Aug. C.—But it is understood. H.

VER. 10. Gifts, to bribe ; or rather, which the judges have received. Bert.—Seed is always used in a bad sense for “a bribe.” C.—Est munus a lingua . . a manu . . et ab obsequio. S. Jer.

VER. 11. Innocence. He opposes the integrity of his proceedings to that of the wicked. C.—Yet still calls for mercy. H.—Every one should strive to be innocent, and to avoid the company of wordlings. W.

VER. 12. Direct (directo). Prot. “in an even place,” (H.) in the court where the Levites sung. Vatab.—I have followed the paths of justice, and hope soon to be able to praise thee in thy temple. C.—These seven last verses are daily recited at Mass. But do we reflect what innocence and fervour are required of the sacred ministers ? I cannot assert that my paths have never strayed from the right way. Pardon my transgressions, and enable me henceforth to live so that I may be worthy to sound forth thy praise, and to appear in thy sanctuary. Bert.—Thee. Heb. “the Lord.” H.—The psalms of David are now used in every Christian Church. Euthym. M.

PSAL. XXVI., &c. VER. 1. Anointed. Heb. has only, David. The rest of the title occurs only in some copies of the Sept., (Euseb. C.) and is not of Divine authority. Yet if any attention be paid to it, we must suppose that David composed this psalm before his second anointing, as he speaks of great dangers. But this is all uncertain. Bert.—For dangers threatened David ever after he had been declared king. H.—Before Samuel anointed him he was not endued with the spirit of prophecy. See 1 Kings xvi. 13 ; 2 Kings ii. 4, and v. 3. C.—It expresses the sentiments of the Levites in captivity, (C.) and most beautifully consoles the just in distress. David did not write this for himself alone, but for all future generations. Hence it is not necessary to discover the particular circumstance of his life, to which this and many other psalms allude ; nor is there any difficulty in explaining away the various imprecations, as they are not directed against any individual, but relate to all the enemies of the soul ; while they foretell what the wicked shall suffer. Bert.—Afraid. “Find one more powerful, and then fear.” S. Aug.—God both giveth light and strength, so that no enemy can hurt his servants. Luke xxi. 15. W.

VER. 2. Flesh. This expression marks the fury of his enemies. See Job xix. 22, and xxxi. 31. C.—That. Heb. and Sept. “and my foes.” This may denote domestic, and the former word public, enemies. H.—Weakened. Heb. also, “have stumbled.” Those who came to take Jesus Christ verified this prediction. John xviii. 6. C.

VER. 3. This, God's protection (H.) and light, (M.) or in the very heat of battle : prælium. Sept. express the Heb. fem. pronoun, as they do with the Vulg., ver. 4, unam. There is no neuter in Heb., which commonly uses the feminine, instead. C.—It may be deemed too scrupulous an exactitude to express this in a version. The word petition may be understood. Bert. M.—The one petition of David comprised every blessing ; as he had his mind bent on heaven. D.

That I may see the delight of the Lord, and may visit his temple.

5 For he hath hidden me in his tabernacle : in the day of evils, he hath protected me in the secret place of his tabernacle.

6 He hath exalted me upon a rock : and now he hath lifted up my head above my enemies.

I have gone round, and have offered up in his tabernacle a sacrifice of jubilation : I will sing, and recite a psalm to the Lord.

7 Hear, O Lord, my voice, with which I have cried to thee : have mercy on me and hear me.

8 My heart hath said to thee : My face hath sought thee : thy face, O Lord, will I still seek.

9 Turn not away thy face from me ; decline not in thy wrath from thy servant.

Be thou my helper, forsake me not ; do not thou despise me, O God, my Saviour.

10 For my father and my mother have left me : but the Lord hath taken me up.

11 Set me, O Lord, a law in thy way, and guide me in the right path, because of my enemies.

12 Deliver me not over to the will of them that trouble me : for unjust witnesses have risen up against me ; and iniquity hath lied to itself.

13 I believe to see the good things of the Lord in the land of the living.

14 Expect the Lord, do manfully, and let thy heart take courage, and wait thou for the Lord.

VER. 4. House ; the tabernacle, (H.) or temple, (C.) unless he may rather allude to God's presence and union, or his enjoyment in heaven. Bert.—Delight, beauty and sweetness, as the Heb. implies. Many of the ancients read, “the will,” voluntatem, with Sixtus V., &c. But the edition of Clem. VIII. agrees with the Heb. and Oriental versions. C.

VER. 5. Tabernacle : in the Catholic Church, so that the enemy can either not find, or at least cannot hurt, my soul. W.—I hope one day to enjoy rest in the temple. C.—The verbs are in the future, in Heb., both here and in the following verse.

VER. 6. Round. Heb. “my enemies around.” But the Sept. understand it of David, (Bert.,) or of the priest, who poured the blood of the victims on different sides of the altar. H.—Jubilation ; singing and music, which are styled the fruit, or calves of the lips. Isa. lviii. 19 ; Osce xiv. 3. C.—David diligently recounted God's benefits, with all his heart and voice. W.

VER. 7. To thee, is understood in Heb. and the Rom. Sept. H.

VER. 8. Face hath. Heb. pointed, “faces seek ye.” But Sept., S. Jer., Chal., &c., take no notice of these points ; and even Prot. marg. has, “My heart said unto thee, Let my face seek thy face” (Bert.) ; though in the text they derange the words, and add, “When thou saidst. Seek ye my face, my heart said,” &c. H.—Seek. “I have sought for no reward besides thee.” S. Aug.—I have earnestly desired to see thee face to face. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. W.

VER. 9. Decline not. Heb. “put not away.” Prot. But the Vulg. seems preferable.—There seems to be a gradation in the condition of the reprobate here observed. God hides his countenance, withdraws, abandons, and despises them ; and they only perceive their misery when it is too late. Bert.

VER. 10. For. Heb. “Though.” David's parents fled to him. 1 Kings xxii. 1. Yet they had made small account of him, till Samuel called him forth. 1 Kings xvi. 10. The father-in-law and mother-in-law may be also designated. When a saint is deprived of every human advantage, he may still say, with S. Aug., “They have taken from me what God gave, but they have not taken God from me, who gave those things.” Bert.—Though I am like an orphan, I hope for all good from God, my Father. Isa. lxiii. 16. C.

VER. 12. Will. Lit. “souls.” H.—Some ancient copies have, “the hands.”—Unjust. Heb. “false.” H.—To itself, ought not to be urged no more than eat sibi, vade tibi. Gen. xii. 1 ; Cant. i. 7. C.—It is a Heb. idiom. H.

VER. 13. I. Heb. “But I believe that I shall see.” S. Jer.—“I had fainted, unless,” &c. Prot. H.—Living, or of promise, as this country is often designated, (Muis. T. Du Pin. C.) or rather in heaven, (Bert. M.) where death shall be no more. H.—The Fathers explain it in this more elevated sense. C.—The just are comforted by God, and by the hope of heavenly rewards. W.—The land of the living may be opposed to the grave, where none can worship God. H.

VER. 14. And let. Heb. “and he will strengthen thy heart, and wait” (instead of and, Prot. put, without reason, “Wait, I say” on the Lord.” We must do our utmost : yet all our strength must come from God. H.—The prophet encourage his own soul to exercise patience, fortitude, and longanimity (Psal. xiii W.) unto the end. M.

PSALM XXVII.

AD TE DOMINE CLAMABO.

David's prayer that his enemies may not prevail over him.

1 A psalm for David himself.

UNTO thee will I cry, O Lord: O my God, be not thou silent to me; lest if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear, O Lord, the voice of my supplication, when I pray to thee; when I lift up my hands to thy holy temple.

3 Draw me not away together with the wicked; and with the workers of iniquity destroy me not:

Who speak peace with their neighbour, but evils are in their hearts.

4 Give them according to their works, and according to the wickedness of their inventions.

According to the works of their hands give thou to them: render to them their reward.

5 Because they have not understood the works of the Lord, and the operations of his hands; thou shalt destroy them, and shalt not build them up.

6 Blessed be the Lord, for he hath heard the voice of my supplication.

7 The Lord is my helper and my protector: in him hath my heart confided, and I have been helped.

PSAL. XXVII., &c. VER. 1. Himself. The Heb. and Sept. (Rom. and Alex.) have simply "of David."—Lodud. H.—The psalm appears to be a sequel of the preceding, and we may adopt the rule of the Jews, who refer the psalms which have no particular title to the same author and events as those which go before. It may relate to the captives, (C.) or to David under persecution, though the Fathers explain it of Christ suffering, &c., and rising again.—My God. Heb. "rock." This term is so often applied to God, that it might be added to his other ten titles. Bert.—Lest . . . to me, is not in the Rom. Psalter. Euthym., &c.—Pit, grave; though it also denote "a prison." C.—S. Jerom has "be not deaf to me," &c. M.

VER. 2. Pray. Heb. "cry . . . to the recess of thy sanctuary, (H.) or to thy oracle." Sept. place the whole for a part. The tabernacle was often styled temple. 1 Kings i. 9. To lift up the hands was customary in prayer, (1 Tim. ii. 8; Lam. iii. 41. Bert.), to testify whence our aid must come. H.—The Jews turned towards the holy places in prayer, (3 Kings viii. 48; Ezec. viii. 16,) even after the temple was destroyed. C.

VER. 3. Draw. Sixtus V. reads tradas, "deliver," &c. But the present trahas is more conformable to the original. C.—Sept. add, destroy me not, as the Heb. might also signify. Suffer me not to follow bad example.—Hearts. Such double-dealers are abominable, and quite opposite to the candour of a Christian. John i. 47, and 1 Pet. ii. 22. Bert.

VER. 4. Reward. He speaks prophetically, (ver. 5,) or of the spiritual enemies. Bert.—"If they do not understand by kindness, make them understand by torments." S. Jer.—He alludes to the calamities of the Babylonians, who had made such havoc, (C.) as well as to that of all who persecuted or rebelled against David. H.—His zeal prompts him to approve of their chastisement. W.

VER. 6. Blessed. This energetic epithet is generally applied to the Lord, and as it is also given to Christ, he must be true God. Rom. ix. 5, &c.

VER. 7. Protector. Heb. "buckler," to defend me from external enemies, as his grace enables me to do good.—Flesh. Heb. "heart." But joy would manifest itself over the whole body (Prov. xvii. 22. Bert.): and the Syr. agrees with the Sept. "My flesh shall bud forth, and I shall sing his praises in glory." C.—Will. Heb. "canticale," which was dictated by the will. It is suspected that the Sept. read differently. The Fathers explain this text of Christ's, or of our resurrection, (S. Jer., &c.,) which was prefigured by the return from captivity. C.

VER. 8. People (az lamu); instead of which the Heb. has lomu, "their strength;" though the people of God had not been mentioned. S. Jerom translates, "the Lord is my strength." Houbigant shows that the Vulg. is most accurate. Bert.—Prot. marg. "his strength."—Salvation. Lit. "salvations," as he had many times protected David, as well as (H.) the priests and prophets, and all the chosen people. 1 Pet. ii. 9. C.

VER. 9. Exalt, or carry on thy shoulders, like the good shepherd. Luke xv. 4. Restore thy people to prosperity. This was the wish of the carnal Jews. The Christian must raise his thoughts higher. C.—S. Jerom and Prot. "feed . . . and lift them up for ever."

PSAL. XXVIII., &c. VER. 1, &c. Finishing. Sept. ἐξοδίου, or ἐξοδῶν, may also signify, "the going out" (H.); as if the sacred ministers exhorted their successors to perform their duty in the ensuing week, or on the last day of the feast of tabernacles. Lev. xxiii. 36. C.—Heb. has only, "A canticale of David," (H.) and the rest was not in the Hexapla in the time of Theodoret, so that many pay no attention to it. The author seems to have supposed that the psalm was com-

And my flesh hath flourished again, and with my will I will give praise to him.

8 The Lord is the strength of his people, and the protector of the salvation of his anointed.

9 Save, O Lord, thy people, and bless thy inheritance: and rule them and exalt them for ever.

PSALM XXVIII.

AFFERTE DOMINO.

An invitation to glorify God, with a commemoration of his mighty works.

1 A psalm for David, at the finishing of the tabernacle.

BRING to the Lord, O ye children of God: bring to the Lord the offspring of rams.

2 Bring to the Lord glory and honour; bring to the Lord glory to his name: adore ye the Lord in his holy court.

3 The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of majesty hath thundered, The Lord is upon many waters.

4 The voice of the Lord is in power; the voice of the Lord in magnificence.

5 The voice of the Lord breaketh the cedars: yea, the Lord shall break the cedars of Libanus.

6 And shall reduce them to pieces, as a calf of Libanus, and as the beloved son of unicorns.

7 The voice of the Lord divideth the flame of fire:

posed when David had finished the tabernacle, on Sion. C. 2 Kings vi., and 1 Par. xvi.—But the psalmist had in view things of far greater importance, the propagation of Christianity among many great potentates. W.—The seven voices may allude to the seven sacraments, or trumpets. Apoc. x. 3. Bert.—The apostles are styled rams, because they beat down error with the two Testaments; whence bishops' mitres have two horns. Lombard. Ananias.—"Give praise to the Lord, ye troops of angels; render to the Lord glory and strength." Chal. C.—Be grateful for the favours which are here recounted. W.—Most people now translate, "sons of the mighty." Yet S. Jerom and Houbigant have, "offspring of rams;" filii arictum. Bring lambs to the Lord, as the original may certainly mean; though many who are attached to the Heb. allow also, sons of God. Bert.

VER. 2. Honour. Heb. "strength," which we must acknowledge. H.—The first design of sacrifice is to adore God in spirit. W.—Holy court. Heb. "in the holy beauty." 1 Par. xvi. 29.

VER. 3. Voice. Separating the waters from the earth at the beginning, as the six other voices may denote the other works of the creation; or all these voices may signify the various effects of thunder, or may allude to the terrors preceding the last judgment, (Apoc. x. 3,) or attending the establishment and liberation of the Jewish and Christian Churches. The first voice was heard when Jesus was baptized, (Matt. iii. 17,) as the rest may intimate the institution and efficacy of the other sacraments. It is evident that something posterior to the reign of David is prefigured (Bert.); and the Fathers have generally understood the psalm of the propagation of the gospel by the apostles, two of whom are styled sons of thunder. Mark iii. 17. C.—The psalmist speaks of greater things than attended the translation of the ark. He represents our Saviour preaching with great power and majesty, (Matt. vii. 29,) and subjecting the most powerful monarchs to his dominion. W.—Thunder is often styled the voice of God, and is occasioned by the collision of the clouds, (H.) which Moses calls the waters above. S. Bas. C.

VER. 4. Power and magnificence. The sacraments of confirmation, and the blessed Eucharist, or the wonderful propagation of the Church, amid violent persecutions. Bert.

VER. 5. Libanus. Which were the most famous. H.—Storms often tear up trees by the roots. C.—The effects of the gospel and of penance may be described, or the terrors of the last day, when Jesus Christ will destroy the proud. Bert.

VER. 6. Shall reduce them to pieces, &c.—In Hebrew, shall make them to skip like a calf. The psalmist here describes the effects of thunder, (which he calls the voice of the Lord,) which sometimes breaks down the tallest and strongest trees; and makes their broken branches skip, &c. All this is to be understood mystically, of the powerful voice of God's word in his Church; which has broken the pride of the great ones of this world, and brought many of them meekly and joyfully to submit their necks to the sweet yoke of Christ. Ch.—Calf, or "branch," as the Greek word also implies. But Heb. seems more naturally to signify "a calf; Libanus and Sirion, (or Sarion. Deut. iii. 9,) as the son of the unicorn." These two mountains are represented jolting together. C.—And as The construction et dilectus, seems rather to make this another nominative, "the Lord shall, &c., and the beloved, (H.) the Messias, like the son of the unicorn," shall perform the like wonders.

VER. 7. Fire. Lightning, which deals destruction around. C.—The Holy Ghost appeared in the form of parted tongues of fire, to enable the apostles to convert the desert of the Gentile world, and the Jews, represented by the desert of Cades, (W.) which was near their country, (H.) on the frontiers of Idumea. Num. xiii. 27. C.—Shaketh and shakes. S. Jer. has parturire faciens, "making the desert bring forth." Chal. "frightens the serpent."

8 The voice of the Lord shaketh the desert: and the Lord shall shake the desert of Cades.

9 The voice of the Lord prepareth the stags: and he will discover the thick woods: and in his temple all shall speak his glory.

10 The Lord maketh the flood to dwell: and the Lord shall sit king for ever.

The Lord will give strength to his people: the Lord will bless his people with peace.

PSALM XXIX.

EXALTABO TE DOMINE.

David praiseth God for his deliverance, and his merciful dealings with him.

1 A psalm of a canticle, at the dedication of David's house.

2 I WILL extol thee, O Lord, for thou hast upheld me: and hast not made my enemies to rejoice over me.

3 O Lord, my God, I have cried to thee, and thou hast healed me.

4 Thou hast brought forth, O Lord, my soul from hell: thou hast saved me from them that go down into the pit.

5 Sing to the Lord, O ye his saints: and give praise to the memory of his holiness.

6 For wrath is in his indignation; and life is in his good will.

In the evening, weeping shall have place, and in the morning, gladness.

7 And in my abundance I said: I shall never be moved.

VER. 9. Prepareth. Heb. "delivereth," as a midwife (S. Jer. 5 Edit. Aquila); "maketh the hinds to calve" (Prot. H.); or "to leap, (from zul. Bert.) or frighteneth."—Glory. Running thither through fear, or to thank God for rain after a drought.

VER. 10. Dwell. Chal. explains this of the deluge, which continued a long while upon the earth, to punish mankind. Heb. may also signify, "the Lord sitteth upon the flood," or clouds, as the Lord of nature.—Strength, or abundant rain, (Jos. xxxviii. 6.) with all other blessings (C.); making his people as terrible to their enemies as the storm which has been described. M.

PSAL. XXIX., &c. VER. 1. Dedication, when David sung after he had built (H.) a magnificent palace. 2 Kings v. W.—David's, Lodud, or "to David," which some rather join with Psalm, (Muis.) and explain the house of the tabernacle or temple; though it seems more probably to relate to the altar which David erected, after the pestilence (C.) had destroyed seventy thousand. 2 Kings xxiv. 2. There seems to be nothing respecting a dedication in the psalm; whence we may conjecture that the title is not very authentic. The Greeks (Bert.) prefixed "unto the end," in the Rom. Sept., but not in Grabe's, &c. H.—The Fathers explain it of Christ's resurrection. C.—It may be put in the mouth of a just man leaving this world. Bert.—The title of Psalm most properly belongs to those which were played upon instruments; as a canticle refers to vocal music. When the instrument preceded, it was called A psalm of a canticle; as a canticle of a psalm intimated that man gave out the psalm, and instruments followed. W.—These distinctions are given by S. Chrys., &c. M.

VER. 2. Extol. Or publish thy great goodness and power, (H.) in the same sense as we say Hallowed be thy name. Bert.—Though God can receive no increase of glory, we must show our gratitude. W.—Me. Thou hast not suffered my people to be wholly destroyed, nor myself to perish in consequence of my vain curiosity. C.—David sings this psalm in thanksgiving for his many deliverances. W.

VER. 3. Healed me. I expected to die every moment, and I had made choice of the scourge of pestilence, that I might not be more screened than my subjects. 2 Kings xxiv. 13. C.

VER. 4. Hell. Preserving me from great dangers of sinning, (W.) or from Jeatn.—Saved. Heb. "granted me life." This may all be explained of Christ's resurrection. C.

VER. 5. Saints. Heb. "who have obtained mercy." Priests and faithful people come to return thanks, because God has turned away the scourge. C.—Memory, or name. Exod. iii. 15. C.—It is from God, and not from ourselves, that holiness comes. W.

VER. 6. Wrath, which is a short fury. M. Isa. liv. 7.—Heb. "momentary is his indignation;" or rather, "from his indignation comes destruction," rogā, as the Sept. constantly (H.) agree. Job xx. 5; Isa. xxviii. 12, &c. C.—"The miseries which are inflicted are in consequence of his indignation." Prin. dis. Bert.—We are not miserable unless we have deserved it. S. Aug.—Even in chas-

8 O Lord, in thy favour, thou gavest strength to my beauty.

Thou turnedst away thy face from me, and I became troubled.

9 To thee, O Lord, will I cry; and I will make supplication to my God.

10 What profit is there in my blood, whilst I go down to corruption?

Shall dust confess to thee, or declare thy truth?

11 The Lord hath heard, and hath had mercy on me the Lord became my helper.

12 Thou hast turned for me my mourning into joy: thou hast cut my sackcloth, and hast compassed me with gladness:

13 To the end that my glory may sing to thee, and I may not regret: O Lord, my God, I will give praise to thee for ever.

PSALM XXX.

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

A prayer of a just man under affliction.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David in an ecstasy.

2 IN thee, O Lord, have I hoped, let me never be confounded: deliver me in thy justice.

3 Bow down thy ear to me: make haste to deliver me.

Be thou unto me a God, a protector, and a house of refuge, to save me.

4 For thou art my strength and my refuge; and for thy name's sake thou wilt lead me, and nourish me.

tising, God considers our welfare. W.—He takes no pleasure in our torments, but delights to crown us with life and happiness. H.—Eternal joys are the fruits of the short sorrows of this world, (Bert.) which is represented as one night or evening. H.

VER. 7. Moved. David thought himself invincible; and, out of vanity, ordered his subjects to be numbered. God showed his displeasure only for three days, and all was in confusion, ver. 8. C.

VER. 8. Beauty. So Sept. and Syr. have read ledre, (C.) instead of terru, "my mountain," Sion, which David had taken from the Jebusites. The sense is much the same, though the reading of the Sept. seem more natural. Symmachus has followed another copy. Bert.—"Thou hast given strength to my first father." C.—How necessary is it for us to be convinced that all we have is the gift of God! H.—In prosperity man is too apt to give way to presumption. Bert.—David had yielded to this temptation, not being sufficiently aware how jealous God is of his rights. C.—He confesses this mistake. Heb. "I was terrified." M.

VER. 9. Will I. We must not cease to pray, (W.) as we are always beset with enemies. H.—This text may be explained, "I prayed," that I might suffer instead of my people. 4 Kings xxiv. 17. C.—But here the prophet seems rather to beg that he may not die, in order that he may publish God's praises. H.

VER. 10. Profit. The wicked, on his death-bed, cannot pray thus, as the justice of God is interested to punish his crimes, and to prevent their continuance. After death there is no merit; so that we ought to make good use of our time. Bert.—Corruption. The Fathers explain this of Jesus Christ. What good will my death procure, if I do not rise again? Orig. S. Jer.

VER. 11. The Lord. Heb. points determine, "Lord, hear," &c. But the Greek interpreters agree with the Vulg., which seems better. Bert.—S. Jerom, however, makes this a prayer, "Hear," &c. H.

VER. 12. Joy. When thou orderest the angel. 2 Kings xxiv. 16. C.—Thou hast changed my mourning weeds for robes of joy. D.

VER. 13. Regret. Or be filled with grief, compungar. H. Heb. "that glory may sing thee, (or thy praise,) and may not be silent." S. Jer. Sym. H.—Glory often signifies the tongue. D.—My is added, to show that this was David's glory, (H.) who considered God in all events. Bert.—Prot. supply the word my. H.—Chal. "that the great ones of the world may praise thee incessantly."—Ever. In this my happy change. W.

PSAL. XXX., &c. VER. 1. Ecstasy. This word is not in Heb., nor in some of the best Greek copies. Theod.—It seems to be taken from ver. 23, (C.) and intimates that the just may recite this psalm in the latter times, (W.) when they shall be in the greatest perplexity. H.—Our Saviour repeated part of ver. 6 upon the cross; and he may perhaps be the object of the whole psalm. The Church prescribes only the first six verses to be recited at Complin. Bert.

VER. 2. Justice. Sym. "mercy." Thou art the judge between us. C.

VER. 3. A God. Heb. "a rock of strength." Sept. "a God who holdeth his shield over me," ὁπλοποιῶν. H.—Refuge. Heb. "fortress." C.

VER. 4. Nourish. Heb. guide. H.—Sym. "take care of me." C.

5 Thou wilt bring me out of this snare, which they have hidden for me: for thou art my protector.

6 "Into thy hands I commend my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, the God of truth.

7 Thou hast hated them that regard vanities to no purpose.

But I have hoped in the Lord: 8 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy.

For thou hast regarded my humility; thou hast saved my soul out of distresses.

9 And thou hast not shut me up in the hands of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a spacious place.

10 Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I am afflicted: my eye is troubled with wrath, my soul, and my belly:

11 For my life is wasted with grief: and my years in sighs.

My strength is weakened through poverty: and my bones are disturbed.

12 I am become a reproach among all my enemies, and very much to my neighbours, and a fear to my acquaintance.

They that saw me without, fled from me. 13 I am forgotten as one dead from the heart.

I am become as a vessel that is destroyed. 14 For I have heard the blaine of many that dwell round about.

While they assembled together against me, they consulted to take away my life.

15 But I have put my trust in thee, O Lord: I said: Thou art my God. 16 My lots are in thy hands.

• Luke xxiii. 46.

VER. 6. Spirit. Heb. ruē. Our Saviour determines the signification of this word, and shows that the saints of the Old Testament believed that the soul survived after its separation from the body, which some commentators have unguardedly said could not be clearly proved. This text may be applicable both to David and to Jesus Christ in a literal sense, as nothing contradictory would ensue, no more than from the prediction, out of Egypt I have called my son, being verified both in the Israelites and in the Messias; as both may truly be styled sons of God, though in a different sense. The verb is here in the future, both in Heb., Sept., and in the common Greek of the New Testament (Luke xxiii. 46); though some MSS. of the latter have the present tense, which is adopted by Prot., &c. Bert.—David commits his cause to God, being convinced that his promises would not be in vain. S. Stephen said in like manner, Lord, receive my spirit (Acts vii. 58); and "the saints use this prayer when they leave the body," (S. Jer. C.) as well as on any other important occasion, particularly when they receive the holy sacrament. W.

VER. 7. Vanities. Idols, (C.) superstitious practices, (Hammond,) and lies. It may refer to Saul, who performed his promises so ill, and neglected the laws which he had made against witches. C. Prot.—"I have hated them that regard lying vanities," H.

VER. 8. Humility. Heb. "affliction, thou hast known the tribulations of my soul." S. Jer. H.—Thou hast often rescued me from my enemies; and canst thou behold my present distress without pity? C.—When God knows his friend to be in misery, he does not fail to relieve him. Bert.

VER. 10. Belly, or entrails. M. Lam. i. 20; Eccl. li. 29. H.—David was filled with indignation at the conduct of his enemies. C.—Both soul and body felt the effects of his great sorrow, (H.) which pervaded every part. W.

VER. 11. Poverty. Sept. have read āni instead of āni, "my iniquity," which seems less accurate, as David had not offended Saul. Sym. has "malice," (C.) or "ill treatment," kakōniv. H.—We may form some judgment of David's distress, from his being obliged to eat the consecrated bread at Nob. C.—Yet, without making any change in the Heb., we may explain it in the sense of the Vulg., as āve signifies to be "bent down." Bert.—"Chastisements waste my strength." Pr. disc.—Jesus was a man of sorrows. Bert.

VER. 12. Among. Lit. "above," super. H.—David complains that none of his enemies were treated so severely as himself, (H.) though they were very wicked. M.—They all looked upon him with disdain, and even his friends fled from him. This is the picture of the world. A man fallen into distress is an object of general contempt. C.—Yet we ought rather to remember that such a one is sacred: sacra res est miser: and that he ought to excite our compassion. H.—Fear. People are afraid to have it known that they were ever acquainted with me, (C.) lest they should be involved in my misery. H.—My friends dare not converse with me. W.

VER. 13. Heart, past recovery. Prot. "dead man out of mind." H.—Vessel means, "any thing." C.

VER. 14. About. They blame me to my face. Heb. "fear on every side." H.—But magur signifies also "dwelling," as well as "fear;" and this dread arose only from the multitude of enemies. Bert.—Life. I was proscribed by Deliver me out of the hands of my enemies; and from them that persecute me.

17 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant; save me in thy mercy.

18 Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I have called upon thee.

Let the wicked be ashamed, and be brought down to hell. 19 Let deceitful lips be made dumb;

Which speak iniquity against the just, with pride and abuse.

20 O how great is the multitude of thy sweetness, O Lord, which thou hast hidden for them that fear thee!

Which thou hast wrought for them that hope in thee in the sight of the sons of men.

21 Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy face, from the disturbance of men.

Thou shalt protect them in thy tabernacle, from the contradiction of tongues.

22 Blessed be the Lord, for he hath shown his wonderful mercy to me in a fortified city.

23 But I said in the excess of my mind: I am cast away from before thy eyes.

Therefore thou hast heard the voice of my prayer, when I cried to thee.

24 O love the Lord, all ye his saints: for the Lord will require truth, and will repay them abundantly that act proudly.

25 Do ye manfully, and let your heart be strengthened, all ye that hope in the Lord.

Saul, (1 Kings xix. 1. H.) and they were only solicitous how to destroy me. C.—They assembled to talk about my pretended (H.) faults, and to contrive my ruin. Jer. xx. 10. M.

VER. 16. Lots. Sept. Rom. κλήροι, as the same word, āthuthi, is rendered Judg. xxi. 22. Others explain "times," with the Rom. Psalter, &c., in the same sense, to denote (Bert.) that all the vicissitudes of life, both prosperity and adversity, are at God's disposal. Theod.—If he protect me, all my enemies will rage in vain. C.

VER. 18. Brought. Prot. "be silent in the grave," (H.) or "in hell." This is a prediction. When I shall ascend the throne, they will be covered with shame. C.—Let them enter into themselves before they die. H.

VER. 19. Iniquity. Heb. "harsh things;" calumnies. C.—Abuse. Sept. ἰσχυρῶσαι, as if they "made nothing" of the just. H.—They seem to acknowledge no superior, and abuse their power. W.

VER. 20. Men. Thou comfortest thy servants internally, and often manifestest thy protection. H.

VER. 21. Face. The malice of the wicked has its limits; while God defends his servants, admitting them as it were into his own presence and tabernacle, where none dare assault them.—Disturbance. Chal. "troops of the strong." Heb. "from the pride or vexations." God will protect his friends, both from an open attack and from malicious speeches.—Thy is not expressed in Heb. Bert.—"From the harshness of the great ones thou wilt protect them in the shade, from the contradiction of tongues." S. Jer.—How shall we avoid the danger of being seduced by contradictory teachers, unless we have recourse to the Catholic Church? Tu curre ad Eccles. Cath. et protegeris, &c. S. Aug. H.

VER. 22. In a. Sym. "as in a city shut up" with fortifications. C.—As seems to be understood, though some explain this of Ceila, (Bert.) or of Siceleg, which had been given to David for a retreat. C.

VER. 23. Excess. Sept. "in my ecstasy." Heb. "haste." Prot. "consternation." Sym. H.—In sudden danger I exclaimed that all was lost: but God presently relieved me. Thus He prepared David for his exalted station; having taught him by affliction to have pity on others. C.—He experienced for a moment a sort of diffidence, before he had time to reflect. But he presently turned towards God.—Eyes. This he spoke in great agony of mind, which he would afterwards have recalled, like holy Job, chap. iii., and xlii. W.

VER. 24. Saints. Heb. "merciful ones;" Assideans, priests, &c.—Truth. Heb. "will preserve the true" (C.); or, "will observe the faithful." Bert.—Abundantly. Sept. "that act with great pride," as S. Aug. reads, and as Heb. and Vulg. may be rendered. H.—The prophet exhorts all to persevere unto the end. W.

PSAL. XXXI., &c. VER. I. Understanding (Prot. maschil. H.); showing how he was brought to acknowledge his fault, and by penance to obtain pardon, (W.) justly giving the glory to God's grace. S. Aug.—Sept. Alex. ["A psalm] to David. of understanding;" which is taken from some other copy. H.—This is wholly a moral nature. The Jews style it the heart of David, because it displays his sentiments of contrition. C.—He composed it most probably after Nathan had PSALM XXXI.

BEATI QUORUM.

The second penitential psalm.

1 To David himself, understanding.

BLESSED* are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered

2 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin, and in whose spirit there is no guile.

3 Because I was silent, my bones grew old; whilst I cried out all the day long.

4 For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: I am turned in my anguish, whilst the thorn is fastened.

5 I have acknowledged my sin to thee, and my injustice I have not concealed.

6 I said, I will confess against myself my injustice to the Lord; and thou hast forgiven the wickedness of my sin.

7 For this shall every one that is holy pray to thee in a seasonable time.

And yet in a flood of many waters, they shall not come nigh unto him.

8 Thou art my refuge from the trouble which hath encompassed me: my joy, deliver me from them that surround me.

9 I will give thee understanding, and I will instruct engaged him to confess his fault. Bellar.—It might be used on the solemn feast of expiation. Grot. Num. xxix. 7.—The Fathers explain it of the grace which we receive in baptism and in penance. S. Aug., S. Greg., &c. C.—Are they. Heb. "The blessings of him whose iniquity." Pagnin.—But the sense is the same, and S. Paul follows the Sept., which gives their version the highest authority. Rom. iv. 7.—Sins; or, "who is screened from the punishment of sin." Prin. disc. Sin has often this signification; and the psalmist would otherwise seem to say less than he had already expressed. Bert.—Covered, by charity, (1 Pet. iv.) as a physician covers a wound, to remove it entirely; and we must cover our former transgressions, by doing good works. S. Greg.—Then our sins will not appear at the day of judgment, (S. Jer.,) nor be punished, as they are wholly destroyed. Thus the doctrine of Calvin is condemned; who abuses these texts to prove that sins are only covered, and still remain even in the most just; which is contrary to innumerable passages of Scripture, (Isa. vi.; John i.; 1 Cor. vi., &c.,) and injurious to the perfections of God, and to the redemption of Christ, as well as to the saints in heaven, who are thus represented as still infected with all their sins. W.—God cannot fail to punish sin, wherever it really subsists. His Spirit is surely free from guile. He cannot suppose that we are just by imputation of Christ's justice, unless we be really so. H.—By means of the sacraments the sinner becomes just, and God sees nothing in him deserving of punishment. C.—"If any one wishes his sins to be covered, let him manifest them to God by the voice of confession." S. Greg.

VER. 2. Spirit. Sym. has "heart," or "mouth." C.—The latter is also in some copies of the f. pt. Euseb.—The Rom. and Alex. Sept. have it, though Grabe substitutes spirit, (H.) which is recognised by S. Jer., (ad Sun.,) Heb., &c. Nothing is so contrary to true repentance as hypocrisy. S. Aug., &c. C.—If we do not co-operate with God's grace, our sins will never be effaced, though, before remission, our works can only dispose us to receive pardon. "Good (and meritorious) works follow." S. Aug. W.

VER. 3. Because I was silent, &c. That is, whilst I kept silence, by concealing, or refusing to confess my sins, thy hand was heavy upon me, &c. Ch.—The cry was then only an effect of vanity, like that of the Pharisee, full of his own merits (S. Aug. S. Jer. C.); or David was silent till Nathan made him know his fault, which he afterwards ceased not to deplore. Theod.—It is supposed that he had continued impenitent for above a year. Bert.—Cried. Heb. "roared," like a lion. C.

VER. 4. I am turned, &c. That is, I turn and roll about in my bed, to seek for ease in my pain, whilst the thorn of thy justice pierces my flesh, and sticks fast in me. Or, I am turned; that is, I am converted to thee, my God, by being brought to a better understanding by thy chastisements. In the Hebrew it is, my moisture is turned into the drougths of summer. Ch. Prot. H.—But the Sept. may have taken it for a prep. before soodi, as the other Greek interpreters say nothing of this moisture, which is the interpretation of modern Jews; and S. Jerom has, (Bert.,) "I was turned, or occupied, in my misery;" versatus sum in miseria mei. There is no peace for the wicked. H.—Fastened. S. Jer. "while the summer (or heat, estas) was burning incessantly," sle. Heb. derbuni hits, means also in gladius spina. "The thorn has been turned into swords for my affliction" (Bert.); or I have been as grievously tormented as if a thorn or sword had pierced me. H.—Many of the ancients read, while the thorn is broken, conringitur, (Ps. Rom. S. Greg. C.) which causes the extraction to be more difficult. H.

VER. 5. Sin. Or as some psalters read, "of my heart," with the Sept., Cas-thee in this way, in which thou shalt go: I will fix my eyes upon thee.

9 Do not become like the horse and the mule, which have no understanding.

With bit and bridle bind fast their jaws, who come not near unto thee.

10 Many are the scourges of the sinner, but mercy shall encompass him that hopeth in the Lord.

11 Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye just, and glory, all ye right of heart.

PSALM XXXII.

EXULTATE JUSTI.

An exhortation to praise God, and to trust in him.

1 A psalm for David.

REJOICE in the Lord, O ye just: praise becometh the upright.

2 Give praise to the Lord on the harp; sing to him with the psaltery, the instrument of ten strings.

3 Sing to him a new canticle, sing well unto him with a loud noise.

4 For the word of the Lord is right, and all his works are done with faithfulness.

5 He loveth mercy and judgment; the earth is full of the mercy of the Lord.

b Isa. lxxv. 24.

siod., &c. C.—"I know that thou wilt readily forgive the sins which are fully laid open before thee." S. Jer.—David no sooner perceived that he was the unjust man (H.) whom Nathan had described, than he exclaimed, "I have sinned;" and at the same moment God forgave him. 2 Kings xii. 7. C.—Nothing can more effectually give peace to the soul than an humble confession, which costs human pride a great deal, when it must be made to our brethren. Bert.—The Jews were sometimes obliged to confess to God's minister. Lev. iv. 5, and Num. v. 7. M.

VER. 6. Holy. Even the angels rejoice at the sinner's conversion. Luke xv. 7. The saints take part in the welfare of their fellow-creatures, and praise God for his mercies shown unto them. C.—Time. During this life, (Isa. lv. 6; Eccle. ix. 10. Chal. Muis,) or when they shall be treated in like manner. Piscat.—Yet. Heb. roh, "surely." Bert.—"Therefore shall every merciful one pray unto Thee, finding time; that when many waters shall inundate, they may not approach unto him." S. Jer. H.—A deluge denotes great calamities. Isa. xliii. 2.

VER. 7. Refuge. Heb. "hiding," (Psal. xxx. 21. H.) or asylum. C.—Which. Heb. "thou shalt surround me with songs of deliverance. Sela." Or "my praise saving, thou wilt environ me always." S. Jer. H.

VER. 8. Fiz. Heb. "consult with my eye concerning thee." The Vulg. seems better. C.—Prot. marg. "my eye shall be upon thee." H.—God thus engages to watch over and direct his servant, (Gen. xlv. 21; Jer. xxiv. 6. C.) giving him instruction, by means of chastisements. W.

VER. 9. Do not. This may be spoken by God, or by the psalmist; as an admonition to hear the counsel of those Divinely commissioned. C.—Who come. Prot. "lest they come near," (H.) and threaten to bite or to run over thee. C.—But the Heb. may have the sense of the Vulg. qui non accedunt. S. Jer.—It may be a prayer, that God would offer a sort of violence to restrain the sallies of the sinner, (H.) and to convert him (W.); or God threatens the obstinate with the rigour of his justice. Many delude themselves, thinking that he will always treat them with lenity, and be ready to receive them. Bert. Isa. xxxvii. 29.—But the prophet admonishes them not to follow their senses alone, nor to imitate brute beasts, as he had done with regard to Bethsabe and Urias. M.—The bit (eamus) was a sort of muzzle, "to hinder horses from biting." Xenophon.

VER. 11. Glory, which is lawful when God is the object. 1 Cor. i. 31. My glory I will not give to another. Isa. xlii. 8. C.—Heb. "praise him." S. Jer. H.—Joy is the end of true penance, to which the prophet invites all. W.

PSAL. XXXII. VER. 1. David. There is no title in Heb.; and the Greek copies vary. This psalm may be considered as a continuation of the former, with the last verse of which it may be well connected. C.—Upright. But it is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner. Eccl. xv. 9. W. Psal. lxxix. 16. C.

VER. 2. Psaltery. Heb. nobel, (H.) which does not resemble the modern psaltery. C.

VER. 3. New. Interesting, like the canticle of the lamb, or of redemption. Apoc.—The prophet invites all to praise God for the blessings granted by Christ in the new law. W.—Noise, proceeding from the heart, the cry of which alone penetrates heaven. H.

VER. 4. Faithfulness. He always fulfils his promises, and his laws are just (W.); therefore he deserves our praise. C. Psal. cxliv. 13.

VER. 5. Judgment. God joins these virtues together, (W.) as we ought to do. H. Luke vi. 36; Matt. v. 48.—He punishes the wicked, and rewards the good. But his mercy displays itself on the earth, as there is no misery in heaven. S. Aug.—Its effects appear more since the coming of our Saviour. C.

VER. 6. Mouth. by his command. Euthym. Gen. i. 6.—The Fathers here

6 By the word of the Lord the heavens were established; and all the power of them, by the spirit of his mouth:

7 Gathering together the waters of the sea, as in a vessel; laying up the depths in storehouses.

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord, and let all the inhabitants of the world be in awe of him.

9 *For he spoke, and they were made: he commanded, and they were created.

10 The Lord bringeth to nought the counsels of nations; and he rejecteth the devices of people, and casteth away the counsels of princes.

11 But the counsel of the Lord standeth for ever: the thoughts of his heart to all generations.

12 Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; the people whom he hath chosen for his inheritance.

13 The Lord hath looked from heaven: he hath beheld all the sons of men.

14 From his habitation which he hath prepared, he hath looked upon all that dwell on the earth.

15 He who hath made the hearts of every one of them: who understandeth all their works.

16 The king is not saved by a great army: nor shall the giant be saved by his own great strength.

17 Vain is the horse for safety: neither shall he be saved by the abundance of his strength.

18 Behold the eyes of the Lord are on them that fear him: and on them that hope in his mercy.

19 To deliver their souls from death: and feed them in famine.

20 Our soul waiteth for the Lord: for he is our helper and protector.

a Gen. i. 8; Judith xvi. 17.

And the blessed Trinity expressed (C. M.); and the Council of Trent admonishes us to follow their unanimous interpretation, which is here adopted by Baumgarten, a Prot., 1719. S. John informs us that all was made by the Word, from whom the Father and the Holy Spirit cannot be separated. Bert. C.—The word of God is omnipotent, (W.) “the Creator . . . both of visible and invisible things.” Nic. Creed. H.

VER. 7. As in. This is agreeable to S. Aug., and some ancient psalters; though the Sept. have “like a bottle” made of leather. ὡσεὶ ἀσκον. Moderns would translate, “like a heap.” But Sym. and S. Jer. agree with us, (see Psal. lxxvii. 13. C.) as well as the Chal. and Houbigant. God has made the bed of the sea capable of containing such quantities of water, some of which evaporate and descend again from the clouds, to make the earth fruitful. Yet many take no notice of this admirable economy. Bert.—Theodore and S. Athanasius understand the clouds to be meant by this vessel; but the former sentiment seems better. These waters, as well as hail, &c., are instruments of God’s vengeance. Deut. xxxii. 34. The depths have the same import. God calls them forth at pleasure, (Amos v. 8; Gen. vii. 11,) and confines them within bounds. Job xxxviii. 11.

VER. 12. Inheritance, in opposition to the Gentiles. 1 Pet. ii. 9. Bert.

VER. 14. Prepared. S. Jer. “from his most established throne;” whence he beholds all the conduct of men, (C.) though he fill all places, and work in all. Bert.—His power and wisdom (ver. 15) are infinite. W.

VER. 15. Every one, sigillatim. Heb. jēd, means also “together;” whence the Origenists inferred (H.) that all souls were made at first with Adam. S. Jer.—Thus they explained how they came to be all infected. Bert.—But God rather creates them when he infuses them into the body. Carthus. H.—S. Aug. could never decide this important question. This text only proves that God is equally Creator of all (Eccl. xviii. 1. C.); and He alone made the hearts and souls of all men, as καρπόνος implies. Psal. iv. 10, and Geneb. Amama.

VER. 17. Safety. Either of himself or his master. W. Prov. xxi. 31.—This can only be attributed to God’s protection. ver. 18.

VER. 20. Waiteth. Heb. “length.” H.—Protector. Heb. “shield.”

VER. 22. Thee. All perfect Being, show thy protection to all who trust in thee. W.—He who wishes to receive much, ought to increase his hopes. C.

PSAL. XXXIII., &c. VER. 1. Achimelech. So Clem. VIII. corrects what Sixtus V. had printed Abimelech, conformably to the Heb., &c. Some editors have since preferred the latter word, (C.) which is retained in Berthier and Calmet, though we should think such changes improper, unless they were made by proper authority. H.—Many of the ancients suppose that Achimelech (who is also styled Abimelech, the high priest at Nob) is here meant, from whom David concealed 21 For in him our heart shall rejoice: and in his holy name we have trusted.

22 Let thy mercy, O Lord, be upon us, as we have hoped in thee.

PSALM XXXIII.

BENEDICAM DOMINUM.

An exhortation to the praise and service of God.

1 For David, when he changed his countenance before Achimelech, who dismissed him, and he went his way. [i Kings xxi.]

2 I WILL bless the Lord at all times, his praise shall be always in my mouth.

3 In the Lord shall my soul be praised; let the meek hear and rejoice.

4 O magnify the Lord with me: and let us extol his name together.

5 I sought the Lord, and he heard me: and he delivered me from all my troubles.

6 Come ye to him and be enlightened: and your faces shall not be confounded.

7 This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him: and saved him out of all his troubles.

8 The angel of the Lord shall encamp round about them that fear him: and shall deliver them.

9 O taste, and see that the Lord is sweet: blessed is the man that hopeth in him.

10 Fear the Lord, all ye his saints: for there is no want to them that fear him.

11 The rich have wanted, and have suffered hunger: but they that seek the Lord, shall not be deprived of any good.

12 Come, children, hearken to me: I will teach you the fear of the Lord.

b Luke i. 53.

his real design. Enseb., S. Athan., S. Jer., &c.—Others rather think that the psalm was composed after David had escaped the great danger at the court of Achis, by counterfeiting madness. 1 Kings xxi. 13. S. Aug., Muis., &c.—Achis alone is styled king among the Satraps. Those who ruled over the Philistines generally bore the title of Abimelech, as the Egyptian monarchs had that of Pharaoh. Bert. Gen. xxi. 22. C. W.—This psalm is alphabetical. The last verse beginning with p, is supernumerary, and may belong to the next psalm. See Psal. xxiv. C.

VER. 2. Mouth. The just praise God in adversity, as well as in prosperity. W.—David had lately been delivered in a wonderful manner. C.

VER. 3. Praised. Heb. “glory.” Psal. xxxi. 11. H.—Others, seeing my treatment, will give praise to thee, the Author of all good, (C.) and I shall be praised while I serve thee. W.

VER. 4. Together (in idipsum). “If you love God, draw all to the love of God.” S. Aug.—The multitude will not diminish his attention to you. C.

VER. 5. Troubles. Heb. “fears or straits;” angustias. S. Jer. H.—The Vulg. adopts the Alex. Sept. ἐλπίων: the Vatican copy has, παροικίων, “habitations,” at Nob, Geth, &c. Seek the Lord, while he may be found. Isa. lv. 6.

VER. 6. Come, “by faith and good works.” S. Jer.—Enlightened. Heb. also, “flow together.” S. Jer.—You need not be afraid of impoverishing him. C.

VER. 7. This. I myself, whom you beheld in the midst of afflictions. H.—Poverty is a great inducement for God to show mercy. Bert.—The poorest may approach without fear. W.

VER. 8. Encamp. Lit. “send.” H.—This is explained of Jesus Christ by S. Aug. and S. Jerom. C.—Heb. and Sept. (παρεμβάλει) intimate that the angel himself shall encamp round God’s servants, so that no evil shall come near them. H.—This has often been verified. Gen. xxxii. 1, and xlviii. 16, and 4 Kings vi. 16, &c. C.—One angel is here represented as equal to a great army. A Prot. commentator observes, that David attributed his escape to the protection of an angel, and was very thankful for it. We see, therefore, what advantages we may derive from the blessed spirits? What then should hinder us from addressing our prayers to them? Bert.

VER. 11. Rich of this world, (1 Tim. vi. 17. M.) are often poor in spiritual gifts. W.—Those who are poor in both respects, are truly miserable, (H.) since they cannot satisfy their craving appetite. But the prophet admires those who are poor in spirit, whether they have many possessions or not. Bert.—The fear of the Lord is his treasure. Isa. xxxiii. 6.—Heb. “the lions have wanted.” S. Jer.—This may have been the case: yet those who fear God shall be filled; or, the rich may be designated by the name of lion’s whelps, on account of their power.

13 *Who is the man that desireth life : who loveth to see good days ?

14 Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

15 Turn away from evil, and do good : seek after peace, and pursue it.

16 The eyes of the Lord are ^bupon the just : and his ears unto their prayers.

17 But the countenance of the Lord is against them that do evil things : to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

18 The just cried, and the Lord heard them : and delivered them out of all their troubles.

19 The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a contrite heart : and he will save the humble of spirit.

20 Many are the afflictions of the just ; but out of them all will the Lord deliver them.

21 The Lord keepeth all their bones, not one of them shall be broken.

22 The death of the wicked is very evil : and they that hate the just shall be guilty.

23 The Lord will redeem the souls of his servants : and none of them that trust in him shall offend.

PSALM XXXIV.

JUDICA DOMINE NOCENTES ME.

David, in the person of Christ, prayeth against his persecutors : prophetically foreshowing the punishments that shall fall upon them.

1 For David himself.

JUDGE thou, O Lord, them that wrong me : overthrow them that fight against me.

* 1 Pet. iii. 10.—^b Eccl. xv. 20 ; Heb. iv. 13.

and avidity. C.—Good. If the saints be sometimes deprived of provisions, they know that it is better for them ; as God directs all for their good. H.

VER. 13. Good days. S. Peter (1 Ep. iii. 10) adopts this sense, though the Heb. is rendered, “and desireth days, that he may see good.” The apostle shows that heaven is here principally meant, though a virtuous life is the best to procure even present happiness. Bert.—Many of David’s followers probably confined their views to the latter. C.

VER. 14. Guile. He very properly begins with regulating the tongue, as this member may prove very dangerous. Prov. xviii. 21 ; James iii. 5. By detraction, it wounds three people ; and it causes no less evil by flattery. C.

VER. 15. Good. It will not suffice to refrain from criminal actions. Psal. xxxvi. 27.—Peace, both private and public. Jer. xxix. 7. C.—A person may, notwithstanding, have much to suffer. But S. Peter prevents this objection, by proclaiming those happy who suffer for justice’ sake, ver. 14. Bert.—Good works are necessary as well as faith. W.

VER. 16. Eyes. S. Basil understands the angels. God protects his servants, (H.) while he treats the wicked with severity. C.

VER. 17. To cut, &c. S. Peter leaves this out ; perhaps because temporal punishments would not be so often inflicted upon the wicked under the new law ; as God tries his faithful, and teaches them to wait till judgment, when all will be treated according to their deserts. Bert.

VER. 18. Just. This word is omitted in Heb., but it is supplied by all the versions ; which shows that the original is not perfect. Bert.—If this were left out the passage would refer to the wicked, ver. 17. Yet S. Jerom found the Heb. in this state. H.—Troubles. Many experienced the Divine protection in a wonderful manner, and though others fell victims of persecution, (Heb. xi. 36.) yet they were perfectly resigned to God’s will, (Bert.,) and thus obtained their wishes, receiving a better reward in eternity. C.

VER. 19. Them. Heb. “broken-hearted ;” to the humble and distressed. H.—God is very near to such. C. Psal. l. 19, and xc. 15. See S. Polyc. ad Phil. ii.

VER. 20. Many. David was too well informed to promise that the just would experience no affliction : but it will not last for ever. C. Heb. xii. 6.—If God seem to forsake them for a time, he gives them interior strength, and will at last crown his own gifts. W.

VER. 21. Broken. Their virtue, which is denoted by the bones, (M.) shall not sink under torments. So Christ encouraged his disciples, by assuring them that a hair of their head should not perish. Matt. x. 30. S. Aug. C.

VER. 22. Evil, or “bad.” Chal. Heb. also, “malice shall slay the wicked.” They can attribute their misfortunes only to their own misconduct. Bert.—Guilty, and shall be treated as criminals ; a fate which the just shall never experience, ver. 23.

VER. 23. The death of Saul seems to be foretold. C.—The wicked are forced to quit the world and their bodies which they have idolized, and are hurled into everlasting fire. S. Bern.

2 Take hold of arms and shield : and rise up to help me.

3 Bring out the sword, and shut up the way against them that persecute me : say to my soul : I am thy salvation.

4 *Let them be confounded and ashamed, that seek after my soul.

Let them be turned back and be confounded, that devise evil against me.

5 Let them become as dust before the wind : and let the angel of the Lord straiten them.

6 Let their way become dark and slippery ; and let the angel of the Lord pursue them.

7 For without cause they have hidden their net for me unto destruction : without cause they have upbraided my soul.

8 Let the snare which he knoweth not come upon him : and let the net which he hath hidden catch him : and into that very snare let them fall.

9 But my soul shall rejoice in the Lord ; and shall be delighted in his salvation.

10 All my bones shall say : Lord, who is like to thee ?

Who deliverest the poor from the hand of them that are stronger than he ; the needy and the poor from them that strip him.

11 Unjust witnesses, rising up, have asked me things I knew not.

12 They repaid me evil for good : to the depriving me of my soul.

* Infra, xxxix. 15.

PSAL. XXXIV., &c. VER. 1. David. Some of the Greek copies add, “psalm,” and “unto the end.” It was composed during the persecutions of Saul, &c., and is applied by the Fathers to Jesus Christ, who quotes ver. 19, (John xv. 25. C.) and it seems to be in the same state with several others, which speak of his sufferings. Bert.—The expressions are very animated, and though vengeance was not so strictly forbidden under the old law, (Matt. v. 44,) yet we may explain them as predictions. Theod.—David always evinced the greatest moderation, (Psal. vii. 5,) and treated even Saul with the utmost respect. What he says, therefore, was dictated by a sincere desire of their conversion, and that they might prevent eternal torments ; as well as to set the conduct of God in a proper light, and to encourage the virtuous. Asterius. C.—Judge. Heb. “plead.” I do not wish them to be condemned unheard. C.—A vindictive person does not thus commit his cause to God. Jesus Christ was all mildness. But in the spiritual warfare, we may well address these words to God, (Bert.,) who is often represented as a mighty warrior. Exod. xv. 3. C.

VER. 3. The way. This may be implied by the word conclude, which Houbigant rejects, observing that S. Jerom has præoccupata, (Bert.,) as it is in the Par ed. 1533. H.—But I find præcipita. Bert.—“Prevent” the designs, stop the passage, or “hurl my persecutors headlong.” H.—Take offensive weapons. He foretells the ruin of those who persecuted the Church. W.—Salvation, though my enemies deny it. Psal. iii. 2.

VER. 4. Let them. So most people render the Heb., though it may be understood in the future, (Bert.,) as Montanus translates. H.

VER. 5. Dust. Heb. muts, small “chaff.” Psal. i. 4. Vatab.—Angel. The evil spirits are employed to punish the wicked, as the good protect the just. Psal. xxxiii. 8. Some Fathers have supposed that every man was attended by a good and a bad angel. Hermes 2., Orig. 35. in Lu., S. Greg. Nys. vit. Mos., Cassian viii. 17, and xiii. 12.—But the Church admits the power of the wicked spirits only against those who take part with them, or “as far as God allows them” (S. Jer.) to tempt. The devil is like a dog chained down, which can bite none but those who come within its reach. S. Aug.

VER. 7. Their. Lit. “the destruction of their net.” H.—Some would translate esseth, “the pit of,” &c. But the Sept. is preferable ; and epuru means they have “covered with shame,” as well as dug for my soul. Bert.—Pit ought to be removed to the latter part of the verse. Saul laid many falsehoods to the charge of David, (C.) and insidiously sought his ruin. H.

VER. 10. Lord. Some Latin copies repeated this, while others in the original passed over the word entirely. S. Jer. ad Sun.—“Be thou my life whom I always seek.” S. Aug.—Poor, in general, or David, who was supplied by Abimelech with food. 1 Kings xxi. 3. C.

VER. 11. Not. Accusing me of disloyalty, &c. Flaminius.—We must not imagine that David was cited to the bar. This is admirably explained of Jesus Christ at the tribunal of Pilate, (C.) and of the high priests. H. Matt. xxvi.

13 But as for me, when they were troublesome to me, I was clothed with hair-cloth.

I humbled my soul with fasting; and my prayer shall be turned into my bosom.

14 As a neighbour and as an own brother, so did I please; as one mourning and sorrowful, so was I humbled.

15 But they rejoiced against me, and came together: scourges were gathered together upon me, and I knew not.

16 They were separated, and repented not: they tempted me, they scoffed at me with scorn: they gnashed upon me with their teeth.

17 Lord, when wilt thou look upon me? rescue thou my soul from their malice: my only one from the lions.

18 I will give thanks to thee in a great church; I will praise thee in a strong people.

19 Let not them that are my enemies wrongfully rejoice over me: * who have hated me without cause, and wink with the eyes.

20 For they spoke indeed peaceably to me: and speaking in the anger of the earth they devised guile.

21 And they opened their mouth wide against me; they said: Well done, well done, our eyes have seen it.

22 Thou hast seen, O Lord, be not thou silent: O Lord, depart not from me.

23 Arise, and be attentive to my judgment: to my cause, my God and my Lord.

24 Judge me, O Lord, my God, according to thy justice, and let them not rejoice over me.

* John xv. 25.

VER. 12. Depriving, sterilitatem. II.—Heb. denotes the condition of one who has lost a husband or father. I had exposed my life for the welfare of the state, and of those who now seek my ruin. C.—Yet David was not slain. This was verified in our Saviour. W.—Sept. have ἀρεσκίαν, “loss of children;” as Christ was abandoned by his disciples. M.

VER. 13. To me. Heb. also signify, “when they were sick,” which manifests a more heroic charity; though yet it is more natural to suppose that David would assume these robes of penance when he was under affliction, as S. Jerom intimates, cum infirmarer ab eis. Bert.—Bosom. I shall reap the advantage from my prayer, if it be of no service to my enemies. Geneb. Luke x. 6. M.

VER. 14. Phrase, complacbam, “treat lovingly.” H.—Vulg. follows the regimen of the Sept. ἐνπεσσοῦν, which may govern an accusative case. Heb. is plainer, “I walked,” (Bert.) or “behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother.” Prot. H.—So. Sept. seem to have explained am, “truly,” instead of mother; as the points would determine the Heb. “like one who bewails his mother” (Bert.); or “like a mother mourning, I bowed down in grief.” S. Jer. C.—Such was the conduct of David, the figure of the Messiah; so that the expressions which seem too strong, must not be taken for imprecations. Bert.—Christ was the good Samaritan who relieved the wounded man. Luke x. W.—S. Paul admonishes us to weep with those who weep. Rom. xii. 15. M.

VER. 15. Against me. Heb. “in my distress,” (Houbig,) or “infirmity.” S. Jer.—Thus was my kind attention repaid. H.—My enemies became only the more insolent, and stood more beside me, to show their contempt. C.—Scourges. Heb. also, “vile men, (Bert.) noeim, people stricken, gathered themselves upon me, and I knew not.” Mont. H.—The Rom. psalters have, “and they were ignorant,” ignoraverunt. C.

VER. 16. Separated, and could not agree in their testimonies. This may be one meaning of krân, as it has several. Bert.—“They did tear me, and ceased not, (16) with hypocritical mockers in feasts, they gnashed,” &c. Prot. H.

VER. 17. One. Sept. “daughter.” Aquila, “solitary,” μοναχην. Prot. “darling,” or my soul which is so desolate. Psal. xxi. 21. H.—So Christ said, Why hast thou abandoned me? (Matt. xxvii.,) not affording me such consolation as other saints enjoy in their agony. W.

VER. 18. Strong, gravi. Heb. âtsun, numerous, (1 Mac. i. 1. M.) and “weighty,” (H.) which is the consequence of great numbers, (Bert.) and of virtue. S. Aug. understands the Church, which is not carried away like chaff before the wind. Ananias dislikes this. H.—The resurrection is foretold, (ver. 17,) and here the Catholic Church is signified. W.

VER. 19. Wrongfully. Heb. “liars,” (S. Jer. H.) alluding to Saul, &c. C.—Christ explains this of himself. John xv. W.—Who. Some supply a negation. Bert.—“Neither let them wink with the eye who,” &c. Prot.

VER. 20. Spoke. Heb. adds la, “not.” But it may be better explained as an interrogation. “Have they not spoken?” &c., as the enemies used deceit. Houbig. Bert.—Earth. This word is omitted in Sept. Rom., S. Aug., &c. But Theodoret reads it, and it is in all the other Greek interpreters, and in the Arab.

25 Let them not say in their hearts: It is well, it is well, to our mind: neither let them say: We have swallowed him up.

26 Let them blush; and be ashamed together, who rejoice at my evils.

Let them be clothed with confusion and shame, who speak great things against me.

27 Let them rejoice and be glad, who are well pleased with my justice: and let them say always: The Lord be magnified, who delight in the peace of his servant.

28 And my tongue shall meditate thy justice, thy praise all the day long.

PSALM XXXV.

DIXIT INJUSTUS.

The malice of sinners, and the goodness of God.

1 Unto the end, for the servant of God, David himself.
2 THE unjust hath said within himself, that he would sin: there is no fear of God before his eyes.

3 *For in his sight he hath done deceitfully, that his iniquity may be found unto hatred.

4 The words of his mouth are iniquity and guile: he would not understand that he might do well.

5 He hath devised iniquity on his bed, he hath set himself on every way that is not good: but evil he hath not hated.

6 O Lord, thy mercy is in heaven, and thy truth reacheth even to the clouds.

b Supra, xlii. 3.

and Syriac. C.—Heb. “they devise deceitful matters against them that are quiet (rogî, divided, &c.) in the land.” Prot. or “in the plunder of the earth they devise deceit.” S. Jer. H.—They appear friendly, but when alone they talk to the earth, like people in deep study and full of passion. C.—This terrestrial anger is the source of much evil. Bert.—The Jews and Herodians said, Master, &c., designing to inveigle our Saviour. Matt. xxii. The priests and Pharisees also accused him boldly, and instigated the people to demand his crucifixion. W.

VER. 21. Done, euge. Heb. caê, H.—This term occurs ten times in Scripture, and here denotes the joy felt in the destruction of an enemy. Thus the Jews insulted over Christ expiring on the cross. Bert.

VER. 22. Silent. I have chosen thee for my judge and protector. C.—Pronounce sentence if they be in the right; and if not, rescue me from their fury. H.

VER. 25. It is well, occurs only once in Heb., which may be imperfect, as many versions supply the second. Bert.

VER. 26. Great. S. Aug. reads “malicious.” C.—At the day of judgment the wicked will be condemned. W.—If this judgment were not to take place, religion would be a fable; as impiety is not always punished in this world. Bert.

VER. 27. Them. The blessed in eternal glory. W.—Justice. Or wish that sentence may be pronounced in my favour. C.—Delight. Heb. “who delights.” S. Jer. H.—But the Greek interpreters read as we do. Bert.

VER. 28. Meditate. Heb. word is used to signify speaking with reflection. C.

PSAL. XXXV., &c. VER. 1. Himself. Psalm is understood. It is expressed in S. Amb. and S. Jerom. (C.) and in the Alex. Sept. H.—David gloried in the title of servant of the Lord, though he bore the sceptre. Psal. xvii. Bert. Psal. cxv. 16. M.

VER. 2. Himself. Heb. lobi, “in my heart.” But this is visibly incorrect, and we should substitute lobu, as S. Jer., Chal., Syr., &c. have done. C.—Yet Syn. translates, “concerning the disorder of the impious within, my heart has said, there,” &c. Heb. may also signify, “the transgression of the wicked saith within my heart.” Prot. H.—I am inwardly convinced how great the malice of the wicked may be. It touches me to the very heart. Both senses are good. The wicked are bent on evil, and this fills the virtuous with grief. Bert.—Eyes. They sin publicly, (Psal. xlii. 1. C.) and on purpose, preferring vice before virtue. (W.) and constantly bent on doing evil, so that they become odious to all. H.

VER. 3. Unto hatred. That is, hateful to God (Ch.) and man (H.); or that he may be able to hurt, as Heb. also may insinuate. Bert.—Sept. “to find and hate his iniquity.” But he acts not with sincerity. He wishes to defend his evil ways. S. Aug., &c.—He still flatters himself with impunity. Psal. ix. 26, or x. 11. To find, often means to punish. Gen. xlv. 16, &c. C.—God frequently abandons those who sin through malice. W.

VER. 4. Well, to those in distress. Psal. xl. 2. Though wise enough in worldly concerns, he seemed quite ignorant when any virtuous actions were proposed. C.

VER. 5. Set himself, “persevering” in wickedness. S. Aug.

7 Thy justice is as the mountains of God, thy judgments are a great deep.

Men and beasts thou wilt preserve, O Lord: 8 O how hast thou multiplied thy mercy, O God!

But the children of men shall put their trust under the covert of thy wings.

9 They shall be inebriated with the plenty of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the torrent of thy pleasure.

10 For with thee is the fountain of life; and in thy light we shall see light.

11 Extend thy mercy to them that know thee, and thy justice to them that are right in heart.

12 Let not the foot of pride come to me, and let not the hand of the sinner move me.

13 There the workers of iniquity are fallen, they are cast out, and could not stand.

PSALM XXXVI.

NOLI ÆMULARI.

An exhortation to despise this world; and the short prosperity of the wicked; and to trust in providence.

1 A psalm for David himself.

BE not emulous of evil doers; nor envy them that work iniquity.

2 For they shall shortly wither away as grass, and as the green herbs shall quickly fall.

3 Trust in the Lord, and do good, and dwell in the land, and thou shalt be fed with its riches.

VER. 6. Clouds. The mercy of God is great, and his fidelity indisputable. C.—God does not leave the most wilful sinner without some good motions, and sufficient grace, that they may repent if they do not harden their own hearts. He has promised such helps, and is most faithful and desirous to receive again the penitent sinner. W.

VER. 7. Of God. A title which is often given to things of superior excellence. —Deep. After praising the mercy of God, the psalmist expresses his admiration of his inscrutable justice. Rom. xi. 33. C.—Preserve, salvabis. The latter are designed only for man's benefit, and will end with time. H.—But man is destined for eternal happiness, ver. 9. C.—God wishes the salvation both of the learned and of the stupid, (S. Jer. W.) of the Jew and Gentile, (Arnob. 1 Tim. iv. 10,) of good and bad. He makes his sun to shine on both. Matt. v. 45. Euseb. Pisecat. C.

VER. 8. O how: So the Heb. and Sept. read; quemadmodum may also (Bert.) signify "as." God has given such proofs of his great mercies to all. H.—Of men. People must lay aside their stupidity and resemblance with brutes, to obtain the eternal joys which are prepared for men. W.

VER. 9. House. In the temple, (C.) or in the Church of God. S. Amb.—The pleasure enjoyed in this communion of saints (H.) is but a foretaste of what may be expected in heaven. C.

VER. 10. With thee, Lord, is the fountain of life, Jesus Christ—See light, or the Holy Ghost. S. Amb. Theod.—We shall see thee, Father of light, in thy Son. Orig. Prin. i. 1. C.—Light and life denote all happiness. C.

VER. 11. Mercy and justice, are here of the same import. Bellar. Muis.—Deliver us from captivity, and extend thy mercies to all thy people. C.—Heart. Many who have sufficient learning, are destitute of this better quality. The right of heart are always more knowing than those who are only learned in speculation, and puffed up with pride. Bert.

VER. 12. Sinner. Heb. and Sept. "sinners," who are always striving to supplant the just by pride and evil example. Bert.—Let me not listen to their wicked advice. S. Aug.

VER. 13. There. The devil fell by pride, and man by his persuasion. Neither could escape punishment. W.—There, in heaven, (S. Jer.,) and in paradise, pride proved fatal (C.); while it will be punished in hell. S. Amb.—Pride and injustice will entail destruction upon our persecutors. Babylon shall shortly fall a prey to Cyrus. C.—Stand. Heb. kum, "rise again."

PSAL. XXXVI., &c. VER. 1. Himself. Heb. has simply, "for David," (C.) as well as the Greek of the Vat. This psalm is alphabetical. The Syriac, Sept., &c., read, (ver. 28,) the unjust, &c., avilim; a word which seems now to be deficient in the Heb., which has no verse beginning with ā. C.—Some other derangement has taken place. Houbig.—The prophet has comprised several duties in alphabetical order, to help the memory, (Bert.,) and to excite attention. W.—Emulous. Heb. "Fret not thyself." Prot. "Mingle not with" (Bert. Pagnin); "content not." S. Jer. H.—Envy. Their splendour is deceitful. C.—Be not, therefore, seduced (H.) to imitate the wicked, (M.) nor offended that they should prosper here. W.

VER. 2. Wither. Heb. "be cut down." C.—Fall. Heb. "wither." S. Jer.

4 Delight in the Lord, and he will give thee the requests of thy heart.

5 Commit thy way to the Lord, and trust in him, and he will do it.

6 And he will bring forth thy justice as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day. 7 Be subject to the Lord, and pray to him.

Envy not the man who prospereth in his way; the man who doth unjust things.

8 Cease from anger, and leave rage; have no emulation to do evil.

9 For evil doers shall be cut off: but they that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the land.

10 For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be: and thou shalt seek his place, and shalt not find it.

11 But the meek shall inherit the land, and shall delight in abundance of peace.

12 The sinner shall watch the just man: and shall gnash upon him with his teeth.

13 But the Lord shall laugh at him: for he foreseeth that his day shall come.

14 The wicked have drawn out the sword: they have bent their bow;

To cast down the poor and needy, to kill the upright of heart.

15 Let their sword enter into their own hearts, and let their bow be broken.

* Matt. v. 4.

11.—This admirably describes the transient glory of sinners. Isa. xl. 6; James i. 10. C.—All life is short. W. 1 Pet. i. 24. M.

VER. 3. Riches. Sept. and Houb. read emunē, "abundance." Heb. begins with a. The sense is much the same. Bert.—"Thou shalt feed on faith," (S. Jer.,) or "incessantly." Sym.—The Jews entertained the greatest desire of the promised land. C.—It may here denote our soul, (Orig.,) the Church, (S. Aug.,) the Scriptures, (S. Athan.,) or heaven. S. Jer., &c. C.—Trust in God, and be content. He will give thee what is requisite. W.

VER. 4. Heart. Provided they be rational. S. Aug.—He will enable thee to repose in peace, and to taste innocent pleasures in the Lord. C.

VER. 5. Commit. Lit. "lay open." Heb. "roll." H.—This expresses the most unbounded confidence. Psal. liv. 23; Prov. xvi. 3.—Do it. Whatever may be proper. He will display thy justice, (ver. 6,) and free thee from anxiety, (C.) taking care of thee. 1 Pet. v. 7. M.

VER. 6. Day. This will appear at the last judgment. S. Aug.

VER. 7. Be. Heb. dum, begins only this verse with d. The other letters occupy two verses, (Bert.,) the second of which may commence with any of the letters. H.—"Be silent to the Lord; wait for Him." S. Jer. H.—If he should suffer thee to be afflicted, envy not those who are in a more prosperous condition, nor give way to indignation, ver. 8. C.—None can be truly subjected to God, who do not comply with his laws and pray. Orig. S. Aug.—We must wait patiently for his aid. Lam. iii. 26; Isa. xxx. 15. "Allow the gods to judge what's best for us." Juv. Sat. 13. H.

VER. 8. Evil. Repining (M.) at the ways of Providence, &c. Chap. v. 1.—Reflect on God's will. H.—Laboras; sed in viā Dei. S. Aug.—Heb. "be not angry nevertheless (ac, a word which Houbig. deems useless) to do evil" (Mont.); or "against the wicked," (Prin. dis.,) as lēvā may perhaps signify; though it is more usually taken for a verb, as the points decide. Bert.

VER. 9. Lana of the living. W.—David knew that many truly pious people would never obtain riches in the land of Chanaan, even though they might have remained there, if the nation had been faithful. He therefore comforts them with the prospect of a better land. If this were not the meaning, the Church would put these canticles in the mouth of her children to little purpose. Bert.

VER. 10. While. Till the day of judgment. Orig. S. Amb.—And shalt. Heb. "and it shall not be." Prot. "it, or he shall not subsist." S. Jer. H.

VER. 11. Meek. Heb. ānīm, also means "the afflicted." Bert.—Cap. es, ye shall be reinstated in your dear country. Our Saviour alludes to this text, (Matt. v. 4.) and the Fathers beautifully explain it of heaven. Euseb. S. Aug. C.

VER. 12. Watch. Heb. "plot against." H.—Teeth. In rage to destroy him, (C.) whose virtue is a continual censure of his impiety. 11.

VER. 13. Laugh. This expression is often used to denote the triumph of Divine justice, whose day will set all right: that day (2 Tim. iv. 8) which ought to be constantly before our eyes. Bert.—God cannot indeed mock at any one. C.—But the wicked "deserve scorn and vengeance." H.—Digni sunt ut irridcantur in vindictā. S. Jer.

VER. 14. Heart. Heb. "of way." Prot. "such as be of upright conversation." Only those whose heart is pure will observe the right path. H.

16 Better is a little to the just, than the great riches of the wicked.

17 For the arms of the wicked shall be broken in pieces; but the Lord strengtheneth the just.

18 The Lord knoweth the days of the undefiled; and their inheritance shall be for ever.

19 They shall not be confounded in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be filled: 20 because the wicked shall perish.

And the enemies of the Lord, presently after they shall be honoured and exalted, shall come to nothing, and vanish like smoke.

21 The sinner shall borrow, and not pay again: but the just showeth mercy and shall give.

22 For such as bless him shall inherit the land: but such as curse him shall perish.

23 With the Lord shall the steps of a man be directed, and he shall like well his way.

24 When he shall fall, he shall not be bruised, for the Lord putteth his hand under him.

25 I have been young, and now am old; and I have not seen the just forsaken, nor his seed seeking bread.

26 He showeth mercy, and lendeth all the day long; and his seed shall be in blessing.

27 Decline from evil, and do good; and dwell for ever and ever.

28 For the Lord loveth judgment, and will not forsake his saints: they shall be preserved for ever.

The unjust shall be punished, and the seed of the wicked shall perish.

▲ Prov. xxxi. 26.

VER. 16. Wicked. Heb. "of many wicked," or "of the impious great ones." H.—What the just man hath, is preferable to the immense riches of sinners, acquired by injustices. The wicked are never satiated. Eccles. iv. 6; Prov. xiii. 25. Riches are a dangerous temptation, (C.) and the sentence is generally true, "every rich person is either unjust, or the heir of one who has been such," (H.) aut hæres injusti. S. Jer.—It is difficult for the rich to enter heaven; and the unjust are certainly excluded. Yet if we confined our views to this world, it is evident that the rich may better procure the sweets of life. Bert.

VER. 17. Arms of the body, brachia. All that they have admired perishes in death, (C.) while the just then possess true riches.

VER. 18. Days, or "ways," according to some copies of Sept., S. Aug., &c. God approves the conduct of the just. He takes notice of the time of their sufferings, and comforts them during life, (C.) yea, for ever.

VER. 20. Smoke. All their riches shall vanish, and their works be disregarded by God. But they will not be annihilated, as they would desire; otherwise the justice of God would not be executed on them. Bert.—There is a continual antithesis between the good and bad. The latter shall shortly lose all their splendour. Heb. "shall be as the fat of lambs, consumed and reduced to smoke." H.—S. Jerom seems to have read differently, "boasting like unicorns, they shall be consumed, as smoke, they shall be consumed." Syr. and Chal. intimate that they shall be like victims, "fattened" for slaughter, and burnt. C.

VER. 21. Give. Having both the will and the power to be liberal. H.—"He shall lend without expecting any advantage, while the wicked falls into such misery as not to be able to pay his debts. This is not always the order of Providence. C.—But the just is often enabled by economy to relieve his brethren, at the same time that the libertine wastes his estate, (Bert.,) or at least unjustly defers to pay his debts. M.

VER. 22. Bless him. The just, (ver. 21. Prin. disc.,) or rather the Lord, ver. 20. Bert.—"Are blessed of him," &c. S. Jer. Chal. H.

VER. 23. With. Or by the decrees of the Lord. The Heb. and Sept. have, "By," παρά. Bert.—God gives grace to do all good, (Prov. xvi. 9. C.) and likes the way which He points out. The just also find the greatest consolation in virtue. H.

VER. 24. Him. To break the fall. Heb. "the Lord upholdeth him with his hand." Prot. H.—The just man is like a courageous wrestler, who may slip, but yields not. Orig. Euseb.—His fall is not mortal, (C.) though he may be guilty of venial sin. Prov. xxiv. W.

VER. 25. Seeking, in vain. H.—Rom. and Gothic Ps. read, "wanting."—Nothing was more unusual under the old law than the extreme distress of the just: yet Job and Lazarus were reduced to it. They were not, however, discon-

29 But the just shall inherit the land, and shall dwell therein for evermore.

30 "The mouth of the just shall meditate wisdom; and his tongue shall speak judgment.

31 "The law of his God is in his heart, and his steps shall not be supplanted.

32 The wicked watcheth the just man, and seeketh to put him to death.

33 But the Lord will not leave him in his hands; nor condemn him when he shall be judged.

34 Expect the Lord and keep his way: and he will exalt thee to inherit the land: when the sinners shall perish thou shalt see.

35 I have seen the wicked highly exalted, and lifted up like the cedars of Libanus.

36 And I passed by, and lo! he was not: and I sought him, and his place was not found.

37 Keep innocence, and behold justice; for there are remnants for the peaceable man.

38 But the unjust shall be destroyed together: the remnants of the wicked shall perish.

39 But the salvation of the just is from the Lord, and he is their protector in the time of trouble.

40 And the Lord will help them, and deliver them: and he will rescue them from the wicked; and save them, because they have hoped in him.

PSALM XXXVII.

DOMINE NE IN FURORE.

*A prayer of a penitent for the remission of his sins.
The third penitential psalm.*

1 A psalm for David, for a remembrance of the sabbath

■ Isa. li. 7.

tent. C.—It is certain that there were poor among the Jews (Deut. xv. 11); and who would assert that they were all wicked, or the children of such? Yet the prophet had not witnessed (C.) any person renowned for virtue reduced to this condition, (H.) though he does not deny but it might be possible. C.

VER. 26. Lendeth. "To receive interest," δανίζει, from God. Prov. xix. 17. S. Aug., &c. C.—He maketh known the Divine word. Orig.

VER. 27. Dwell in the land of the living, rather than in that of promise, from which many just people were banished during the captivity. Bert.—He who complies with these two conditions will inherit heaven. W.

VER. 28. Saints. Heb. "merciful ones." He will free them from captivity. C.

VER. 31. Supplanted. The devil shall have no advantage over the just, (C.) who aim constantly at perfection. Orig.

VER. 32. Death, mortification. Some read perdere, or occidere. The wicked are constantly laying snares for destruction, (C.) and to draw others into mortal sin. W.

VER. 33. Judged, "by him." Illi seems to be superfluous (Bert.); or it implies that God will revise the sentence of wicked judges. H.—The mistakes of human tribunals prove the necessity of a general judgment. Bert.

VER. 35. Cedars, &c. Sept. have read differently from the present Heb., and present a more beautiful sense. C.—Prot. "and spreading himself like a green bay-tree, (marg. or 'a green tree that groweth in his own soil,') yet he passed away, and lo," &c. H.—Azrē, denotes an evergreen, (Rabbins,) "a laurel covered with verdure." C.—Houbigant has "a cedar," arze.

VER. 36. I passed. This is better than the Heb. "it has passed," transiit, as a tree changes not its place, and all the ancient interpreters agree with us. Bert.—His place, is not expressed in Heb. But it implies that every vestige of the proud is soon lost. H.

VER. 37. Remnants, or rewards. W.—Heb. āerith, "the reward," (Pag.,) "the last end of man is peace," (Mont. H.) or "the posterity (ver. 38) of such a man shall be happy." C.—"There are future things for the peaceful." Sym.—The expectations of the just are not confined to this world. They have something laid up for heaven, whereas the wicked have nothing. H.—These lose all by death, and the thought makes them take refuge in the foolish hope of being annihilated. Bert.

VER. 39. Salvation. This is an effect of God's grace. W.

PSAL. XXXVII., &c. VER. 1. For a remembrance, viz. of our miseries and our sins; and to be sung on the sabbath day. Ch.—It contains an excellent model for penitents, (C.) to enable them to regain peace of conscience, (S. Greg.,) and paradise, from which they are banished by sin. S. Aug.

REBUKE me not, O Lord, in thy indignation; nor chastise me in thy wrath.

3 For thy arrows are fastened in me: and thy hand hath been strong upon me.

4 There is no health in my flesh, because of thy wrath: there is no peace for my bones, because of my sins.

5 For my iniquities are gone over my head: and as a heavy burden are become heavy upon me.

6 My sores are putrified and corrupted, because of my foolishness.

7 I am become miserable, and am bowed down even to the end. I walked sorrowful all the day long.

8 For my loins are filled with illusions: and there is no health in my flesh.

9 I am afflicted and humbled exceedingly: I roared with the groaning of my heart.

10 Lord, all my desire is before thee, and my groaning is not hidden from thee.

11 My heart is troubled, my strength hath left me, and the light of my eyes itself is not with me.

12 My friends and my neighbours have drawn near, and stood against me.

And they that were near me stood afar off: 13 and they that sought my soul used violence.

And they that sought evils to me spoke vain things, and studied deceits all the day long.

14 But I, as a deaf man, heard not: and as a dumb man not opening his mouth.

15 And I became as a man that heareth not: and that hath no reproofs in his mouth.

• Supra, vi. 2.

VER. 2. Wrath. God is incapable of passion: but man deserves to be treated with the utmost rigour; and this David deprecates, begging that God would act rather like a physician in his regard. Theod. C.—The same petition occurs in Psalm vi.; and this ought to caution people not to make imprecations, since God's judgments are so terrible. Bert.—S. Aug. and S. Greg. explain this text of the fire of hell, and of purgatory. 1 Cor. iii. 15. H.—Though some be saved by the latter, "yet is that fire more grievous than whatever man can suffer in this life." S. Aug.—"I esteem that transitory fire more intolerable than all present tribulation." S. Greg. W.—We may therefore pray, "Here burn," &c., with the same S. Aug., who assures us, (Gen. con. Man. ii. 20,) that "he who cultivates not the field of his soul, will, after this life, experience either the fire of purgation or eternal punishment." H.

VER. 3. Arrows. Afflictions, (W.) or the word of God, which convert the sinner. S. Aug.—The admonition of Nathan had made the deepest impression on David. He was also visited by sickness, like Job vi. 4, and xix. 21.

VER. 4. Sins. These occasion my great affliction, when I reflect on thy justice. W.—I chastise myself. Euseb.—S. Aug. explains all this of original sin. C.—Jesus bore the weight of all our sins, which are above our comprehension. Ver. 5. Bert.

VER. 5. Me. They press upon me like a deluge or huge weight. C.—The sin of David had many aggravations. Bert.—His punishment was also great. C.

VER. 6. Foolishness, or sin. Shame has made me conceal the state of my soul; and hence the evil has increased. S. Jer., &c. C.—The poisoned wound has infected other parts which were sound (W.): zburuth denotes sores, or "wounds still fresh or mortifying," (H.) rather than scars. M.—All sin is properly styled foolishness, as no prudent man should commit any. Orig.

VER. 7. End. Heb. "exceedingly," while a person feels his state is not desperate. Bert.—Sorrowful. Heb. "in black," which may refer either to the mourning attire, (C.) or to the "countenance." Sym.

VER. 8. Loins. Yoaï, as the Alex. and Comp. Sept. read, though the Vat. has ψυχή, soul, (H.) with the Arab., &c.—Illusions. Heb. nokle, "burning." Pagn. "Shameful ulcer." Houb. "Ignominy." S. Jer. H.—David acknowledges that the irregular motions of concupiscence were an effect of his transgression.

VER. 11. Troubled. Heb. "beats," palpitat. Houb.—Itself. Heb. "even they are," &c. H.—I was no longer endued with the spirit of prophecy, (S. Bas.,) till my conversion, (S. Aug.,) nor an object of favour. H.—I was abandoned to myself, (C.) quitting thy light. S. Amb.—My eyes have been hurt by weeping (H.) and maladies, (C.) while my heart is become so corrupt, that I do not relish or discern spiritual things. H.

VER. 12. Have. Heb. "over against my wound" (H.) or leprosy. C.—Prot. "stand aloof from my sores." H.—But the original means rather "near to."

16 For in thee, O Lord, have I hoped: thou wilt hear me, O Lord, my God.

17 For I said: Lest at any time my enemies rejoice over me: and whilst my feet are moved, they speak great things against me.

18 For I am ready for scourges: and my sorrow is continually before me.

19 For I will declare my iniquity: and I will think for my sin.

20 But my enemies live, and are stronger than I: and they that hate me wrongfully, are multiplied.

21 They that render evil for good, have detracted me, because I followed goodness.

22 Forsake me not, O Lord, my God: do not thou depart from me.

23 Attend unto my help, O Lord, the God of my salvation.

PSALM XXXVIII.

DIXI CUSTODIAM.

A just man's peace and patience in his sufferings; considering the vanity of the world, and the providence of God.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun himself, a canticle of David.

2 I SAID: I will take heed to my ways: that I sin not with my tongue.

I have set a guard to my mouth, when the sinner stood against me.

3 I was dumb, and was humbled; and kept silence from good things: and my sorrow was renewed.

4 My heart grew hot within me: and in my meditation a fire shall flame out.

Sept. may have read u for i, in nogāi. Bert.—But Sym. and S. Jerom translate, "stood against my leprosy, (H.) and my neighbour stood at a distance;" as if they had been afraid of the contagion. Job (xix. 13, 19) makes the same complaints. C.

VER. 13. Violence. Heb. "laid snares." This treatment might be expected from enemies, since friends proved so treacherous. H.—They would willingly have slain David. The will is often put for the deed. C.—Things. Endeavouring to engage me again in sin, being displeased because I had quitted their evil company (W.); or they raise their fortune, by causing dissensions in the state.

VER. 14. Mouth. I utterly renounce all sin. W.—David would make no reply to Semei, (Theod.,) nor our Saviour to Pilate. C.—Silence is often the best defence. H.—Eagerness to justify oneself causes trouble and disedification. Bert.

VER. 16. Hoped. This was the reason of his silence. Bert.—He knew that God was in a manner engaged to defend those (C.) who rely (W.) wholly on Him; and he declared such to be his disposition. H.—Hear me. The same term thāne means, "wilt answer" (Mont.) as a judge and advocate. H.—God will one day manifest the justice of his elect. Bert.

VER. 17. For. On this account I turn to thee, and entreat thee not to suffer my enemies to gain the victory. W.—My enemies is not expressed in Heb. C.—I decline saying any thing in my own defence, lest I should offend God. M.

VER. 18. Scourges. Prot. to "halt," lotsā. H.—S. Jer. ad plagas. Chal. "for calamity." (Bert.) See Psal. xxxiv. 15. I speak not through impatience, as I know that my sins deserve still more. C.—I resign myself to thee. W.—This was admirably verified in Jesus Christ, the victim for our sins. C.

VER. 21. Detracted me, by insinuating that my repentance is hypocrisy. Another mode of detracting is by making known secret faults, (W.) as calumny imputes false ones. H.—Goodness. Sept. "justice." Many Greek and Latin copies add: "They have rejected me, the beloved, (Theod. Arab.,) as one dead, as an abomination."—Forsake, ver. 22. S. Amb. C.

PSAL. XXXVIII., &c. VER. 1. Idithun was one of the four chief masters of music, called Ethan, 1 Par. vi. 44, and Idithun, ib. xvi. 41. Some think that he was the author of this psalm; but it was rather given to him by David to sing. C.

VER. 2. Tongue. The matter is very delicate and important. James iii. 2; Prov. xviii. 21; Isa. xxxii. 17; Eccli. xxii. 33, and xxviii. 28.—Me, and was treating me with injustice and calumny. H.

VER. 3. Renewed. I was conscious of no offence against my enemies, (H.) but I reflected that I had forfeited my virtue, (Euseb.,) and therefore gave vent to my grief. H.

VER. 4. Out. This alludes to his sorrow for his sins, (Orig.,) or to the fire of charity, which is enkindled by meditation on the last end, &c., (ver. 5,) or

5 I spoke with my tongue: O Lord, make me know my end,

And what is the number of my days: that I may know what is wanting to me.

6 Behold thou hast made my days measurable: and my substance is as nothing before thee.

And indeed all things are vanity: every man living.

7 Surely man passeth as an image: yea, and he is disquieted in vain.

He storeth up: and he knoweth not for whom he shall gather these things.

8 And now what is my hope? is it not the Lord? and my substance is with thee.

9 Deliver thou me from all my iniquities: thou hast made me a reproach to the fool.

10 I was dumb, and I opened not my mouth, because thou hast done it. 11 Remove thy scourges from me.

The strength of thy hand hath made me faint in rebukes: 12 thou hast corrected man for iniquity.

And thou hast made his soul to waste away like a spider: surely in vain is any man disquieted.

13 Hear my prayer, O Lord, and my supplication; give ear to my tears.

Be not silent; for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were.

14 O forgive me, that I may be refreshed, before I go hence, and be no more.

rather, it means, that while he repressed his tongue, he could not but feel an inward zeal and indignation, (C.) in consequence of grief suppressed. W.—See Jer. xx. 9. M.

VER. 5. End, as I desire to die, like Elias, 3 Kings xix. W.—The just have frequently expressed such sentiments, to move God to pity, (Job vii. 1; Psal. ci. 4,) though they wished to live, that they might praise God on earth, (C.) if it were his will. H.

VER. 6. Measurable. Heb. “of a hand’s breadth.” H.—Substance. S. Jer. “life.” Heb. “age.”—Living. Heb. “standing,” how well soever he may seem to be established. Prot. “at his best estate, is altogether vanity. Slah.” H.—The wisest of men confirms this at large. Eccles. i. 1. C. James iv. 14.—“What is this long while which has an end?” Cie. pro Marcel. M.

VER. 7. Image, “of God.” S. Greg., &c. Heb. “in a shadow or darkness,” where the fall of a leaf affrights him. Life is so short and miserable, why should we strive to heap up riches? C.—For whom. Heb. “who shall gather,” &c. H.—The term is used respecting harvest rather than money. C.—Heb. has disquieted in the plural, and the rest of the words in the singular; but S. Jerom agrees with us, conturbatur . . et ignorat cui dimittat ea. H.—The prophet still utters complaints. One step further is necessary to insure peace. Bert.—He acknowledges that his life is but a shadow, and that we ought not to grieve for temporal losses. W.

VER. 8. Substance. Sept. hypostasis. Heb. “hope.” H.—I can depend only on thee. C.

VER. 9. Thou hast. Heb. la, “do not;” ne, or nonne; or “hast thou not made?” &c., as the following verse intimates. Bert.—Thou hast suffered me to be reproached by the foolish, who prosper in this world. W.—The fool may denote the devil, (S. Jer. Orig.,) and all the lovers of iniquity. Flam. C.

VER. 10. It. S. Aug. reads “me,” conformably to some copies of the Sept., Arab., &c. C.—He is at a loss to explain the reason of the prophet, and suggests that this perhaps ought to be referred to the following sentence, “Because thou hast made me, remove,” &c. H.—The Alex. and Vat. Sept. both have me, (H.) which is omitted in Complut. C.—David knew that he was scourged by Divine Providence. W.

VER. 12. Spider. S. Jer. “moth.” Sym. “thou dissolvest like corruption his desirable thing” (H.); which means the soul, (Bert.), or “beauty.” Prot. Remorse of conscience and God’s judgments make a man pine away.

VER. 13. Were. 1 Par. xxix. 15. I can expect aid from no other but thee. C.—Heaven is our home. W.—“Life is a travelling from home.” Plato in Axiocho.

VER. 14. More. In a state to do good. W.—Grant me relief. Eccles. ix. 10; Job vii. 8. C.

PSAL. XXXIX., &c. Psalm. Prot. intimate that this is not in the Heb.; but we find mosmur, “cantic,” which is equivalent. H.—David speaks of his own restoration to health as a figure of Jesus Christ, who is principally intended. Heb. x. 7. The end of the psalm is nearly the same with the 69th. C.—Some arbitrarily (Bert.) explain the words with relation to the revolt of Absalom. Bossuet.—Others think it may refer to the captives, (Ven. Bede,) to Daniel, or Jeremias, rescued from prison. See Theodoret, who explains it of men waiting for the general resurrection. It may express the sentiments of the Church, when the persecutions ceased. Euthym.—Christ sometimes speaks in his own name, and sometimes in that of his members. S. Amb. S. Aug. C.—It is certain that David

PSALM XXXIX.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

Christ’s coming, and redeeming mankind.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David himself.

2 WITH expectation I have waited for the Lord, and he was attentive to me.

3 And he heard my prayers, and brought me out of the pit of misery and the mire of dregs.

And he set my feet upon a rock, and directed my steps.

4 And he put a new canticle into my mouth, a song to our God.

Many shall see, and shall fear: and they shall hope in the Lord.

5 Blessed is the man whose trust is in the name of the Lord: and who hath not had regard to vanities, and lying follies.

6 Thou hast multiplied thy wonderful works, O Lord, my God: and in thy thoughts there is not one like to thee.

I have declared and I have spoken: they are multiplied above number.

7 “Sacrifice and oblation thou didst not desire; but thou hast pierced ears for me.

Burnt-offering and sin-offering thou didst not require: 8 then said I, Behold I come.

In the head of the book it is written of me, 9 that I had Christ in view; and if he allude to himself, it is only as the figure of him. Bert.

VER. 2. Expectation, or patience. H.—God has, at last, granted my request.

VER. 3. Misery. Heb. “confusion,” (Bert.), or “noise,” (S. Jer. H.) from the greatest danger. Theod.—Dregs. Mud. Jer. xxxviii. 6. S. Aug., &c., explain this of the Christian saved by faith from the sink of his sins. C.

VER. 4. New. Excellent. H.—I was before uttering complaints, now I give thanks with joy, for my health and conversion. C.—Song. Heb. “praise.” The penitent changes his language, which is no longer understood by worldlings. Bert.—Many. S. Aug. reads, the just, who take part in the welfare of their brethren, (Psal. xxxi. 11,) while the wicked are filled with alarm at the ways of God; who humbles or exalts people as he pleases. C.

VER. 5. Vanities. Heb. “the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies.” Prot. H.—All the world is vanity, (Psal. xxxviii. 6, &c. C.) though idolatry may be here meant. S. Cyr.

VER. 6. Thoughts, or designs “over us,” as Heb. adds. No one can fathom the counsels of the Lord. It is folly, therefore, to attack his mysteries. H. C.—Number. Christ and his apostles preached, so that many followed their doctrine. W.—David also had many witnesses of his gratitude. They crowded round him. —“I find no order before thee; if I would declare and number, they are more (wonders) than can be counted.” S. Jer. H.—I am at a loss how to express myself, and must be content with the interior sentiments of gratitude. See Psal. lxx. 15. C.

VER. 7. Sacrifice and oblation. Neither bloody nor unbloody sacrifices of the law will do. M.—Pierced ears. Sept. and S. Paul read, a body thou hast fitted to me. Heb. x. 5. H.—Nobilis mentions that he found the reading of the Vulg. in one Gr. MS. in Eus., &c.—The Arab. has both. “Thou hast prepared a body for me, and opened my ears.” C.—Both are, in effect, of Divine authority. The version adopted by S. Paul cannot be rejected, no more than the Heb. confirmed by the Vulg. We know not the reason why the Vulg. here abandons the Sept. The sense is much the same; the prophet noticing the entire obedience of the Messias, (Bert.,) and the apostle comprising his whole person. M.—His body was miraculous, (H.) and the incarnation the work of God. C.—Nothing could come up to his submission. “Thou hast dug ears for me,” (S. Jer. H.) alluding to the custom of making slaves for ever, (Exod. xxi. 5,) or “thou hast fitted, (C.) opened, (Prot.,) my ears,” enabling me to hear, and to obey. H.—The sacrifice of Christ was never interrupted, from the first moment of his incarnation. C.—He was always doing the will of his Father. H.—And is omitted in the Lat. version of S. Paul, holocaustum pro peccato, inadvertently, or rather to intimate that he was speaking of the holocaust of expiation. Heb. x. 6, 8, and xiii. 11, and Lev. xvi. 27. Bert.—S. Aug. also admits only one species of sacrifice, “holocausts likewise for sin.” But others distinguish them from the victims designed to expiate the sins of individuals, (Eev. v., &c.,) of which the prophet also speaks. C.

VER. 8. Head, or beginning, (Gen. i.; John i., and viii. 25. S. Jer., &c.,) or at the commencement of this book of Psalms, (S. Aug.,) or rather, in the whole Bible. C.—Kephais denotes a volume, (Snidas,) or stick, on which books were formerly rolled, being written on parchment. The Jews still observe the same custom in their synagogues. C. Luke iv. 17, 20. Heb. “In the volume of the book,” means, in the book, (Amama,) or the Bible, which is the book, by excel-should do thy will: O my God, I have desired it, and thy law in the midst of my heart.

10 I have declared thy justice in a great church; lo, I will not restrain my lips: O Lord, thou knowest it.

11 I have not hid thy justice within my heart: I have declared thy truth, and thy salvation.

I have not concealed thy mercy and thy truth from a great council.

12 Withhold not thou, O Lord, thy tender mercies from me; thy mercy and thy truth have always upheld me.

13 For evils without number have surrounded me; my iniquities have overtaken me, and I was not able to see.

They are multiplied above the hairs of my head: and my heart hath forsaken me.

14 Be pleased, O Lord, to deliver me: ^alook down, O Lord, to help me.

15 ^bLet them be confounded and ashamed together, that seek after my soul to take it away.

Let them be turned backward, and be ashamed, that desire evils to me.

16 Let them immediately bear their confusion, that say to me: 'Tis well, 'tis well.

17 Let all that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say always: The Lord be magnified.

18 But I am a beggar and poor; the Lord is careful for me.

lence, where the incarnation and death of Christ, for man's redemption, are clearly specified. 11.—They bear witness to Christ. John v. 39; Luke xxiv. 27. H.—The apostle uses the word capitulum, for the sum. Heb. viii.

VER. 9. Heart. So the Vat. Sept. reads; while other editions have κοιλιας, "belly." S. Jer. ad Sum.—Heb. "bowels." H.—The sense is the same. Bert.

VER. 10. Thy, is not expressed in Heb. or Gr., but understood. Bert.—Church, in the tabernacle, (Theod.,) or rather in the Catholic Church; the propagation of which, (H.) and the preaching of the gospel throughout the world, are foretold. W.—The justice, or mercies of our Saviour, are every where proclaimed. S. Jer. C.

VER. 11. Thy. Some copies of the Sept. have, my justice, as well as the Ethiopic version. Eus. S. Aug., &c. C.—But the Vulg. is more correct. Bert.—Council. Christ conceals not his mercy and truth from the greatest and wisest congregations. He spoke boldly before Annas and Caiphas, as S. Paul did at Athens, &c. W.

VER. 12. Withhold not. The prophet now speaks in the name of Christ's mystical body, the Church, praying to be made a partaker of mercy, and to be delivered from evils, (W.) or Christ speaks as the victim for our sins. 11.—Upheld me. This might be also rendered as a prayer, "May thy," &c., with the Heb. and some copies of the Sept. Bert.

VER. 13. My iniquities. That is, the sins of all mankind, which I have taken upon me. Ch. C.—Forsaken me in the agony. C.—Christ had all the sins of mankind laid upon him. Bert.

VER. 15. Backward, as those who came to seize Christ were twice. John xviii. 6.—He prays for their conversion. C.

VER. 16. 'Tis well. The Hebrew here is an interjection of insult and derision, like the Vah. Matt. xxvii. 40. Ch.—As S. Jerom here expresses it, Vah, Vah. See Mark xv. 20. M.—The Jews have now become objects of contempt, (C.) a just punishment (H.) of scoffers, who wish evil to the good.

VER. 18. Beggar. King David might assume this title, as well as all mankind. S. Aug.—The same may be applied to Christ, according to his human nature, as the end of this psalm, and the following, belong to him, more than to David. C.—He speaks in the name of penitents, whose sins he had undertaken to wash away. W.—Careful, Heb. "will think of me." H.

PSAL. XL. VER. 1. Himself; implying that David composed this psalm, though the word is not expressed in Heb. or Gr. Berthier. T. 3.—The same articles, however, occur, which have been thus rendered before. H.—Some explain this psalm of the sickness of Ezechias, (Ven. Bcde,) or of that of David, a little before the revolt of Absalom. Rab. Muis. Bossnet.—This may be described as a figure of our Saviour's sufferings. C.—For it would be rash not to acknowledge that He is here the principal object in view, (Theod.,) since he has applied (ver. 10) to the traitor's conduct, (C.) and all the rest may properly allude to the same events. The psalmist speaks of the Messiah in the first six verses, and introduces him, in the remainder, uttering his own sentiments, (Bert.,) respecting his passion and resurrection. W. Isa. liii. 4. M.

VER. 2, 3. Understandeth. Relieving with eagerness, (H.) or reflecting seriously on Jesus Christ, (Bert.,) who was pleased to be poor for our sakes. H.—

Thou art my helper and my protector: O my God, be not slack.

PSALM XL.

BEATUS QUI INTELLIGIT.

The happiness of him that shall believe in Christ; notwithstanding the humility and poverty in which he shall come: the malice of his enemies, especially of the traitor Judas.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David himself.

2 BLESSED is he that understandeth concerning the needy and the poor: the Lord will deliver him in the evil day.

3 The Lord preserve him and give him life, and make him blessed upon the earth: and deliver him not up to the will of his enemies.

4 The Lord help him on his bed of sorrow: thou hast turned all his couch in his sickness.

5 I said. O Lord, be thou merciful to me: heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee.

6 My enemies have spoken evils against me: when shall he die and his name perish?

7 And if he came in to see me, he spoke vain things; his heart gathered together iniquity to itself.

He went out and spoke to the same purpose.

8 All my enemies whispered together against me: they devised evils to me.

9 They determined against me an unjust word: shall he that sleepeth rise again no more?

And the poor, is not in the ancient Sept., (Eus.,) nor Heb., &c. But it only expresses the same idea as the word needy, (Bert.,) being added to show the extreme misery to which our Saviour was reduced. H.—Day of death or judgment.—The Church recites this psalm for the sick. Those who assist them may hope for a similar treatment. But such as are not scandalized at Christ, on account of his poverty and afflictions, may be pronounced blessed, (Luke vii. 23,) as He will deliver them from distress, if they place their confidence in Him. W.—The sick are relieved, when they think on Christ's sufferings. M.—Preserve. Heb. "will preserve . . . and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies." Prot.—But S. Jerom has, "and he will not," &c. H.—Sixtus V. reads, "into the hands of his enemy," after S. Aug., &c. Others add, "he will purify his soul from, or on the earth." C.

VER. 4. His bed. Lit. "on the bed of his sorrow." His seems to have been formerly in Heb., (Houb.,) though it be now omitted, (Bert.,) as it was in the time of Sym. "the bed of misery," (S. Jer.,) of infirmity.—Thou hast. Heb. "then wilt make." Prot. "turn," (marg. H.) "change, or take away." In the cast, the bed was removed entirely, (John v. 8,) and this expression may denote (C.) that the sick man should be cured, and no longer be confined to his bed, (S. Chrys.,) or that God would take him by the hand, to support him, and turn his bed, like a tender mother, to make it more comfortable. Gench. C.

VER. 5. Thee. Christ prays for his members, acknowledging their sins, (W.) which he had undertaken to expiate. The Fathers explain this of his prayer in the garden. C.

VER. 6. Perish? When shall we have a change, and see Absalom on the throne? When shall we get rid of this man, who reproves our conduct? So were the Jews animated to destroy Christ. Theod.—The rest of the psalm more visibly relates to him. C.

VER. 7. If he, any one among my enemies. H.—The Scriptures often pass from the plural to the singular, (Bert.,) to comprise every one distinctly. H.—Yet S. Aug., &c., read, "they came," &c., omitting if, as some of the Sept. edit. do likewise; though inaccurately, according to S. Jer. ad Sun. C.—It occurs in the Rom. copy, and Grabe inserts it in a smaller type. The sense is not altered. H.—The conspirators affected to show David some marks of civility, to obtain their ends. The Jews often strove to entangle Jesus by their questions, (Matt. xix. 3, and xxii. 17, 24, and John viii. 3,) while Judas continued in his company to gratify his own avarice, and to betray him. C.

VER. 9. Word of affecting the regal power, &c. S. Amb.—No more? Jesus Christ speaks: They have unjustly condemned me: but can I not rise again? Or the words may be put in the mouth of his enemies: Shall we have any thing to fear from the dead? If we were to confine him only, he might perhaps escape. C.

VER. 10. Bread. This characterizes the traitor, who had received the holy Communion, and had been intrusted with the purse by our Saviour, yet betrayed him with the sign of peace. C.—To violate the laws of hospitality was greatly reprobated by the very pagans. Plut. Symp. vii. 4.—Supplanted me. David might allude to Absalom, though the Holy Ghost speaks of Judas. C.—Our Saviour himself says, (W.) that the Scriptures may be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me, shall lift up his heel against me: Qui manducat mecum panem leva-

10 For even the man of my peace, in whom I trusted, who eat my bread, hath greatly supplanted me.

11 But thou, O Lord, have mercy on me, and raise me up again: and I will requite them.

12 By this I know, that thou hast had a good will for me: because my enemy shall not rejoice over me.

13 But thou hast upheld me by reason of my innocence: and hast established me in thy sight for ever.

14 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from eternity to eternity. So be it. So be it.

PSALM XLI.

QUEMADMODUM DESIDERAT.

The fervent desire of the just after God: hope in afflictions.

1 Unto the end, understanding for the sons of Core.

2 AS the hart panteth after the fountains of waters; so my soul panteth after thee, O God.

3 My soul hath thirsted after the strong living God; when shall I come and appear before the face of God?

4 My tears have been my bread day and night, whilst it is said to me daily: Where is thy God?

5 These things I remembered, and poured out my soul in me: for I shall go over into the place of the wonderful tabernacle, even to the house of God:

With the voice of joy and praise; the noise of one feasting.

6 Why art thou sad, O my soul; and why dost thou trouble me?

Hope in God, for I will still give praise to him: the salvation of my countenance, 7 and my God.

My soul is troubled within myself: therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan and Hermoniim, from the little hill.

8 Deep calleth on deep, at the noise of thy flood-gates.

bit contra me calcaneum suum: επηρεν επ' εμε την πτερναν αυτου, "has lifted up," &c., as the Heb. expresses it here. Judas had attempted to betray Christ already, and would do it more effectually hereafter; so that both the present and future might agree with him. We also find the psalm translated qui edebat panes meos, &c.—To lift up the heel, is the posture of one who attempts to supplant his adversary. M.

VER. 12. Over me. Thus the Divinity of Christ was proved, since he rose victorious, in spite of his enemies. C.

VER. 14. So be it. Chal. "Amen." This word, at the beginning of a discourse, implies an affirmative oath (Matt. vi. 13); and at the end it is a mark of approbation. Num. v. 22.—Here the Jews terminate the first book of the psalms, which they divide into five. C.—S. Jerom rejects this division, as our Saviour mentions only the psalms, and the last psalm has no such conclusion. W.—It has Aleluia. All the rest have Amen. See Psal. lxxii., lxxxix., cvi. Heb. Bert.—The observations which have been made in this first part will serve to explain many other passages, on which we shall therefore be shorter, as well as in specifying the variations from the original, which are for the most part only apparent, as the intelligent reader may be convinced, by the preceding remarks. H.

PSAL. XLI. VER. 1. Understanding. See Psal. xxxi. M.—Core, who composed, (T.) or sung, (M.) most of the psalms in this second part. T.—Pieces of a joyful nature were generally assigned to them, according to the Jews, and S. Jer. Psal. lxxxiv. M.—They were descendants of the famous schismatic, the miraculous preservation of whose innocent children teaches us that the good will not be punished with the guilty, and that we must be raised above this earth, lest hell devour us. Num. xvi. 31, and xxvi. 10. W.

VER. 2. Waters. This was sung at the baptism of Catechumens, (S. Aug.) teaching them to thirst after heaven. H.

VER. 3. Strong. Most Bibles before Clement VIII. read "fountain." C.—Al signifies both God and strong. Bert.—The Levites desired earnestly to serve God in his temple; Christians must wish to appear before him in heaven, (C.) when they will be free from temptations. Idols may destroy, but they cannot give life. W.

VER. 4. Bread. The tears of compunction obtain the remission of sin. S. Jer.—God. Thus the idolaters derided those who could not point at their God. H.—Those who saw David wandering (H.) in the mountains, at a distance from the tabernacle, might ask him what religion or God he followed. M.

VER. 5. These sarcasms fill me with grief, (C.) while the solemn ceremonies of religion, which, I remember, were observed in the temple, cause my heart to overflow with joy. Bert.—I shall. Prot. "I had gone with the multitude; I

All thy heights and thy billows have passed over me.

9 In the day time the Lord hath commanded his mercy; and a canticle to him in the night.

With me is prayer to the God of my life, 10 I will say to God: Thou art my support.

Why hast thou forgotten me? and why go I mourning, whilst my enemy afflicteth me?

11 Whilst my bones are broken, my enemies, who trouble me, have reproached me.

Whilst they say to me day by day: Where is thy God?

12 Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet me?

Hope thou in God, for I will still give praise to him the salvation of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLII.

JUDICA ME DEUS.

The prophet aspireth after the temple and altar of God.

1 A psalm for David.

JUDGE me, O God, and distinguish my cause from the nation that is not holy, deliver me from the unjust and deceitful man.

2 For thou art God, my strength: why hast thou cast me off? and why do I go sorrowful, whilst the enemy afflicteth me?

3 Send forth thy light and thy truth: they have conducted me, and brought me unto thy holy hill, and into thy tabernacles.

4 And I will go in to the altar of God: to God who giveth joy to my youth.

5 To thee, O God, my God, I will give praise upon the harp: why art thou sad, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet me?

went with them to the house of God with the voice of joy and praise; with a multitude that kept holiday." H.—The original may have several other meanings. The tabernacle may here designate the musach of the Levites. 4 Kings xvi. 18. C.—Feasting. Some such religious feasts were prescribed, Deut. xii. 12. H.

VER. 6. My countenance. Heb. "his," as Aquila, &c., read. C.—Yet as the words are repeated, (ver. 12,) there seems to be a fault in the text, (Bert.,) owing to v, "his," being taken in here, instead of explaining it by and, ver. 7. H.—The arrangement of the letters in the Vulg. is preferable. C.

VER. 7. Little hill of Sion. I hope that I shall soon again behold the fertile regions along the Jordan. C.—But these hills of Hermon, &c., are nothing, when compared with heaven: They serve only to remind us of our banishment. Bert.

VER. 8. Flood-gates. The Hebrews imagined there were immense reservoirs of water above, (C.) which might serve to drown the earth, as at the deluge. Gen. vii. 11. Both heaven and earth seemed to be armed against the psalmist. H.

VER. 11. Whilst. Prot. As, "with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me." H.—Thus the martyrs were tortured and upbraided. C.

VER. 12. Countenance. To whom I look up with confidence. M.—The just are comforted with the hope of God's sight. W.

PSAL. XLII., &c. VER. 1. David. Sept. add, "it has no title in Heb.," being composed by the same author, and on the same subject, as the preceding. C.—David teaches the faithful how to begin a good work; and priests how they ought to officiate at Mass. W.—Holy. Heb. "merciful." The Babylonians, and their king, treated the Jews with great cruelty. C.

VER. 2. Me. Without thy assistance I can do nothing. My enemies seem too strong, while thou appearest to disregard my prayer. W.

VER. 3. Light, your Messias, as the Jews confess, (Jarchi,) truth, the Holy Spirit. S. Chrys.—Both the titles may be applied to our Saviour. Bert. S. Jer.—We are in the utmost distress; be pleased to send us relief. C.—Holy hill, the Church, (W.) or tabernacle on Sion, where the Jews wished to be present. C.

VER. 4. Youth. S. Jer. "the God of my joy and exultation." H.—Syr. and Arab. agree with us, and Gil means (C.) a young man, in Arab. and Heb. Hammond.—People in youth show forth the effects of joy. Bert.—Accompanied with light, and a pure intention, we may offer sacrifice to God, who changeth our corruption into newness of life. W.—The Levites might sing near the altar, but could not offer victims. C.

VER. 5. My God. This word is sing.; but the former "Elohim," is plural, to intimate one God in three persons. W.—Harp. Heb. cour, which Sym. renders, "the psaltery." The sons of Core were chiefly door-keepers; but they also played on musical instruments. C.

6 Hope in God, for I will still give praise to him: the salvation of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIII.

DEUS AURIBUS NOSTRIS.

The church commemorates former favours, and present afflictions; under which she prays for succour.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, to give understanding.

2 WE have heard, O God, with our ears: our fathers have declared to us,

The work thou hast wrought in their days, and in the days of old.

3 Thy hand destroyed the Gentiles, and thou plantedst them: thou didst afflict the people, and cast them out.

4 For they got not the possession of the land by their own sword: neither did their own arm save them.

But thy right hand and thy arm, and the light of thy countenance: because thou wast pleased with them.

5 Thou art thyself my King and my God: who com-mandest the saving of Jacob.

6 Through thee we will push down our enemies with the horn: and through thy name we will despise them that rise up against us.

7 For I will not trust in my bow: neither shall my sword save me.

8 But thou hast saved us from them that afflict us: and hast put them to shame that hate us.

9 In God shall we glory all the day long: and in thy name we will give praise for ever.

10 But now thou hast cast us off, and put us to shame: and thou, O God, wilt not go out with our armies.

11 Thou hast made us turn our back to our enemies: and they that hated us, plundered for themselves.

12 Thou hast given us up like sheep to be eaten: thou hast scattered us among the nations.

13 Thou hast sold thy people for no price: and there was no reckoning in the exchange of them.

14 Thou hast made us a reproach to our neighbours, a scoff and derision to them that are round about us.

VER. 6. God. Trust in God, whom I hope to see face to face. W.

PSAL. XLIII., &c. VER. 1. Understanding. See Psal. xli. M.—David or the Corites composed this piece, to comfort the just under persecution. Bert.—It may allude to the situation of the Jews at Babylon, (C.) or under Antiochus Epiphanes, (Ven. Bede,) though S. Paul, (Rom. viii. 36,) applies ver. 22 to the persecutions of the primitive Christians, which seems to show that the whole psalm refers to them, (Bert.,) as the Fathers have explained it.

VER. 2. Old, in calling Abraham, and rescuing the Hebrews from the Egyptian bondage, &c. W.—God formerly protected our fathers; but how are things changed? C.

VER. 3. Plantest them, thy people. See Jer. ii. 21, and xii. 10; Eze. xvii. 6.—Out, by means of insects, &c. Wisd. xii. 8; Jos. xxiv. 12. C.—The Hebrews were miraculously assisted, (W.) without any merit of their own, (C.) as all were wicked at first.

VER. 6. Horn, like bulls. W.—This we have done in former times. C.—Not man's strength, but God's favour, granteth the victory. W.

VER. 9. We glory. Lit. "be praised." H.—We have always attributed our success to thee. C.

VER. 11. To. Lit. "after," post. They were formerly defeated; now it is our turn. H.

VER. 14. Nations. Many never returned from captivity. C. See Deut. xxviii. 43.

VER. 13. Reckoning. Prot. "thou dost not increase thy wealth by their price. H.—Thou art eager to get quit of them, as of the vilest slaves. Theod. Grot. Isa. l. 2, and lii. 3.—Exchange. There were none to purchase, so that thou hast given the people for nothing. C.—At the last siege of Jerusalem, the Jews, who had sold (W.) or bought Christ for thirty pieces of money, (H.) were themselves sold for the smallest price; thirty being given for one penny. See Joseph. de B. Jud. W.

VER. 15. Heal, out of contempt. M.—The Gentiles propose us an example of a people fallen a prey to the Divine indignation. 4 Kings xix. 21; Lam. ii. 15.

15 Thou hast made us a by-word among the Gentiles: a shaking of the head among the peoples.

16 All the day long my shame is before me: and the confusion of my face hath covered me.

17 At the voice of him that reproacheth and detracteth me: at the face of the enemy and persecutor.

18 All these things have come upon us; yet we have not forgotten thee: and we have not done wickedly in thy covenant.

19 And our heart hath not turned back: neither hast thou turned aside our steps from thy way.

20 For thou hast humbled us in the place of affliction: and the shadow of death hath covered us.

21 If we have forgotten the name of our God, and if we have spread forth our hands to a strange god:

22 Shall not God search out these things: for he knoweth the secrets of the heart.

* Because for thy sake we are killed all the day long: we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

23 Arise, why sleepest thou, O Lord? arise, and cast us not off to the end.

24 Why turnest thou thy face away? and forgettest our want and our trouble?

25 For our soul is humbled down to the dust: our belly cleaveth to the earth.

26 Arise, O Lord, help us and redeem us for thy name's sake.

PSALM XLIV.

ERUCTAVIT COR MEUM.

The excellence of Christ's kingdom, and the endowments of his Church.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, for the sons of Core, for understanding: A canticle for the beloved.

2 MY heart hath uttered a good word: I speak my works to the king:

My tongue is the pen of a scrivener that writeth swiftly.

* Rom. viii. 36.

VER. 17. Detracteth me. S. Jer. "blasphemeth" God, while they upbraid us as a faithless people. C.

VER. 18. Covenant. Till the passion of Christ, the Jews did not wholly fall from God, and then many were chosen from among them, to found the Christian religion. W.

VER. 19. Neither. Lit. "and or yet." H.—But the negative particle is taken (W.) from the first part of the verse. C.—S. Jer. "Neither hast thou," &c. M.—Yet many adhere to the Heb., &c., "And thou hast turned," &c.

VER. 20. Affliction. Heb. or "dragons," (S. Jer. M.) alluding to the deserts, to which the Jews retired when the Assyrians invaded them. The text may be more applicable to the first Christians, who might truly say that they had not transgressed. Houbig.—To the martyrs death was but like a shadow. S. Greg. Mark iv. 17.—Here it denotes great darkness and misery. M.

VER. 21. If we. This is a Heb. idiom, to express, we have not. W.

VER. 22. Slaughter. They will not suffer us to be quiet respecting our religion, striving to delude us: or, if we prove resolute, like Daniel, they expose us to torments. C.—This was more fully verified at the first propagation of the gospel, (Rom. viii. 36,) as it still continues to be among those who cease not to persecute Catholics by artifice, as well as by open violence. Christians in every age (H.) are persecuted more than the prophets (W.) generally were. H.

PSAL. XLIV., &c. VER. 1. For them that shall be changed, i. e. For souls happily changed, by being converted to God (Ch.); or it may allude to the variety of speakers here introduced. Bert.—Prot. leave shoshannim, which some translate, "on the lilies," (Aquila, S. Jer.,) or "instrument of six strings." C.—The beloved, viz. our Lord Jesus Christ. Ch.—The Jews formerly explained this psalm of the Messias, as well as all the Fathers after the apostles. Heb. i. 8. Many passages cannot refer to Solomon's marriage with the daughter of Pharaoh, though some might be referred to that event, as a figure of Christ's union with his Church. C.

VER. 2. Uttered. Heb. rëss, "boileth," as one unable to contain himself. Bert.—Speak, or "dedicate," dico, (H.) though here it only means to speak. C.—He addresses the object of his praise, instead of invoking the muses. S. Jer.—

3 Thou art beautiful above the sons of men : grace is poured abroad in thy lips ; therefore hath God blessed thee for ever.

4 Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O thou most mighty.

5 With thy comeliness and thy beauty set out, proceed prosperously, and reign.

Because of truth, and meekness, and justice : and thy right hand shall conduct thee wonderfully.

6 Thy arrows are sharp : under thee shall people fall, into the hearts of the king's enemies.

7 *Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever : the sceptre of thy kingdom is a sceptre of uprightness.

8 Thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity : therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

9 Myrrh, and stacte, and cassia, perfume thy garments from the ivory houses : out of which 10 the daughters of kings have delighted thee in thy glory.

The queen stood on thy right hand, in gilded clothing ; surrounded with variety.

11 Hearken, O daughter, and see, and incline thy ear : and forget thy people and thy father's house.

12 And the king shall greatly desire thy beauty : for he is the Lord thy God, and him they shall adore.

13 And the daughters of Tyre with gifts, yea, all the rich among the people, shall entreat thy countenance.

14 All the glory of the king's daughter is within in golden borders, 15 clothed round about with varieties.

After her shall virgins be brought to the king : her neighbours shall be brought to thee.

* Heb. i. 8.

Swiftly. I have not to meditate. C.—The Holy Ghost moves my tongue, (2 Pet. i. 21,) as fast as my hands can write. Jer. xxxvi. 18, and 4 Esd. xiv. 30. H.

VER. 5. Reign. Devise, execute, and perfect the establishment of thy spiritual kingdom. W.—Solomon was no warrior ; but he only wanted enemies to be so. The sword of Christ is his word, (Heb. iv. 12,) anger, (Apoc. xix. 15. C.) or human nature. S. Jer.—Some translate, “and ride,” because kings were mounted on chariots, and governed their people with the reins of justice, &c. Robertson.—Justice. These titles are eagerly desired by monarchs ; as martial prowess, clemency, and justice, (C.) render them objects of terror, and of love. H.—Christ conquered by his miracles, mildness, &c., (C.) propagating the truth, and punishing the rebellious. W. Psal. ii. 8.

VER. 6. Fall. This seems to be placed too soon, in order to show the rapidity of the conquest. C.—“Thy arrows are sharp, shot into the hearts,” &c. H.—Some explain in corde, (as the Heb., Sept., &c., read,) of the voluntary submission of those who had formerly been enemies of the Messiah. S. Chrys., &c.—“Thy sharp arrows, the people subject to thee, shall fall into,” &c.—Men are sometimes represented as arrows. Isa. xlix. 2. Bert.

VER. 7. O God. O Θεός. The Sept. thus mark the voc. case, (Psal. cxxxviii. 17. H.) and it is clear that the Messiah is here styled God, (Heb. i. 8,) though some of the Jews would evade this proof by saying, “God is thy throne.” 1 Par. xxix. 23. Even Munster translates, O Deus, and the Jew Agesila ὁ Θεός. Elohim is never addressed to any one by the prophets but to the true God, (Bert.,) and this title alludes to the judicial character of Christ, (Acts x. 42. C.) of whose kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 33.

VER. 8. God. Sym. Θεός. Theophyl.—Aleim is used in both places, (H.) with a singular verb, as being spoken of the Deity. S. Iræn. iii. 6. Bossuet. D.—“O Aleim, thy Aleim.” (H.) which implies more than one person in God. Bert.—Many kings might be preferred to Solomon ; but Christ was raised above all. W.—Fellows. In consequence of the free gift of God, in uniting the human nature to the second Person, the Messiah advanced in glory (H.) : or rather the prophet speaks of his subsequent merits, which entitled him to the greatest felicity.—The oil of gladness, alludes to the reward of his labours.

VER. 9. Perfume. Lit. “from thy garments, from the ivory houses, out of which they have delighted thee, (10) the daughters of kings, in thy honour.” They esteem it an honour to wait upon thee, and perfume thy robes, which are placed in chests of ivory, with odoriferous herbs. H.—The ancients admired such garments. Gen. xxvii. 27 ; Amos iii. 15.—They had been given, together with the ivory boxes, as a present to Solomon at his marriage, and might give him delight, (C.) as it was then deemed impolite to refuse a present. Odys. x.—Stacte. Lit. “a drop,” gutta, (H.) distils from the myrrh, the wood of settim, (Num. xxiv. 6,) and may denote aloes, but not the plant. C.—Mortification and humility (W.) raise the soul on high. 2 Cor. ii. 16. H.—The blessed Virgin is here styled a house of ivory. The Church, and all who observe purity, may be considered as 16 They shall be brought with gladness and rejoicing : they shall be brought into the temple of the king.

17 Instead of thy fathers, sons are born to thee : thou shalt make them princes over all the earth.

18 They shall remember thy name throughout all generations.

Therefore shall people praise thee for ever ; yea, for ever and ever.

PSALM XLV.

DEUS NOSTER REFUGIUM.

The Church in persecution trusteth in the protection of God.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, for the hidden.

2 OUR God is our refuge and strength : a helper in troubles, which have found us exceedingly :

3 Therefore we will not fear, when the earth shall be troubled ; and the mountains shall be removed into the heart of the sea.

4 Their waters roared and were troubled : the mountains were troubled with his strength.

5 The stream of the river maketh the city of God joyful : the most High hath sanctified his own tabernacle.

6 God is in the midst thereof, it shall not be moved : God will help it in the morning early.

7 Nations were troubled, and kingdoms were bowed down : he uttered his voice, the earth trembled.

8 The Lord of armies is with us : the God of Jacob is our protector.

9 Come and behold ye the works of the Lord : what wonders he hath done upon earth, 10 making wars to cease even to the end of the earth.

God's temples. 1 Cor. iii. 17. C.—The virtues of Christ are this precious perfume. S. Aug., &c.—Houses. Sept. Baptis, a word which means “a tower.”

VER. 10, 11. Clothing. Heb. “in gold of Ophir.” H.—The Church is spotless. Eph. v. 26. The attendants of this glorious queen are the nations converted, or Christian virgins. They are not the maids of Pharaoh's daughter, whose marriage was never commended. Bert.—House. Paganism, and the observances of the old law. Bert.—The Church, and every faithful soul, may be styled the daughter, as well as the spouse of Christ.

VER. 12. Lord. Heb. adonic, “thy master,” and worship him, (H.) like a dutiful wife. 1 Pet. iii. 6, and 3 Kings i. 16.—God is not found in the Sept. The title belongs to Jesus Christ, the spouse, who has been twice called God before. C.

VER. 13. Daughters of Tyre ; the city, with her dependent villages. Bossuet.—Tyre might send presents on this grand occasion, or might even pay tribute. 2 Par. ix. 26. C.—Idolatrous nations submitted to Christ. Bert.

VER. 14. Is within. Rom., Sept., &c., have “of Hesebon,” by mistake, for Asothan. C.—Queens in the East could not appear much abroad. Kimchi.—When they go out, they cannot be seen. The beauty of the Church consists in virtue and in the grace of God. C.—Borders. Charity influences the exterior works of piety, (T.) and gives beauty to the ceremonies (S. Bas.) and decorations used by the Church, with such magnificence. H.

VER. 15. Neighbours. The Jews, as well as the Gentiles, shall embrace the faith. C.—Virginity became honourable only after the coming of Christ. S. Chrys.

VER. 17. Sons. Prot. “shall be thy children.” H.—Innumerable saints of all ranks, kings and emperors, acknowledge the Church for their mother, and submit to her. C.

VER. 18. They. Heb., Sept. of Ald. and Comp., and the Gr. Fathers, have “I will ;” yet this is contrary to the Vat. and Alex. Sept., (Bert.,) and seems less accurate. Houbig.—The prophet was not to live for ever, so that the fame of the Church was to be spread by others. Bert.

PSAL. XLV. VER. 1. It may allude to the defeat of Sennacherib, (Houbig.,) or might be sung by the Corites at the dedication of the second temple, when peace was restored to the world, after the death of Cambyzes. Ezec. xxxvii. The Fathers explain it of the Christian Church, delivered from persecution. S. Chrys., &c. C.

VER. 4. Their. Heb., S. Amb., &c., read, “its.” C.—Both sea and land may be in confusion ; we shall fear nothing, having God for our protector. H.

VER. 5. Stream. Jerusalem was surrounded by placid streams, which are here opposed to the great waters, as in Isa. viii. 6. The Church, after persecution, is restored to peace, and adorned with all graces. C.—Tabernacle. This is the source of our joy. Apoc. xxi., (M.) and xxii. 1 ; Ezec. xlvii. 1.

VER. 7. Trembled. We have witnessed the commotions in the East, under Cyrus and his son ; the latter of whom seems to be styled Gog, (Ezec. xxxviii. 19,) and perished in Judea, which he intended to plunder. C.

VER. 10. Shields. Heb. “the round things,” which some explain “chariots.”

He shall destroy the bow, and break the weapons : and the shields he shall burn in the fire.

11 Be still, and see that I am God ; I will be exalted among the nations, and I will be exalted in the earth.

12 The Lord of armies is with us : the God of Jacob our protector.

PSALM XLVI.

OMNES GENTES PLAUDITE.

The Gentiles are invited to praise God for the establishment of the kingdom of Christ.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core.

2 O CLAP your hands, all ye nations : shout unto God with the voice of joy.

3 For the Lord is high, terrible : a great King over all the earth.

4 He hath subdued the people under us ; and the nations under our feet.

5 He hath chosen for us his inheritance, the beauty of Jacob which he hath loved.

6 God is ascended with jubilee, and the Lord with the sound of trumpet.

7 Sing praises to our God, sing ye : sing praises to our King, sing ye.

8 For God is the King of all the earth : sing ye wisely.

9 God shall reign over the nations : God sitteth on his holy throne.

10 The princes of the people are gathered together, with the God of Abraham : for the strong gods of the earth are exceedingly exalted.

PSALM XLVII.

MAGNUS DOMINUS.

God is greatly to be praised for the establishment of his Church.

2 Kings vi. 15.

without need. Bert.—Fire. The Fathers apply this to the peace which reigned at the birth of Christ, or to that which Constantine gave to the Church. C.

PSAL. XLVI., &c. This psalm appears to be a sequel to the former psalm, and is addressed to the Gentiles who were present at the dedication of the second temple, as Darius had ordered his governors to assist the Jews. 1 Esd. vi. 15. see Esth. viii. 17.—Many explain it of the translation of the ark : but the Fathers behold the establishment of Christianity, and the ascension of Christ. Ver. 6. C.

VER. 4. Feet. The Chanaanites were subdued by Josue, and others by David, &c. C.

VER. 5. Beauty. The temple. Eze. xxiv. 21. Both Jews and Gentiles form the Church.

VER. 6. Trumpet. Christ ascended, accompanied by choirs of angels. His apostles proclaimed his truths. C.

VER. 7. King. Christ is God, by his Divine nature, and our King, by his humanity. W.

VER. 8. Wisely. Heb. mosseil, which is so often rendered "understanding" in the titles. No one can do well what he does not understand. C.

VER. 10. Gods. Judges appointed by the king of Persia over the Jews, &c., (C.) or rather the apostles, who were more than men, (S. Jer.,) and exercised a greater power than any earthly monarch. C.—The richest princes have submitted to the God of Abraham, whose seed was to prove a blessing to all, Gen. xviii. 18. Heb. as it is now pointed, "the princes of the people are gathered unto the people of the God of Abraham, for He is far elevated above the gods, the shields of the earth," as kings are often styled. C.—Prot. "for the shields of the earth belong unto God : He is greatly exalted ;" or (Sept.) "the earthly potentates, who are of God, have been," &c.—We might explain the Vulg. in the same sense, if Dei were substituted for Dii, (H.) as it should be. C.—Dei sunt optimates terræ, et ipse summus elevatus est. Houbig.

PSAL. XLVII., &c. VER. 1. On the, &c. is not in Heb., nor Euseb., &c. It means Sunday, (S. Amb. W.) or rather Monday, being sung on that day. S. Jer., &c. H.

VER. 2. City, or temple, which lay to the north of old Jerusalem, on Sion. C.—The concourse of priests and people gave it the appearance of a great city. Eze. xl. 2 ; Isa. xiv. 13.

VER. 3. With. Heb. "the beautiful situation, the joy of the whole earth, (M.) Sion, sides of," &c. Chal. "Sion, thou art beautiful as a bride." Christ's Church is thus described, Apoc. xxi. 2. C.

VER. 4. Houses. Heb. "palaces ;" Sept. "towers." Βάσεις, a word which 1 A psalm of a canticle, for the sons of Core, on the second day of the week.

2 GREAT is the Lord, and exceedingly to be praised in the city of our God, in his holy mountain.

3 With the joy of the whole earth is Mount Sion founded on the sides of the north, the city of the great King.

4 In her houses shall God be known, when he shall protect her.

5 For behold the kings of the earth assembled themselves : they gathered together.

6 So they saw, and they wondered, they were troubled, they were moved : 7 trembling took hold of them.

There were pains as of a woman in labour. 8 With a vehement wind thou shalt break in pieces the ships of Tharsis.

9 As we have heard, so have we seen, in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God : God hath founded it for ever.

10 We have received thy mercy, O God, in the midst of thy temple.

11 According to thy name, O God, so also is thy praise unto the ends of the earth : thy right hand is full of justice.

12 Let Mount Sion rejoice, and the daughters of Juda be glad ; because of thy judgments, O Lord.

13 Surround Sion, and encompass her : tell ye in her towers.

14 Set your hearts on her strength ; and distribute her houses, that ye may relate it in another generation.

15 For this is God, our God unto eternity, and for ever and ever : he shall rule us for evermore.

PSALM XLVIII.

AUDITE HÆC OMNES GENTES.

The folly of worldlings, who live in sin, without thinking of death or hell.

has again been mistaken for gravibus or gradibus, as ver. 14, and Psal. xlv. 9. God is the defence of his people, (Prov. xviii. 10,) the Church. Matt. xvi. 18. C.—All particular houses, or churches, must come to the unity of faith, (W.) and to the seat of Peter. S. Iræn. iii.

VER. 5. Earth is superfluous. S. Jer. ad Sun. C.—Yet it is found in the Vat. Sept., &c. H.—The kings of the earth assembled against the Church, (Psal. ii. 2,) as many came to oppose Jerusalem, under Cambyces. Eze. xxxviii. 2, 13. C.

VER. 8. Vehement. Heb. "eastern."—Tharsis, such strong-built ships as might go to Tarsus, in Cilicia, (Gen. x. 4. C.) or to India. M.—The merchants of Tharsis, the naval officers, shall say, &c. There shall be a great commotion, &c. Eze. xxxvii. 13, 19.

VER. 9. Seen. All the promises have been fulfilled. How could any one have thought that we should have been permitted to dedicate this temple under the patronage of the king of Persia ? 1 Esd. vi. 8. Who would not have feared lest the Christian religion should perish under such violent persecutions ? Converts admire its beauty and strength. C.—The completion of the prophecies is a wonderful confirmation and comfort of Christians, (W.) whose faith is founded indeed for ever. H.—The gates of hell shall not prevail. M.

VER. 10. Temple. Naoû. Sept., S. Amb., &c., though the Vat. and Alex. copies have Aaoû, "people," with the Arab., Ethiop., S. Aug., &c. H.—In the Church we receive many graces, (C.) even Christ himself, (S. Amb.,) to which those who refuse to be Catholics can have no title. W.

VER. 12. Juda. Sept., Sym., &c., have "Judea," (C.) which would intimate, that the psalm was composed after the captivity. But the Heb. reads Jeude, "Juda," with S. Jerom. H.

VER. 14. Strength. Perhaps the outward wall, (Eze. xl. 5,) not seen in Solomon's temple.—Houses. Heb. paaces. Sept. "houses built like towers." Bapëç. Jerusalem was not rebuilt or fortified when the second temple was dedicated. 2 Esd. i. 3. C.

VER. 15. Our God. Christ incarnate works all this. He shall rule over the Church not for three or four hundred years only, but as long as time shall last : and He shall have a Church triumphant in eternity. W.—Evermore. Heb. almuth. The letters being differently arranged, are rendered, "in death." S. Jer. "even unto death." Prot. (H.) "in youth," (Chal.,) or "in the secret" of Providence. The psalmist inculcates the perpetual duration of the Church under God's conduct, by three terms. In sæculum et ultra . . . usque ad mortem, "till death," (Pagn.,) or "incessantly." Syn. H.

PSAL. XLVIII., &c. VER. 1. Psalm. S. Amb. adds, 'of David.' It

1 Unto the end, a psalm for the sons of Core.

2 HEAR these things, all ye nations: give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world.

3 All you that are earth-born, and you sons of men: both rich and poor together.

4 My mouth shall speak wisdom: and the meditation of my heart understanding.

5 *I will incline my ear to a parable; I will open my proposition on the psaltery.

6 Why shall I fear in the evil day? the iniquity of my heel shall encompass me.

7 They that trust in their own strength, and glory in the multitude of their riches,

8 No brother can redeem, nor shall man redeem: he shall not give to God his ransom;

9 Nor the price of the redemption of his soul: and shall labour for ever, 10 and shall still live unto the end.

11 He shall not see destruction, when he shall see the wise dying: the senseless and the fool shall perish together:

And they shall leave their riches to strangers: 12 and their sepulchres shall be their houses for ever.

Their dwelling places to all generations: they have called their lands by their names.

13 And man, when he was in honour, did not underwritten in an enigmatical style, like the book of Ecclesiastes, and is very obscure. But the drift is to impress the captives with a contempt of worldly grandeur, which will end in death. The redemption of mankind and the resurrection of Christ are foretold, ver. 8, 10, &c. C.

VER. 3. Earth-born. Heb. "sons of Adam," a title belonging to the meanest. Progenies terræ. Perseus, vi. 56. C.—Yet Houbigant explains it of the rich, (Bert.,) who have lands, and leave their names to them, ver. 12. H.

VER. 5. Proposition. Heb. "riddle." Bert.—The ancients delighted in parables, which required attention to discern the meaning, and thus people had the pleasures of ingenuity. Music often accompanied their precepts. Strabo, i. 12. C.—Utile dulci. H.—The psalmist intimates that he had attended the best masters, (C.) even the Holy Ghost. S. Chrys.—He delivers the instructions which he had received from God, on the instrument of ten strings, to imply, that we must keep the ten commandments. W.

VER. 6. The iniquity of my heel. That is, the iniquity of my steps, or ways: or the iniquity of my pride, with which, as with the heel, I have spurned and kicked at my neighbours: or the iniquity of my heel, that is, the iniquity in which I shall be found in death. The meaning of this verse is, why should I now indulge those passionate and sinful affections, or commit now those sins, which will cause me so much fear and anguish in the evil day; when the sorrows of death shall compass me, and the perils of hell shall find me? Ch.—The old serpent is constantly laying snares for our heel. Gen. iii. 15. H.—Original (S. Jer.) and actual sin, (Euseb.,) particularly final impenitence, (Rabbins,) and the punishment of our transgressions, (Abenezra,) are much to be feared, (H.) as well as concupiscence. S. Amb.

VER. 7. They that trust, &c. As much as to say, let them fear that trust in their strength or riches; for they have great reason to fear: seeing no brother, or other man, how much a friend soever, can by any price or labour rescue them from death. Ch.

VER. 8. No. Prot. "none of them can by any means redeem his brother; nor," &c. H.—But the Sept. translate as well, and the sense is the same. Matt. xvi. 26. Bert.—If Jesus Christ, thy brother, does not redeem thee, will any other do it? (S. Aug.) or though thy brother neglect, the man, Christ Jesus, will suffice. S. Amb.—But with respect to death, no redemption will be admitted. It is appointed for all once to die. H.—A man shall be more precious than gold, says Isaias, (xiii. 12,) of the Babylonians, whom the enemy will not spare, for any consideration. We must therefore make good use of our time. Eccles. ix. 10; Prov. xi. 4. C.

VER. 9. And shall labour for ever, &c. This seems to be a continuation of the foregoing sentence; as much as to say, no man can by any price or ransom prolong his life, that so he may still continue to labour here, and live to the end of the world. Others understand it of the eternal sorrows, and dying life of hell, which is the dreadful consequence of dying in sin. Ch.—The just, on the contrary, who have laboured for eternity, shall see the death of the wicked, or of the wise of this world. Euseb., &c.—It may also be a prediction of Christ's life of sufferings and future glory, (Bossuet,) or express the sentiments of infidels, who deny Providence; because both good and bad perish alike. Eccles. iii. 18. S. Aug.—Heb. "he rests for ever," (S. Jer.,) or "shall he be undisturbed?" C.

VER. 11. He shall not see destruction, &c., or, shall he not see destruction? As much as to say, however thoughtless he may be of his death, he must not stand: he is compared to senseless beasts, and is become like to them.

14 This way of theirs is a stumbling-block to them: and afterwards they shall delight in their mouth.

15 They are laid in hell like sheep: death shall feed upon them.

And the just shall have dominion over them in the morning: and their help shall decay in hell from their glory.

16 But God will redeem my soul from the hand of hell, when he shall receive me.

17 Be not thou afraid, when a man shall be made rich, and when the glory of his house shall be increased.

18 For when he shall die, he shall take nothing away, nor shall his glory descend with him.

19 For in his life-time his soul will be blessed: and he will praise thee when thou shalt do well to him.

20 He shall go in to the generations of his fathers: and he shall never see light.

21 Man, when he was in honour, did not understand. he hath been compared to senseless beasts, and made like to them.

PSALM XLIX.

DEUS DEORUM.

The coming of Christ: who prefers virtue and inward purity before the blood of victims.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

expect to escape; when even the wise and the good are not exempt from dying. Ch.

VER. 12. Sepulchres. "Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever." Prot. H.—Called. That is, they have left their names on their graves, which alone remain of their lands, (Ch.) or, they have called cities and countries by their own names, as Alexander and Romulus did, Alexandria, (H.) and Rome. M. &c.—Scarcely two translate the four last verses alike. Bert.

VER. 13. Compared. Heb. "he is like dumb, or perishable beasts." H.—So much is man degraded by his attachment to riches and pleasures. Theod. C.

VER. 14. They shall delight in their mouth. Notwithstanding the wretched way in which they walk, they shall applaud themselves with their mouths, and glory in their doings, (Ch.) though it be to their shame. Phil. iii. 10.—Heb. their posterity shall applaud their maxims, (C.) as many of their followers contributed to keep them in the delusion, (H.) which the damned will deplore, when it is too late. Ver. 15. S. Jer.

VER. 15. In the morning. That is, in the resurrection to a new life; when the just shall judge and condemn the wicked.—From their glory. That is, when their short-lived glory in this world shall be past, and be no more. Ch.—The just shall have their day, (M.) when the beautiful palaces of the wicked shall be exchanged for darkness and horrible torments. H.—Their figure shall be destroyed in hell, after his dwelling. S. Jer.—Crowds shall be confined to those mansions, where the fire is not extinguished. M.

VER. 16. Redeem. Chal. and some Rabbins seem to understand this of purgatory. "He will draw me from hell, and give me a place in his habitation." Genes.—Others explain it of Christ's resurrection, or of the liberation of the patriarchs from limbo. Cassiod.

VER. 19. To him. The wicked are very selfish. They will seem grateful to those who are in power, and will eringe to get riches. H.—Yea, they will seem to thank God for their prosperity, (W.) or rather, they will assume these appearances with men. Heb. "he will bless his soul during life," (Bert.,) with all pleasures. Luke xii. 19; Deut. xxix. 19. C.—To him, is not in Heb., which insinuates that people are flattered during their prosperity. H.—The proper use of riches is to do good. Luke xvi. 9. C.

VER. 20. Fathers. Like them he shall die. H.—Heb. reads in the second person, with Syr., Aquila, &c. C.—Yet Prot., Mont., and others agree with us and the Sept.—And he. Heb. "they." The — edit. however, has übera. Each individual, as well as the whole collection of the damned, shall be deprived of light and comfort. H.—Chal. "the just shall live like his fathers, a long and happy life; but the wicked shall enjoy no light in the life to come."

VER. 21. Understand. Heb. ibin, though (ver. 13) we find itin, "shall remain all night." C.—But this is probably a mistake, as the prophet concludes with repeating this important instruction (Bert.): Remember, O man, not to degrade thy rational soul. W.—Thou wast honoured by all, and made to the likeness of God. M.

PSAL. XLIX., &c. VER. 1. For Asaph. The prep. L is placed before his name, as it is before David's. H.—Yet, whether he was the author of the psalm, (C.) or only set it to music, (W.) is uncertain. M.—The 72nd, and ten following psalms, bear his name, and it is observed that the style is not so flowing as those which are attributed to the royal prophet. Moller.—It is certain that Asaph was a prophet, and chief musician in the days of David. 1 Par. vi. 39, and xxv. 2, and

THE God of gods, the Lord hath spoken: and he hath called the earth,

From the rising of the sun, to the going down thereof:
2 out of Sion the loveliness of his beauty.

3 God shall come manifestly: our God shall come, and shall not keep silence.

A fire shall burn before him: and a mighty tempest shall be round about him.

4 He shall call heaven from above, and the earth, to judge his people.

5 Gather ye together his saints to him: who set his covenant before sacrifices.

6 And the heavens shall declare his justice: for God is judge.

7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak: O Israel, and I will testify to thee: I am God, thy God.

8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices: and thy burnt-offerings are always in my sight.

9 I will not take calves out of thy house: nor he-goats out of thy flocks.

10 For all the beasts of the woods are mine: the cattle of the hills, and the oxen.

11 I know all the fowls of the air: and with me is the beauty of the field.

12 If I should be hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine and the fulness thereof.

13 Shall I eat the flesh of bullocks? or shall I drink the blood of goats?

14 Offer to God the sacrifice of praise: and pay thy vows to the most High.

15 And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

2 Par. xxix. 30. Bert.—But the psalms that have this title relate to the captives, and may have been composed by some of his descendants. This and the following seem designed to show that something more than bloody victims was required by God; and thus the Israelites, who could not offer sacrifice at Babylon, were comforted; and the people taught by degrees to look for something more excellent than the law of Moses. C.—The first and second coming of Christ are here described. D.—God's angels, just men, judges, (C.) idols, &c. W.—Heb. Al Aleim, Jeev, "the mighty God, the Lord." H.

VER. 2. Beauty. This may refer to God, or to Sion, (C.) where the Church of Christ began. W.

VER. 3. Silence. Christ displayed the light of truth from Sion, at his first coming. But he would not judge any till the second. John iii. 17, and viii. 15. S. Jer. 4.—Before him, at the last day, (H.) or in hell. S. Athan.—Our Saviour appeared formerly with great mildness; but he will come with majesty and terror, after fire shall have destroyed all transitory things. W.

VER. 4. Earth. As if they were animated. Deut. iv. 26, and xxxii. 1; Isa. i. 2; Jer. ii. 12.—Some understand the angels and apostles by heaven. C.—Judge. Lit. "to divide," discernere, (H.) the goats from the sheep. Matt. xxv. 32. C. M.

VER. 5. His saints. Heb. "my merciful ones," (H.) the chosen people, (C.) particularly priests, (Theod.) who might have too high an opinion of the legal sacrifices, (S. Chrys.) or all the elect are meant. Matt. xxiv. 30. Euseb.—Before, super, or, "who make a covenant with him respecting sacrifices."—Prot. "those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Mal. i. 12. H.—The Sept. seem to have read v for i, more accurately, as the prophet speaks till ver. 7. Bert.—Judgment should begin at the house of God. And if first at us, what shall be the end of them that believe not the gospel of God? 1 Pet. iv. 17; Rom. ii. 9. H.—Those who believe not, are already judged. John iii.—Sacrifice generally precedes a covenant. Gen. xv. 17. M.

VER. 6. Heavens. Apostles, (S. Jer.) or angels. Chal. S. Athan.—God is judge. His sentence must therefore be just, (M.) and we ought to tremble. 1 Cor. iv. 4. H.

VER. 8. Sight. I complain of no neglect (M.) in these outward ceremonies. H.—God required no victims during the captivity; but he always demanded praise, (ver. 14. C.) a contrite heart. Psal. i. 19, &c. H.—The prophets often admonished the people of this truth, (Isa. i. 2; Jer. vii. 20. C.) that they might not set too high a value on sacrifices, (H.) which, though pleasing to God, are of no service to him; as all the world is his property. W.

VER. 10. Oxen. S. Jer. and Prot. "the cattle upon a thousand hills." But our version is very good, and adopted by the Syr., Ferrand, &c. C.

VER. 14. Vows. A faithless promise is very displeasing. Eccles. v. 3. True

16 But to the sinner God hath said: Why dost thou declare my justices, and take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou hast hated discipline: and hast cast my words behind thee.

18 If thou didst see a thief, thou didst run with him: and with adulterers thou hast been partaker.

19 Thy mouth hath abounded with evil, and thy tongue framed deceits.

20 Sitting thou didst speak against thy brother, and didst lay a scandal against thy mother's son: 21 these things hast thou done, and I was silent.

Thou thoughtest unjustly that I shall be like to thee; but I will reprove thee, and set before thy face.

22 Understand these things you that forget God; lest he snatch you away, and there be none to deliver you.

23 The sacrifice of praise shall glorify me: and there is the way by which I will show him the salvation of God.

PSALM L.

MISERERE.

The repentance and confession of David after his sin. The fourth penitential psalm.

1 Unto the end, a psalm of David, 2 when Nathan, the prophet, came to him, after he had sinned with Bethsabee. [2 Kings xii.]

3 HAVE mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy.

And according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my iniquity.

4 Wash me yet more from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

5 For I know my iniquity, and my sin is always before me.

religion must be interior, (C.) also 1 Cor. xiv. 15. H.—We must discharge not only our general, (M.) but also our particular vows (W.) and obligations. E.

VER. 15. Call. Prayer is a perfect act of religion, and a confession of God's dominion. To neglect prayer is, in some sense, to deny God. C.—He is pleased to exercise our confidence, (H.) and will have us to call upon him in distress. M.

VER. 16. Sinner. He is not blamed for praying; but his hypocrisy is condemned. Bert.

VER. 20. Loy. Heb. "slandereest." Prot. But dopi occurs no where else. Bert.—The sinner sits to detract, or with pleasure (M.) habitually offends. H.

VER. 21. Silent, and deferred punishment, (S. Aug.) waiting for thy conversion. Rom. ii. 4.—Unjustly, is not expressed in Heb. Bert.—Face, judgment and hell, (Chal.) or all these things, (S. Jer.) and thy manifold transgressions. The sight will be most intolerable. C.

VER. 22. Lest he. Heb. "I tear you in pieces." Prot. H.—Rapiat ut Leo. S. Aug.—It may be understood of death, (Theod.) or of God. C.

VER. 23. Praise. This kind of improper sacrifice, and those of justice, and of a contrite heart, (Psal. iv., and i.,) must accompany outward sacrifices, to make them acceptable. The latter have always been obligatory, (W.) as well as the former. H.—This psalm proves that the old victims should give place to one far more excellent, the body of Christ, the sacrifice of praise which the Church offers. S. Aug. cor. aduers. 20, Orat. con. Jud. 6, and Ep. cxx. 18. W.—Eucharist means even "good grace," or thanksgiving, being intended to enable us to render that tribute of praise which he requires. H.

PSAL. L. VER. 2. Bethsabee. Sept. "Bersabee." Some copies add, "the wife of Urias." H.—The rest of the title is in Heb., &c., so that it is one of the most authentic. Nathan did not give the admonition till about a year had elapsed after the transgression, (2 Kings xii.,) when David was made to enter into himself, by a prophet inferior to himself. Bert.—After his departure he is supposed to have composed this psalm, to testify his repentance to all the world. C.—He had also in view the state of the captives. Theod., &c.—The two last verses seem to have been added at Babylon, (Abenezra,) as a similar addition has been made (Fael. ev. 47, and 1 Par. xvi. 35. C.) by some inspired author. H.—David knew that something more than confession was requisite, and that he must submit to temporal punishments, even though the prophet had assured him that his sin was remitted. He prays to be washed still more from evil habits, ver. 4. W.

VER. 3. Thy great mercy. Such is the purport of the Heb. esdoc, though (H.) the Chal. and Syr. omit great. C.

VER. 4. Yet more, by baptism. Euseb. S. Amb. Apol.—The true penitent never ceases to deplore his sins, like David, S. Peter, and S. Paul. Eccl. v. 5. The psalmist prays that all the remains of sin may be obliterated. John xiii. 10. W.

VER. 5. Me. I do not forget it, but am covered with shame. C.—Sin is our

6 To thee only have I sinned, and have done evil before thee; *that thou mayst be justified in thy words, and mayst overcome when thou art judged.

7 For behold I was conceived in iniquities; and in sin did my mother conceive me.

8 For behold thou hast loved truth: the uncertain and hidden things of thy wisdom thou hast made manifest to me.

9 *Thou shalt sprinkle me with hyssop, and I shall be cleansed: thou shalt wash me, and I shall be made whiter than snow.

10 To my hearing thou shalt give joy and gladness; and the bones that have been humbled shall rejoice.

11 Turn away thy face from my sins, and blot out all my iniquities.

12 Create a clean heart in me, O God: and renew a right spirit within my bowels.

13 Cast me not away from thy face; and take not thy holy spirit from me.

14 Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and strengthen me with a perfect spirit.

15 I will teach the unjust thy ways: and the wicked shall be converted to thee.

16 Deliver me from blood, O God, thou God of my salvation: and my tongue shall extol thy justice.

17 O Lord, thou wilt open my lips: and my mouth shall declare thy praise.

a Rom. iii. 4.

greatest enemy, and continually cries for vengeance. H.—While David did not confess, his sin lay heavy upon him. W.

VER. 6. Only, or principally, who art the only God, (1 Tim. i. 17. W.) the judge and witness of my crime. H.—David was a king, and acknowledged no judge among men. S. Amb. c. 10. H.—Judged. S. Paul reads thus, (Rom. iii. 4.) though the Heb. be, “when thou judgest.” S. Jerom has also judicaberis, so that we might infer that the Heb. is now incorrect, or that bosoptoc means in judicare te. Bert. H.—Susanna was preserved from sinning by the thought of God’s presence. Dan. xiii. 25.—If David fell, he confessed his fault. Bert.

VER. 7. Sins. Heb. “iniquity, . . . and in sin did my mother warn or conceive me.” Original sin has a manifold deformity, and is the fatal root of other transgressions. See S. Aug. Ench., S. Tho. i. 2, q. 82, a. 2, est multiplex virtute. H.—The prophet speaks here undoubtedly of original sin. Amama.—No text could be more express, as the Fathers and the Jews agree. C.—The weakness of man is a motive for pity (M.): David pleads for it, yet allows that the fault was entirely his own, and that he had grace sufficient to have avoided it. C.—The consideration of our sinful origin ought to move us to beg, that we may be washed still more, and that we may not yield to our evil propensities. W.—We may resist them, and therefore David would not make vain excuses in sin, as God loves the truth, and a sincere confession. M.

VER. 8. Uncertain. Heb. “in the interior,” I am full of sin, and thou requir’st that I should constantly adhere to virtue. See Job xiv. 1.—To me. This increases my crime, (C.) as I cannot plead ignorance. M.

VER. 9. Hyssop, which was used in sprinkling lepers, &c., (Lev. xiv. 6.) not that the like ceremony, or even sacrifice, would suffice to heal the wound of the soul. Sincere contrition, (ver. 18, 19,) and the virtue of Christ’s blood, are necessary. C. Heb. ix. 19.—The heat (Num. xix.) and operation of this sovereign medicine was shown to the prophet. John xix. W.

VER. 10. Rejoice, when thou givest me an assurance of pardon. My bones, or virtue, shall then be restored. Heb. “the bones which thou hast broken may exult.” S. Jer. H.—God gives contrition, after which the whole interior is filled with joy. Bert.—When the affections are purified, the soul takes delight in God’s word, and revives. W.—The assurance of being pardoned, gives her fresh alacrity in his service. M.

VER. 11. Face. Anger. If the sinner consider his fault, God will forget it. C.—His justice requires that he should punish the impenitent. W.

VER. 12. Create. Heb. bra, a term never used but for a new production. Whatever comes immediately from God must be pure, and as David had fallen into impurity, he earnestly implores this gift. He prays for the new heart of flesh. Ezech. xxxvi. 26. H.—Thou hast said, Behold, I make all things new. Apoc. xxi.

VER. 13. Spirit of prophecy, which is not withdrawn, except for some crime. Orig. Huet. p. 35.—David had been without this privilege till his repentance. S. Athan.—Yet S. Chrys. and Theodoret maintain the contrary. C.—He prays for final perseverance, which is due to none, (Bert.,) and that he may fall no more. W.

VER. 14. Salvation, or thy salutary joy, (Bert.,) “the joy of thy Jesus,” (S.

18 For if thou hadst desired sacrifice, I would indeed have given it: with burnt-offerings thou wilt not be delighted.

19 A sacrifice to God is an afflicted spirit: a contrite and humbled heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

20 Deal favourably, O Lord, in thy good-will with Sion; that the walls of Jerusalem may be built up.

21 Then shalt thou accept the sacrifice of justice, oblations and whole burnt-offerings: then shall they lay calves upon thy altar.

PSALM LI.

QUID GLORIAS.

David condemneth the wickedness of Doeg, and foretelleth his destruction.

1 Unto the end, understanding for David, 2 when Doeg, the Edomite, came and told Saul: David went to the house of Achimelech. [1 Kings xxii. 9.]

3 WHY dost thou glory in malice, thou that art mighty in iniquity?

4 All the day long thy tongue hath devised injustice: as a sharp razor, thou hast wrought deceit.

5 Thou hast loved malice more than goodness; and iniquity rather than to speak righteousness.

6 Thou hast loved all the words of ruin, O deceitful tongue.

7 Therefore will God destroy thee for ever: he will pluck thee out, and remove thee from thy dwelling-place: and thy root out of the land of the living.

b Lev. xiv.; Num. xix.

Jer.,) for whom he prays, (S. Aug.,) knowing that He will save his people from their sins, and that there is salvation in no other name. H.—Perfect. Lit. “principal.” Sept. “conducting;” such a spirit as may suit one who has to command. H.—This may denote sound reason, (4 Mac. Philo Nobil,) which keeps the passions under, (S. Chrys. Job xxx. 15,) or God himself, to whose Spirit all others should be subservient. Rancé often inculcated to his Monks the importance of having this principal spirit, which includes every virtue, particularly of liberality, as the Heb., nodibe, implies. Bert.—“Thy free spirit.” Prot.

VER. 15. Thee. The sinner cannot testify his gratitude better than by promoting the conversion of others. W.—This is a sort of satisfaction. M.—While engaged in sin, David could not well exhort his subjects to repentance. His example was rather an inducement for them to transgress. Bert.—But when they saw his grief, and knew that God had pardoned him, they were no longer tempted to despair. He also watched more carefully over their conduct.

VER. 16. Blood, from death, which I have deserved. S. Athan.—That of Urias, and his companions, (W.) cries to heaven for vengeance. 2 Kings xi. 21. H.—Hence the word sanguinibus is used. Bert.—Spare me, and my people—Justice, which has given place to mercy. C.—The latter word is used here by Sym., and justice may have this meaning. Theod.—Sixtus V. reads exaltabit, instead of exultabit, which Sept., ἀγαλλιάσεται, (C.) requires. Heb. thornon, “shall sing aloud of.” Prot. “shall praise thy justice.” S. Jer.—Extol agrees better with exaltabit, though both have nearly the same sense. H.

VER. 18. Sacrifice. If my crime were of such a nature as to be expiated by certain victims, I would surely have offered them: but my heart has offended, and must do penance. C.—The legal victims were not of themselves sufficient to remit sin. M.—Contrition was necessary. Isa. lxvi. 2; Ezech. vi. 9. Bert.—The Scripture often prefers internal, before outward, sacrifices. This of the heart must precede those of justice, and of praise. W.—The heart must be broken, to make place for love. Compunction is thrice urged. The first two terms in Heb. are the same, “contrite,” (H.) broken, or disconcerted, κατεκλασθῆναι τὸν ἦτορ. Odys. M.—External sacrifices are commended in the next verses, as they are good, (H.) being instituted by God. M.

VER. 20. Deal. These two verses have no necessary connexion with the preceding: they may have been added by some prophet at Babylon, (C.) or David foresaw the destruction of the city by the Chaldees. S. Chrys.—He might fear that his sin would draw ruin on the capital, as a much less offence did, and as in all ages the sins of the rulers have fallen on their subjects. 2 Kings xxiv. H.

VER. 21. Justice; works of piety, (Psalm iv. 6,) or victims vowed or prescribed by the law; the same which are afterwards styled holocausts (C.) by two different terms, aule and colil. H.—The latter includes fruits, &c. C.—While we are in sin, our good works are less acceptable. M.

PSAL. LI., &c. VER. 2. Achimelech. Sixtus V., Sept., &c., read Abimelech. But the former is the true name. See 1 Kings xxii. 9, 20. C.

VER. 6. Ruin. Sept. καταποντισμοῦ, “drowning,” or to make the innocent suffer “shipwreck.”

VER. 7. Thy, is not found in Heb. Doeg would not dare to enter the tabernacle after he had slain the priests. C.—Houbigant properly supplies thy. Bert.

8 The just shall see and fear, and shall laugh at him, and say : 9 Behold the man that made not God his helper :

But trusted in the abundance of his riches : and prevailed in his vanity.

10 But I, as a fruitful olive-tree in the house of God, have hoped in the mercy of God for ever ; yea, for ever and ever.

11 I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it : and I will wait on thy name, for it is good in the sight of thy saints.

PSALM LII.

DIXIT INSIPIENS.

The general corruption of man before the coming of Christ.

1 Unto the end, for Maeleth, understandings to David.

THE fool said in his heart : "There is no God.

2 They are corrupted, and become abominable in iniquities : there is none that doth good.

3 God looked down from heaven on the children of men : to see if there were any that did understand, or did seek God.

4 "All have gone aside, they are become unprofitable together : there is none that doth good ; no, not one.

5 Shall not all the workers of iniquity know, who eat up my people as they eat bread ?

6 They have not called upon God : there have they trembled for fear, where there was no fear.

For God hath scattered the bones of them that please men : they have been confounded, because God hath despised them.

7 Who will give out of Sion the salvation of Israel ? when God shall bring back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM LIII.

DEUS IN NOMINE TUO.

A prayer for help in distress.

1 Unto the end, in verses, understanding for David.

2 When the men of Ziph had come and said to Saul : Is not David hidden with us ? [1 Kings xxiii. 19.]

• Psal. xlii. 1.

—Living. The Jews inform us that Doeg slew himself with his master at Gelboe, and that David punished his offspring with death. C.

VER. 8. Laugh, at the last day, when they will have nothing to fear, nor the wicked to hope. In this life the just are full of compassion ; but they cannot but approve of God's judgments. C.

VER. 10. Fruitful. David foretells his own prosperity on the throne. (W.) when this wretch shall be no more. H.—He was at this time in great perplexity, (C.) in banishment from the house of God. M.

PSAL. LII., &c. VER. 1. Maeleth, or Machalath. A musical instrument, or a chorus of musicians : for S. Jerom renders it per chorum (Ch.) ; and Aquila, "for dancing." Sixtus V., &c., read incorrectly, "for Amalec." The psalm is nearly the same with the 13th, (C.) except ver. 6. M.—S. Aug. explains it of the dangers of the latter times. W.—It seems to speak of the return from captivity. Ver. 7. C.

VER. 6. God hath scattered the bones, &c. That is, God hath brought to nothing the strength of all those that seek to please men, to the prejudice of their duty to their Maker. Ch.—That. Heb. "who besiege thee. Thou hast confounded them, because," &c. Sept. seem to have read more correctly, as no one has been addressed before. Bert.

VER. 7. Glad. The Fathers explain this of Christ's redemption. The captives doubted not but that they should be speedily set at liberty, as the prophets had assured them. C.

PSAL. LIII., &c. VER. 2. Ziph lay to the south of Juda. H.—David was rescued from the most imminent danger by an irruption of the Philistines. He then composed this canticle, expressing his sentiments in danger, and his gratitude to God. C.—It may also be used by any person in distress. W.—The Church renders it to be said by her ministers at Prime, that they may be protected from all their spiritual enemies. Bert.—The Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ, (S. Hil.,) as to his persecuted members. S. Aug.

3 SAVE me, O God, by thy name, and judge me in thy strength.

4 O God, hear my prayer : give ear to the words of my mouth.

5 For strangers have risen up against me ; and the mighty have sought after my soul ; and they have not set God before their eyes.

6 For behold God is my helper : and the Lord is the protector of my soul.

7 Turn back the evils upon my enemies : and cut them off in thy truth.

8 I will freely sacrifice to thee, and will give praise, O God, to thy name : because it is good :

9 For thou hast delivered me out of all trouble : and my eye hath looked down upon my enemies.

PSALM LIV.

EXAUDI DEUS.

A prayer of a just man under persecution from the wicked. It agrees to Christ persecuted by the Jews, and betrayed by Judas.

1 Unto the end, in verses, understanding for David.

2 HEAR, O God, my prayer, and despise not my supplication : 3 be attentive to me, and hear me.

I am grieved in my exercise ; and am troubled, 4 at the voice of the enemy, and at the tribulation of the sinner.

For they have cast iniquities upon me : and in wrath they were troublesome to me.

5 My wrath is troubled within me : and the fear of death is fallen upon me.

6 Fear and trembling are come upon me : and darkness hath covered me.

7 And I said : Who will give me wings like a dove and I will fly and be at rest ?

8 Lo, I have gone far off flying away ; and I abode in the wilderness.

9 I waited for him that hath saved me from pusillanimity of spirit, and a storm.

10 Cast down, O Lord, and divide their tongues ; for I have seen iniquity and contradiction in the city.

• Rom. iii. 12.

VER. 3. Name, which is a strong tower, (Prov. xviii. 10. C.) even thyself. Hence it is so criminal to take it in vain. Bert.

VER. 5. Strangers. Barbarous, (W.) enemies, though of the same tribe. C.

VER. 6. Behold. He admires how God delivered him, though Saul seemed to have only one step more to take. C.

VER. 7. Truth. To fulfil thy promises. H.—He foretells their destruction.

VER. 8. Freely, without being commanded. W. M. Lev. iii. 1.—Jesus Christ was offered, because he would. Isa. liii. 7 ; John x. 17. S. Jer. Good, so to do, (D.) or sweet in itself. Psal. li. 11. C.

PSAL. LIV. VER. 1. David. It alludes to some of his persecutions, particularly to that of Absalom, as well as to that of the Church, and of Jesus Christ. C.

VER. 3. Hear me. He repeats the same petition four times. (H.) to testify his fervour, and humility. Eccli. xxxv. 21.—Exercise, among the wicked, (S. Aug.) or while I consider the sufferings of Christ. Euseb.

VER. 4. Upon me. When a person has fallen into distress the world is ever ready to attribute it to some fault. Absalom accused his father of neglecting to judge, &c. 2 Kings xv. 2. The Jews calumniated and sought the death of Christ, whose agony in the garden is well described, (ver. 5.) as well as the consternation of David, at the sight of such a general revolt, (C.) which almost overwhelmed him. W.

VER. 7. Dove, which flies swiftly. He now adored the judgments of God, which chastised him, as he had threatened (2 Kings xii. 11) ; though, while innocent, he had rejected a similar proposal. Psal. x. 1. The event showed that he acted wisely in retiring beyond the Jordan. C.

VER. 9. Storm. The first fury of the rebels, which is most dangerous, is thus specified. David was convinced that his son's party would dwindle away, when he was informed that he did not pursue him, following the advice of Chusai. C.—Heb. "I would hasten my escape from the impetuous wind and tempest." But the Sept. may be equally correct. Bert.

11 Day and night shall iniquity surround it upon its walls: and in the midst thereof are labour, 12 and injustice.

And usury and deceit have not departed from its streets.

13 For if my enemy had reviled me, I would verily have borne with it.

And if he that hated me had spoken great things against me: I would perhaps have hidden myself from him.

14 But thou, a man of one mind, my guide, and my familiar:

15 Who didst take sweet meats together with me: in the house of God we walked with consent.

16 Let death come upon them, and let them go down alive into hell.

For there is wickedness in their dwellings: in the midst of them.

17 But I have cried to God: and the Lord will save me.

18 Evening and morning, and at noon, I will speak and declare: and he shall hear my voice.

19 He shall redeem my soul in peace from them that draw near to me: for among many they were with me.

20 God shall hear, and the Eternal shall humble them.

For there is no change with them, and they have not feared God: 21 he hath stretched forth his hand to repay.

They have defiled his covenant, 22 they are divided by the wrath of his countenance, and his heart hath drawn near.

His words are smoother than oil, and the same are larts.

23 *Cast thy care upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: he shall not suffer the just to waver for ever.

24 But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction.

* Matt. vi. 25; Luke xii. 22; 1 Pet. v. 7.

VER. 10. Cast down. Heb. "swallow up," as the earth did Dathan. C.—Sept. "drown." H.—Tongues, as at Babel, that they may not know how to proceed. C.—Heb. "swallow up . . . the torrent of their tongue." Bate.—Plog, means also to "divide." Absalom was accordingly infatuated by David's friend. 2 Kings xv. 31, and xvii. 7. M.—City of Hebron, or even of Jerusalem, which caused the king to leave no garrison in it. C.

VER. 14. Guide, the prime minister, (Bert.) and chief of the council. M.—Such was Achitophel, who had, nevertheless, been long (C.) secretly disaffected. See 2 Kings xv. 12, and xvi. 23. He professed the same religion, and was trusted with the most important affairs, as Judas carried the purse. H.

VER. 15. Consent, or with expedition, as the Rabbins order people to go to the temple, though they must return slowly. All this designates Judas. C.—Dreadful lesson for all sacred ministers, who prove faithless! (Bert.) participating of the holy sacraments in the Catholic Church, (W.) and yet betraying themselves and their Master!

VER. 16. Let death, &c. This, and such like imprecations, which occur in the psalms, are delivered prophetically; that is, by way of foretelling the punishments which shall fall upon the wicked from Divine justice, and approving the righteous ways of God: but not by way of ill-will, or uncharitable curses, which the law of God disallows. Ch.—David showed even too much tenderness towards the rebels, in the opinion of Joab, &c. He would not hurt Saul.—Hell, by a sudden death, like Antiochus, Core, &c. Num. xvii. 30. The just are already dead to this world. Bert.—Those who sin on purpose descend, as it were, alive into hell. W.

VER. 18. Evening. The Hebrews then began the day. C. Gen. i. 5. H.—They had three times allotted for prayer, (Dan. vi. 10,) as the Church had afterwards. Const. Ap. vii. 25. C.

VER. 19. Among many, &c. That is, they that drew near to attack me were many in company, all combining to fight against me. Ch.—Or, many also joined themselves to me with Joab, and the holy angels, (4 Kings vi. 16,) though almost all Israel followed Absalom. 2 Kings xv. 13. C.—In many things schismatics agree with the Church; but their crime is the breaking of unity. S. Aug.

VER. 20. Change, or redemption for them, (Psal. xliii. 13. Euseb.) or they will not amend, (W.) nor cease to blaspheme God, and to calumniate me. C.—Eternal. Lit. "He who is before ages." H.

VER. 21. Repay. Heb. bossolsiu, "in his retributions," or "against his peaceable ones."

VER. 22. They are divided, &c. Dispersed, scattered, and brought to nothing.

Bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days: but I will trust in thee, O Lord.

PSALM LV.

MISERERE MEI DEUS.

A prayer of David in danger and distress.

1 Unto the end, for a people that is removed at a distance from the sanctuary: for David, for an inscription of a title, (or pillar,) when the Philistines held him in Geth.

2 HAVE mercy on me, O God, for man hath trodden me under foot: all the day long he hath afflicted me, fighting against me.

3 My enemies have trodden on me all the day long; for they are many that make war against me.

4 From the height of the day I shall fear: but I will trust in thee.

5 In God I will praise my words, in God I have put my trust: I will not fear what flesh can do against me.

6 All the day long they detested my words: all their thoughts were against me unto evil.

7 They will dwell and hide themselves: they will watch my heel.

As they have waited for my soul, 8 for nothing shalt thou save them: in thy anger thou shalt break the people in pieces.

O God, 9 I have declared to thee my life: thou hast set my tears in thy sight,

As also in thy promise. 10 Then shall my enemies be turned back.

In what day soever I shall call upon thee, behold I know thou art my God.

11 In God will I praise the word, in the Lord will I praise his speech. In God have I hoped, I will not fear what man can do to me.

by the wrath of God, who looks with indignation on their wicked and deceitful ways. Ch.—They are separated from the good, (S. Jer.,) slain by a look. 2 Thess. ii. 8.—Near, or fought, ver. 19. C.—Darts. Absalom kissed the men of Israel to delude them, (2 Kings xv. 2,) and the traitor gave this sign to those who came to seize our Saviour. Matt. xxvi. 48. C.—The words of God are most excellent in themselves, but they seem hard to the incredulous. Thus the Capharnaïtes gave rise to the first heresy against the words of Christ, which S. Peter piously believed, though, as yet, he did not comprehend their meaning. John vi. S. Aug. W.

VER. 23. Cast. The prophet had experienced the happy effect of this conduct. C.—In all troubles and doubts we must have recourse to God. W. 1 Pet. v. 7.

VER. 24. Destruction; "into gehenna," (Chal.) or "hell," (S. Jer.,) to which the judge sentences the reprobate, without promoting their crimes. S. Aug. C.—Days. It is rare that murderers and notorious malefactors escape punishment in this world; but in the next they will surely be requited. Absalom perished in the flower of his age. Bert.—Ahitophel, and many others, have been suddenly cut off. God sometimes permits such to reign for a time, to exercise his servants, or that they may repent. S. Aug. C.

PSAL. LV. VER. 1. Geth. Before (Bert.) or after his escape to the cave of Odollam, (C.) he composed this psalm to comfort his followers with the consideration of God's protection. H.—See 1 Kings xxii., and Psal. xv.

VER. 4. The height of the day. That is, even at noon day, when the sun is the highest, I am still in danger. Ch.—Heb. "many fight against me from an elevation, or from day-break."—Fear. Many prefix a negation, which S. Jerom rejects, (ad Sun.,) explaining this height of the Divine majesty. C.

VER. 5, 6. My words. The words or promises God has made in my favour. Ch.—Praising God (H.) removed the dejection of David. Euseb.—Detested. Prot. "wrest." They put an evil construction upon what I say, (H.) and make me their laughing-stock. Psal. xxxvii. 13. C.—But I cease not to proclaim what God has declared in my favour, (H.) or what good I have been enabled to effect by his grace. My enemies may meet to devise my ruin, and to supplant me: yet all in vain. W.

VER. 8. For nothing shalt thou save them. That is, since they lie in wait to ruin my soul, thou shalt for no consideration favour or assist them, but execute thy justice upon them. Ch.

VER. 11. To me. This is almost a repetition of ver. 5. C.—Alcim and Jeri are mentioned, (H.) as "the power and eternity" of God gave David the greatest confidence.

12 In me, O God, are vows to thee, which I will pay, praises to thee.

13 Because thou hast delivered my soul from death, my feet from falling: that I may please in the sight of God, in the light of the living.

PSALM LVI.

MISERERE MEI DEUS.

The prophet prays in his affliction, and praises God for his delivery.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title, when he fled from Saul into the cave. [1 Kings xxiv.]

2 HAVE mercy on me, O God, have mercy on me: for my soul trusteth in thee.

And in the shadow of thy wings will I hope, until iniquity pass away.

3 I will cry to God, the most High; to God, who hath done good to me.

4 He hath sent from heaven, and delivered me: he hath made them a reproach that trod upon me.

God hath sent his mercy and his truth, 5 and he hath delivered my soul from the midst of the young lions. I slept troubled.

The sons of men, whose teeth are weapons and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.

6 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and thy glory above all the earth.

7 They prepared a snare for my feet; and they bowed down my soul.

They dug a pit before my face, and they are fallen into it.

8 My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready: I will sing, and rehearse a psalm.

9 Arise, O my glory; arise, psaltery and harp: I will arise early.

10 I will give praise to thee, O Lord, among the people: I will sing a psalm to thee among the nations.

11 For thy mercy is magnified even to the heavens: and thy truth unto the clouds.

VER. 12. To thee. Lit. "thy vows." H.—Houbigant chooses rather to follow the Syriac, "with thee, O God, are my vows:" which is clearer, though our version may be well explained, "I will perform my vows to thee," (Bert.) the sacrifice of praises, in this psalm. C.

VER. 13. Living, in my own country, where I am no longer, as formerly during my banishment, in the region of the dead. C.—The Fathers explain this of Jesus Christ, or of eternal glory. Theod. C.

PSAL. LVI. VER. 1. Destroy not. Suffer me not to be destroyed, (Ch. M.) or I will not allow my men to destroy an implacable foe, (H.) as they entreat me to do.—Cave of Odollam, or rather of Engaddi. C.

VER. 4. Sent his mercy, &c., (C.) above the power of man. W.—Reproach. Saul was forced to entreat David to preserve his family, as he had just spared his own life; which would, no doubt, mortify his pride, (1 Kings xxiv. 18, 22. C.) and seem a reproach to him. W.

VER. 5. Lions. Poetry gives life to all things. It represents merey and truth as God's messengers; and Saul as a young lion. He might have entered the cave with his men, and destroyed David: but Providence caused him to enter alone, so that David had an opportunity to cut off the hem of his garment, and to show his clemency.

VER. 7. Down. Heb. "my soul was bowed down," (Bert.) or, "to bow down my soul." S. Jer. H.—Saul strove many ways to destroy his rival, sending him to fight the Philistines, who, nevertheless, proved the ruin of Saul. 1 Kings xviii. 17, and xxxi. 1. W.

VER. 8. My. This and the following verses form the 107th Psalm. C.

VER. 10. Nations. The psalms are now recited (W.) in every language, and the wonders wrought by Christ are proclaimed. C.

VER. 11. Clouds. They are exceedingly great, H.—Christ has mounted to the highest heavens, and his apostles have preached (C.) his saving truths, which, like clouds, render the earth fruitful in good works. H.

VER. 12. Earth. It is just thy mercy should be extolled. M. Ver. 6.

PSAL. LVII. VER. 1. Title. This psalm is a sequel to the former, (W.) and refers to the malevolent speeches of Saul's courtiers, (1 Kings xxiv. 10, and 12 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens. and thy glory above all the earth.

PSALM LVII.

SI VERE UTIQUE.

David reproveth the wicked, and foretelleth their punishment.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title.

2 IF in very deed you speak justice: judge right things, ye sons of men.

3 For in your heart you work iniquity: your hands forge injustice in the earth.

4 The wicked are alienated from the womb, they have gone astray from the womb: they have spoken false things.

5 Their madness is according to the likeness of a serpent: like the deaf asp that stoppeth her ears:

6 Which will not hear the voice of the charmers; nor of the wizard that charmeth wisely.

7 God shall break in pieces their teeth in their mouth: the Lord shall break the grinders of the lions.

8 They shall come to nothing, like water running down: he hath bent his bow till they be weakened.

9 Like wax that melteth they shall be taken away: fire hath fallen on them, and they shall not see the sun.

10 Before your thorns could know the brier; he swalloweth them up as alive, in his wrath.

11 The just shall rejoice when he shall see the revenge: he shall wash his hands in the blood of the sinner.

12 And man shall say: If indeed there be fruit to the just; there is indeed a God that judgeth them on the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

ERUPE ME.

A prayer to be delivered from the wicked, with confidence in God's help and protection. It agrees to Christ and his enemies, the Jews.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title, when Saul sent and watched his house, to kill him. [1 Kings xix.]

xxvi. 7. C.) and to the proceedings of the Jews against Christ. S. Jer.—It is an invective against hypocrites (C.) and detractors. Bert.

VER. 2. Men. If you be consulted by Saul, and act as judges, do what is right. Condemn not a man unheard. C.

VER. 3. Heart. Hence proceed evil thoughts, &c. H.—Quicquid vis et non potes, factum Deus computat. S. Aug.—Forge, as you endeavour to preserve the appearance of rectitude. Heb. "weigh" in scales. C.—This double dealing aggravates the fault. W.

VER. 5. Madness: or "poison," emeth. M.—Deaf asp. This is the most dangerous species. The ancients attempted to charm serpents. But these courtiers were deaf to every proof of David's innocence, (C. Diss.,) and would receive no admonition, stopping their ears, like asps. W.—The prophet speaks conformably to the received opinion, (Bert.,) without determining it to be true. M.

VER. 6. Wisely. "Cunningly." Many read, qui incantatur a sapiente. C.—He does not approve of the magical art. M.

VER. 9. Wax. Heb. ssobhu, occurs no where else, and this signification is surely preferable to that of the Rabbins, "a snail." Prot. H.

VER. 10. Before your thorns, &c. That is, before your thorns grow up, so as to become strong briers, they shall be overtaken and consumed by Divine justice, swallowing them up, as it were, alive in his wrath. Ch.—You shall be cut off when you least think of it. M. Psal. liv. 24. H.—David probably alludes to the proposal mentioned, (Judg. ix. 14,) where the brier (rhamnus) invites all the trees to come under its shade. Bert.

VER. 11. Shall wash his hands, &c. Shall applaud the justice of God, and take occasion, from the consideration of the punishment of the wicked, to wash and cleanse his hands from sin. Ch.

VER. 12. A God. Heb. Aleim ssophim. Both are in the plural, which has induced many to suppose that angels, &c., are meant; yet the plural is sometimes used when speaking of the true God. Gen. xx. 13; Jos. xxiv. 19. C.—Houbigant translates, "gods," which he explains of the pastors of the Church, or "judges." The reward of virtue, and punishment of vice, are very important truths. Let us wait till the time of harvest, and all will be in its proper place. Bert.

2 DELIVER me from my enemies, O my God; and defend me from them that rise up against me.

3 Deliver me from them that work iniquity, and save me from bloody men.

4 For behold they have caught my soul: the mighty have rushed in upon me:

5 Neither is it my iniquity, or my sin, O Lord; without iniquity have I run, and directed my steps.

6 Rise up thou to meet me, and behold: even thou, O Lord, the God of hosts, the God of Israel.

Attend to visit all the nations: have no mercy on all them that work iniquity.

7 They shall return at evening, and shall suffer hunger like dogs: and shall go round about the city.

8 Behold they shall speak with their mouth, and a sword is in their lips: For who, say they, hath heard us?

9 But thou, O Lord, shalt laugh at them: thou shalt bring all the nations to nothing.

10 I will keep my strength to thee: for thou art my protector: 11 my God, his mercy shall prevent me.

12 God shall let me see over my enemies: slay them not, lest at any time my people forget.

Scatter them by thy power; and bring them down, O Lord, my protector:

13 For the sin of their mouth, and the word of their lips: and let them be taken in their pride.

And for their cursing and lying, they shall be talked of, 14 when they are consumed: when they are consumed by thy wrath, and they shall be no more.

PSAL. LVIII. VER. 1. Watched. Heb. "they (the guards) watched." The psalm relates also to the resurrection of Christ, and vocation of the Gentiles, (Bert.), as well as to the reprobation, and future conversion of the Jews.—Saul sent repeatedly, and went himself to attack David. He gave him Michol with the same design. W.—But God turned her heart another way. H.

VER. 4. Caught. Heb. "laid snares for." Sept. "hunted."

VER. 5. Iran. Heb. "they," &c. But the Sept. would not have made such a mistake, (Bert.,) and the Heb. appears to be incorrect, though we may understand, "without iniquity in me, they have run." C.—I gave them no offence. W.—All this may be well explained of Jesus Christ, who alone could use these expressions with propriety, being without sin. C.

VER. 6. No mercy. Nehemias uses the like prophetic threats, 2 Esd. iv. 5. C.—"Every sin must be punished, either by the penitent, or by an avenging God." The prophet supposes that his enemies died impenitent. S. Aug.—When the gospel was first preached, God visited the world with various afflictions, to make people enter into themselves. Euseb.

VER. 7. Evening, when they came to take David. But, out of regard for Michol, they providentially waited till he had escaped. 2 Kings xix. H.—The Jews will embrace the faith at the end of the world, (S. Aug.,) or they will be destroyed, (S. Hil.,) or banished by Titus and Adrian (A. D. 137); the latter of whom forbade them even to look at Jerusalem from an eminence. They could not enter it in the time of Euseb. (Psal. xlviii.) and S. Jer. Soph. 1.—They have a hunger for God's word, of which they have lost the true sense. S. Athan.

VER. 8. Lips. They seek my ruin. 2 Esd. iv. 2, &c.—Heard. Thus they deny Providence. Psal. (Heb.) x. 11. C.—This thought and the occasion of sin have produced much wickedness. "Whithersoever thou goest, thou art seen by Jesus Christ, who made, redeemed, and died for thee." S. Aug. Ser. 161.—A serious consideration of God's presence is the best preservative. Bert.

VER. 10. My. Heb. "his," which seems incorrect. Chal. (C.) and S. Jerom agree with the Vulg. Houbigant would also substitute, "My strength, I will sing to thee," which affords a better sense, ver. 17. Bert.—Yet our version is very plain: I will make all my powers serve thee, and acknowledge that all comes from thee. H.

VER. 11. His mercy. Prot. "the God of my." Yet the text has, "his:" i and v are easily confounded. The Keri here allows "my," which Pagnin translates. S. Jer. "the mercy of my God" (H.); or "my God, my mercy." Ep. ad Sun. C.—All comes to the same end. These words are most applicable to Jesus Christ. Bert.

VER. 12. Over. S. Jer. "my spies." H.—Forget. Let them suffer a long time, (M.) that their punishment may be a greater warning. The ancients read, "thy law," instead of people, and apply this to the Jews, (C.) who still preserve the law, and bear witness throughout the world that the prophecies were not a fabrication of Christians. H.—Their exemplary chastisement and continuance may serve to caution all not to follow their example. Judei testes iniquitatis suae et veritatis nostrae. S. Aug. Euseb.—"If all the Jews had been converted, we

And they shall know that God will rule Jacob, and all the ends of the earth.

15 They shall return at evening, and shall suffer hunger like dogs: and shall go round about the city.

16 They shall be scattered abroad to eat, and shall murmur, if they be not filled.

17 But I will sing thy strength; and will extol thy mercy in the morning.

For thou art become my support, and my refuge, in the day of my trouble.

18 Unto thee, O my helper, will I sing; for thou art God, my defence: my God, my mercy.

PSALM LIX.

DEUS REPULISTI NOS.

After many afflictions, the Church of Christ shall prevail.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, for the inscription of a title, to David himself, for Doctrine. 2 when he set fire to Mesopotamia, of Syria and Sobal; and Joab returned, and slew of Edom, in the vale of the salt-pits, twelve thousand men.

3 O GOD, thou hast cast us off, and hast destroyed us; thou hast been angry, and hast had mercy on us.

4 Thou hast moved the earth, and hast troubled it: heal thou the breaches thereof, for it has been moved.

5 Thou hast shown thy people hard things; thou hast made us drink the wine of sorrow.

6 Thou hast given a warning to them that fear thee: that they may flee from before the bow:

should have had only suspicious witnesses; and if all had been exterminated, we should have had none." God permits our spiritual adversaries to remain for our trial, (Tert.,) that we may not forget ourselves in prosperity. W.

VER. 13. For, is not expressed. Lit. "bring down . . . the sin," &c. Let not their haughty speeches take effect, or escape punishment. The imprecations of the Jews against themselves, (H.) and against Christ, have brought on their destruction. S. Aug.—Thus nothing need be supplied.

VER. 14. Consumed. At the destruction of Jerusalem, or for opposing Nehe- mias. 2 Esd. vi. 16.—Earth. The Jews who were preordained to life, embraced the gospel. C.—How can those know, who are no more? Their condition will be worse than annihilation. They will exist in hell, though no more visible to us. Bert.—They will know the truth, when it is too late; and when they are on the point of plunging into the abyss. The measure of their crimes being full, they shall be accused and punished. W.

VER. 15. City. This is a sort of chorus, ver. 7. S. Jer. and Prot. "Let them bark." H.—It insinuates that the attacks of the enemies of Nehemias, (C.) David, and Christ, were unceasing. H.

VER. 16. Murmur. Heb. also "shall tarry all night." Prot. "grudge." H.—Finding no oil for their lamps, they will repent, like Judas, and blaspheme in hell. W.

VER. 17. Morning. With earnestness, (H.) I will fulfil this duty, (C.) at the resurrection, (W.) in the morning of a glorious immortality. M.

VER. 18. Helper. S. Jer. "my strength," virtutem meam tibi cantabo, ver. 10. I will sing, that all I have comes from thy pure mercy. H.

PSAL. LIX., &c. VER. 1. Changed. Psal. xlv.—Title, Psal. xv.—Doctrine, explaining what will be the progress of the Church. M.—It seems to have the same import as understanding in other titles, but here is of little authority. Bert.

VER. 2. Set fire. Heb. "fought against Syria of Mesopotamia, and Syria of Soba." S. Jer. 2 Kings viii. 10. H.—Twelve. Abisai slew eighteen thousand, perhaps on another occasion (1 Par. xviii. 12); so that this title does not contradict history. M.

VER. 3. Off. Chastising thy people frequently under Moses, &c. Bert.—On us. Redeeming mankind, which thou hadst condemned for the fault of Adam, and giving us a more abundant grace. Rom. v. 9. S. Hil.

VER. 5. Sorrow. Heb. "muddy," such as is given to slaves or malefactors, (S. Matt. xxvii. 34,) mixed with myrrh, or venom. Lit. "wine of trembling" (C.) or soporiferous. S. Jer. H.—All these expressions give the idea of something disagreeable. Bert.

VER. 6. Warning, to amend, (W.) the sign of the cross (C.) in baptism, (S. Jer.,) or confirmation. Euseb.—It was customary to erect a pole, on which some signal was placed, in case of invasion. Isa. v. 26, and xi. 12, &c. C.

VER. 7. Save me. The king praying for all. M.—S. Aug. reads, me, (C.) though the Vulg. does not here express it. H.—Heb. "save thy right hand," the people, or man of thy, &c. Psal. lxxix. 18. C.—Hear me. Heb. "him." But the margin has, me. H.

That thy beloved may be delivered. 7 Save me with thy right hand, and hear me.

8 God hath spoken in his holy place: I will rejoice, and I will divide Sichem; and will mete out the vale of tabernacles.

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim is the strength of my head.

Juda is my king: 10 Moab is the pot of my hope.

Into Edom will I stretch out my shoe: to me the foreigners are made subject.

11 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

12 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go out with our armies?

13 Give us help from trouble: for vain is the salvation of man.

14 Through God we shall do mightily: and he shall bring to nothing them that afflict us.

PSALM LX.

EXAUDI DEUS.

A prayer for the coming of the kingdom of Christ, which shall have no end.

1 Unto the end, in hymns, for David.

2 HEAR, O God, my supplication; be attentive to my prayer.

3 To thee have I cried from the ends of the earth; when my heart was in anguish, thou hast exalted me on a rock.

Thou hast conducted me; 4 for thou hast been my hope: a tower of strength against the face of the enemy.

5 In thy tabernacle I shall dwell for ever: I shall be protected under the covert of thy wings.

6 For thou, my God, hast heard my prayer: thou hast given an inheritance to them that fear thy name.

VER. 8. Holy one, Jesus Christ, (Euseb.,) the prophet, (M.) the sanctuary, (C.) or oracle. W.—He had promised that the captives should return in seventy years' time. Jer. xxv. 11, and xxix. 10. C.—Sichem (partibor Sichinam . . metibor). These two verbs are sometimes used for partiar and metiar, in ancient authors.—Tabernacles, Heb. "succoth." Bert. Gen. xxxiii. 17.—It may also signify the Arabs, who lived in tents. M.

VER. 9. Head. This tribe was at the head of the kingdom of Israel, but submitted to David, (H.) and afforded excellent soldiers and captains. C.—King. Heb. "law-giver," alluding to Gen. xlix. 10. Sym. "my general." C.—The word king implies all this. H.—Juda always swayed the sceptre. Bert.—After the captivity, Zorobabel was at the head of the people. Jesus Christ sprung from his tribe, and is the true King of the people, whom he has redeemed, and put in possession of the land of promise. C.

VER. 10. The pot of my hope; or my watering pot. That is, a vessel for nearer uses, by being reduced to serve me, even in the meanest employments. Ch. W.—Shoe, to be untied, or carried, as by the meanest slaves, (Matt. iii. 11,) or to take possession. Deut. xi. 24.—Foreigners, alienigenæ, or, "Allophyli." S. Aug.—"Of another tribe." H.—So the Philistines are called, who had no kindred with the Israelites; whereas the Edomites, Moabites, &c., were originally of the same family. Ch.—Subject, or "friends." Psal. cvii. 10. C.—Prot. "Philistia, triumph thou, because of me." Marg. insinuates this is spoken "by irony:" but (H.) Heb. properly means, "make an alliance with me;" or, Syr. "I will shout for joy over Palestine." This country was subdued by the Machabees, (1 Mac. iv. 15. C.) as it had been tributary to David. 2 Kings viii. 2. Bert.—"I will make a league against the Philistines." Houbig.

VER. 11. City. The capital of the aforesaid countries, or Jerusalem (C.); but more particularly Petra, (H.) the strongest place in Idumea. M. Abdias, 3. Bert.—The Fathers understand the Church. Euseb.

VER. 12. Off. God punishes and rewards. W.—And wilt; or, "yet thou wilt not." &c. H.—Thou wilt not depend on our efforts for victory. Bellar. M.—How can we expect to make such conquests, being in so forlorn a condition, when thou dost not lead forth our armies, as formerly? All that man can do is vain; but thou wilt look down upon us, and through God we shall do mightily.

VER. 14. C.

PSAL. LX. VER. 1. Hymns. This denotes either the female musicians, or the instruments. C.

VER. 3. Earth of Palestine, (Bert.,) when David was at Mahanaim. Ferrand. 2 Kings xvii. 22. H.—The countries beyond the Euphrates may be so styled. Psal. lxxiv. 6.

7 Thou wilt add days to the days of the king; his years even to generation and generation.

8 He abideth for ever in the sight of God: his mercy and truth who shall search?

9 So will I sing a psalm to thy name for ever and ever: that I may pay my vows from day to day.

PSALM LXI.

NONNE DEO.

The prophet encourageth himself and all others to trust in God, and serve him.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun, a psalm of David.

2 SHALL not my soul be subject to God? for from him is my salvation.

3 For he is my God and my Saviour: he is my protector, I shall be moved no more.

4 How long do you rush in upon a man? you all kill, as if you were thrusting down a leaning wall, and a tottering fence.

5 But they have thought to cast away my price, I ran in thirst: they blessed with their mouth, but cursed with their heart.

6 But be thou, O my soul, subject to God: for from him is my patience.

7 For he is my God and my Saviour: he is my helper, I shall not be moved.

8 In God is my salvation and my glory: he is the God of my help, and my hope is in God.

9 Trust in him, all ye congregation of people: pour out your hearts before him: God is our helper for ever.

10 But vain are the sons of men, the sons of men are liars in the balances: that by vanity they may together deceive.

11 Trust not in iniquity, and cover not robberies: if riches abound, set not your heart upon them.

VER. 5. Tabernacle. The words for ever seem to restrain this to heaven, & the Fathers explain them, though they may also allude to a temporal protection (Bert.) in the temple. C.

VER. 7. King. They wish long life to the king, expecting that the predictions of the prophets insured to them temporal dominion. But when they saw Zorobabel possess no such splendour, they were naturally taught to extend their thoughts to the Messias, of whom the Chal. and ancient Jews, as well as the Fathers, explain this passage. C.—Chal. "the days of the future world thou wilt add to the days of the king, the Messias. His years shall be like the generations of this world, and the generations of the world to come." Eternity is clearly meant.

VER. 8. Search? Who can comprehend what thou hast prepared for this king? He may allude to the promises made to David's family, (Psal. lxxxviii. 30, 38. C.) which should reign for ever, by means of Christ. H.

VER. 9. Day. A Levite speaks, having dedicated himself by vow to serve God continually in his temple, after his return from Babylon, (C.) or David expresses his resolution to testify his gratitude by sacrifice. H.—I will sing psalms, &c., in this life, and for ever. W.

PSAL. LXI, &c. VER. 1. Idithun, to sing. W.—He was one of the chief musicians under David. 1 Par. xxv. 3. The psalm may be explained of David, persecuted by Absalom, (C.) of the Machabees, (Theod.,) &c., or of Christ, and his Church. C.—S. Jer. considers it as a piece of excellent morality, (C.) and this may suffice, without referring it to any historical fact. Bert.

VER. 2. Subject. The just is resigned, though he feel like other men. David found a sort of resentment against the rebels arising in his breast, which he presently repressed, by the thought of God's will. 2 Kings xii. 11. C.

VER. 4. Fence. This may refer to the persecutors, who resembled a leaning wall. Bert. Isa. xxx. 13. C.—Prot. "ye shall be slain all of you, as a bowing wall shall ye be," &c. He threatens them with speedy destruction, (H.) or represents to them the baseness of attacking a man ready to fall. C.

VER. 5. Price. Sept. S. Hilary, &c., "my honour." They wish to dethrone me, and to represent me as unfit to govern.—I ran. Sept. ἔδραμον, "they ran" likewise, as Heb. implies, and as the Gr. Fathers generally explain it. David thought proper to flee, that he might be at a distance from traitors, 2 Kings xv. 14.

VER. 9. All. Heb. "always, O people." Sept. seem to have read adorth, for ath.—For ever. Here Selah is translated, (Bert.,) though it be not in Sept., &c. David exhorts his followers to address themselves to God, with compunction and confidence. C.

VER. 10. Liars. They are so vain and light, that if they are put into the 12 God hath spoken once, these two things have I heard, that power belongeth to God, 13 and mercy to thee, O Lord; for thou wilt render to every man according to his works.

PSALM LXII.

DEUS DEUS MEUS AD TE.

The prophet aspireth after God.

1 A psalm of David, when he was in the desert of Edom.

2 O GOD, my God, to thee do I watch at break of day.

For thee my soul hath thirsted; for thee my flesh, O how many ways!

3 In a desert land, and where there is no way, and no water: so in the sanctuary have I come before thee, to see thy power and thy glory.

4 For thy mercy is better than lives: thee my lips shall praise.

5 Thus will I bless thee all my life long: and in thy name I will lift up my hands.

6 Let my soul be filled as with marrow and fatness: and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips.

7 If I have remembered thee upon my bed, I will meditate on thee in the morning: 8 because thou hast been my helper.

And I will rejoice under the covert of thy wings: 9 my soul hath stuck close to thee: thy right hand hath received me.

10 But they have sought my soul in vain, they shall go into the lower parts of the earth.

11 They shall be delivered into the hands of the sword, they shall be the portions of foxes.

12 But the king shall rejoice in God, all they shall be praised that swear by him: because the mouth is stopped of them that speak wicked things.

* Matt. xvi. 27; Rom. ii. 6; 1 Cor. iii. 8; Gal. vi. 5.

scales, they will be found to be of no weight; and to be mere lies, deceit, and vanity. Or, they are liars in their balances, by weighing things by false weights, and preferring the temporal before the eternal. Ch. Prov. xi. 1, and xx. 10.—They give false judgments; be not concerned; God is our protector. C.—God's servants strive to draw others to the practice of virtue. W.

VER. 12. Once, by the generation of his word, (S. Aug.,) or when he promulgated the law. Exod. xx. 6. Bert.

VER. 13. Works. We must therefore refrain from every injustice. H.—God spoke once by Moses, and again by his own Son. Both the Testaments confirm the certainty of rewards and punishments, (Bert.,) as God is able and willing (W.) to execute his decrees.

PSAL. LXII. VER. 1. Edom (Idumæa). H.—Several copies read Judæa; which agrees with the Heb., &c. The Idumeans, after the captivity, occupied those deserts (C.) of Ziph, Haret, &c., (W.) where David had screened himself from the fury of Saul. This psalm may express his sentiments, (Theod. Muis.,) or those of the captives, returning home, (C.) or it may agree with all those who thirst after their heavenly country. Bert.—S. Jerom explains it of the coming of Christ, and it was used in the morning service. S. Chrys. Psal. exl. C.

VER. 2. Day. The manna dissolved with the sunbeams, and God will be served with diligence.—Flesh. The sensations of my soul affect all my body. W.—He loves God with all his strength, &c. H.—“The soul desires, but the end can be attained only by good works.” Carnis laboribus pervenitur. S. Jer.

VER. 4. Lives. For these must perish, while heaven remains for ever. S. Hil.—This consolation is preferable to any worldly prosperity. W.

VER. 5. Hands. Doing good works, as the Fathers explain it. This is the posture of people who pray, or take an oath. Tert. 1 Tim. ii. 8. C.—I will, &c. Comfort is proportioned to suffering for Christ. 2 Cor. i. W.

VER. 6. Fatness. With the most exquisite delights of the temple. Jer. xxxi. 14. C.—Thy grace will enable me to give thee due praise (W.) with joy. M.

VER. 7. Bed. I will think on thee both when I retire to rest, and when I get up. Bert.—Thou art my first beginning, and last end. H.

VER. 10. Earth. To seek me out, (Houbig.,) or they shall perish. The Babylonians were exposed to many miseries under Cyrus, as the prophets assert, (Isa. xlii. 1; Jer. xxv. 12,) though profane history be silent. C.—David foretells the destruction of his persecutors, either temporal or spiritual. W.

VER. 12. The king. David, (Bert., &c.,) or Zorobabel, for whom the Jews had the highest regard, though he was not an independent monarch, nor wore a

PSALM LXIII.

EXAUDI DEUS ORATIONEM.

A prayer in affliction, with confidence in God that he will bring to nought the machinations of persecutors.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

2 HEAR, O God, my prayer, when I make supplication to thee: deliver my soul from the fear of the enemy.

3 Thou hast protected me from the assembly of the malignant; from the multitude of the workers of iniquity.

4 For they have whetted their tongues like a sword; they have bent their bow a bitter thing, 5 to shoot in secret the undefiled.

6 They will shoot at him on a sudden, and will not fear: they are resolute in wickedness.

They have talked of hiding snares; they have said: Who shall see them?

7 They have searched after iniquities: they have failed in their search.

Man shall come to a deep heart: 8 and God shall be exalted.

The arrows of children are their wounds: 9 and their tongues against them are made weak.

All that saw them were troubled; 10 and every man was afraid.

And they declared the works of God: and understood his doings.

11 The just shall rejoice in the Lord, and shall hope in him; and all the upright in heart shall be praised

PSALM LXIV.

TE DECET.

God is to be praised in his Church, to which all nations shall be called.

1 To the end, a psalm of David. The canticle of Jeremiah and Ezechiel to the people of the captivity, when they began to go out.

crown. Agg. ii. 24; Zac. iii. 8. It was customary to swear by the life of the king. 1 Kings i. 26, and xx. 3. The Fathers understand Jesus Christ to be meant, and this is the true and primary sense.—By him. The king, (Du Pin. C.) or God. M. Boss. T.—Those who follow the true religion, (Deut. vi. 13; Isa. xlv. 23. C.) and act accordingly, (H.) shall be kings for ever. Apoc. Bert. 1 Pet. ii. 9. H.

PSAL. LXIII. VER. 1. David, in distress. Euseb., &c.—It has no relation to any historical fact. But it expresses the sentiments of any just man, surrounded with danger. S. Hil.—Yet many apply it to Daniel in the lions' den, (Muis.,) to the captives, (C.) or to Jesus Christ and his Church. S. Aug., &c. II.

VER. 3. Malignant. I am encouraged to hope by past experience. W.

VER. 4. Thing, or discourse. This describes the poisonous insinuations of heretics, (Euseb.,) or the calumnies of the Jews against Christ. Bert.

VER. 6. Them. The snares. H.—Houbigant prefers “us,” with reason, (Bert.,) after the Syr., Arab., Cassiod., &c. Yet the Heb., &c., retain them, which is very easily explained. II.

VER. 7. Search. Or, they have made the most diligent investigation, (Bert.,) to no purpose. H.—Thus David and our Saviour were treated.—Heart. That is, crafty, subtle, deep projects and designs; which, nevertheless, shall not succeed; for God shall be exalted in bringing them to nought, by his wisdom and power. Ch.—Heb. “both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep.” Prot. H.—But, without the points, the Sept. is accurate. Bert.

VER. 8. The arrows of children are their wounds. That is, the wounds, stripes, or blows, they seek to inflict upon the just, are but like the weak efforts of children's arrows, which can do no execution: and their tongues, that is, their speeches against them, come to nothing. Ch.—Or, children themselves have wounded these crafty politicians, and exposed their folly. H.—Heb. is “very perplexed in the three last verses. Let us adhere to the Vulg. and Sept., who generally read more correctly than the present Hebrew.” C. Bert.—Yet S. Jerom gives a very good sense. H.—Wounds. God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the strong, (W.) and he hath taken the wise in their craftiness. M.

VER. 10. Afraid, at the sight of God's judgments on the Babylonians, &c. C.

VER. 11. Praised. All will begin to esteem the chosen race. C.—Heb. “shall glory.” The Jews and Christians (H.) shall esteem themselves honoured by the title of God's people. C.—They shall be praised for rightly serving God, (W.) and shall be rewarded by Him (H.) with universal applause. M.

PSAL. LXIV. VER. 1. Of the captivity. That is, the people of the captivity of Babylon. This is not in the Hebrew, but is found in the ancient trans-

2 A HYMN, O God, becometh thee in Sion: and a vow shall be paid to thee in Jerusalem.

3 O hear my prayer: all flesh shall come to thee.

4 The words of the wicked have prevailed over us: and thou wilt pardon our transgressions.

5 Blessed is he whom thou hast chosen, and taken to thee: he shall dwell in thy courts.

We shall be filled with the good things of thy house; holy is thy temple, 6 wonderful in justice.

Hear us, O God, our Saviour, who art the hope of all the ends of the earth, and in the sea afar off.

7 Thou who preparest the mountains by thy strength, being girded with power: 8 who troublest the depth of the sea, the noise of its waves.

The Gentiles shall be troubled, 9 and they that dwell in the uttermost borders shall be afraid at thy signs: thou shalt make the outgoings of the morning and of the evening to be joyful.

10 Thou hast visited the earth, and hast plentifully watered it; thou hast many ways enriched it.

The river of God is filled with water; thou hast prepared their food: for so is its preparation.

11 Fill up plentifully the streams thereof, multiply its fruits; it shall spring up, and rejoice in its showers.

12 Thou shalt bless the crown of the year of thy goodness: and thy fields shall be filled with plenty.

13 The beautiful places of the wilderness shall grow fat: and the hills shall be girded about with joy.

14 The rams of the flocks are clothed, and the vales shall abound with corn: they shall shout; yea, they shall sing a hymn.

PSALM LXV.

JUBILATE DEO.

An invitation to praise God.

lation of the Septuagint. Ch.—From the word canticle. H.—It is of little authority. Jeremias and Ezechiel were never together. C. Bert.—David predicts the return from captivity, (Bert.), and the vocation of the Gentiles. (S. Hil., &c. M.) which the prophets Jeremias, &c., had insinuated, by the coming of the nations from Babylon, so as to forsake idolatry. S. Aug., &c. W.

VER. 2. Hymn. Or Heb. "Praise is silent," (H.) "waiteth," (Prot.) or "silence is praise for thee, O God." Pagn. Favete linguis. Hor. Grot.—"We worship Him with pure silence." Porphy. Abst. 3. Zac. ii. 13. H.—In Jerusalem, is not in Heb., &c., though Houbigant thinks it was originally. Bert.

VER. 3. O. Heb. "hearer of prayer," (C.) or "graciously hear my prayer, till all," &c. S. Jer. Houbig.—To thee. At the last judgment, or (C.) at the vocation of the Gentiles. Bert. M.

VER. 4. Transgressions. These are the words of the Christian converts, (Euseb.,) or of the Jews, who acknowledge that they have been justly punished with drought, for neglecting the temple and first-fruits. Agg. i. 4; Mal. iii. 9. C.—Heb. "thou wilt expiate our transgressions," which denotes Christ's satisfaction. Bert.

VER. 5. To thee, by predestination.—House, adorned with exterior graces. S. Hil.—Happy the man, whom thou hast ordained, by faith and good works, to eternal life! David speaks in the name of the elect. M.

VER. 6. Justice. Because there thou wilt fulfil thy promises, and requirdest the greatest composure and attention. Eph. ii. 12, 22. Bert.—Nothing defiled can enter into heaven. Apoc. xxi. W.—Off. The Jews were dispersed into all countries, (Jer. xxxi. 8.) and all are called to the true faith. C.

VER. 7. Strength, or rain. The power (C.) and goodness of God are described with regard to the captives, and converted nations, (Bert.,) and the great works of the creation. W.

VER. 8. Troublest. Prot. "stillest the noise." H.—Troubled. The most obdurate are converted from all countries. W.

VER. 9. Joyful. People both of the east and west shall learn to fear thee; or thy chosen people shall dwell in peace, and attend the morning and evening service. Euseb. C.

VER. 10. River. Heb. "the division," or all the seas and fountains (Bert.) of consequence, (M.) particularly the Jordan, which overflows, like the Euphrates, about Pentecost. Jos. iii. 15; Jer. xii. 5. C.—Its, the earth's, after a plentiful rain. H.—God hath wrought many wonders by water, and hath fed his people, (Exod. vii. 14, and xvi. 3, &c.,) to prefigure the graces conferred in baptism, the holy Eucharist. &c. W.

1 Unto the end, a canticle of a psalm of the resurrection. S HOUT with joy to God, all the earth, 2 sing ye a psalm to his name; give glory to his praise.

3 Say unto God, How terrible are thy works, O Lord! in the multitude of thy strength, thy enemies shall lie to thee.

4 Let all the earth adore thee, and sing to thee: let it sing a psalm to thy name.

5 Come and see the works of God: who is terrible in his counsels over the sons of men.

6 Who turned the sea into dry land, in the river they shall pass on foot: there shall we rejoice in him.

7 Who by his power ruleth for ever: his eyes behold the nations; let not them that provoke him be exalted in themselves.

8 O bless our God, ye Gentiles; and make the voice of his praise to be heard.

9 Who hath set my soul to live: and hath not suffered my feet to be moved.

10 For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us by fire, as silver is tried.

11 Thou hast brought us into a net, thou hast laid afflictions on our back: 12 thou hast set men over our heads.

We have passed through fire and water, and thou hast brought us out into a refreshment.

13 I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows, 14 which my lips have uttered, And my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.

15 I will offer up to thee holocausts full of marrow, with burnt-offerings of rams: I will offer to thee bullocks with goats.

16 Come and hear, all ye that fear God: and I will tell you what great things he hath done for my soul.

VER. 11. Showers. This gives the sense, rather than the words of the Heb. Bert.

VER. 12. Crown. The crops shall succeed each other, and be abundant. Lev. xxvi. 5, 10; Amos ix. 13. This fertility was foretold, Agg. ii. 20. C.—"By thy blessing, the year shall roll along, and thy steps shall distil fatness." S. Jer. 11.

VER. 13. Wilderness. Or, of such places as were not ploughed. Little hay was collected, as cattle might almost always pasture.—Hills, covered with vine-trees, &c. Joel iii. 18; Job xx. 17. C.—The most barren will bring forth fruit, and the perfect shall advance in merit. W.

VER. 14. Clothed, with fleeces, (H.) or rather, shall be surrounded with sheep. Heb. also, "the pastures shall be covered with sheep."—All nature (M.) praises God in its own manner, when it answers the designs of God. Yet man is chiefly invited to sing. H.

PSAL. LXV. VER. 1. Resurrection. Heb., Origen's Sept., &c., omit these words, (Bert. T. 3.) which seem to have been added by some Greek Christian, who thought he perceived some allusion to the resurrection of Christ. Ver. 9. The Fathers have well explained it in this sense, though they also apply it literally to the return of the captives, (Theod. C.) and to the general resurrection, the end of all the miseries of the elect, (Bellar.,) as well as to the conversion of the Gentiles, (Gencb.,) and the resurrection of a soul from the state of sin. H.

VER. 3. Lie. Prove faithless to thee, (Psal. xvii. 46, &c.,) notwithstanding the evidence of thy wonders, and their deceitful professions.

VER. 5. Men. Choosing some, and rejecting others, (S. Jer.,) calling the Gentiles, while he casts off the Jews. S. Aug.

VER. 6. In him. God, (H.) Jesus, (Euseb.,) or "on it," the river Euphrates, which we shall pass over with as much ease as our ancestors did the Red Sea.

VER. 7. Provoke him. The faithless Jews, or Gentiles; particularly those of Babylon; or those among God's people, who neglected his service. Agg. iv., and 1 Esd. ix., &c. C.—These often gave way to murmuring, and are therefore exhorted not to be proud, lest they should be brought low.

VER. 10. Tried. So Daniel was treated. Dan. iii. 21. The Babylonish captivity is compared to a furnace, as well as all severe trials of virtue. Prov. xvii. 3; Zac. xiii. C.

VER. 11. Back. Heb. "loins." The captives had experienced the greatest miseries, as the martyrs of Christ have done since. C.

VER. 12. Fire and water, which the Egyptians considered as the emblems of purity, (Horus. 41,) and which here denote the greatest tribulations. C.—The just still overcome by God's grace, (W.) notwithstanding all the efforts of tyrants who may be set over them. M.

17 I cried to him with my mouth: and I extolled him with my tongue.

18 If I have looked at iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me.

19 Therefore hath God heard me, and hath attended to the voice of my supplication.

20 Blessed be God, who hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSALM LXVI.

DEUS MISEREATUR.

A prayer for the propagation of the Church.

1 Unto the end, in hymns, a psalm of a canticle for David.

2 MAY God have mercy on us, and bless us: may he cause the light of his countenance to shine upon us, and may he have mercy on us.

3 That we may know thy way upon earth: thy salvation in all nations.

4 Let people confess to thee, O God: let all people give praise to thee.

5 Let the nations be glad and rejoice: for thou judgest the people with justice, and directest the nations upon earth.

6 Let the people, O God, confess to thee: let all the people give praise to thee: 7 the earth hath yielded her fruit.

May God, our God, bless us; 8 may God bless us: and all the ends of the earth fear him.

PSALM LXVII.

EXURGAT DEUS.

The glorious establishment of the Church of the New Testament, prefigured by the benefits bestowed on the people of Israel.

VER. 15. Marrow. Malachy (i. 13) reproaches some for presenting lean victims. C.—Offer. Heb. āsse, “will make.” Sept. use ποιῶω, in the same sense, and are followed by the writers of the New Testament.

VER. 17. Extolled, by meditation, (Muis.) or God has immediately granted my request. Theod.—Some Lat. Bibles read, “I have exulted under my tongue,” which my heart directs. W.

VER. 18. Heart. Being enslaved to any passion. H.—Iniquity and dissimulation hinder the effect of our prayers; and in some sense, it is true that God does not hear sinners (John ix. 31; 2 Tim. ii. 9): though He regards favourably such as wish to repent, like the publican. Luke xviii. 14. C.—Whosoever would be heard, must repent of his sins. W.

PSAL. LXVI. VER. 1. For David, is not in Heb., nor in some copies of the Sept. C.—Yet the psalm expresses the sentiments of the royal prophet, (Bert.) or it is a sequel to the two former, thanking God for liberty, and for rain. The Fathers explain it of the coming of Jesus Christ, and the calling of the Gentiles, ver. 5.

VER. 2. Upon us, to grant our requests; or may the Messias come. Heb. i. 3.—And may, &c., is in the Arab., and in most copies of the Sept. and Vulg., though it be omitted in Heb., &c., “and we shall live.” Ethiop. C.—Perhaps it may be given to express the sense of Selah, which seems to have been a term of approbation. It does not alter the sense. Bert.—God first forgives sins, and then bestows his manifold graces. W.—This was the form of solemn blessing. Num. vi. 17. D.

VER. 3. Way. The true religion. M.—Salvation. Christ, who is the only way to be saved. John xiv. 6; Matt. i. 21. C.—This way is new, leading to new heavens, &c. Heb. x. 20, and 2 Pet. iii. 13. Bert.

VER. 7. Fruit, after rain; or, in a spiritual sense, Jesus Christ, the root, or bud of Jesse, (Isa. iv. 2. C.) born in Judea, (Bert.) of the holy Virgin. S. Jer.—God. The triple repetition of God's name insinuates the blessed Trinity, (H. Father,) and the prophet's earnestness. C.—The faith of the Trinity is to be preached throughout the world, (H.) for the salvation of nations. W.

PSAL. LXVII. VER. 1. Himself. This is the most difficult of all the psalms, (C.) crua ingeniorum. Muis.—The prodigies wrought by God in favour of his people, when they came out of Egypt, and conquered the land of Chanaan, are described by David in this triumphal canticle, which was sung when the ark was removed. Houbig.—He had also in view the greater prodigies, which should attend Jesus Christ, and the propagation of the gospel. The latter explanation is also literal, (Bert.,) and is given by the Fathers, (C.) on the authority of S. Paul, ver. 19; Eph. iv. 8. H.

VER. 2. Arise. These words were used when the Israelites decamped, (Num. i. 45. G.) and in the exorcisms to expel devils, who are here styled enemies. S. A. 11. 11.

1 Unto the end, a psalm of a canticle for David himself.

2 LET God arise, and let his enemies be scattered: and let them that hate him flee from before his face.

3 As smoke vanisheth, so let them vanish away; as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God.

4 And let the just feast, and rejoice before God: and be delighted with gladness.

5 Sing ye to God, sing a psalm to his name: make a way for him who ascendeth upon the west: the Lord is his name.

Rejoice ye before him: but the wicked shall be troubled at his presence, 6 who is the father of orphans, and the judge of widows.

God in his holy place: 7 God who maketh men of one manner to dwell in a house:

Who bringeth out them that were bound in strength; in like manner them that provoke, that dwell in sepulchres.

8 O God, when thou didst go forth in the sight of thy people, when thou didst pass through the desert:

9 The earth was moved, and the heavens dropped at the presence of the God of Sinai, at the presence of the God of Israel.

10 Thou shalt set aside for thy inheritance a free rain, O God: and it was weakened, but thou hast made it perfect.

11 In it shall thy animals dwell; in thy sweetness, O God, thou hast provided for the poor.

VER. 5. Who ascendeth upon the west. Super oceanum. S. Gregory understands it of Christ, who after his going down, like the sun, in the west, by his passion and death, ascended more glorious, and carried all before him. S. Jerom renders it, who ascendeth, or cometh up, through the deserts (Ch.); which some explain of the coming out of Egypt, others of the progress of the gospel, in a western direction. M.—Lord. Heb. “in Je is his name.” H.—The Word was with God. John i.—But . . . presence.

VER. 7. Of one manner. That is, agreeing in faith, unanimous in love, and following the same manner of discipline. It is verified in the servants of God living together in his house, which is the Church. 1 Tim. iii. 15. Ch.—Heb. may signify, “He maketh those who were alone (steriles) to dwell in a house.” Psal. cxii. 9. He builds up their houses, and grants them children. Flamin. Exod. i. 21.—The Israelites under Pharaoh (C.) saw their male issue destroyed, (H.) but God enabled them to multiply exceedingly. Exod. i. 12. C.—Jedim means “the solitary,” (S. Jer.) and “the united,” as the first Christians were. Bert. Acts ii. 44. H.—The Church preserves unity in faith, &c. S. Cyp. Ep. 76. W.—In strength. Houbig. “to walk freely.” The Gentiles were, as it were, buried, before Christ delivered them, (Bert.,) as he did those who were once incredulous in the days of Noe, (1 Pet. iii. 20, and iv. 6. S. Athan.,) and God rescued the Israelites from servitude, notwithstanding their repeated provocations, both before and after this mercy.

VER. 9. Dropped. The earthquake and rain are not mentioned by Moses. But the prophets often supply omissions. Debora and Habacuc speak in the same lofty strains. Exod. xix. 16; Judg. v. 4; Hab. iii. 6. C.—Debora specifies some words, (H.) which seem to be here wanting, “the clouds also dropped water, the mountains melted” at, &c.—Of Sinai, or, “Sinai at,” &c. M.—Heb. “this Sinai before God, (Judg. v. 5. Jehovah,) the God of Israel.” The old MS. 3. retains the word Jehovah at least six times, where it is not once printed, as that of Lambeth, 434, does here, &c. Kennicott.—S. Aug. and the ancient psalters read, A facie Domini; Mons Sinai, &c. C.—The mount itself seemed to melt amid thunder and rain. H.

VER. 10. A free rain. The manna, which rained plentifully from heaven, in favour of God's inheritance, that is, of his people Israel: which was weakness indeed under a variety of afflictions, but was made perfect by God; that is, was still supported by Divine Providence, and brought on to the promised land. It agrees particularly to the Church of Christ, his true inheritance, which is plentifully watered with the free rain of heavenly grace; and through many infirmities, that is, crosses and tribulations, is made perfect, and fitted for eternal glory. Ch.

VER. 11. In it, &c. That is, in this Church, which is thy fold, and thy inheritance, shall thy animals, thy sheep, dwell: where thou hast plentifully provided for them. Ch.—Those whom thou hast chosen shall enjoy this manna, or the blessed Sacrament. W.

12 The Lord shall give the word to them that preach good tidings with great power.

13 The king of powers is of the beloved, of the beloved; and the beauty of the house shall divide spoils.

14 If you sleep among the midst of lots; you shall be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and the hinder parts of her back with the paleness of gold.

15 When he that is in heaven appointeth kings over her, they shall be whited with snow in Selmon. 16 The mountain of God is a fat mountain.

A curdled mountain, a fat mountain. 17 Why suspect ye curdled mountains?

A mountain in which God is well pleased to dwell: for there the Lord shall dwell unto the end.

18 The chariot of God is attended by ten thousands; thousands of them that rejoice: the Lord is among them in Sinai, in the holy place.

19 Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive; thou hast received gifts in men.

Yea, for those also that do not believe, the dwelling of the Lord God.

VER. 12. To them that preach good tidings. Evangelizantibus. That is, to the preachers of the gospel; who, receiving the word from the Lord, shall with great power and efficacy preach throughout the world the glad tidings of a Saviour, and of eternal salvation through him (Ch.); with miracles following. Mark xvi. W. Luke xxi. 15. C.—Heb. seems to speak of females, who used to sing canticles of victory, like Mary, Deborah, &c. But the feminine is used at the beginning of Ecclesiastes, though Solomon be meant, and here the Chaldee paraphrases, “God gave the words of the law to his people, by the mediation of Moses and Aaron, who published the word of God.” This passage has a striking analogy with Ephes. iv. 11, &c., He gave some apostles . . . for the perfecting of the saints, &c. which S. Paul observes, just after quoting this psalm. Bert.

VER. 13. The king of powers. That is, the mighty King, the Lord of hosts, is of the beloved, of the beloved; that is, is on the side of Christ, his most beloved Son; and his beautiful house, viz. the Church, in which God dwells for ever, shall, by her spiritual conquests, divide the spoils of many nations. The Hebrew (as it now stands pointed) is thus rendered: The kings of armies have fled, they have fled, and she that dwells at home (or, the beauty of the house) shall divide the spoils. Ch.—Yet Sym. comes nearer to the Sept., and S. Jer. has in the same sense, (Bert.) “the kings of armies shall form leagues,” &c. The great King, is the Lord (ver. 12) of hosts, who shall enable many to publish his wonders.

VER. 14. If you sleep among the midst of lots, (inter medios cleros, &c.) viz. in such dangers and persecutions, as if your enemies were casting lots for your goods and persons: or in the midst of the lots, (inter medios terminos, as S. Jerom renders it,) that is, upon the very bounds or borders of the dominions of your enemies: you shall be secure, nevertheless, under the Divine protection; and shall be enabled to fly away, like a dove, with glittering wings, and feathers shining like the palest and most precious gold; that is, with great increase of virtue, and glowing with the fervour of charity (Ch.); or “if . . . in the borders of the dove,” &c., the ensign of Babylon. Jer. xxv. 38.—When, &c. T.—The tribe of Juda may be denoted by the dove, as it seems to be in the Canticles, because it continued faithful longer than the ten tribes (Bert.); or these words may be addressed to the tribes of Ruben and Gad, which neglected to come to the aid of Deborah, and thus melted away like snow, as Jacob had threatened the former, (Gen. xlix.) H.—The former stain has been effaced by their subsequent good conduct. C.

VER. 15. Kings over her. That is, pastors and rulers over his Church, viz. the apostles and their successors. Then by their ministry shall men be made whiter than the snow, which lies on the top of the high mountain Selmon, (Ch.) which is in the tribe of Ephraim, shaded with trees. Judg. ix. 48. W.—Discern it, may also mean, “judge it,” (H.) or “divideth,” as S. Jerom translates; and may intimate that when God shall have exterminated the kings, who attacked his chosen race, it should appear more glorious. H.

VER. 16. The mountain of God. The Church, which (Isa. ii. 2) is called The mountain of the house of the Lord upon the top of mountains. It is here called a fat, and a curdled mountain; that is to say, most fruitful, and enriched by the spiritual gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost. Ch.—Fat. Heb. “as the hill of Bashan,” (Prot.) which was very fertile; the very name signifying “fat.” S. Jer. H.

VER. 17. Why suspect ye curdled mountains? Why do you suppose or imagine there may be any other such curdled mountains? You are mistaken: the mountain thus favoured by God is but one; and this same he has chosen for his dwelling for ever. Ch.—The Church of God is compared to a mountain, visible to all; fat, with the graces of the Holy Ghost; united and firm, like cheese; the perpetual residence of God, who will never suffer her to fall into error. W.—There are several other interpretations. But that of the Vulg. suspicamini, is the most followed even by the Jews. Bert.

VER. 18. The chariot of God, descending to give his law on Mount Sinai; as also of Jesus Christ, his Son, ascending into heaven, to send from thence the Holy Ghost, to publish his new law, is attended with ten thousands, that is, with an in-

20 Blessed be the Lord day by day: the God of our salvation will make our journey prosperous to us.

21 Our God is the God of salvation: and of the Lord, of the Lord are the issues from death.

22 But God shall break the heads of his enemies: the hairy crown of them that walk on in their sins.

23 The Lord said: I will turn them from Basan, I will turn them into the depth of the sea.

24 That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thy enemies: the tongue of thy dogs be red with the same.

25 They have seen thy goings, O God, the goings of my God: of my king who is in his sanctuary.

26 Princes went before joined with singers, in the midst of young damsels playing on timbrels.

27 In the churches bless ye God the Lord, from the fountains of Israel.

28 There is Benjamin a youth, in ecstasy of mind.

The princes of Juda are their leaders: the princes of Zabulon, the princes of Nephtali.

29 Command thy strength, O God: confirm, O God, what thou hast wrought in us.

numerable multitude of joyful angels. Ch.—Lit. “with forty thousand.” Bert.—Innumerable hosts of cherubim, (H.) seem to be the chariot of the Most High. Dan. vii. W.—But here the Israelites, who came to conquer Chanaan, are meant. Deut. xxxiii. 2; Zac. xiv. 5; Hab. iii. 6. C.

VER. 19. Led captivity captive. Carrying away with thee to heaven those who before had been the captives of Satan; and receiving from God the Father gifts to be distributed to men; even to those who were before unbelievers. Ch.—Yea, even these were the spoils which Christ presented to his Father. H.—S. Paul quotes this text rather in a different manner, ascending on high, he led captivity captive; he gave gifts to men; as the Heb. loheth means, “to give and to receive.” Abenezra, Chal., Syr., &c., give it the former sense, with the apostle, S. Justin, (dial.) S. Hilary, and the ancient psalters of Rome and Chartres. S. Aug. approves of both readings. C.—So Samson said, “Take this woman for a wife for me.” Judg. xiv. 3. The true God is here undoubtedly meant, and as S. Paul explains it of Christ, the Socinians, who admit the authority of the Epistle to the Ephesians, ought to confess his Divinity. Bert.—Those. Prot. “gifts for men, (marg. ‘in the man,’) yea, for the rebellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them.”

VER. 20. To us. So the Israelites might be filled with confidence in the desert, (H.) or the people pray that God would favour the pious design of their king. C.—Heb. “God will carry us,” (S. Jer.) or loadeth us with benefits. Prot. H.

VER. 21. The issues from death. The Lord alone is master of the issues, by which we may escape from death. Ch.—He killeth and giveth life. 1 Kings ii. 6.

VER. 22. Sins. He will humble them, or will slay the proud. Psal. lxxii. 18. C.—Though Christ died to save man, He will condemn the obstinate. W.

VER. 23. I will turn them from Basan, &c. I will cast out my enemies from their rich possessions, signified by Basan, a fruitful country; and I will drive them into the depth of the sea: and make such a slaughter of them, that the feet of my servants may be dyed in their blood, &c. Ch.

VER. 24. Same. Streams of blood shall flow, as was the case when Moses overcame Og, &c. Num. xxi. 23. C.—The gospel was propagated without bloodshed, but no less effectually. At the last day the just shall triumph over the reprobate. Bert.

VER. 25. Thy goings. Thy ways, thy proceedings, by which thou didst formerly take possession of the promised land in favour of thy people; and shalt afterwards of the whole world, which thou shalt subdue to thy Son. Ch.—Eusebius and S. Hilary suppose that Christ appeared and spoke to the patriarchs and prophets of the Old Testament. C.

VER. 26. Princes. The apostles, the first converters of nations; attended by numbers of perfect souls, singing the Divine praises, and virgins consecrated to God. Ch.—S. Paul exhorts the faithful to sing hymns. Ephes. v. 19. Bert.

VER. 27. From the fountains of Israel. From whom both Christ and his apostles sprung. By Benjamin, the holy Fathers on this place understand S. Paul, who was of that tribe, named here a youth, because he was the last called to the apostleship. By the princes of Juda, Zabulon, and Nephtali, we may understand the other apostles, who were of the tribe of Juda; or of the tribes of Zabulon and Nephtali, where our Lord began to preach. Matt. iv. 13, &c. Ch.—The Jews were first invited. Acts i. W.

VER. 28. Mind. Through excessive joy. Heb. also, “containing (or ruling) them.” S. Jer. H.—But this seems improper. Hence Prot. have, “with their ruler,” though with is not in the original. Bert.—Radom (Keri rode) “presided.” Saul, indeed, had been the first king of Israel; but the throne afterwards continued in the tribe of Juda: and at the time of the conquest of Chanaan, as well as at the translation of the ark, Benjamin could not be considered as the chief. H.—We may therefore better follow the Sept. and Deschamps, who ans sorore corripitur. Bert.

VER. 29. Command thy strength. Give orders that thy strength may be 30 From thy temple in Jerusalem, kings shall offer presents to thee.

31 Rebuke the wild beasts of the reeds, the congregation of bulls, with the kine of the people; who seek to exclude them who are tried with silver.

Scatter thou the nations that delight in wars: 32 ambassadors shall come out of Egypt: Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands to God.

33 Sing to God, ye kingdoms of the earth: sing ye to the Lord:

Sing ye to God, 34 who mounteth above the heaven of heavens, to the east.

Behold he will give to his voice the voice of power, 35 give ye glory to God, for Israel, his magnificence, and his power is in the clouds.

36 God is wonderful in his saints: the God of Israel is he who will give power and strength to his people. Blessed be God.

PSALM LXVIII.

SALVUM ME FAC DEUS.

Christ, in his Passion, declareth the greatness of his sufferings, and the malice of his persecutors, the Jews; and he foretelleth their reprobation.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed; for David.

2 SAVE me, O God: for the waters are come in even unto my soul.

3 I stick fast in the mire of the deep: and there is no sure standing.

I am come into the depth of the sea: and a tempest hath overwhelmed me.

* John ii. 17.

always with us. Ch.—Display thy power from thy holy temple. H.—Send the Messias, grant perseverance to the just, and defend thy Church against all attacks. C.

VER. 30. From. Syn. For. Kings shall reverence the temple, which David foresaw would be shortly erected; or, "with greater magnificence than in the temple of Jerusalem, kings shall offer gifts to thee," (Deschamps,) which clearly refers to the Messias. Bert. "As soon as thy temple shall be," &c. Under Solomon many kings became tributary, and at the preaching of the gospel emperors submitted to Christ. C.

VER. 31. Rebuke the wild beasts of the reeds: or the wild beasts, which lie hid in the reeds. That is, the devils, who hide themselves in order to surprise their prey. Or by wild beasts, are here understood persecutors, who, for all their attempts against the Church, are but as weak reeds, which cannot prevail against them who are supported by the strength of the Almighty. The same are also called the congregation of bulls, (from their rage against the Church,) who assembled together all their kine, that is, the people, their subjects, to exclude, if they can, from Christ and his inheritance, his constant confessors, who are like silver tried by fire. Ch.—Symmachus nearly agrees with this version: "Rebuke the wild beasts." Yet most render the Heb. in the singular, to denote the chief of the enemies, (H.) particularly the devil, who dwells with the vain and luxurious, (Bellar,) being Behemoth, in Job xl. 16, (M.) and the old serpent, (H.) as he probably lay concealed among the shrubs of Paradise, when he tempted our first parents. Bert.—To exclude. Heb. "trampling upon," (Bert.,) or "boasting of their pieces of silver," (Mont.,) which is so common among them. 3 Kings x. 27. H.—The Egyptians even adorned their sandals with it. Clem. Ped. ii. 11.—The soldiers of Antiochus had mostly gold nails in their shoes. Val. Max. ix. 2. C.—Tried. Prot. "till every one submit himself with pieces of silver." H.

VER. 32. Ambassadors shall come, &c. It is a prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles, and by name of the Egyptians and Ethiopians, (Ch.,) who were among the first converts. Isa. xix. 9; Soph. iii. 10; Acts viii. 27.—Ambassadors. Heb. assmonium, occurs no where else. But it denotes some people in authority, and seems to have the same import as "the Asmonean."—Ethiopia comprises the country on both sides of the Red Sea, as well as that below Egypt, and on the Araxes. This prediction was accomplished when Solomon married the daughter of Pharaoh, and was visited by the queen of Saba.

VER. 33, 34. Sing ye to God, is rejected by S. Jerom; but defended by S. Hil., &c. It seems proper to connect the former sentence after Selah, (Bert.,) or may be added instead, to express applause. H.—East. From Mount Olivet, which is on the east side of Jerusalem. Ch.—God fills all places: ver. 5; Deut. xxxiii. 26. C.—Religion has gone westward, but will return to the east. Apoc. xvi. T.—Power. That is, he will make his voice to be a powerful voice: by calling from death to life such as were dead in mortal sin: as at the last day he will, by the power of his voice, call all the dead from their graves. Ch.

VER. 35. For Israel. Altering the stops, we might translate "over Israel appears his magnificence" (Bert.); agreeably to Heb., S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 36. Saints, or sanctuary. Heb. lit. "thou art terrible, O God, from 6 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my offences are not hidden from thee:

7 Let not them be ashamed for me, who look for thee, O Lord, the Lord of hosts.

Let them not be confounded on my account, who seek thee, O God of Israel.

8 Because for thy sake I have borne reproach; shame hath covered my face.

thy holy places." Mont.—Yet Pagnin retains "in his holy," &c. The tabernacle, or temple, (ver. 30,) and the ark, were esteemed the bulwarks of Israel. There God was pleased to grant his people's requests more easily, to encourage public worship. H.

PSAL. LXVIII. VER. 1. Changed. A psalm for Christian converts, to remember the passion of Christ (Ch.); whose sentiments this and the 21st Psalm express in the most energetic language. Bert.

VER. 2. Save me from affliction. Luke xxii. 42. Christ could not be lost. M.—Waters of afflictions and sorrows. My soul is sorrowful even unto death. Matt. xxvi. Ch. See John iii. 6.

VER. 4. Hoarse. This might be literally true, as Christ had suffered the greatest torments, and recited this and the 21st Psalm on the cross; looking up towards heaven, so that his eyes were weakened, as well as by shedding many tears.—Hope. Thus the blasphemy of heretics, who pretend that he gave way to despair, is refuted. Bert.—Christ was not presently delivered from tribulation: neither ought his followers to expect better treatment. W.

VER. 5. Cause. The captives had not injured Babylon, and Christ had even bestowed the greatest favours upon his enemies. He suffered for our sins. Isa. liii. 4. C.—Away. Christ in his passion made restitution of what he had not taken away, by suffering the punishment due to our sins, and so repairing the injury we had done to God. Ch.

VER. 6. My foolishness and my offences; which my enemies impute to me, or the follies and sins of men, which I have taken upon myself. Ch.—My cross is foolishness to the Gentiles. 1 Cor. i. 23. S. Aug.

VER. 7. For me. If I rise not again, my disciples will take me for a mere man. If the captivity continue much longer, many will despair, ver. 11. C.

VER. 8. Reproach. Because I would not adore idols. Christ undertook to expiate our offences, and to satisfy the justice of his Father. Rom. xv. 3. C.

VER. 9. Mother. This might be true with respect to some apostate Jews. But it was more fully accomplished in Christ, who was betrayed by Judas, &c. C.—His own received him not. John i. Bert.

VER. 10. Upon me. The disciples remembered that this had been written concerning Christ, who drove out the profaners of his temple, (John ii. 17,) and will not be less severe on those who dishonour the Church by their scandalous lives, or by propagating erroneous opinions. C.

VER. 11. Covered. Retiring from society. Bert.—Sept., Rom., and Houbig. "I humbled." Heb. "I bewailed my soul in fasting," (Aquila,) as if death were inevitable; and this practice was derided, as the fasts of the Church (11.) and mortification (W.) are still by unbelievers. H.

VER. 13. Song. Both judges and common people (W.) derided me over their cups of ssacor, (H.) or strong drink, and palm wine. Lam. iii. 14. C.—Thus the soldiers made Christ their jest, while they drank on the long night of his passion. Bert.

VER. 14. Pleasure. Which is seasonable, and appointed for pardon. Paul. xxxi. 6, and ci. 14. C.

In the multitude of thy mercy, hear me in the truth of thy salvation.

15 Draw me out of the mire, that I may not stick fast: deliver me from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

16 Let not the tempest of water drown me, nor the deep swallow me up: and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

17 Hear me, O Lord, for thy mercy is kind: look upon me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

18 And turn not away thy face from thy servant: for I am in trouble, hear me speedily.

19 Attend to my soul, and deliver it: save me because of my enemies.

20 Thou knowest my reproach, and my confusion, and my shame.

21 In thy sight are all they that afflict me: my heart hath expected reproach and misery.

And I looked for one that would grieve together with me, but there was none: and for one that would comfort me, and I found none.

22 *And they gave me gall for my food, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

23 ^bLet their table become as a snare before them, and a recompence, and a stumbling-block.

24 Let their eyes be darkened that they see not; and their back bend thou down always.

25 Pour out thy indignation upon them: and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

26 ^cLet their habitation be made desolate: and let there be none to dwell in their tabernacles.

27 Because they have persecuted him whom thou hast smitten; and they have added to the grief of my wounds.

* Matt. xxvii. 48.—^b Rom. xi. 9.

VER. 15. Waters. Beneath which the Hebrews supposed hell was placed. Job xxvi. 5. S. Hil. v. 39.—He prays to be delivered from misery, (ver. 2,) and for a glorious resurrection. C.

VER. 19. Enemies. That they may insult no longer over me, (C.) being converted or covered with shame, (M.) that they do no more hurt. W.

VER. 21. Misery. For which I ardently longed, as the Fathers explain it.—None. I expected that my brethren would at least condole with me: but I was deceived. Christ drank the bitter chalice to the dregs, and found no consolation even from his Father. C.

VER. 22. Food. Tert. reads “drink;” which agrees better with gall. Yet it might be mixed with food, (C.) with wine and myrrh, which were given to our Saviour, when he arrived at Calvary, as vinegar was offered to him on the cross. Matt. xxvii. 34; John xix. 28.

VER. 23. Let their table, &c. What here follows in the style of an imprecation is a prophecy of the wretched state to which the Jews should be reduced, in punishment of their wilful obstinacy (Ch.); or it may be a sentence pronounced on them by Jesus Christ. They are driven from their own country, and the sacred books (C.) being misunderstood, (M.) prove their ruin. Our Saviour and S. Paul confirm this prediction.—“Let their sacrifices become a scandal to them” (Chal.); or rather, May their table, the symbol of friendship, be a snare for them, that they may be destroyed, or betrayed by their dearest friends. C.

VER. 24. Always. The Babylonians were ordered by Cyrus to look upon the Persians as their masters. Xenoph. 7.—Nothing could more strikingly point out the present condition of the Jews than this passage. They are every where kept under, and see not the sense of the Scriptures, (C.) and the truth of Christ’s doctrine; but are bent on worldly gain. W. 2 Cor. iii. M.

VER. 25. Thy wrathful. Lit. “the fury of thy anger.” H.—The first term denotes expedition; the second, perseverance. Quickly destroy them, without redress. Theod. C.

VER. 26. Desolate. Babylon gave place to Susa, and “was reduced to a solitude by the vicinity of Seleucia.” Pliny, vi. 26; Isa. xlvii.—But the fall of Jerusalem was more sudden and memorable, within forty years after the death of Christ. Psal. lvi. 7. C.

VER. 27. Wounds. The enemy persecuted Christ even after his death, opening his side, spreading false reports, and guarding his tomb. C.

VER. 28. Iniquity. The first term may denote the crime; and the second 28 Add thou iniquity upon their iniquity: and let them not come into thy justice.

29 Let them be blotted out of the book of the living; and with the just let them not be written.

30 But I am poor and sorrowful: thy salvation, O God, hath set me up.

31 I will praise the name of God with a canticle and I will magnify him with praise.

32 And it shall please God better than a young calf, that bringeth forth horns and hoofs.

33 Let the poor see and rejoice: seek ye God, and your soul shall live.

34 For the Lord hath heard the poor: and hath not despised his prisoners.

35 Let the heavens and the earth praise him; the sea, and every thing that creepeth therein.

36 For God will save Sion, and the cities of Juda shall be built up.

And they shall dwell there, and acquire it by inheritance.

37 And the seed of his servants shall possess it. and they that shall love his name, shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXIX.

DEUS IN ADJUTORIUM.

A prayer in persecution.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David, to bring to remembrance that the Lord saved him.

2 O GOD, come to my assistance; O Lord, make haste to help me.

3 Let them be confounded and ashamed that seek my soul:

4 Let them be turned backward, and blush for shame that desire evils to me:

Let them be presently turned away, blushing for shame, that say to me: ‘Tis well, ‘tis well.

c Acts i. 20.

the punishment. C.—Peccatum pœna peccati est. S. Aug.—God permits people to fall (W.); but he does not force them. H.

VER. 29. Living. Let them die. Grot.—If we understand the book of the predestinate to life eternal, and not merely to present and mutable justice, (T.) God never blots any out. But though they fall, he brings them to repentance. S. Aug. E. Bellarm.—The reprobation of the obstinate Babylonians (C.) and Jews is predicted. H.

VER. 30. Up. The cross is now triumphant, (H.) an object of veneration. Bert.—Christ submitted to die upon it, and rose again. W.

VER. 33. See, my deliverance, or thy just vengeance on the wicked. C.

VER. 34. Prisoners. Martyrs, (M.) and those who suffer for the faith, will be rewarded. W.

VER. 35. Therein, the fish. Our admiration of creatures causes us to praise God. S. Aug. S. Hil.

VER. 36. Sion. The Catholic Church.—The cities of Juda, &c., her places of worship, which shall be established throughout the world. And there, viz. in this Church of Christ, shall his servants dwell, &c. Ch. W.—It matters not, whether a person live in the Church of God which is at Corinth, or at Philippi, provided he be a member of the Catholic Church. But those who adhere to separate congregations, and style themselves “the Church of England,” or “the Kirk of Scotland,” &c., cannot be written with the just, (ver. 29,) nor have any part in this prediction. H.—It alludes to the restoration of the captives, (C.) or rather, to the propagation of the gospel, (H.) of which the former was a figure, (Euseb., S. Aug.,) as the Jews were never quietly settled again in their country, and were expelled by Titus; whereas the Church of Christ remains to the end of the world Bert.

PSAL. LXIX. VER. 1. Remembrance. This is all that occurs in Heb., or in many Greek copies, though the following words were perhaps extant in the copy of the Sept., or were added to complete the sentence. Several of the verses are found in Psal. xxxiv. and xxxix., and seem to have been used as a form of prayer in any danger. Bert.—The following psalm is a sequel to this. C.

VER. 4. ‘Tis well, ‘tis well. Euge, euge. S. Jerom renders it, vah, vah! which is the voice of one insulting and deriding. Some understand it as a detestation of deceitful flatterers. Ch.—In the New Testament, Well done, denotes applause. S. Jer. in Ezech. vi.—These predictions relate to the murderers of the Messiah. Bert.

5 Let all that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee; and let such as love thy salvation, say always: The Lord be magnified.

6 But I am needy and poor; O God, help me.

Thou art my helper and my deliverer: O Lord, make no delay.

PSALM LXX.

IN TE DOMINE.

A prayer for perseverance.

1 A psalm for David. Of the sons of Jonadab, and the former captives.

IN thee, O Lord, I have hoped, let me never be put to confusion: 2 deliver me in thy justice, and rescue me.

Incline thy ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou unto me a God, a protector, and a place of strength: that thou mayst make me safe.

For thou art my firmament and my refuge.

4 Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the sinner, and out of the hand of the transgressor of the law, and of the unjust.

5 For thou art my patience, O Lord: my hope, O Lord, from my youth.

6 By thee have I been confirmed from the womb: from my mother's womb thou art my protector.

Of thee shall I continually sing: 7 I am become unto many as a wonder, but thou art a strong helper.

8 Let my mouth be filled with praise, that I may sing thy glory; thy greatness all the day long.

9 Cast me not off in the time of old age: when my strength shall fail, do not thou forsake me.

10 For my enemies have spoken against me; and they that watched my soul have consulted together,

11 Saying: God hath forsaken him: pursue and take him, for there is none to deliver him.

12 O God, be not thou far from me: O my God, make haste to help me.

PSAL. LXX. VER. 1. Of the sons of Jonadab. The Rechabites, of whom see Jeremias xxxv. By this addition of the seventy-two interpreters, we gather, that this psalm was usually sung in the synagogues, in the person of the Rechabites, and of those who were first carried away into captivity. Ch.—This first captivity happened under Joakim, A. M. 3398, the second, under Jehonias, 3405, and the last, when the city was destroyed and Sedecias was taken, 3416. Usher.—The Rechabites entered Jerusalem a little before the first of these events, and set the people an example of obedience in submitting to Nabuchodonosor, as Jeremias directed. Bellar. M.—Hoped. These three verses are almost exactly the same. Psal. xxx. Bias “being asked what was sweet to men, answered, hope.” Laert. 1.—Vain is the salvation of man. But hope confoundeth not. Psal. lix. 13; Rom. v. 5. C.

VER. 2. Justice. Or mercy. Psal. xxx. 1. I have not injured Absalom, &c. C.—God avengeth the injuries done to his servants. W.

VER. 3. Refuge. The parallel passage seems more complete (C.) in Hebrew, some letters of which may have been altered since the time of the Sept. yet the sense is nearly the same. Bert.—“Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort. Thou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art my rock and my fortress.” Prot. H.

VER. 4. Unjust. Achitophel and Absalom. C.

VER. 7. Wonder. My exaltation, (C.) and present misery, (W. M.) fill all with astonishment. H. Isa. viii. 18, and xi. 10.—God often made his prophets bear about the signs of his vengeance on others. Isa. xix. 20. C.—Christ was a sign, which shall be contradicted. Luke ii. 34. H.—He was looked upon as a prodigy. Euseb. S. Aug.—Helper. He gives all the glory to God. C.—None can persevere without his grace. W.

VER. 10. Watched. My guards, (Ferrand,) or rather my enemies. C.

VER. 11. Him. Thus the world commonly judges of those in distress.

VER. 13. Detract. Heb. “are satans,” or “adversaries, during my trial.” The Fathers say these are predictions. Psal. xxxiv. 4. C.—David certainly wished to spare the chief of the rebels, and he most probably speaks of his spiritual enemies. Bert.

VER. 15. Learning. As much as to say, I build not upon human learning, but only upon the power and justice of God. Ch. W.—I have not leisure to write a canticle at present, as the word known intimates. Psal. xiii. 3, and lxxiii. 9.

13 Let them be confounded, and come to nothing, that detract my soul; let them be covered with confusion and shame that seek my hurt.

14 But I will always hope; and will add to all thy praise.

15 My mouth shall show forth thy justice; thy salvation all the day long.

Because I have not known learning, 16 I will enter into the powers of the Lord: O Lord, I will be mindful of thy justice alone.

17 Thou hast taught me, O God, from my youth: and till now I will declare thy wonderful works.

18 And unto old age and grey hairs: O God, forsake me not,

Until I show forth thy arm to all the generation that is to come:

Thy power, 19 and thy justice, O God, even to the highest great things thou hast done: O God, who is like to thee?

20 How great troubles hast thou shown me, many and grievous: and turning, thou hast brought me to life, and hast brought me back again from the depths of the earth.

21 Thou hast multiplied thy magnificence; and, turning to me, thou hast comforted me.

22 For I will also confess to thee thy truth with the instruments of psaltery: O God, I will sing to thee with the harp, thou holy one of Israel.

23 My lips shall greatly rejoice, when I shall sing to thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 Yea, and my tongue shall meditate on thy justice all the day; when they shall be confounded, and put to shame, that seek evils to me.

PSALM LXXI.

DEUS JUDICIUM TUUM.

A prophecy of the coming of Christ, and of his kingdom: prefigured by Solomon and his happy reign.

1 A psalm on Solomon.

But I will do it hereafter, and record the praises which I now proclaim. Some would translate, “I know not the number” of thy mercies. Bert.—This sense is adopted by the Chal., Theod., &c. See Psal. xxxix. 6. Yet it seems more probable, that David acknowledges his inability to speak of God as he deserves, though he promises to do his best to show the utmost respect. So Solomon confessed his ignorance, (Prov. xxx. 2,) and Socrates asserted that all his knowledge consisted in the conviction of his complete ignorance. If this be true with respect to human science, how much more so is it when we speak of God, (H.) and attempt to dive into the Holy Scriptures! Genes.—David meditated on the law continually. Psal. i. 2. C.—Yet he admits that he stands in need of a guide, (H.) and must enter into the sanctuary, to penetrate such high mysteries. Psal. lxxii. 17. S. Aug. and Eusebius understand that the letter of the Mosaic law is incapable of insuring salvation. C.—Sept. Vat. reads, πραγματίας, “mercantile affairs.” But the Vulg. follows the edit. of Aldus, &c., γαμματίας. Bert.—A similar variation occurs, 1 Esd. viii. The former reading is adduced by the Fathers, and by Gelasius, (dist. 88,) who hence condemns clergymen engaging in merchandise, (Amania,) as it was contrary to their calling: and, formerly at least, very dangerous for any honest man. H.

VER. 17. Till now. Here the stop should be placed. Bert. C.—The verb may also be explained in the past time, “till now I have declared.” Bert.

VER. 20. Me. Heb. “us.” Yet Prot., &c., retain the singular, as the context requires. Bert.—Earth. To which I seem to be consigned, (H.) being in the greatest distress. It may be understood of Christ's return from hell, and from the grave. Psal. lxxviii. 17. C.

VER. 21. Thy. Heb. and Syr. “my.” Thou hast raised me to the highest honours. S. Aug., &c. read, “thy justice.” C.

PSAL. LXXI. VER. 1. Psalm. Some copies add, “of David.” But the Heb. has only Loosolme, “to Solomon” (S. Jer. H.); or, composed by Solomon. The former sense is more generally adopted, (Bert.,) though the Chal. and Eusebius look upon the latter as most plausible. David, however, seems to have written this last most beautiful piece, when he placed his son upon the throne (3 Kings i. 47); and being transported with a Divine enthusiasm, he described the reign of the Messiah, (C.) to whom alone many of the passages can be applied (S. Aug. W.) as the Jews, Chal., Kimchi, &c., confess, though they will not allow Jesus to be the Christ, ver. 5, 17. C.

GIVE to the king thy judgment, O God: and to the king's son thy justice:

To judge thy people with justice, and thy poor with judgment.

3 Let the mountains receive peace for the people, and the hills justice.

4 He shall judge the poor of the people, and he shall save the children of the poor; and he shall humble the oppressor.

5 And he shall continue with the sun, and before the moon, throughout all generations.

6 He shall come down like rain upon the fleece; and as showers falling gently upon the earth.

7 In his days shall justice spring up, and abundance of peace, till the moon be taken away.

8 And he shall rule from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

9 Before him the Ethiopians shall fall down; and his enemies shall lick the ground.

10 The kings of Tharsis and the islands shall offer presents: the kings of the Arabians and of Saba shall bring gifts;

11 And all kings of the earth shall adore him: all the nations shall serve him.

12 For he shall deliver the poor from the mighty: and the needy that had no helper.

13 He shall spare the poor and needy: and he shall save the souls of the poor.

14 He shall redeem their souls from usuries and iniquity: and their name shall be honourable in his sight.

15 And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Arabia, for him they shall always adore: they shall bless him all the day.

16 And there shall be a firmament on the earth on the tops of mountains, above Libanus shall the fruit thereof be exalted: and they of the city shall flourish like the grass of the earth.

17 Let his name be blessed for evermore: his name continueth before the sun.

And in him shall all the tribes of the earth be blessed: all nations shall magnify him.

18 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who alone doth wonderful things.

19 And blessed be the name of his majesty for ever, and the whole earth shall be filled with his majesty. So be it. So be it.

20 The praises of David, the son of Jesse, are ended.

VER. 2. Son. Solomon, (Bert.,) or Cyrus, (Pr. disc.,) or the Messias. Most blessed Trinity, enable the Son of man, or of David, to judge the world. W. Isa. x. 3; John v. 22.—Judgment. Equity is the duty of governors, as obedience is that of subjects. Solomon acted with the greatest sagacity. 1 Par. xxii. 10, and xxix. 23, and 2 Par. i. 10. The psalmist inculcates the obligation of defending the rights of the poor, who are under God's protection. To him even judges and monarchs must give an account. Deut. i. 17; 2 Par. xix. 6.

VER. 3. Justice. These blessings shall be so common (Psal. xxxv. 6, and Joel iii. 18); or, let princes pursue the paths of justice and peace. Mic. vi. 1. Solomon was to enjoy a perpetual peace, (1 Par. xxii. 9,) as he was a figure of Jesus Christ, who has procured a more solid one for us. Eph. ii. 14; John xiv. 27; Isa. lli. 7. C.—Heb. has "by righteousness," as this is the source of true peace. Rom. xiv. 17. These virtues are publicly enforced in the Church, as from a mountain. Isa. ii. 2. Bert.—Christ, the rock, (H.) and his ministers, the hills, preach reconciliation. W.

VER. 4. Oppressor. Lit. "calumniator." Christ has chained down the devil, the accuser of our brethren. Apoc. xii. 10, and xx. 2. H.—He hath taken away his spoils, (John viii. 44,) and undertaken the defence of the humble. Isa. xl. 4. Solomon was also the reverse of those wicked princes, who receive bribes, and neglect the poor. Isa. i. 23. C.

VER. 5. Before. Or, in the presence of the moon, as the Heb. indicates, (Bert.,) though S. Jerom translates, ultra, "beyond, or after." H.—Yea, Christ existed before all the creation, (Psal. cix. 3. C.) and these comparisons do not insinuate that he will ever cease to be. Theod.—The kingdom of David and Solomon is described in the same poetic language, (Psal. lxxxviii. 28, and 37. C.) as it will remain for ever in the hands of the Messias. H.

VER. 6. Fleece. Or, "new cut grass," as the original term also signifies. Yet the explanation given by the Vulg. seems preferable, (Bert.,) as an allusion is made to what happened to Gideon, (Judg. vi. 37. Houbig.,) prefiguring the miraculous conception of our Saviour.

VER. 7. Justice. Heb. "the just," who appear most under a good king, being animated by his example. H.—Away. Chal. "till those who adore the moon be exterminated." This idolatry pervaded almost all the East. Solomon's reign was very peaceable. 3 Kings iv. 25. But this was only a feeble representation of the peace which Christ should bring. At his birth the whole world was at peace. Angels proclaimed it to all the earth. Luke ii. 14; Isa. ii. 4. C.

VER. 8. To sea. Solomon ruled from the Mediterranean, Red, and Indian Seas, to the Persian Gulf, and the Euphrates, having all Arabia tributary to him, (H.) and the countries as far as Syria; so that he enjoyed all that had been promised by God. Gen. xv. 18; Num. xxxiv. 3, and 2 Par. ix. 26, and 3 Kings iv. 24.—The earth, denotes this kingdom. S. Jer. in Isa. xlii. 4. But if we explain it of Christ, his Church has no limits. In spite of the corruption of the world, she still asserts her title of Catholic. C.—She is universal, both as to time and place, and always visible, ver. 15. W.

VER. 9. Ethiopians. So S. Jerom, Aquila, &c., translate Tsiim, (H.) which denotes any nations living at a distance from commerce, (Bert.,) or islanders, and those who are accustomed to sail. Isa. xlii. 21. People on the continent, as well as those in islands, and ships, shall submit to Solomon, (3 Kings x. 11,) as all shall yield to Christ, (C.) at least at the day of judgment.—Ground. Prostrating to adore him. Isa. xlix. 23. Bert.

VER. 10. Tharsis. Bordering on "the sea," (Bert.,) or in Cilicia, though we find not that Solomon ever claimed any authority there, or that the Mediterranean was under his control. He sent his fleet indeed to Tharsis (3 Kings x.

22); but Arabia and Saba brought presents, or tribute, to him. Under the name of islands, the Hebrews comprise all places to which they had to go by water, as Asia Minor, &c. Isa. lxvi. 19 C.—Saba. Heb. Saba. The preceding Arabia is ssoba, (H.) and refers to some of those who peopled that country.—Gifts, or tribute. 1 Par. xviii. C.—If the former term, presents, (Heb. monē, "a sacrifice of flour," &c. H.) be taken in the strict sense, the text cannot be applicable to any but the true God, the Messias. Bert.

VER. 11. Earth, is omitted in Heb., Rom. Sept., &c., so that this cannot regard Solomon, (Bert.,) though he was revered by all the neighbouring kings. 3 Kings x. 23. Christ alone is the universal King, (Apoc. xix. 16, and Phil. ii. 10. C.) to whom every knee shall bend, at least when all shall appear in judgment. Many kings shall submit before. Bert.

VER. 14. Usuries. Heb. thuc, (H.) means "fraud and usury." Eternal torment is the usury which God exacts for murder, &c., (S. Aug.,) or a transient pleasure. H.—From this Christ has redeemed us, (Bert.,) as well as from iniquity. S. Aug.—Original sin is the capital, for which the devil claims usury. Bell.—Name. Heb. "blood." Sept. properly wrote αἷμα, which has been changed for ὄνομα. The sense is not very different, as those who respect a person's name are careful to defend him from death. Bert.—Heb. "their blood is precious." Psal. cxv. 15, and 1 Kings xxvi. 21. Solomon repressed all injustice so that usury was banished, and the poor were so much enriched, as not to be forced to borrow. C.—Yet, after his fall, he laid heavy burdens on his people. 11.

VER. 15. Arabia. Heb. ssoba, ver. 10. H.—This was accomplished by the wise men. Euseb.—For him (de ipso). They shall adopt the form of prayer which he has taught, (S. Aug.,) or they shall adore him on his own account. Bert.—Through him we have access in one spirit to the Father. Eph. ii. 18, Rom. v. 1. People might pay a civil respect also to Solomon.—He shall live. The prolongation of the ruler's life is sometimes (H.) a blessing. Prov. xxviii. 2. The poor shall live, and pay the taxes cheerfully, praying for his prince, &c. C.

VER. 16. A firmament on the earth, &c. This may be understood of the Church of Christ, ever firm and visible: and of the flourishing condition of its congregation. Ch.—The strength or staff of bread shall not fail. Psal. civ. 16; Isa. lli. 1. C.—Prot. "there shall be a handful of corn in the," &c. H.—The country was indeed very luxuriant and populous in the reign of Solomon. But the Fathers explain this of the Church, founded on Christ, the rock, and enriched with all virtues, (C.) and the most efficacious sacraments, particularly with the holy Eucharist, to which S. Jerom may allude: "there shall be memorable wheat," &c. H.

VER. 17. Continueth. Prot. marg. "shall be as a son, to continue his father's name for ever." The Messias is the eternal Son of God. Heb. inim, or inim, (Keri,) might be rendered (H.) flabitur, (Mont.,) if this word were Latin. The ancient Jews considered this as one of the titles of the Messias. Chal. "before the sun was, his name was prepared." Bert.—This is the third time that the glory of Christ is pronounced eternal, ver. 5, and 7. H.—Blessed. This was spoken only of the Messias, (Bert.,) who is the cause of salvation to all the elect. None are saved who do not continue in Him, (M.) by faith and good works.

VER. 18. The God. Heb. repeats this word, (H.) as the Sept. of S. Jerom did. Ep. ad Sun. C.—Alone. Miracles can be wrought only by God's power. W.

VER. 19. So be it. Heb. "And amen." See Psal. xl. H.—This glory of God was David's most ardent wish. W.

VER. 20. Are ended. By this it appears that this psalm, though placed here, was in order of time the last of those which David composed, (Ch.) as he died soon after. M.—The subject which he has here treated, (H.) concentrated all his

PSALM LXXII.

QUAM BONUS ISRAEL DEUS.

The temptation of the weak, upon seeing the prosperity of the wicked, is overcome by the consideration of the justice of God, who will quickly render to every one according to his works.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

HOW good is God to Israel, to them that are of a right heart!

2 But my feet were almost moved; my steps had well nigh slipped.

3 Because I had zeal on occasion of the wicked, seeing the prosperity of sinners.

4 For there is no regard to their death, nor is there strength in their stripes.

5 They are not in the labour of men: neither shall they be scourged like other men.

6 Therefore pride hath held them fast: they are covered with their iniquity and their wickedness.

7 Their iniquity hath come forth, as it were, from fatness: they have passed into the affection of the heart.

8 They have thought and spoken wickedness: they have spoken iniquity on high.

9 They have set their mouth against heaven: and their tongue hath passed through the earth.

10 Therefore will my people return here: and full days shall be found in them.

11 And they said: How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?

12 Behold these are sinners; and yet abounding in the world they have obtained riches.

thoughts and desires. Euseb.—“The prayers of David, son of Jesse, have been summed up.” Theodot. and V. Edit. H.—It is probable that the collections of the psalms were made at different times (Bert.); and though many were found after this second book was completed, it was not judged expedient to make any alteration.—The following psalms have the name of Asaph, &c., in the titles. Flamin.—Yet it is certain that David composed some at least, which are placed after this. See Psal. cix., &c. H.

PSAL. LXXII. VER. 1. Asaph. See Psal. xlix. We shall not undertake to decide whether he composed, or only sung this psalm (Bert.); or whether he lived under David or Josaphat, or rather during the captivity. Those who attribute all the psalms to David, get rid of many such inquiries: but they are involved in other difficulties, (C.) which are not insurmountable. H.—How. Heb. “Surely,” as if an answer was given to what had long troubled the author. Bert.

VER. 2. Slipped. I had almost yielded to the temptation (M.) of denying Providence, (H.) and following the broad road. W.

VER. 3. Zeal. I was grieved, (M.) or even inclined to imitate the wicked (see Matt. iii. 14; Psal. xxxvi.; Jer. xlii., and xxi. 7): though the whole book is intended to clear up this difficulty respecting the treatment of the good and bad in this life.

VER. 4. Regard. They are not restrained by the thoughts of death, (H.) which they banish (W.) as much as possible. Prot. “There are no bands (‘of pain,’ Munst.) in,” &c. H.—Stripes. They quickly remove their light afflictions. W.—“And their halls are strong.” S. Jer.—“Their strength is firm” (Prot.); “fat.” Marg. H.

VER. 5. Other men, who follow a more virtuous course (W.) than themselves. Their prosperity (H.) encourages their pride, and they indulge in every excess. W.

VER. 7. Fatness. Abundance, and temporal prosperity, which have encouraged them in their iniquity; and made them give themselves up to their irregular affections. Ch.—The sense is better than the modern Heb. affords. Bert.—“Their eyes stand out with fatness.” Prot. H.—Into. Heb. “the thoughts of the heart,” or their utmost expectations (H.); or “they have executed the devices of their heart;” which comes to the same. Bert.—They have done what mischief they could. W.

VER. 8. High. With impudence (M.); boldly despising others, (W.) from their exalted station. Bert.—They even dare to contend with the Almighty. H.

VER. 10. Return here; or hither. The weak among the servants of God will be apt often to return to this thought, and will be shocked when they consider the full days, that is, the long and prosperous life of the wicked; and will be tempted to make the reflections against Providence which are set down in the following verses. Ch.—Prot. “his people return hither, and waters of a full cup are wrung out for them.” S. Jerom saw nothing of waters. “And who among them shall be found full?” He also reads my people (H.) better.

13 And I said: Then have I in vain justified my heart, and washed my hands among the innocent.

14 And I have been scourged all the day; and my chastisement hath been in the mornings.

15 If I said: I will speak thus; behold I should condemn the generation of thy children.

16 I studied that I might know this thing, it is a labour in my sight:

17 Until I go into the sanctuary of God, and understand concerning their last ends.

18 But indeed for deceits thou hast put it to them: when they were lifted up, thou hast cast them down.

19 How are they brought to desolation? they have suddenly ceased to be: they have perished by reason of their iniquity.

20 As the dream of them that awake, O Lord; so in the city thou shalt bring their image to nothing.

21 For my heart hath been inflamed, and my reins have been changed: 22 and I am brought to nothing, and I knew not.

23 I am become as a beast before thee: and I am always with thee.

24 Thou hast held me by my right hand; and by thy will thou hast conducted me, and with thy glory thou hast received me.

25 For what have I in heaven? and besides thee what do I desire upon earth?

26 For thee my flesh and my heart have fainted away: thou art the God of my heart, and the God that is my portion for ever.

VER. 11. They. The weak, (W. Bert.), under this perplexity, or the wicked, said. C.

VER. 13. And I said, is added by the Sept. to connect the sentence. Bert.—Heb. “truly in vain.”—Innocent. Keeping company with them, and avoiding evil. Psal. xxv. 6.

VER. 15. If I said, &c. That is, If I should indulge such thoughts as these. Ch.—I should. Heb. “the generation of thy children will say, that I have prevaricated.” Pagn.—Or, “I should offend against thee,” &c. Prot. H.—I should not be in unison with Abraham. S. Aug.—I seem to declare them reprobates, and thy providence unjust. C. It was not thus that they thought and acted, when they were under trials (H.); for God chastiseth every son whom he receiveth. W.—The psalmist begins thus to enter into himself, and to correct his mistake. Bert.

VER. 17. Sanctuary. The Church, which teaches all truth; or heaven, (M.) or the Holy Scriptures, (Lyrano,) or rather the counsels of God, which were disclosed to him, (ver. 24,) when he was sensible that the question was not to be answered satisfactorily by human reason. C.—The last judgment will explain all. H.—In this life we cannot know the particular causes why the just are afflicted. W.

VER. 18. Thou hast put it to them. In punishment of their deceits, or for deceiving them, thou hast brought evils upon them in their last end, which in their prosperity they never apprehended. Ch.—Sept., &c., add, “thou hast placed evils.” S. Amb. reads “goods.” C.—Dolos seems to form part of both sentences, “for deceits thou hast put deceits.” Bert.—With the perverse, thou wilt be perverted. Psal. xvii. 27. Prot. “surely thou didst set them in slippery places, thou caldest them down into destruction” (H.); or, “when they were lifted up.” Do the rich think that their prosperity may be an effect of God’s indignation? C.

VER. 20. City. In heaven. C.—Heb. also, “when thou shalt awake,” (Chal., Houbig., Bert.) and come to judge, after waiting a long time. C.—Image. The splendour of worldlings is a mere phantom. Death will show its vanity. H.

VER. 21. Changed. S. Jer. “are like a fire smoking.” I was indignant, (ver. 3. H.) and almost consumed with afflictions, and heavy laden. But I depend on my protector. W.

VER. 23. With thee. I endeavoured to fathom these things by my weak reason; but thou wast graciously pleased to bear with me, (Euseb.) as I was always convinced, indeed, that thy conduct could not be unjust. I am willing to be led like a beast. C.

VER. 24. By thy will. Heb. and Sept. “into thy council.” Thou hast hindered me from yielding to my doubts, and hast revealed thy truths to me. C.—And. Heb. “afterwards.”—Glory. Syr. and Houbig. supply thy glory. Bert.

VER. 25. Earth. I no longer envy the prosperity of the wicked, (C.) seeing that it is all a dream, and a snare. Ver. 18, 20. H.—Nothing can now give me content, but thyself. C.

VER. 26. Away. I am ready to die for love and gratitude. H.

27 For behold they that go far from thee shall perish : thou hast destroyed all them that are disloyal to thee.

28 But it is good for me to adhere to my God, to put my hope in the Lord God :

That I may declare all thy praises, in the gates of the laughter of Sion.

PSALM LXXIII.

UT QUID DEUS.

A prayer of the Church under grievous persecutions.

1 Understanding for Asaph.

O GOD, why hast thou cast us off unto the end ? why is thy wrath enkindled against the sheep of thy pasture ?

2 Remember thy congregation, which thou hast possessed from the beginning.

The sceptre of thy inheritance, which thou hast redeemed : Mount Sion, in which thou hast dwelt.

3 Lift up thy hands against their pride unto the end ; see what things the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.

4 And they that hate thee have made their boasts, in the midst of thy solemnity.

They have set up their ensigns for signs : 5 and they knew not both in the going out, and on the highest top.

As with axes in a wood of trees, 6 they have cut down at once the gates thereof : with axe and hatchet they have brought it down.

7 They have set fire to thy sanctuary : they have defiled the dwelling-place of thy name on the earth.

• 4 Kings xxv. 9.

VER. 28. Praises. Lit. "tidings." Predicationes. H.—The ancient psalters read laudes, praises.—In the gates, &c., was not in the most correct Sept., &c., being taken from Psal. ix. 15. C.

PSAL. LXXIII. VER. 1. Understanding. Psal. xxxi. H.—We behold here the destruction of the tabernacle by the Philistines, (Grot.,) or rather of the temple, by Nabuzardan (4 Kings xxv. 8; Jer. lii. 12). C.—This psalm may be used by the just, under affliction; and why He knew it, was on account of sin; but wishes to move God to mercy, and to put an end to the distress of his people. Bert.

VER. 2. Mount. S. Aug. reads montem, (C.) as the Heb. may also signify. "This Mount Sion, thou hast dwelt in it." Mont. H.—What injury has it done? C.

VER. 3. Hands. Heb. "feet," (Mont. H.) or "strokes," pamie. Bert.—"The elevation of thy feet (thy foot-stool, or temple. C.) is destroyed unto the end" (S. Jer.); or "for victory," as Sym. renders notse. The Chaldees have boasted of their victory over thee, and violated thy most holy places. H.—This is what fills me with grief. Bert.—But thou wilt punish them. The captives saw the overthrow of their empire. C.

VER. 4. Made. Heb. "have roared," sending forth shouts of war, where thy praises alone ought to be heard. C.—Ensigns. They have fixed their colours for signs and trophies, both on the gates, and on the highest top of the temple; and they knew not, that is, they regarded not the sanctity of the place. M.—For signs. Lit. "yea, their signs," signa sua signa. II.

VER. 5. Going out. Sept. "coming in." Both designate the same gates, (II.) or the ends of roads and streets. Matt. xxii. M.—Top. The doors of the temple were lofty. The idolatrous ensigns were fixed there, as on an eminence, to give notice of invasion, (Isa. xi. 12,) while the soldiers plundered all, before they set fire to the city and temple. 4 Kings xxv. 9. C.—Prot. "a man was famous according as he lifted up axes upon the thick trees." The text is very obscure, inasmuch that S. Jerom's version is unintelligible. Bert.—Yet it may signify, "they have placed their ensigns for a trophy, manifest upon the entrance aloft; their hatchets in a wood of trees; and now its sculptures together they have defaced with axe and hatchets, dolutoris." C.

VER. 7. Name. That temple, which was the only one consecrated to thee. H.

VER. 8. Together. And the infidel nations in that army. Psal. cxxxvii. 7. C.—Days. So the enemies of religion are always affected. The servants of God ought to be more zealous to preserve the remains of ancient piety. Prot. translates, synagogues, (H. Aquila, Syn.) C.—Houbig. has, "let all the congregations of God cease." Heb. lit. "they have burnt," (Bert.,) or ended. C.

VER. 9. Our. Some copies of the Sept. read "their," as if the enemy still spoke. But the people of God rather complain that they are not so favoured with prodigies, as they had been formerly, and that the prophets did not publicly encourage them, (Bert.,) or declare how long these miseries would continue; as the Heb. may intimate. C.—Prot. "neither is there among us any that knoweth how long." H.—Yet, neglecting the points, our version is accurate, and any one, a God, may be understood. (Bert.,) as taking no cognizance of his people. H.

8 They said in their heart, the whole kindred of them together : Let us abolish all the festival days of God from the land.

9 Our signs we have not seen, there is now no prophet : and he will know us no more.

10 How long, O God, shall the enemy reproach ? is the adversary to provoke thy name for ever ?

11 Why dost thou turn away thy hand : and thy right hand out of the midst of thy bosom for ever ?

12 But God is our King before ages : he hath wrought salvation in the midst of the earth.

13 Thou, by thy strength, didst make the sea firm : thou didst crush the heads of the dragons in the waters.

14 Thou hast broken the heads of the dragon : thou hast given him to be meat for the people of the Ethiopians.

15 Thou hast broken up the fountains and the torrents : thou hast dried up the Ethan rivers.

16 Thine is the day, and thine is the night : thou hast made the morning light and the sun.

17 Thou hast made all the borders of the earth : the summer and the spring were formed by thee.

18 Remember this, the enemy hath reproached the Lord : and a foolish people hath provoked thy name.

19 Deliver not up to beasts the souls that confess to thee : and forget not to the end the souls of thy poor.

20 Have regard to thy covenant : for they that are the obscure of the earth, have been filled with dwellings of iniquity.

• Luke i. 68.

VER. 11. Ever. Why dost thou delay to heap favours on us, and destruction on thy adversaries ? We are most grieved at the injury done to thy name. C.

VER. 12. Ages. He is eternal, and hath long ago made choice of us. M.—Earth. Publicly rescuing his people from Egypt, (Kimchi,) and showing his power over all the earth. C.—The Fathers understand this of Jesus Christ, who died on Calvary, (C.) near Jerusalem, (H.) which some assert is the middle of the earth, though others more properly attribute this situation to the promised land, which was nearly in the centre of the world, (Amama,) then known to the Jews, as there were 60 degrees to the Ganges, and as many westward to the extremity of Spain. Kimchi places it in the midst of the seven climates, (in Psal. xvi. 3,) and many others have explained this literally, as if Jerusalem was really the central point of the world, (S. Jer. in Ezec. v. 5, and xxxviii. 12, S. Hil., &c.,) in which sense Josephus styles it the navel. C.—As the world is nearly round, any place may be said to be in the middle.

VER. 13. The sea firm. By making the waters of the Red Sea stand like firm walls, whilst Israel passed through; and destroying the Egyptians, called here dragons, from their cruelty, in the same waters, with their king; casting up their bodies on the shore, to be stript by the Ethiopians, inhabiting in those days the coast of Arabia. Ch.—Isaias (xxvii. 1) styles Pharaoh a dragon. See Job xl. 20. C. Ezec. xxix. 3.—Leviathan denotes a whale, or crocodile, and was an emblem of the devil, and of all tyrants, particularly of antichrist. Bert.

VER. 14. Ethiopians. Or to enrich the Arabs. M.—Heb. Tsim, is understood of sailors, and "fishermen," &c. Psal. lxxi. 9. Many explain these people to mean wild beasts, which devoured the carcasses. Euseb. Muis.

VER. 15. Ethan rivers. That is, rivers which run with strong streams. This was verified in Jordan, Josue iii., and in Arnon, Num. xxi. 14. Ch.—Though the latter point is not so clear, God might divide the torrents, or rivers, at the station Ethan, as the Sept. here read. Bert.—Habacuc (iii. 9) speaks of rivers. But in poetry the plural is often used for the singular, and the passage of the Jordan may be meant. C.—God had frequently supplied water from the rock, and gave a passage on dry land through that river. M. W.—Aithon means "rapid," as the Jordan does also. H.

VER. 16. Morning. Aurora. Heb. "the light," which existed before the sun. Bert.—Yet most understand the moon, (C.) or, in general, "the luminaries." S. Jer. H.

VER. 17. Spring. Heb. "and winter," under which two the Jews comprised all the seasons (Gen. viii. 22). C.—Yet erp is used for youth, "the spring" of life. Job xxix. 4. Bert.

VER. 18. This. "Congregation." Theod.—Sept. adds, "thy creature." Heb. is feminine. But it is used instead of our neuter. C.—Consider th's insolent language; the enemy, &c., ver. 22. H.

VER. 19. To thee. S. Jer. "the soul intrusted in thy law." H.—Heb. has now thuroc, which is rendered, "thy turtle dove."

VER. 20. The obscure of the earth. Mean and ignoble wretches have been filled, that is, enriched, with houses of iniquity, that is, with our estates and possessions, which they have unjustly acquired. Ch.—Or the captives may thus 21 Let not the humble be turned away with confusion : the poor and needy shall praise thy name.

22 Arise, O God, judge thy own cause : remember thy reproaches with which the foolish man hath reproached thee all the day.

23 Forget not the voices of thy enemies : the pride of them that hate thee ascendeth continually.

PSALM LXXIV.

CONFITEBIMUR TIBI.

There is a just judgment to come : therefore let the wicked take care.

1 Unto the end, corrupt not, a psalm of a canticle for Asaph.

2 WE will praise thee, O God : we will praise, and we will call upon thy name.

We will relate thy wondrous works : 3 when I shall take a time, I will judge justices.

4 The earth is melted, and all that dwell therein : I have established the pillars thereof.

5 I said to the wicked : Do not act wickedly : and to sinners : Lift not up the horn.

6 Lift not up your horn on high : speak not iniquity against God.

7 For neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the desert hills : 8 for God is the judge.

One he putteth down, and another he lifteth up : 9 for in the hand of the Lord there is a cup of strong wine full of mixture.

complain, that they are forced to live among infidels, in constant danger of transgressing the law, (C.) while their children are brought up in sin, (Bert.) and ignorance. H.

VER. 21. Humble. Heb. "the contrite," whether of Israel or of any other nation. Isa. lxvi. 2. Bert.—The rich and presumptuous think not of thanking God. M.

VER. 23. Enemies. Sept. and S. Aug. read, "servants," and the ancient prelaters, "suppliants," (C.) which seems to be a mistake of transcribers, (Bert.) as it is contrary to the Heb., Chal., and Syr. C.—The sense of both would be good. Erasmus reads querov, querentium, in his edit. of S. Jerom. H.—They blaspheme all holy things, and are hardened in wickedness. W.—Such are the times in which we live. 1 Tim. vi. 20. Bert.

PSAL. LXXIV. VER. 1. Corrupt not. It is believed to have been the beginning of some ode or hymn, to the tune of which this psalm was to be sung. S. Aug. and other Fathers take it to be an admonition of the Spirit of God not to faint, or fail in our hope; but to persevere with constancy in good : because God will not fail, in his due time, to render to every man according to his works. Ch.—Sym. has, "concerning incorruption," (H.) whence some have explained the psalm of the general resurrection. Euseb.—The Chaldee refers it to David, praying that the angel would cease to destroy, (2 Kings xxiv.) while others suppose that he forbids Abisai to hurt Saul. 1 Kings xxvi. 9. S. Jer.

VER. 2. Praise. The repetition shows the certainty of the event. Christ, and his apostles, who sit as judges, praise the ways of Providence. W.—Heb. is more obscure. C.

VER. 3. When I shall take a time. In proper times : particularly at the last day, when the earth shall melt away at the presence of the great Judge : the same who originally laid the foundations of it, and, as it were, established its pillars. Ch. W.—This is God's answer to the long prayer of Asaph, in the preceding psalm, which is here concluded. C.—A time. Heb. mu'ad, "congregation." Sym.—When I shall have delivered my people. Theod.—Justices. With the utmost rigour I will punish Babylon. C.

VER. 4. Melted. Sym. and Houbig. "is strengthened." H.—After the last fire the earth shall remain, though changed in quality. W. 2 Pet. iii. 10.—God destroys and establishes kingdoms. C.

VER. 5. Wickedly. This is an epitome of Christian doctrine. W.—God had severely punished Nabuchodonosor, Baltassar, and the priests of Bel. Yet the people would not attend to these salutary admonitions.—Horn. By pride, (W.) which is the origin of all evil, (H.) and an offence pardoned by God with the greatest difficulty.

VER. 6. God. Heb. tsuar means, "neck." But the Sept. have not seen the ϵ and translate against God. Lit. "the rock," which is one of his titles (Bert.) ; and this seems preferable to "speak not with a stiff neck" (C.) ; or "with the old neck" (S. Jer.) ; though this sense is not contemptible, as the sinner's wonted pride rises against God. H.

VER. 7. Hills. Heb. erim, may also be considered as the nom. case; "nor from the south are there heights" to which they may flee for succour. H.—Yet most of the ancients agree with us ; though is there "refuge," must then be supplied. Bert.—None would be able to screen the Babylonians. Jer. xxv. 15, 26.—Take the cup of the wine of his fury . . . The king of Seseac (Babylon) shall

And he hath poured it out from this to that : but the dregs thereof are not emptied : all the sinners of the earth shall drink.

10 But I will declare for ever : I will sing to the God of Jacob.

11 And I will break all the horns of sinners : but the horns of the just shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXV.

NOTUS IN JUDEA.

God is known in his Church : and exerts his power in protecting it. It alludes to the slaughter of the Assyrians, in the days of King Ezechias

1 Unto the end, in praises, a psalm for Asaph : a canticle to the Assyrians.

2 IN Judea God is known : his name is great in Israel.

3 And his place is in peace : and his abode in Sion.

4 There hath he broken the powers of bows, the shield, the sword and the battle.

5 Thou enlightenest wonderfully from the everlasting hills : 6 All the foolish of heart were troubled.

They have slept their sleep : and all the men of riches have found nothing in their hands.

7 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, they have all slumbered that mounted on horseback.

8 Thou art terrible, and who shall resist thee? from that time thy wrath.

9 Thou hast caused judgment to be heard from heaven : the earth trembled and was still.

drink after them. H.—The cup is so great that all shall taste, and the last will have the most bitter portion. C.

VER. 9. Drink. The just themselves shall suffer something. But their part will be comparatively the clear wine, while sinners shall have the dregs. C.—Fire, (Psal. x. 7. M.) gall, brimstone, &c., compose the bitter chalice of the damned, who will never arrive at the term of their inexpressible misery. In this life sinners are frequently punished : but their sufferings do not end here.

VER. 10. Declare. Sept. "rejoice;" as S. Aug., &c. read, contrary to the Heb. C.—Jacob. Christ did all for the glory of his Father. Bert.

PSAL. LXXV. VER. 1. Assyrians. Sept. "against the Assyrian," Sennacherib. 4 Kings xix. 35. H.—David composed this after his victory over the Ammonites, and Ezechias used it when he was delivered from the Assyrians. Grot.—The psalm seems to speak of the victories of all the just (M.) ; and instances one memorable example in the defeat of the Assyrians. W.

VER. 2. Judca. Heb. "Juda." H.—This shows that the psalm was composed after the separation of the tribes, (C.) though not invincibly ; as the names of Juda and Israel were used in David's time. H.—The Divine worship was almost confined to the promised land, till the birth of Christ ; whose gospel has diffused light throughout the world. S. Aug., C., &c.—See Jer. ix. 23. Bert.

VER. 3. Peace. Heb. Salem.—Abode. Heb. "tent or hut," an expression which shows how much the finest structure of the East was beneath God's majesty. C.

VER. 4. There. In that favoured country. The army of Sennacherib perished on its road to Pelusium. 4 Kings xx.—Powers. Heb. "sparks," (C.) or "burning arrows." Mont. Psal. vii. 14, and cxix. 4. H.

VER. 5. Hills. Of Juda, which are styled eternal, on account of their stability. Deut. xxxiii. 15. Heb. seems to be incorrect. C.—"Thou art a light magnificently from, (H.) or more than, (Bert.) the mountains of the captivity." S. Jer.—Or, "of prey." Prot. "thou art more terrible . . . than the richest mountains." Theod.—Yet this comparison hardly suits in this place, (C.) and Houbigant prefers the Vulg. and Sept., who may have read trom, "before," or serap, "of the seraph," (alluding to God's seat upon the ark,) instead of trop, "prey." Bert.

VER. 6. Troubled. Heb. "plundered," or "stupified." Bert.—The haughty and blasphemous Sennacherib, Rabsaacs, &c., were full of dismay when the destroying angel slew a hundred and eighty-five thousand (C.) in the dead of the night.—Sleep in death. Job xxvii. 19.—Of riches, with which they are possessed, as with a fever, (Seneca, Ep. 119,) and of which they dream. Isa. xxix. 8. C.—Hands. Heb. "the men of the army have not found their hands." Bert.—They could not use their arms against a spirit. H.

VER. 7. Mounted. Heb. "the chariot and horse." C.—But the riders are meant. Bert.—Rabsaacs had boasted that Ezechias could not find men to mount two thousand horses, if he should give them to him. 4 Kings xviii. 23. C.—But God chastised his vain boasting. H.—While he defends his people, their enemies seem to slumber. W.

VER. 8. And. Heb. "thou, and who shall subsist before thee in the moment of thy wrath?" Houbigant rejects the second thou. Bert.—From. From the time that thy wrath shall break out. Ch.—Ex tunc, often relates to a distant period. We have long known the effects of thy indignation. C. Heb. x. 31.

VER. 9. Heard. Some edit. of the Sept. read, "thou hast darted judgment."

10 When God arose in judgment, to save all the meek of the earth.

11 For the thought of man shall give praise to thee: and the remainders of the thought shall keep holiday to thee.

12 Vow ye, and pay to the Lord your God: all you that are round about him bring presents.

To him that is terrible, 13 even to him who taketh away the spirit of princes: to the terrible with the kings of the earth.

PSALM LXXVI.

VOCE MEA.

The faithful have recourse to God in trouble of mind, with confidence in his mercy and power.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun, a psalm of Asaph.

2 I CRIED to the Lord with my voice; to God with my voice, and he gave ear to me.

3 In the day of my trouble I sought God, with my hands lifted up to him in the night: and I was not deceived.

My soul refused to be comforted: 4 I remembered God, and was delighted, and was exercised, and my spirit swooned away.

5 My eyes prevented the watches: I was troubled, and I spoke not.

6 I thought upon the days of old: and I had in my mind the eternal years.

7 And I meditated in the night with my own heart: and I was exercised, and I swept my spirit.

8 Will God then cast off for ever? or will he never be more favourable again?

S. Aug.—Still. All were filled with astonishment, and Sennacherib was glad to escape in the most private manner. C.

VER. 10. God. After the signs of dissolution the Son of God shall come to judge. Bert.—Meek. Ezechias had given large sums to preserve peace. 4 Kings xviii. 14. C.

VER. 11. To thee. The enemy shall repress his resentment, when he beholds the fall of Sennacherib. T.—The people who had been delivered express their constant sentiments of gratitude. They revolve in mind the wonders of God, (H.) both in time and in eternity, and keep holidays in memory of such benefits. Bert.—Heb. “for the wrath of man shall confess to thee, thou shalt be girded with the remains of wrath.” S. Jer.—The fury of the enemy shall only cause thy power to shine forth in his destruction. H.

VER. 12. God. Victims of thanksgiving, as was customary after a victory. Psal. xxi. 26; xli. 14. He speaks to the people who had been spared, particularly to the priests, though it may be understood also of foreign nations, who complied with this invitation. 2 Par. xxxii. 22. C.—Vows, and their completion, ought not to be separated, even though the thing vowed may have been before a matter of choice, as virginity, &c. S. Aug. Bert.—What says Luther? H.

VER. 13. Away. Heb. “he will cut off” (Mont.) like grapes: which means rather to destroy, than to bereave of counsel. Isa. xix. 13. This might be written after Sennacherib was slain. 4 Kings xix. 37. C.

PSAL. LXXVI. VER. 1. Idithun. Heb. “upon Idithun” was not formerly in the text. S. Jer.—The occasion of the psalm is unknown, and may be applied to all the afflicted servants of God, (Bert.), or to the captives. C.

VER. 2. To God. These repetitions denote fervour, (C.) and that God alone must be the object of our desire. S. Aug.

VER. 3. Deceived, in my expectations, as I prayed with mind and body continually. W.—Good works are a strong recommendation. “They cry, though we be silent.”—Heb. is variously translated, and may have been altered. “My hand fell in the night, and ceased not.” Sym. and S. Jer. come near to the Vulg. C.—They have, “and does not cease,” which would be the case, if the person were deceived or rejected. Bert.—Comforted. By any worldly advantages. M.—Joy can come from God alone. Bert.

VER. 4. Delighted. Heb. “cried out,” which many explain through sorrow. But the Sept. seem rather to take it in a different sense, as well as the swooning, which might proceed from ecstatic joy (Bert.) at the thought of God. The alternate sorrows and joys of the just are well described. They are seldom allowed to continue long in the same state. Prot. “I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed.” Selah. S. Jer. “I spoke within myself,” exercising myself in meditation. H.

VER. 5. My eyes. Sept. Vat., Arab., and S. Aug. read, “my enemies.” But our Vulg. follows the edit. of Ald. and Comp. (Bert.) very frequently, which here agree better with the Heb. “I hindered my eyes from looking up” (S. Jer. Sym.); or, “thou hast kept the watches of my eyes,” (Aquila,) hindering me from sleeping (H.); so that I did not watch only three hours, like the centinels, 9 Or will he cut off his mercy for ever, from generation to generation?

10 Or will God forget to show mercy? or will he in his anger shut up his mercies?

11 And I said, Now have I begun: this is the change of the right hand of the Most High.

12 I remembered the works of the Lord: for I will be mindful of thy wonders from the beginning.

13 And I will meditate on all thy works: and will be employed in thy inventions.

14 Thy way, O God, is in the holy place: who is the great God, like our God? 15 Thou art the God that dost wonders.

Thou hast made thy power known among the nations: 16 with thy arm thou hast redeemed thy people, the children of Jacob, and of Joseph.

17 The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee: and they were afraid, and the depths were troubled.

18 Great was the noise of the waters: the clouds sent out a sound.

For thy arrows pass: 19 the voice of thy thunder in a wheel.

Thy lightnings enlightened the world: the earth shook and trembled.

20 Thy way is in the sea, and thy paths in many waters: and thy footsteps shall not be known.

21 “Thou hast conducted thy people like sheep, by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

• Exod. xiv. 29.

but all night. C.—The sudden address to God seems incorrect. Bert.—I rose before the usual time, yet did not utter my sentiments, (W.) being quite oppressed both with grief and joy. H.—I durst not speak, as I was convinced that thy judgments were right. M.

VER. 6. Of old. And the favours which had been heaped on the nation. C.—Years. Both past and future times (H.); yea, eternity itself, the great occupation of life. S. Aug. Bert.

VER. 7. Heart. Sept. have read differently from the present. Bert.—Heb. “I recollected my cantele in the night, and communed with my own heart, and my spirit sought to the bottom;” or “I swept (or directed, scopebam) my spirit,” (S. Jer.) from all things upbecoming. Sept. Εσκαλλον “I dug and harrowed” it by earnest meditation, to extract the weeds, and make it fit to receive the Divine seed, (S. Jer. hic, and Ep. ad Sun.) and to bring forth fruit (H.); or I swept to discover the precious jewel (Bert.) of salvation. H.

VER. 9. Ever. Heb. adds, “is his word ineffectual?” which the Vat. Sept. neglects, (Bert.), though gomer amor be thus rendered in other editions. “Has he completely fulfilled his word,” which may be the true sense, consummabitur verbum. S. Jer. H.—“Will he execute this threat from generation?” &c. C.—God will never abandon his Church, (W.) though he may chastise his people. H.

VER. 10. Mercies. Turning the waters another way, (Muis. C.) or going against his natural inclination. Vincit illum misericordia sua. S. Jer.

VER. 11. Begun. By God’s grace I now perceive that my thoughts were wrong. W.—I see that we are chastised on account of our sins (Theod.); but now I hope for better things. T. Genes.—Heb. may have this (Bert.) and many other meanings. C.—Prot. “I said this is my infirmity. But I will remember the years of right,” &c.

VER. 12. Beginning. In favour of Israel, or rather of all the just from Abel. H.

VER. 13. Inventions. Prot. “doings,” (H.) or the secrets of Providence, (C.) and his “affections.” S. Aug.—The just find an interest in all his works, (Bert.), as they work together for their salvation. Rom. viii. 28. H.

VER. 16. Arm. Christ, (S. Jer.) or power. Deut. v. 15.—Joseph, who was in Egypt, while the rest of the family dwelt in Chanaan. Bert.

VER. 17. Afraid. S. Jer. “in labour.” H.—Troubled. The dry land appearing, to let the Israelites pass. Bert. Psal. cxiii. 3.—S. Jerom and the Jews understand this of the storm of Sinai. But most people suppose that the catastrophe at the Red Sea is described, when Moses insinuates that a dreadful tempest overwhelmed the Egyptians, as it is here specified. See Joseph. ii. 7. C.

VER. 18. Waters. S. Jer. “the clouds poured out waters,” nim. Sept. may have read emim, “sounds,” and omit clouds, which come again in this verse. Bert.

VER. 19. Wheel. Prot. H.—Heb. “a whirlwind,” (C.) or “wheel,” (Pagn.) in the air. H.

VER. 20. Known. The waters resumed their usual course. Heb. iii. 15. “the wheels of the enemy might be discerned long after. C.

PSALM LXXVII.

ATTENDITE.

God's great benefits to the people of Israel, notwithstanding their ingratitude.

1 Understanding for Asaph.

ATEND, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 I will open my mouth in parables: I will utter propositions from the beginning.

3 How great things have we heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 They have not been hidden from their children, in another generation.

Declaring the praises of the Lord, and his powers, and his wonders which he hath done.

5 And he set up a testimony in Jacob; and made a law in Israel.

How great things he commanded our fathers, that they should make the same known to their children: 6 that another generation might know them.

The children that should be born, and should rise up, and declare them to their children.

7 That they might put their hope in God, and may not forget the word of God: and may seek his commandments.

8 That they may not become like their fathers, a perverse and exasperating generation.

A generation that set not their heart aright: and whose spirit was not faithful to God.

9 The sons of Ephraim, who bend and shoot with the bow: they have turned back in the day of battle.

10 They kept not the covenant of God: and in his law they would not walk.

11 And they forgot his benefits, and his wonders that he had shown them.

12 Wonderful things did he do in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Taneos.

13 *He divided the sea and brought them through: and he made the waters to stand as in a vessel.

^a Exod. xiv. 22.—^b Exod. xvii. 6; Psal. civ. 41.—^c Num. xi. 1.PSAL. LXXVII. VER. 1. Asaph. David composed this, to declare the rights of Juda to the throne, in preference to the tribe of Ephraim, (Lyrans.) which had kept possession of the ark a long time; which was henceforth to be on Mount Zion, H.—Law. Given to Moses, (Bert.), and sanctioned by the Divine authority. H.VER. 2. Propositions. Deep and mysterious sayings. By this it appears that the historical facts of ancient times, commemorated in this psalm, were deep and mysterious; as being figures of great truths appertaining to the time of the New Testament. Ch.VER. 5. Testimony. The tabernacle, (Euseb.), or the law which notifies his will. C. M.—He also thrice required the Israelites to perpetuate the memory of what he had done for them, by instructing their children. Deut. iv. 9, and vi. 7, and xi. 19. Both the written and the unwritten word must be carefully preserved. 2 Thess. ii. 14. Bert.VER. 8. Fathers. Some were virtuous, like Moses, Josue, Samuel, &c., ver. 3, and h. Bert.—But the majority proved faithless. H.—To God. Or did not confide in him, or know that without God's grace no good can be done. S. Aug. Bert.VER. 9. Battle. Many of this tribe were cut off by the men of Geth, (1 Par. vii. 21. Chal. Geier,) as they fought without God's command. Num. xiv. W.—They did not defend the ark against the Philistines, though they seemed more bound to do so than the rest, since it was brought from their city, Silo, and they also set the others a pattern of infidelity (1 Kings iv. Abenezra); whence they are singled out likewise by Osee. Bert.VER. 12. Taneos. Heb. Tsan, (H.) which means "spreading," either because the plagues spread from this capital, or because it was in a plain, (Bert.), or very extensive, (H.) on the eastern branch of the Nile, in the Delta. C.VER. 13. Vessel. Lit. "bottle," like walls on either side.VER. 14. By day. Lit. "of the day." H.—But this is the real import of 14 And he conducted them with a cloud by day: and all the night with a light of fire.

15 *He struck the rock in the wilderness: and gave them to drink, as out of the great deep.

16 He brought forth water out of the rock: and made streams run down as rivers.

17 And they added yet more sin against him: they provoked the Most High to wrath in the place without water.

18 And they tempted God in their hearts, by asking meat for their desires.

19 And they spoke ill of God: they said: Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?

20 Because he struck the rock, and the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed.

Can he also give bread, or provide a table for his people?

21 *Therefore, the Lord heard, and was angry: and a fire was kindled against Jacob, and wrath came up against Israel.

22 *Because they believed not in God: and trusted not in his salvation.

23 And he had commanded the clouds from above, and had opened the doors of heaven.

24 *And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them the bread of heaven.

25 *Man eat the bread of angels: he sent them provisions in abundance.

26 *He removed the south wind from heaven: and by his power brought in the south-west wind.

27 And he rained upon them flesh as dust: and feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea.

28 And they fell in the midst of their camp, round about their pavilions.

29 So they did eat, and were filled exceedingly, and he gave them their desire: 30 they were not defrauded of that which they craved.

*As yet their meat was in their mouth: 31 and the wrath of God came upon them.

the Greek. The same cloud (C.) was both luminous and obscure. When the light side was turned towards Israel, the Egyptians were in darkness. H.

VER. 18. Desires. Lit. "souls," as if they were dying for hunger, though they had plenty of manna. Num. xi. 4. C.VER. 20. Bread. Including all sorts of food. W.—Table. Heb. "flesh." It is true we have water and manna, but we want something more solid and agreeable. C.VER. 21. Angry. This is the sense of the Heb. Distulit means, "he deferred" (H.) to put his threats, (Bert.) or promises, in execution. M.—The destroyer punished those who gave way to murmuring. 1 Cor. x.; Num. xi. 1. C.—Their incredulity was punished (W.) for near forty years, and all the guilty who were twenty years old at the first numbering, were cut off in the desert. H.VER. 23. And. Or "though he had." Bert. has Mandavit. "He commanded," would be better rendered, this order being given before the complaints. God had supplied them abundantly with manna from the clouds, as from his granaries. C.VER. 25. Angels. Heb. also "of the strong ones." Aquila.—Such is the blessed Eucharist, of which manna was only a figure. John vi. The angels prepared this food. C.—How it could be inferior (Bert.) to the bread which Christ would give was a riddle to the Jews, as it must be still to all who do not admit the real presence. If both were figures, surely manna was better than common bread. H.VER. 26. West wind. Lit. Africum, which blows "from Africa," in this direction, with respect to Jerusalem. H.—The same wind may be styled the south wind. Heb. Kadim, "strong, eastern," &c. Bert.—These quails came from the banks of the southern ocean, or from the Red Sea, as the Israelites were still in Arabia, when they were furnished with them the second time (Num. xi. 31) for a whole month, (C.) though they were about three million people. Bert.VER. 31. Israel. S. Jerom applies this to those who receive unworthily particularly if they be priests. 1 Cor. xi. 29. C.

And he slew the fat ones amongst them, and he brought down the chosen men of Israel.

32 In all these things they sinned still: and they believed not for his wondrous works.

33 And their days were consumed in vanity, and their years in haste.

34 When he slew them, then they sought him; and they returned, and came to him early in the morning.

35 And they remembered that God was their helper: and the most high God their Redeemer.

36 And they loved him with their mouth: and with their tongue they lied unto him:

37 But their heart was not right with him: nor were they counted faithful in his covenant.

38 But he is merciful, and will forgive their sins: and will not destroy them.

And many a time did he turn away his anger: and did not kindle all his wrath.

39 And he remembered that they are flesh: a wind that goeth and returneth not.

40 How often did they provoke him in the desert: and move him to wrath in the place without water?

41 And they turned back and tempted God: and grieved the holy one of Israel.

42 They remembered not his hand, in the day that he redeemed them from the hand of them that afflicted them:

43 How he wrought his signs in Egypt: and his wonders in the field of Taneos.

44 *And he turned their rivers into blood, and their showers that they might not drink.

45 ^bHe sent among them divers sorts of flies, which devoured them: *and frogs, which destroyed them.

46 *And he gave up their fruits to the blast, and their labours to the locust.

47 *And he destroyed their vineyards with hail, and their mulberry-trees with hoar-frost.

* Exod. vii. 20.—^b Exod. viii. 24.—^c Exod. viii. 6.—^d Exod. ix. 15.—^e Exod. ix. 25.—^f Exod.

VER. 32. Still. Notwithstanding this instance of God's severity, they fell shortly after into greater sins, and would have stoned Moses, &c., despairing of ever taking possession of the promised land, which highly displeased God, so that he swore that none of the rebels should enter it. Many were also slain in the sedition of Core, (Num. xiii. 17,) and the rest did not live above thirty-eight years. C.—Thus above six hundred thousand perished, (W.) having done nothing worthy of praise. M.

VER. 34. Morning. Those who were spared pretended to repent. H.—Afflictions are the source of much good. But the Israelites are blamed for their inconstancy and deceit. C.

VER. 39. Flesh. The inferior appetite wars against the spirit. Gal. v. 17; Matt. xxvi. 41. H.—Not, in the ordinary course. This does not contradict the faith of the resurrection, which is elsewhere clearly expressed. S. Jer. C.—The Jews here mark the middle of the psalter, and the 1263rd verse, (W.) or the division of the book. H.

VER. 41. Grieved. Heb. "set bounds to," or "marked," holding up to scorn. Heb. vi. 6. "They pushed on," concitaverunt, as God's wrath must be greatly excited by setting limits to his power and goodness. H.

VER. 43. Signs. The turning the rod into a serpent. The rest of the signs were also plagues. W.

VER. 44. Showers. Heb. "floods." H.—Many have asserted that it does not rain in Egypt: but pretty heavy showers fall, even above Cairo, (Vansleb. C.) though seldom. W.

VER. 45. Flies. Cænomyiam. Many copies of the Sept. have kynomyiam, "the dog-fly," which S. Jerom (C.) and S. Aug. properly correct. Bert. Exod. viii. 24.

VER. 46. Blast. Heb. also "the bruchus," (H.) a sort of locust, which does great damage in the East. C.—Esil may signify both. Bert.

VER. 48. Fire. S. Jer. "who gave their pastures to the hail, and their cattle to the birds." Rossipim is also rendered "coals," by Pagnin. It may denote the thunderbolts. H.

VER. 49. Angels. Heb. "messengers of evils," (T.) as the Sept. may also signify the good angels. Amama.—He ordered Moses and Aaron to denounce his judgments, which he executed either by the devils, (Origen. W.) or by the blessed 48 And he gave up their cattle to the hail, and their stock to the fire.

49 And he sent upon them the wrath of his indignation: indignation, and wrath, and trouble, which he sent by evil angels.

50 He made a way for a path to his anger: he spared not their souls from death, and their cattle he shut up in death.

51 *And he killed all the first-born in the land of Egypt: the first-fruits of all their labour in the tabernacles of Cham.

52 And he took away his own people as sheep: and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53 And he brought them out in hope, and they feared not: *and the sea overwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them into the mountain of his sanctuary: the mountain which his right hand had purchased.

^bAnd he cast out the Gentiles before them: and by lot divided to them their land by a line of distribution.

55 And he made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tabernacles.

56 Yet they tempted, and provoked the most high God. and they kept not his testimonies.

57 And they turned away, and kept not the covenant: even like their fathers. they were turned aside as a crooked bow.

58 They provoked him to anger on their hills: and moved him to jealousy with their graven things.

59 God heard, and despised them, and he reduced Israel exceedingly, as it were to nothing.

60 *And he put away the tabernacle of Silo, his tabernacle, where he dwelt among men.

61 And he delivered their strength into captivity: and their beauty into the hands of the enemy.

spirits. S. Anib. Exod. xii. 29; Wisd. xviii. 14.—Hence from the effect, (Bellar.,) they may have the appellation of evil. Theod. C.—The other plagues are thus briefly mentioned. M. W.

VER. 51. Labour. "The first-born," (S. Jer. Gen. xlix. 3; Prov. v. 9,) and their best effects. C.—This was the tenth plague.—Cham was father of Misraim, who peopled Egypt. W.

VER. 53. Not, after they saw the Egyptians destroyed, whom they had feared greatly before. In the desert they enjoyed rest, while their enemies were in the utmost confusion, (Bert.,) having lost their king. H.

VER. 54. Line. Thus were lands measured. Jos. xiii. 8, and xvii. 5. C.—God had made a particular choice of this hilly country for his people, (W.) and for the chief seat of religion. M.

VER. 57. Bow, which hits not the mark. It alludes to the faithless Israelites, (C.) particularly to Ephraim, ver. 9. Osee vii. 6; Jer. ix. 3.—These people hurt themselves by their treachery. W.

VER. 58. Hills. The high places, in which they imitated the Pagans, and which brought on their ruin. Lev. xxvi. 30.—Things. Prot. "images." They have not forgotten to insert this word as usual, to make the ignorant believe that all images are forbidden! H.

VER. 59. Heard. So he did the crimes of Sodom. Gen. xviii. 20. C.—Reduced. Heb. "abhorred exceedingly several in Israel." H.—The people were not exterminated; but greatly reduced in the time of the judges. W.

VER. 60. Silo. Where it had remained about 350 years, (Bert.,) before the ark was removed, never to be replaced there. H.—The tabernacle was afterwards at Nob, and at Gabaon; whence it was probably removed to the treasury of the temple, (C.) and was hidden by Jeremias, 2 Mac. i.; Jos. xviii. 1. Bert.—God gave his oracles more particularly where the ark, (W.) or the tabernacle, was found. H.

VER. 61. Their. Heb. "his." Houb.—The ark was an earnest of God's protection, (H.) and the glory of Israel. 1 Kings iv. 21.

VER. 62. Sword. So that they could not escape.—Despised. Heb. ethābor, is rendered distulit by S. Jerom, (ver. 21, 59. C.) or non distulit, "He did not delay" to punish. as Erasmus reads ¶

62 And he shut up his people under the sword: and he despised his inheritance.

63 Fire consumed their young men: and their maidens were not lamented.

64 Their priests fell by the sword: and their widows did not mourn.

65 And the Lord was awaked as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man that hath been surfeited with wine.

66 And he smote his enemies on the hinder parts: he put them to an everlasting reproach.

67 And he rejected the tabernacle of Joseph: and chose not the tribe of Ephraim:

68 But he chose the tribe of Juda, Mount Sion, which he loved.

69 And he built his sanctuary as of unicorns, in the land which he founded for ever.

70 And he chose his servant, David, and took him from the flocks of sheep: he brought him from following the ewes great with young,

71 To feed Jacob, his servant, and Israel, his inheritance.

72 And he fed them in the innocence of his heart: and conducted them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXVIII.

DEUS VENERUNT GENTES.

The Church in time of persecution prayeth for relief. It seems to belong to the time of the Machabees.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

O GOD, the heathens are come into thy inheritance, they have defiled thy holy temple: they have made Jerusalem as a place to keep fruit.

* Jer. x. 25.

VER. 63. Fire of God's indignation, (M. W.) or of war.—Lamented. S. Jer. "its virgins no one bewailed." H.—Others translate, (Bert.) "did not mourn," though they were now deprived of the hopes of marrying, (C.) or "the virgins were not praised" in the canticles used at the marriage-feast, (Chal., &c.) non epithalamio celebratae sunt, (Mont.) or "married." Pagnin. H.

VER. 64. Priests. Ophni and Phinees, (1 Kings iv. 11. C.) the origin of this calamity, (H.) and the high priest himself broke his neck. W.—Mourn, plorabantur, intimates rather that the people did not mourn for them. But the Heb. has this meaning also, flaverunt, (Mont.) sunt fletae. S. Jer. H.—The widow of Phinees died on hearing the sad news; and Eusebius seems to think that grief killed Ophni's widow likewise. C.

VER. 65. Surfeited. S. Jerom, Chal., &c., agree in this sense. But Heb. may admit another, not quite so harsh, (C.) "like a hero who shouts for (Mont.) or sings after wine" (H.); διαλαλῶν ἐξ οἴνου, "rendered talkative by wine." Sym.—We must reflect that the Oriental languages are bolder in their expressions than ours, and that this is simply a comparison, not more astonishing than that used by our Saviour, when he says that he will come like a thief in the night. Bert.

VER. 67. Ephraim. Who had been preferred before his elder brother, and yet proved the most inclined to idolatry, ver. 9. H.—This tribe was deprived first of the ark, and then of the tabernacle, which were its greatest glory, and this strongly indicated the Divine displeasure. C.

VER. 68. Sion. The ark was removed from Cariathiarim, in the tribe of Juda, to the house of Obbedom, for three months, and afterwards to the palace or tabernacle on Sion, (H.) which God had probably chosen for its fixed abode, towards the beginning of David's reign. C.

VER. 69. As of unicorns. That is, firm and strong, like the horn of the unicorn. This is one of the chief of the propositions of this psalm, foreshowing the firm establishment of the one, true, and everlasting sanctuary of God, in his Church. Ch. M.—It was preserved before Christ, and will remain to the end of time. W.—In the land. Heb. "as the land." Sept. have read b for c, as well (Bert.); and it is observable that Montanus translates the latter, though the former occur in the Heb. text below, edit. 1632: so easily may these letters be confounded! H.—The temple was to have the same stability as the earth, and was but one, like the horn of the unicorn, which is most solid and beautiful. C.—Yet this could not be understood of the material temple, which was the most magnificent structure in the world. It was fulfilled in the Church of Jesus Christ, who is also the true David, ver. 72. H.

VER. 70. Young. Heb. also, "giving milk." David was actually with his father's flocks when he was sent for by Samuel. Saul was also engaged in the pursuits of a country life when he was chosen king: and it would indeed have been difficult to find people of another description among the Israelites, as all followed some business

2 They have given the dead bodies of thy servants to be meat for the fowls of the air: the flesh of thy saints for the beasts of the earth.

3 They have poured out their blood as water, round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them.

4 We are become a reproach to our neighbours; a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 How long, O Lord, wilt thou be angry for ever: shall thy zeal be kindled like a fire?

6 "Pour out thy wrath upon the nations that have not known thee: and upon the kingdoms, that have not called upon thy name.

7 Because they have devoured Jacob; and have laid waste his place.

8 "Remember not our former iniquities: let thy mercies speedily prevent us, for we are become exceedingly poor.

9 Help us, O God, our Saviour: and for the glory of thy name, O Lord, deliver us: and forgive us our sins for thy name's sake:

10 Lest they should say among the Gentiles: Where is their God? And let him be made known among the nations before our eyes,

By the revenging the blood of thy servants, which hath been shed: 11 let the sighing of the prisoners come in before thee.

According to the greatness of thy arm, take possession of the children of them that have been put to death.

12 And render to our neighbours seven-fold in their bosom: the reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord.

b Isa. lxi. 9.

VER. 72. Skilfulness. Lit. "intelligencies." Plural words are used to express the greatness of the thing. David was very upright and intelligent. H.—This enhances the ingratitude of Ephraim, &c., who divided the kingdom. C.—Yet David had fallen into some grievous mistakes, so that this can only belong strictly to Jesus Christ, who is the good Shepherd, without sin. Bert.

PSAL. LXXVIII. VER. 1. Asaph, who might live during the captivity. C.—If the ancient (H.) Asaph, or David, composed this psalm, it must be considered as a prediction of the ruin caused by Nabuchodonosor, or by Epiphanes. Bert. T. 5.—The author of 1 Mac. (vii. 17) accommodates it to the sufferings of those (C.) whom Aleimus destroyed; or rather the prophet had them also in view as well as Christian martyrs. H.—Fruit. A mean village, (M.) as Isaias (i. 8) had threatened. Heb. "a heap of stones," (S. Jer.) in the field. Mic. i. 6. Such was the condition of Jerusalem under Nabuchodonosor (C.) and Epiphanes. 1 Mac. i. Bert.

VER. 2. Saints. The Assideans, who were the most esteemed for piety. 1 Mac. ii. 42. In the worst of times there were always some pious Israelites, and the generality of them were less wicked than their enemies, who exercised a horrid barbarity in refusing them burial, after destroying vast numbers. 2 Par. xxxvi. 17. C.—This was done at least under Epiphanes. 1 Mac. vii. 16. H.

VER. 5. Zeal, or jealousy, as God has the greatest affection for his people, and resents their infidelity as a kind of adultery. C.—Sin is the source of misery. W.

VER. 6. Name. Their ignorance was of course culpable. Bert.—This prayer is prophetic, (S. Aug.) or insinuates that those infidels were still more deserving of punishment. Bert.—By destroying Israel, the number of God's worshippers would be lessened. C.—Yet this consideration would not hinder God from chastising them; and it is not absolutely true that pagans are always more guilty. Those who know the will of their master, and do it not, shall suffer many stripes. Having the true faith, they may, however, (H.) be sooner converted. W.

VER. 7. They have devoured. So Pagnin ventured to translate the Heb. But Montanus substitutes the singular, though it be evidently incorrect, (H.) and contrary to all the ancient versions and the parallel passage, (Jer. x. 25,) as well as to MS. 3, Lambeth 435, &c., (Kennicott,) v being lost at the end of acol. Houbig.—Place. Heb. also, "beauty," the ark or temple. C.

VER. 8. Former iniquities, which we and our fathers have committed. The Hebrews generally pray for the remission of their parents' faults. Lam. v. 7; Bar. iii. 5; Dan. ix. 5. C.—But here the penitents' own transgressions may be meant. Bert.—God is ready to pardon such. W.

VER. 9. Help. The necessity of grace, and the co-operation of free-will, are here plainly asserted. S. Aug.

VER. 10. Their God. Let him rescue his people.—Shed. He speaks not out of revenge (C.); but in order that chastisement may open the eyes of the infidels, that they may be converted. Euseb.

VER. 12. Bosom. Punish them severely (C.) in this world. S. Jer.—Many 13 But we thy people, and the sheep of thy pasture, will give thanks to thee for ever.

We will show forth thy praise unto generation and generation.

PSALM LXXIX:

QUI REGIS ISRAEL.

A prayer for the Church in tribulation, commemorating God's former favours.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, a testimony for Asaph, a psalm.

2 GIVE ear, O thou that rulest Israel. thou that leadest Joseph like a sheep.

Thou that sittest upon the Cherubim, shine forth 3 before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses.

Stir up thy might, and come to save us.

4 Convert us, O God: and show us thy face, and we shall be saved.

5 O Lord, God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy servant?

6 How long wilt thou feed us with the bread of tears: and give us for our drink tears in measure?

7 Thou hast made us to be a contradiction to our neighbours: and our enemies have scoffed at us.

8 O God of hosts, convert us: and show thy face, and we shall be saved.

9 Thou hast brought a vineyard out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the Gentiles and planted it.

10 Thou wast the guide of its journey in its sight: thou plantedst the roots thereof, and it filled the land.

11 The shadow of it covered the hills: and the branches thereof the cedars of God.

12 It stretched forth its branches unto the sea, and its boughs unto the river.

of the surrounding nations were subdued by Nabuchodonosor, five years after he had conquered the Jews. Joseph. x. 10; Jer. xlix. 7, &c.

PSAL. LXXIX, VER. 1. Testimony, or instruction, (C.) and proof of the psalmist's faith. H.—Psalm. Vat. Sept., S. Aug., &c., add, "for (or against) the Assyrian:" whence some have inferred that it relates to the captivity of Israel. But as Benjamin is also mentioned, it seems rather to speak of the captives of Babylon, (C.) or of all Jews and Christians in distress. Bert.—The faithful pray for the coming of the Messias, ver. 2, 4, 16. H.—Fathers. C.

VER. 2. Joseph. He mentions these two as persons dear to God. All the tribes were equally led away captives, and the distinction of kingdoms was not regarded. C.—All Israel is denoted by Joseph, who composed two tribes, having the double portion (W. M.); and ruling in Egypt. Bell.

VER. 4. Saved. This chorus occurs three (W.) or four times. C.—With God's grace, we shall be able to act virtuously. S. Jer.

VER. 6. Measure. Heb. soaliss, "three-fold." S. Jer.—The capacity of this measure is not determined. It might be the seah, or the third part of an epha, which would be very abundant, speaking of tears; though small to contain the earth. Isa. xl. 12. C.

VER. 7. At us. See Psal. lxxviii. 4. H.—Such was the condition of Jeremias, xv. 10. C.—Heb. "have scoffed among themselves." Chal. and S. Jerom agree with us. Scorn is more difficult to bear than poverty.

VER. 10. Sight. Heb. "Thou didst dig before it," (Mont.), making the ground ready. C.—The cloud went before the Israelites. W.—Land of promise. H.

VER. 11. God. The highest cedars were surpassed by the branches, or even by the smallest shoots (arbusta) of this vine. H.—Most powerful nations were forced to submit to David. Theod.

VER. 12. River Euphrates, from the Mediterranean, Red, and Indian Seas. H. Dent. xi. 24.

VER. 13. It. Thou hast withdrawn thy protection. The temple is destroyed, and all plunder with impunity, because thy vineyard has not rendered good fruit. Jer. ii. 11.

VER. 14. Singular. The wild boar, which does not go with other beasts. Nabuchodonosor is here designated, (C.) or Salmanasar, and all persecutors, (Bert.), particularly the devil, who goes about like a roaring lion, and stirs up his agents to disturb the world. W.

VER. 16. And look down upon "the Messias," (Chal.,) the true vine. John xv. 1; Matt. xxi. 33. C.

VER. 17. Things set on fire, &c. So this vineyard of thine, almost consumed already, must perish if thou continue thy rebukes. Ch.—Things, would imply 13 Why hast thou broken down the hedge thereof: so that all they who pass by the way, do pluck it?

14 The boar out of the wood hath laid it waste: and a singular wild beast hath devoured it.

15 Turn again, O God of hosts, look down from heaven, and see, and visit this vineyard:

16 And perfect the same which thy right hand hath planted: and upon the Son of man whom thou hast confirmed for thyself.

17 Things set on fire and dug down, shall perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

18 Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand: and upon the Son of man, whom thou hast confirmed for thyself.

19 And we depart not from thee, thou shalt quicken us: and we will call upon thy name.

20 O Lord God of hosts, convert us: and show thy face, and we shall be saved.

PSALM LXXX.

EXULTATE DEO.

An invitation to a solemn praising of God.

1 Unto the end, for the wine-presses, a psalm for Asaph himself.

2 REJOICE to God our helper: sing aloud to the God of Jacob.

3 Take a psalm and bring hither the timbrel: the pleasant psaltery with the harp.

4 Blow up the trumpet on the new moon, on the noted day of your solemnity.

5 For it is a commandment in Israel, and a judgment to the God of Jacob.

6 *He ordained it for a testimony in Joseph, when he

* Gen. xli. 29.

that incensa is in the neuter plural. But this is not the case in Sept. or Heb. Bert.—S. Jerom has succensam, "Look down upon the vine or root, (17) burnt up and without any branches. Let them perish at," &c., who have thus treated it. H.

VER. 18. The man of thy right hand. Christ, (Ch.) where he sits, (C.) being as man in the highest place of heaven. Matt. xxvi. 64, and xii. 32. H.—Who else could redeem Israel? C.

VER. 19. From thee. This is our fixed determination for the future. H.—Will call. Heb. "Shall be called by thy name." (S. Jer. H.) thy people. Syn. C.—But the Vulg. is equally correct, invocabimus. Mont. Prot. H.

PSAL. LXXX, VER. 1. For the wine-presses, &c., torcularibus. It either signifies a musical instrument, or that this psalm was to be sung at the feast of the tabernacles after the gathering in of the vintage, (Ch.) or on the feast of trumpets, on the 1st of Tisri. Lev. xxiii. 24. Enseb. Pin. C. See Psal. viii.

VER. 4. New moon of Tisri. Lev. xxiii. 24.—Noted. Heb. "in the obscure, in the day of our solemnity." C.—Prot. "in the time appointed, on our solemn feast-day." Cose may denote "obscure or appointed" (S. Jer.); "in the middle of the month" (H.); which alludes to the feast of tabernacles, when the Jews dwelt under the shade of tents, made of branches. This was esteemed "the most holy and greatest" of their festivals. Joseph. viii. 2; Num. xxix. 12; Prov. vii. 20. C.—It may also be explained of the new moon of Tisri, (M.) when the people were admonished of the beginning of the civil year, or of the three great festivals to be then celebrated, perhaps (H.) in memory of the world's creation, at that season. Bert.

VER. 6. Joseph. Who represents all the family of Israel, as he took care of it. C. Psal. lxxix. 2. W.—Not. The Israelites heard the voice of God at Sinai, (S. Jer., &c. C.) and for the last time were forced to hear the insults of the Egyptians at their heels (H.); whose language was barbarous to them, (Psal. cxlii. 1. M.) and not well understood by all, as they had very little society together. Joseph spoke to his brethren by an interpreter. H.—Some explain this of Joseph himself, when he first came into Egypt, (Chal. Bos.) or of the Israelites, at their arrival there. Vat.—But this agrees not with the Vulg. or Heb., (H.) the latter of which is very confused and incorrect, though it be adopted (C.) by S. Jerom: "I heard a tongue which I knew not, I withdrew," &c., (H.) or, making a small alteration, "God hath established this festival in Joseph, when He appeared in the land of Egypt to rescue his people: then, said the Lord, I made him hear a language which he knew not, that I was the protector of my people, I will remove," &c. C.—The authors of the Prin. disc. take this liberty, which would make the sense pretty clear. But the Heb. means, "I heard," &c. C.—

came out of the land of Egypt: he heard a tongue which he knew not.

7 He removed his back from the burdens: his hands had served in baskets.

8 Thou calledst upon me in affliction, and I delivered thee: I heard thee in the secret place of tempest: *I proved thee at the waters of contradiction.

9. Hear, O my people, and I will testify to thee: O Israel, if thou wilt hearken to me, 10 there shall be.^a no new god in thee: neither shalt thou adore a strange god.

11 For I am the Lord, thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

12 But my people heard not my voice: and Israel hearkened not to me.

13 *So let them go according to the desires of their heart: they shall walk in their own inventions.

14 *If my people had heard me: if Israel had walked in my ways:

15 I should soon have humbled their enemies, and laid my hand on them that troubled them.

16 The enemies of the Lord have lied to him: and their time shall be for ever.

17 And he fed them with the fat of wheat, and filled them with the honey out of the rock.

PSALM LXXXI.

DEUS STETIT.

An exhortation to judges and men in power.^a Exod. xvii. 5.—^b Exod. xx. 3.—^c Acts xiv. 15.

If, however, we must explain the Heb. of S. Jerom, we must suppose that, I knew not, means, I condemn'd, as it often does; and God certainly reprobated the harsh language of the Egyptian task-masters, and came to deliver his people from oppression. Exod. ii. 25, and iii. 8, and v. 14. H.

VER. 7. Baskets. Heb. "brazen." Mont.—"His hands shall pass from the pots." Prot.—Dul means also "a basket." H.—The Hebrews were thus forced to carry mortar, (M.) straw, &c. W.

VER. 8. In the secret place of tempest. Heb. of thunder. When thou soughtest to hide thyself from the tempest: or, when I came down to Mount Sinai, hidden from the eyes in a storm of thunder (Ch. Exod. xix. 16); or when I afflicted Egypt, (ib. ix. 23.) and Pharaoh's army. Psal. lxxvi. 19.—Contradiction, at Mara, or rather at Cades, where Moses betrayed some distrust. Exod. xiv. 25, and Num. xx. 12. C.

VER. 9. Testify. Instruct, or call heaven to witness our covenant. C.—Man has free-will, and may choose whether he will obey or not. W.

VER. 10. New god. Who must of course be false. H.—Heb. "strange." Exod. xx. 2; Jer. xxiii. 23. C.

VER. 11. Fill it. I will grant all thy just requests, if thou be faithful. Euseb. C. W.—God uses the title of Jehovah, "the eternal, self-existent Being." Bert.

VER. 13. Inventions. Ancient psalters read, "wills." This is the greatest (C.) of God's judgments. Rom. i. 24. M.—He sometimes permits a person to go on, that he may be disgusted with sin. Ut saturati vitiis vel sic agant paenitentiam. S. Jer.

VER. 15. Soon. Forsitan, "perhaps," (H.) does not here imply a doubt, (M.) but rather the ease and liberty (W.) with which God could have rescued his people (Heb.) "in a moment." C. Bert.

VER. 16. Enemies. The faithless Israelites, (C.) or infidel nations. Bos., &c. —Ever. Impenitent sinners shall suffer for ever. Ch.

VER. 17. And. Or "though." This increases their ingratitude.—Filled. Heb. "I will fill thee;" which reading few admit. S. Jerom agrees with us. Bert.—Prot. (16) "the haters of the Lord should have submitted (marg. led) to him; but their time should have endured for ever. (17) He should have fed them (v. rather signifies 'him.' H.) also with the finest of wheat, and with honey out of the rock should I have satisfied thee." This sudden change seems rather abrupt, though God may have spoken either in the first or third person, from ver. 6.—Rock. He fed them in the desert with manna, and the water seemed most delicious, as they were thirsty; unless he speaks of real honey. M.—The promised land was very fruitful: but all this prefigured the favours which God bestows upon his servants, in the blessed Eucharist. 1 Cor. x. 4. C.—How many, like Judas, partake of them, and prove faithless! S. Aug.

PSAL. LXXXI. VER. 1. Asaph. Josaphat gave the like instructions to his judges. 2 Par. xix. 6. Kimchi. C.—God rejected the Jews in the preceding psalm, and here the reason is assigned. Theodoret.—Congregation, or church of the Jews, who were gathered together like cattle, and sought after temporal advan-

1 A psalm for Asaph.

GOD hath stood in the congregation of gods; and being in the midst of them he judgeth gods.

2 How long will you judge unjustly: and accept the persons of the wicked?

3 Judge for the needy and fatherless: do justice to the humble and the poor.

4 *Rescue the poor; and deliver the needy out of the hand of the sinner.

5 They have not known nor understood; they walk on in darkness: all the foundations of the earth shall be moved.

6 *I have said: You are gods, and all of you the sons of the Most High.

7 But you like men shall die: and shall fall like one of the princes.

8 Arise, O God, judge thou the earth: for thou shalt inherit among all the nations.

PSALM LXXXII.

DEUS QUIS SIMILIS.

A prayer against the enemies of God's Church.

1 A canticle of a psalm for Asaph.

2 O GOD, who shall be like to thee? hold not thy peace, neither be thou still, O God;

3 For lo thy enemies have made a noise: and they that hate thee, have lifted up the head.

4 They have taken a malicious counsel against thy people, and have consulted against thy saints.

tages (S. Aug. in Psal. lxxii. 23) alone. Catec. Trid. Symb.—Of gods. Heb. "of God," who presides in his own council, and gives authority to others. Amama.—Yet Syr. has, "the angels;" Chal. "the just;" Prot. "the mighty;" and Aquila, "the powerful ones." H.—Gods here are put for judges, who act in God's name. Deut. i. 17; Exod. xxii. 28.

VER. 2. Wicked. Contrary to the law. Deut. i. 17; Lev. xix. 15.

VER. 3. Do justice. This is the sense of justify, "justify," as the poor must not be screened from justice, any more than the rich. H.—They are in greater danger of being neglected. Isa. i. 23; Jer. v. 28. H.

VER. 5. Moved. The ignorance, inappreciation, and injustice of those in power overturn the state, which is supported by justice. Prov. xiv. 34.

VER. 6. Gods. The people look upon you as such, and treat you with respect. But entertain not sentiments of pride on that account. C.—If judges, even those whom God condemns, may be styled gods without blasphemy, how much more might Jesus Christ, who was holy and did the works of God! He uses this argument to make the fury of the people abate: but then he continues to prove that He was God in a very different and proper sense, inasmuch that the Jews, clearly perceiving his meaning, which Socinians would now mistake, took up stones to throw at him. John x. 34. H.

VER. 7. Men. Heb. Adam, or "like a man" (Mont H.) of the meanest rank.—Princes, among men, (C.) or like Lucifer, the first of the rebel angels. Euseb. S. Just. Dial.—Most tyrants come to a miserable end. M.—At death judges themselves are brought to the bar, and their case is then more terrible, as the mighty in guilt shall suffer more. Wisd. vi. W.—They are forced to taste of death; while Jesus Christ was master of it. John x. 17, 28. This comparison evinces Christ's Divinity. But Socinians blind themselves by looking at the sun, and attempting to fathom all by the weak light of reason. Bert.

VER. 8. Nations. Those whom thou hast appointed judges, prevaricate. Gen. xviii. 25. C.

PSAL. LXXXII. VER. 1. Asaph. This psalm alludes to the wars of David (2 Kings viii. Bert.) against Ammon, (Bos.) or of the Jews returned from captivity, (2 Esd. iv.; Ezec. xxxviii. Theod.) or of the Machabees (1 Mac. v., and 2 Mac. x. Bell.); or rather of Josaphat. 2 Par. xx. Kimchi. Hammond. C.—All in danger are taught to have recourse to God. Bert.

VER. 2. To thee? Heb. "be not silent to thyself." Pagn.—But domi also implies, "like" (Bell.); and there would otherwise be a sort of tautology. Bert.—Christ, on earth, was like other men; but when he shall come to judgment, none will be comparable to Him. S. Aug.—Amama says this exposition is groundless; but others are of a contrary opinion. H.—The ancient Greek interpreters seem not to have varied from the Sept., though S. Jerom adopts the present Heb. "be not silent. Hold," &c., which may express the utmost fervour and want of protection. Thy own cause is now at stake: the enemy wishes to destroy religion. C.

VER. 3. Noise. Like the boisterous ocean. H.—Head. To revolt. 4 Kings iii. 9, and 2 Par. xx.

5 They have said: Come and let us destroy them, so that they be not a nation: and let the name of Israel be remembered no more.

6 For they have contrived with one consent: they have made covenant together against thee, 7 the tabernacles of the Edomites, and the Ismahelites:

Moab, and the Agarenes, 8 Gebal, and Ammon and Amalec: the Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre.

9 Yea, and the Assyrian also is joined with them: they are come to the aid of the sons of Lot.

10 Do to them ^aas thou didst to Madian ^band to Sisara: as to Jabin at the brook of Cisson.

11 Who perished at Endor: and became as dung for the earth.

12 Make their princes like Oreb, ^dand Zeb, and Zebbee, and Salmana.

All their princes, 13 who have said: Let us possess the sanctuary of God for an inheritance.

14 O my God, make them like a wheel: and as stubble before the wind.

15 As fire which burneth the wood: and as a flame burning mountains.

16 So shalt thou pursue them with thy tempest: and shalt trouble them in thy wrath.

17 Fill their faces with shame; and they shall seek thy name, O Lord.

18 Let them be ashamed and troubled for ever and ever: and let them be confounded and perish.

19 And let them know that the Lord is thy name: thou alone art the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM LXXXIII.

QUAM DILECTA.

The soul aspireth after heaven; rejoicing, in the mean time, in being in the communion of God's Church upon the earth.

^a Judg. vii. 22.—^b Judg. iv. 15.

VER. 4. Saints. Heb. "hidden ones" (Prot. H.); the people under God's protection, (M. Bert.,) or the treasures of the temple. C.

VER. 7. Agarenes, descended from Agar, though they took the name of Saracens, as if they had sprung from Sara, (W.) or they dwelt at Agra, otherwise called Petra, in Arabia; or on the east of Galaad. 1 Par. v. 10. C.

VER. 9. Assyrian, or "Assur," sprung from Dedan, (Gen. xxv. 3.) and dwelt near the Ammonites. C.—Come. Heb. "an arm to," &c. 11.—All infidels conspire against Catholics, (W.) and are willing to forget their private quarrels. 11.

VER. 10. Madian: 120,000 of whom were defeated by Gideon with 300 men, (H. Judg. vii.,) as Sisara was routed by Debora, at Cisson, and slain by Jael. 1b. iv. C.

VER. 11. Endor. Near this place the Madianites fell upon one another.—All their princes of Madian, (C.) or treat all the princes of the people, who now attack us, like them. M.—Both senses are good. Bert.

VER. 15. Mountains. The prayer or prediction was not in vain. The enemies of Josaphat, (2 Par. xx. 11, 24. C.) and of David, &c., were destroyed. H.

VER. 16. Tempest. During the night a tempest probably arose, which threw the enemy into confusion, who, supposing that the Israelites had broken into the camp, fell upon each other in the dark. C.

VER. 19. Lord. He who is. Exod. iii. 14, and vi. 3. W.—The name of the Lord is Himself. Bert.

PSAL. LXXXIII. VER. 1. Core. See Psal. viii., xli., and lxxx. H.—The Corites were musicians, as well as porters in the temple, 1 Par. xxvi. They here represent the faithful upon earth, (S. Aug. W.) who sigh after the heavenly Zion. David was animated with these sentiments, more than with the desire of revisiting Jerusalem, during the revolt of his son. Bert.

VER. 4. Turtle. Moderns prefer to render "swallows," without reason. Bochart.—Thy altars. They can rest in the ruins of the temple (Kimchi. Muis); but in that supposition the altars were destroyed. H.—It seems rather that this is an exclamation, (Bert.,) which the enraptured psalmist is unable to conclude, giving us to understand that he desired his asylum and place of rest to be near God's altars, (H.) with the angels above. Isa. vi. W.

VER. 6. In his heart, he hath disposed to ascend by steps, &c., ascensiones in corde suo disposuit. As by steps men ascended to the temple of God, situated on a hill; so the good Christian ascends towards the eternal temple by certain steps of virtue disposed or ordered within the heart. And this whilst he lives as yet in 1 Unto the end, for the wine-presses, a psalm for the sons of Core.

2 HOW lovely are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! 3 my soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the Lord.

My heart and my flesh have rejoiced in the living God.

4 For the sparrow hath found herself a house, and the turtle a nest for herself, where she may lay her young ones:

Thy altars, O Lord of hosts, my King and my God.

5 Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, O Lord: they shall praise thee for ever and ever.

6 Blessed is the man whose help is from thee: in his heart he hath disposed to ascend by steps, 7 in the vale of tears, in the place which he hath set.

8 For the lawgiver shall give a blessing, they shall go from virtue to virtue: the God of gods shall be seen in Zion.

9 O Lord, God of hosts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob.

10. Behold, O God, our protector: and look on the face of thy Christ.

11 For better is one day in thy courts above thousands.

I have chosen to be an abject in the house of my God, rather than to dwell in the tabernacles of sinners.

12 For God loveth mercy and truth: the Lord will give grace and glory.

13 He will not deprive of good things them that walk in innocence: O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee.

PSALM LXXXIV.

BENEDIXISTI DOMINE.

The coming of Christ, to bring peace and salvation to man.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, a psalm.

the body, in this vale of tears, the place which man hath set: that is, which he hath brought himself to: being cast out of paradise for his sin. Ch.—Heart. "The more you love, the higher will you ascend." S. Aug.—Heb. "the paths are in his heart. Passing in the vale of tears, they shall place (or deem) it a fountain. The teacher shall be clothed with benediction. They shall go from strength to strength: they shall appear before God in Zion." S. Jer. 11.—Three words occasion the difference: ābri, "passing," means also "disposing." Sept. have only used it as a singular, to agree with man. Māin, "a fountain," may have been read māun, "for the place."—Al means "the God," and "to." Bert.

VER. 7. Trsrs. Prot. "Bacca." Marg. "of mulberry-trees," near Jerusalem. Judg. ii. 5; 1 Kings v. 23. H.—It was perhaps used proverbially for any dry place. The Lord had promised to relieve the captives with water. Isa. xxxv. 5, &c. C.—Place. The temple or tabernacle, (H.) which the Lord hath appointed. C.

VER. 8. Blessing. Abundance of water, and other necessities, (2 Cor. ix. 6,) as well as (H.) spiritual graces, which help those who continue in the true Church to arrive at the vision of God. W.—Virtue, or "company," in which manner the Israelites went to the temple. C.—God. And not merely the temple, &c., as here on earth. M.

VER. 10. Christ. Chal. "the Messias," (Bert.,) through whom we address all our petitions. W.—Protect thy people, (S. Jer.,) and raise up the throne of David. C.

VER. 11. Thousands elsewhere, (C.) among sinners. He is so much affected as to leave the sentence imperfect, ver. 4. But the meaning is clear. Temporal must yield to eternal happiness. Eternity is all as one point: it has no division of time, which has a thousand parts. H.—Abject. Prot. "door-keeper." Marg. "on the threshold." H.—This was the office of the Corites, (C.) and they prefer it before the finest occupations among sinners. Heb. "the tents of wickedness." H.

VER. 12. Truth. He is merciful, and always performs what he has promised (M.); whereas sinners are noted for cruelty and deceit. Heb. "the Lord God is a sun and shield." H.—Glory, in the next world, (W.) or even in this. He will restore us to happiness, and cause even our persecutors to esteem us. C. Donator est indulgentiæ, debitor coronæ . . . promittendo. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Innocence. After the remission of sin. W.

PSAL. LXXXIV. VER. 1. Psalm. It resembles the 60th. and seems to LORD, thou hast blessed thy land: thou hast turned away the captivity of Jacob.

3 Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people: thou hast covered all their sins.

4 Thou hast mitigated all thy anger: thou hast turned away from the wrath of thy indignation.

5 Convert us, O God, our Saviour: and turn off thy anger from us.

6 Wilt thou be angry with us for ever: or wilt thou extend thy wrath from generation to generation?

7 Thou wilt turn, O God, and bring us to life: and thy people shall rejoice in thee.

8 Show us, O Lord, thy mercy; and grant us thy salvation.

9 I will hear what the Lord God will speak in me: for he will speak peace unto his people:

And unto his saints: and unto them that are converted to the heart.

10 Surely his salvation is near to them that fear him: that glory may dwell in our land.

11 Mercy and truth have met each other: justice and peace have kissed.

12 Truth is sprung out of the earth: and justice hath looked down from heaven.

13 For the Lord will give goodness: and our earth shall yield her fruit.

14 Justice shall walk before him: and shall set his steps in the way.

PSALM LXXXV.

INCLINA DOMINE.

A prayer for God's grace to assist us to the end.

1 A prayer for David himself.

INCLINE thy ear, O Lord, and hear me: for I am needy and poor.

2 Preserve my soul, for I am holy: save thy servant, O my God, that trusteth in thee.

3 Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I have cried to thee all the day. 4 Give joy to the soul of thy servant; for to thee, O Lord, I have lifted up my soul.

5 "For thou, O Lord, art sweet and mild: and plentiful in mercy to all that call upon thee.

6 Give ear, O Lord, to my prayer: and attend to the voice of my petition.

7 I have called upon thee in the day of my trouble: because thou hast heard me.

8 There is none among the gods like unto thee, O Lord; and there is none according to thy works.

9 All the nations thou hast made shall come and adore before thee, O Lord: and they shall glorify thy name.

10 For thou art great and dost wonderful things: thou art God alone.

11 Conduct me, O Lord, in thy way, and I will walk in thy truth: let my heart rejoice, that it may fear thy name.

12 I will praise thee, O Lord, my God, with my whole heart, and I will glorify thy name for ever:

13 For thy mercy is great towards me: and thou hast delivered my soul out of the lower hell.

14 O God, the wicked are risen up against me, and the assembly of the mighty have sought my soul: and they have not set thee before their eyes.

15 And thou, O Lord, art a God of compassion, and merciful, patient, and of much mercy, and true.

16 O look upon me, and have mercy on me: give thy command to thy servant, and save the son of thy handmaid.

17 Show me a token for good: that they who hate me, have been sung when the first-fruits were brought to the temple. Most people explain it of the captives delivered, (Theod. Du Pin,) and of Christ's redemption. Zusc. S. Aug. C.

* Joel ii. 13.

VER. 2. Blessed. Heb. "taken into favour," or "hast rendered fruitful" Judea. C.—God had bestowed many benefits upon his people, rescuing them from the Egyptian bondage, and not punishing them as much as they deserved. W.—Others explain it of the captivity at Babylon, or under the devil. M.

VER. 5. Convert. Bring back the remnant of thy people, dispersed through the world. Only a few returned under Cyrus: the rest came back by degrees, principally during the reigns of Hystaspes and Alexander the Great. C. Diss.—While we continue unconverted, we are objects of God's wrath. Bert. Lam. v. 21. —Our Saviour. Sept. "of our salvations." S. Jer. "our Jesus." H.—Saviour of mankind, mitigate thy wrath against us. W.

VER. 6. Ever. The Pythagoreans settled their differences before sunset. Plut.—"Cherish not, mortals, an immortal wrath." Arist. Rhet. ii. 21. H.

VER. 7. Turn, conversus. The ancient psalters read convertens. "Converting, O God, thou wilt bring us to life," free us from captivity, and redeem us from sin by Jesus Christ, the conqueror of death. C.

VER. 8. Salvation. By Cyrus, or rather by the Messiah, whose time drew near. C.

VER. 9. Hear. Hitherto the prophet had been distracted by the thought of his people's misery. S. Aug.—In me, is not expressed in Heb.—Heart. Some of the ancients add, "to him." C.—The Sept. seem to have had a copy different from the present Heb. "But let them not turn again to folly" (Prot. H.); though the sense is much the same. They may have read lobom lie, "their heart to God," (Bert.) or lobste, (C.) "the heart, Sela;" instead of locste, "to folly." H.—Those Israelites who had given way to idolatry, were little inclined to return to their own country at the invitation of Cyrus.

VER. 10. Land. After the captivity Judea flourished by degrees. But the glory of the second temple consisted in the presence of the Messiah. Agg. ii. 8. C.

VER. 11. Kissed. Or "embraced," like friends, as the ancient psalters read. The people practised these virtues after the captivity, and more particularly in the Church of Christ. C.

VER. 12. Earth. Good men preserve a clear conscience. W.—Virtues of every description (M.) are become common among God's people, (C.) particularly Christians, though our Saviour may here be styled justice. M.

VER. 13. Fruit. By imitation, (C.) "we may give birth to Jesus Christ," says S. Jerom. God bestows grace, and so men yield fruit. W.

VER. 14. Him. The holy Baptist shall prepare the way of the Lord. Lyr. Muis.—Heb. "each one's justice," &c. Sym.

PSAL. LXXXV. VER. 1. David. He might compose this psalm under any affliction, though prayer is always necessary (Bert.) for any person. W.—Needy Heb. "mild or afflicted." Humility is requisite to pray well, as those who think themselves rich ask not with fervour. C.—God "inclines his ear if thou dost not lift up thy neck." S. Aug.

VER. 2. I am holy. I am by my office and profession dedicated to thy service, (Ch.) as a Levite, (C.) or a member of the true Church. H.—He may also speak in the person of Christ, who prays for us and in us. D.—Syr. and Arab read, "thou art good." C.

VER. 7. Heard me. This gives me confidence that thou wilt do it again. H.—Thou art not like senseless idols. C.

VER. 8. Gods, which have been set up by men; or among angels, &c., (C.) capable of working miracles by an independent power. H.

VER. 9. Name. This was partly verified after the captivity, and fully when the gospel was preached. C.—The Gentiles came by faith, and glorified God by good works. Matt. v. 17. W.

VER. 10. Alone. Sept. Vat., Arab., &c., add, "the great." C. Acts xvii. 24.

VER. 11. Truth. Let me see the justice of thy conduct in suffering the wicked to prosper, (Psal. lxxii. 17,) or let me invariably observe thy holy law, which alone can give me true content.—Rejoice. Heb., as we read at present, "likewise fear," (C.) "unite," (Mout.,) or "let my heart be one," solitary, disengaged from all, unicum, (S. Jer.,) "to fear," &c. C.—This sense is very good. But jed means also rejoice. Bert.—Our joy must be mixed with fear. D.

VER. 13. Hell of the damned, (W.) according to the Fathers; or out of captivity and dangers. Bert.—If it be understood of Christ, it must refer to limbo. Bell. M.—It seems equivalent to the lower pit. Psal. lxxxvii. 7. H.

VER. 15. True. This title is also applied to Christ, who, of course, is God: since every man is liable to mistake. Rom. iii. 4; Apoc. xix. 1. God authorized Moses and the prophets to address Him, as the psalmist does. Exod. xxxiv. 6; Joel ii. 13. Bert.

VER. 16. Command. Heb. "strength," (H.) to resist the enemy. M.—Order me as thou pleasest; I am entirely devoted to thee from my very birth. Psal. cxv. 16. Restores the throne of David. C.

VER. 17. Good. Mark me for thy slave, (C.) which will be the highest honour. H.—Give me such a sign as the angel did when he was going to destroy may see, and be confounded, because thou, O Lord, hast helped me and hast comforted me.

PSALM LXXXVI.

FUNDAMENTA EJUS.

The glory of the Church of Christ.

1 For the sons of Core, a psalm of a canticle.

THE foundations thereof are in the holy mountains:

2 The Lord loveth the gates of Sion above all the tabernacles of Jacob.

3 Glorious things are said of thee, O city of God.

4 I will be mindful of Rahab, and of Babylon knowing me.

Behold the foreigners, and Tyre, and the people of the Ethiopians, these were there.

5 Shall not Sion say: This man and that man is born in her? and the Highest himself hath founded her.

6 The Lord shall tell in his writings of peoples and of princes, of them that have been in her.

7 The dwelling in thee is as it were of all rejoicing.

PSALM LXXXVII.

DOMINE DEUS SALUTIS.

A prayer of one under grievous affliction: it agrees to Christ in his passion, and alludes to his death and burial.

1 A canticle of a psalm for the sons of Core: unto the end, for Maheleth, to answer, understanding of Eman, the Ezrahite.

2 O LORD, the God of my salvation: I have cried in the day, and in the night before thee.

the first-born of Egypt. S. Athan.—By some prodigy convince our oppressors that there is a God. C. Bert.

PSAL. LXXXVI. VER. 1. Mountains. So far the Jews extend the title, supposing that the subject of this canticle was concerning Sion, Moria, &c. Others think that thereof refers to a part of the psalm which has been lost, (C.) or to the temple or city which occupied the prophet's thoughts; or it is sufficiently explained by the word Sion, which follows, as the relative sometimes comes first. D. See Prov. xiv. 3.—Mountains. The apostles and prophets (Eph. ii. 20. Ch.); on which the Church is founded. H.—The city was styled holy, from the temple built on Moria. Several other mountains were included within its walls. C.

VER. 2. Jacob. Jerusalem belonged to some of his children. Hence the psalmist clearly speaks of something better, even of the Church of Christ, (Bert.) which God has chosen for his spouse, having abandoned the synagogue, (Apoc. xxi. 9. C.) which was only intended to be a pedagogue. H.

VER. 4. Rahab. Egypt, &c. To this Sion, which is the Church of God, many shall resort from all nations. Ch.—Christ gave his apostles command to preach to all. Matt. xxviii.; Luke xxiv. 27. W.—Me. I will receive into my Church not only the Jews, but also the most abandoned nations. H.—Foreigners. Philistines. Psal. lxxxii. 8. M.—Ivere. Heb. "this man was born there." H.—In Christ there is no distinction of nations. Rom. x. 12. The Jews will never show us the completion of this prophecy any where but in the Church. C.—It is spoken of as past, to denote the certainty of the event. W.

VER. 5. Shall not Sion say, &c. The meaning is, that Sion, viz. the Church, shall not only be able to commemorate this or that particular person of renown born in her, but also to glory in great multitudes of people and princes of her communion; who have been foretold in the writings of the prophets, and registered in the writings of the apostles. Ch.—We might also translate, "shall it not be said of Sion?" W.—Some may have read dicetur, instead of dicet. "Shall not a man say to Sion, Yes, a man is born in her?" H.

VER. 6. Writings. He alone can number the inhabitants: or He will enrol all nations as citizens of Sion. C.—The New Testament explains the vocation of the Gentiles, and the incarnation of Christ. Bert.—The Scriptures are the books of all mankind, as well as of princes. All are equally interested in their contents, and ought to become acquainted with them. Heb. "the Lord has numbered, writing down peoples: He was born in it for ever." S. Jer.—This refers to Jesus Christ, whose birth is also specified in the preceding verse, (Bert.) as ennobling Sion.

VER. 7. The dwelling, &c. Heb. "the singers, like people dancing, (for 'oy,) all my fountains are in thee." S. Jeron reads, "strong ones," and (H.) others, "my thoughts," instead of "fountains;" which shows that they have read differently.—All the inhabitants shall be filled with joy in the heavenly Jerusalem. Apoc. xvii. 15. C.—This short, but difficult psalm, allegorically describes the mystery of Christ and of the Church. Bert.

PSAL. LXXXVII. VER. 1. Maheleth. A musical instrument, or chorus of musicians, to answer one another. (Ch.) in doleful music. W. See Psal. xli. and li. M.—Heb. may imply, "on infirmity, (Mont.) or sorrow," from ele. Bert.—The subject is very mournful, and relates to the captives, and to Christ's suffering.

3 Let my prayer come in before thee: incline thy ear to my petition.

4 For my soul is filled with evils: and my life hath drawn nigh to hell.

5 I am counted among them that go down to the pit: I am become as a man without help, 6 free among the dead.

Like the slain sleeping in the sepulchres, whom thou rememberest no more: and they are cast off from thy hand.

7 They have laid me in the lower pit: in the dark places, and in the shadow of death.

8 Thy wrath is strong over me: and all thy waves thou hast brought in upon me.

9 Thou hast put away my acquaintance far from me: they have set me an abomination to themselves.

I was delivered up, and came not forth: 10 my eyes languished through poverty.

All the day I cried to thee, O Lord: I stretched out my hands to thee.

11. Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? or shall physicians raise life, and give praise to thee?

12 Shall any one in the sepulchre declare thy mercy: and thy truth in destruction?

13 Shall thy wonders be known in the dark; and thy justice in the land of forgetfulness?

14 But I, O Lord, have cried to thee: and in the morning my prayer shall prevent thee.

C.—Understanding. Or a psalm of instruction, composed by Eman, the Ezrahite, or by David, in his name. Ch.—We read of Enan, a descendant of Juda by Zara, (1 Par. ii. 6. C.) and if he composed this piece, as the Jews and Lightfoot improbably suppose, it must be the most ancient (C.) writing extant. H.—The psalm may express the sentiments of David, or of any other under tribulation, as well as those of Jesus Christ, (Bert.) who speaks herein, (Houbigant,) and who expects that we should answer him by an imitation of his virtues. S. Aug. W.

VER. 2. Thee. Psal. xxi. is nearly similar to this. My prayer is continual. C.

VER. 3. Prayer. It is represented as a person prostrated before God.

VER. 4. Hell. The grave, or captivity. C.—Our Saviour said. My soul is sorrowful unto death. David, Jeremias, or the captives, were not reduced to this extremity. Bert.

VER. 5. Pit. Like a slave confined every night in prison. Exod. xii. 29.

VER. 6. Free. Heb. also "separated" from society. 4 Kings xv. 5, and 2 Par. xxvi. 21. C.—Christ, after enduring the greatest miseries, was still free. He could resign his life, and take it up again. John x. 18. H.—The Fathers adopt this explanation, which is very striking. C.—Hand. Thou actest as if thou hadst for gotten the corpse in the dust, till the time of the resurrection. S. Aug. Bert.—It is the mean while those who formerly made such a noise in the world are effaced from the book of life, or from God's register. He is often represented as a great monarch, keeping an account of his troops. C.—He cannot forget any of his creatures, (Bert.) though he may not restore them to life as yet. M.—Christ possessed infinite power among the dead, (W.) who are free from the cares of this world. M.

VER. 7. They. Heb. "thou hast."—Shadow. The Chal. has, the shadow of death, as well as the Vulg. All this regards Jesus Christ, though it may be applied to any in distress. Bert.—The wicked endeavour to kill the soul by sin, as well as the body. W.—Great difficulties entangle the psalmist: Christ descends into hell. M.

VER. 8. Waves. Of afflictions. Christ bore our iniquities. H.

VER. 9. Delivered up, to prison. Bert.—The disciples abandoned our Saviour; S. Peter, with a curse, denied that he ever knew him, (Mark xiv. 71. H.) and Judas betrayed him. It is not so easy to explain this of the captives in general, though it might refer to the psalmist. C.—At Babylon the Israelites were not imprisoned, but left to multiply. Jer. xxix. 5. Bert.

VER. 10. Poverty. Or "affliction." Sym.—To thee, for aid, (Psal. xxvii. 2,) or to implore pardon for sinners. Thus Jesus prayed for us on the cross, (C.) with his hands stretched out ready to receive the penitent. H.

VER. 11. Physicians. S. Jer. "will the giants rise again?" H.—These were heroes of great renown. C.—But they were consigned to hell, whence there was no redemption. Job xxv. 5; Prov. ix.—The author insinuates that if the true adorers be cut off, God's external glory will be diminished. H.—This argument is often pressed. Isa. xxxviii.; Psal. cxlii.—Ropaim (H.) designates physicians, as well as giants. Gen. i. 2, and 2 Par. xvii. 12. The Talmud sentences "the best of them to hell." Amama.—Their power does not extend to the dead. Bert.—The psalmist prays to be preserved from death, not expecting to be raised again miraculously. W.—Yet Christ contemns his future glorious resurrection. H.

VER. 13. Of, &c. Sept. "forgotten land." Securus latet et longa oblitus

15 Lord, why castest thou off my prayer : why turnest thou away thy face from me ?

16 I am poor, and in labours from my youth : and being exalted, have been humbled and troubled.

17 Thy wrath hath come upon me : and thy terrors have troubled me.

18 They have come round about me like water all the day : they have compassed me about together.

19 Friend and neighbour thou hast put far from me : and my acquaintance, because of misery.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

MISERICORDIAS DOMINI.

The perpetuity of the Church of Christ, in consequence of the promises of God : which notwithstanding, God permits her to suffer sometimes most grievous afflictions.

1 Of understanding, for Ethan, the Ezrahite.

2 THE mercies of the Lord I will sing for ever.

I will show forth thy truth with my mouth to generation and generation.

3 For thou hast said : Mercy shall be built up for ever in the heavens : thy truth shall be prepared in them.

4 I have made a covenant with my elect : "I have sworn to David my servant : 5 Thy seed will I settle for ever.

And I will build up thy throne unto generation and generation.

6 The heavens shall confess thy wonders, O Lord : and thy truth in the church of the saints.

7 For who in the clouds can be compared to the Lord : or who among the sons of God shall be like to God ?

8 God, who is glorified in the assembly of the saints : great and terrible above all them that are about him.

9 O Lord God of hosts, who is like to thee ? thou art mighty, O Lord, and thy truth is round about thee.

• 2 Kings vii. 12.—b Gen. i. 2.

pot. ant. Æn. 6. C.—When dead, I shall not be able to sound forth thy praises before men : much less shall those do it who are confined to the regions of darkness. W.

VER. 15. Prayer. Some copies of the Sept. read "soul," with the Heb., &c. C.—Why dost thou neglect to grant my request, which I urge with all the earnestness of my soul ? H.—This may relate to Jesus in the garden. C.—His prayer prevents, or is presented early, (M.) and with the truest fervour to the Lord, who moves us to pray. H.

VER. 16. Exalted. On the cross, or arrived at the years of manhood, (Bert. W.) I have experienced the greatest contradictions. David was brought up in poverty, like our Saviour, and the exaltation of both was attended with great trials. Bert.—The life of Christ was a continual martyrdom. M.—He had all his sufferings in view from his first conception.

VER. 17. Troubled me. The enemy has laid waste the country. This agrees with Christ in his agony. C.—Unhappy the sinner upon whom the wrath of God remains, (John iii. 36,) and does not merely come ; lit. pass, transierunt. Bert.

VER. 19. Misery. Heb. "darkness." Thou hast permitted my friends to abandon me, and hast exposed me to disgrace. C.—They were afraid lest they might be involved in my calamities, (M.) if they appeared in my defence, (H.) or seemed to know me. D.

PSAL. LXXXVIII. VER. 1. Ezrahite. Sept., &c., "Israelite," as in the former psalm. After he had detailed the promises of God, (ver. 39. C.) David might write it in the person (H.) of Ethan, or Idithun. 1 Par. xxv., and 3 Kings iv. 31. W.—Most of the Fathers explain it of Christ's kingdom. See Psal. xxxi. 11 ; Jer. xxxiii. 17. C.—The sceptre or administration of affairs was to continue in the tribe of Juda till his coming, as it really did, though kings were not always at the head of the people. Bert.

VER. 2. The. Sept. and Houbig. "Thy mercies, Lord."—Truth. Notwithstanding our distress, I know thou wilt perform thy promises. C.

VER. 3. For thou. Heb. "I." Yet S. Jerom agrees with the Sept., (Bert.,) though he is quoted by Calmet as conformable with Aquila, &c. Dixi.—Heaven and earth shall pass away sooner than God's word. H.—Truth. I will perform what I have promised to thee. M.—The apostles, represented by the heavens, have, by their preaching, established the Church for ever. W.—In them, is not in the Sept., S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 4. Elect. Abraham, and the whole body of the people to whom the 10 Thou rulest the power of the sea : and appeasest the motion of the waves thereof.

11 Thou hast humbled the proud one, as one that is slain : with the arm of thy strength thou hast scattered thy enemies.

12 "Thine are the heavens, and thine is the earth : the world and the fulness thereof thou hast founded : 13 the north and the sea thou hast created.

Thabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name : 14 thy arm is with might.

Let thy hand be strengthened, and thy right hand be exalted : 15 justice and judgment are the preparation of thy throne.

Mercy and truth shall go before thy face : 16 blessed is the people that knoweth jubilation.

They shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance : 17 and in thy name they shall rejoice all the day, and in thy justice they shall be exalted.

18 For thou art the glory of their strength : and in thy good pleasure shall our horn be exalted.

19 For our protection is of the Lord, and of our King the holy one of Israel.

20 Then thou spokest in a vision to thy saints, and saidst : I have laid help upon one that is mighty, and have exalted one chosen out of my people.

21 "I have found David, my servant : with my holy oil I have anointed him.

22 For my hand shall help him : and my arm shall strengthen him.

23 The enemy shall have no advantage over him : nor the son of iniquity have power to hurt him.

24 And I will cut down his enemies before his face ; and them that hate him I will put to flight.

• 1 Kings xvi. 1, and 12 ; Acts xiii. 22.

Messias had been promised. David was assured that he should spring from his family. Ver. 52. C.

VER. 5. Generation. David's posterity occupied the throne for a long time, (H.) and subsisted till the coming of Christ ; so that if any conqueror of that family had then appeared, the Jews would not have hesitated to admit that this prediction was fulfilled. It is their misfortune to understand the text in this sense, whereas God spoke of the spiritual kingdom of his Son, which is to be perpetual. They can never answer the argument which the Fathers urged in the 4th century, and which has attained fresh strength from the longer duration of misery under which the royal family of David has been depressed.

VER. 6. Saints. These alone, (H.) the heavens or angels, worthily proclaim thy praises. H.—Preachers announce the same in the Church, (S. Aug.,) "the communion of saints," as none are found out of her society. H.

VER. 7. Sons. Angels (C.) to God the Son.

VER. 9. Truth. He often praises this attribute, as if to excuse himself for asking why God had debased the throne of David ? C.

VER. 10. Power. Heb. "pride." Thou canst raise a storm, or restore a realm. C.

VER. 11. Proud one. Heb. Reb, Egypt or Pharaoh. Psal. lxxvi. 4 ; Isa. li. 9. C.—He alludes to the plagues inflicted on the Egyptians, &c. W.

VER. 13. Sea. Heb. "the right," (C.) which here denotes the south, (Psal. evi. 3. M.) as Hermon may do the east, (D.) with reference to Thabor, which lies to the west, though this seems unusual. C. Bert.

VER. 15. Preparation. Heb. "basis."—Face. Like guards. M.—He extols the mercy, and still more the fidelity, of God. C.

VER. 16. Jubilation. Heb. "how to sound the trumpet," which was the office of priests. They marched near the ark, as it were under the eyes of God. C.

VER. 19. Israel. The Lord our King (1 Kings viii. 7) will protect us, (H.) or He will defend our king David, and his posterity, as he then promised to him, ver. 5, 20. These verses may be thus connected, as the psalmist had been led to praise the wonderful works of God, and now returns to his promises. Bert.

VER. 20. Then, may relate to a distant time, when God chose Israel. M.—Saints. Heb. "merciful ones." Samuel, or Nathan. Sept., Arab., &c., have "sons." The rest read, "saints." S. Jer.—People. As Moses had written Deut. xvii. 15. C.—This regards David, as a figure of the Messias, (Luke i. 32, Ezec. xxxiv. 23. Bert.,) in whom it was more fully verified. 2 Kings v. : Acts xiii. 22. W.

25 And my truth and my mercy shall be with him : and in my name shall his horn be exalted.

26 And I will set his hand in the sea ; and his right hand in the rivers.

27 He shall cry out to me : Thou art my Father : my God, and the support of my salvation.

28 And I will make him my first-born, high above the kings of the earth.

29 I will keep my mercy for him for ever : and my covenant faithful to him.

30 And I will make his seed to endure for evermore : and his throne as the days of heaven :

31 And if his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments :

32 If they profane my justices, and keep not my commandments :

33 I will visit their iniquities with a rod : and their sins with stripes.

34 But my mercy I will not take away from him : nor will I suffer my truth to fail.

35 Neither will I profane my covenant : and the words that proceed from my mouth I will not make void.

36 Once have I sworn by my holiness : I will not lie unto David : 37 his seed shall endure for ever.

38 *And his throne as the sun before me : and as the moon perfect for ever, and a faithful witness in heaven.

39 But thou hast rejected and despised : thou hast been angry with thy anointed.

40 Thou hast overthrown the covenant of thy servant : thou hast profaned his sanctuary on the earth.

a 2 Kings vii. 16.

VER. 26. Rivers. Of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 33 ; Zae. ix. 10. H.—Every nation shall adore Him.

VER. 27. Father. We never find that David used this title (D.) ; but Christ did frequently, inasmuch that the Jews were convinced that he claimed the Divine nature : though, as man, he called God his support. Bert. Isa. lxiii. 16.

VER. 28. First-born. Or favourite. Exod. iv. 22, and Jer. xxxi. 9. What king could be preferred to David for piety, riches, &c. ? Yet he was only a feeble type of our Saviour, who surpasses all kings, as much as the reality does a shadow. C. Col. i. 15 ; Rom. viii. 29 ; Apoc. i. 5. Bert.—High. Heb. aliem, which is one of the titles of God, and belongs to Christ, (H.) who is King of kings, and heir of all. Heb. i. M.

VER. 30. Heaven. This can only be verified in Christ, who rules over all, and gives power to his Church unto the end.

VER. 31. And if. God foresaw the prevarications of the Israelites and Christians : but he speaks this to show their free-will, and that he would treat them as children, (Bert.,) and not with the utmost severity, (C.) unless they proved obstinate. 2 Kings vii. 14. H.

VER. 34. From him. David. Many ancient psalters read, "from them." C.—God, by degrees, punished the Jews, by depriving them of their kings ; though the family of David was preserved, and some share of power remained till Christ's coming. Bert.

VER. 36. Holiness. Or by myself, having nothing greater. Heb. vi. 13. C.—I will not. Lit. "if I lie," which is a Heb. idiom, (Bert.,) implying as much. W.—I have sworn irrecoverably, once for all. M.

VER. 38. Witness. Which may refer to the throne, or to the sun, (C.) or to the rainbow. Bert. D.—As long as the stars subsist, so long shall his throne be established. C.—The Church shines like the sun, and is easily known. Bert.—God, (Euseb.,) or Christ, attests the promises. S. Jer. Isa. lv. 4 ; Apoc. i. 5.—The rainbow was assigned as a memorial that the world should no more be drowned. Gen. ix.

VER. 39. Rejected. In all kingdoms there are some interruptions, and God did not fail in his promises. He still maintained the sceptre in Juda, though not with the same splendour at all times. Bert.—Angry. Or lit. "hast deferred." Distulisti. H.—The Israelites ardently wished for the coming of the Messiah. The psalmist here contrasts the present forlorn condition of the people with the preceding promises ; and bewails the fate of Sedecias, who was slain at a distance from home. Distulisti. See Psal. lxxvii. 21, and 62. C.—Thou hast been angry with thy Christ, (king Sedecias,) and even with our Redeemer, in some sense, (C.) as He was treated thus in consequence of the sins of mankind. Euseb., &c.—The promises were not fulfilled in David, that we may look further. Solomon seemed to answer all his expectations. But he fell, and God had not him but Christ in view. Anointed. Thou hast despised us, and delayed the coming of the Messiah.

41 Thou hast broken down all his hedges ; thou hast made his strength fear.

42 All that pass by the way have robbed him : he is become a reproach to his neighbours.

43 Thou hast set up the right hand of them that oppress him : thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.

44 Thou hast turned away the help of his sword : and hast not assisted him in battle.

45 Thou hast made his purification to cease : and thou hast cast his throne down to the ground.

46 Thou hast shortened the days of his time : thou hast covered him with confusion.

47 How long, O Lord, turnest thou away unto the end ? shall thy anger burn like fire ?

48 Remember what my substance is : for hast thou made all the children of men in vain ?

49 Who is the man that shall live, and not see death : that shall deliver his soul from the hand of hell ?

50 Lord, where are thy ancient mercies, according to what thou didst swear to David in thy truth ?

51 Be mindful, O Lord, of the reproach of thy servants (which I have held in my bosom) of many nations :

52 Wherewith thy enemies have reproached, O Lord ; wherewith they have reproached the change of thy anointed.

53 Blessed be the Lord for evermore. So be it, so be it.

PSALM LXXXIX.

DOMINE REFUGIUM.

A prayer for the mercy of God ; recounting the shortness and miseries of the days of man.

b 2 Kings vii. 11.

He expostulates with love and confidence, (Bert.,) and comforts himself with the thought that the coming of the Messiah is only delayed. W.

VER. 40. Overthrown the covenant, &c. All this seems to relate to the time of the captivity of Babylon, in which, for the sins of the people and their princes, God seemed to have set aside for a while the covenant he had made with David. Ch.—Yet he did not in effect. Ver. 39. H.—Sanctuary. The temple, (Theod.,) or, according to the Heb., "the diadem," by which the king was "set apart" from the common people, and rendered sacred. Psal. cxxxi. 18. Bert.

VER. 41. Fear. All his forts can afford no refuge. The country is like an abandoned vineyard. The Assyrians and Chaldees have ruined it, and the neighbouring nations of Samaria and Edom take possession of it. C.

VER. 46. Time. Heb., &c., "youth." S. Jer. H.—Joachim was only seven teen years old when he came to the throne, which he occupied three months. Amama.

VER. 47. How long. Here the third part, or the prayer of the psalmist, begins. C.—Away. Another interrogation might then commence, "shall it be unto the end ?" H.—In this prayer he foretells that God will regard our weakness, and preserve his Church. W.

VER. 48. Remember what. Heb. ani. "I." As this seems odd, Houbigant substitutes admi, "Lord." Bert.—Substance is. That Christ will assume our nature, (S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xvii. 9, 11,) or "how long I shall live." Mont.—Even the world "passes" like a shadow. 1 Cor. vii. Amama.—"Be mindful of me from the depth : else why hast thou in vain created the sons of men ?" S. Jer. H.—In vain. To spend their days in misery ? or rather, "are not all created subject to vanity ?" If thou do not succour us, we shall presently perish, and who will glorify thy name on earth ? Psal. cxliii. 4. C.

VER. 50. David. He was a man according to thy own heart, and thy promises to him were absolute.

VER. 51. Nations. Who continually insult us, and blaspheme thy name. H.—This fills me with the most poignant grief. C.—Whirl, &c. Aquila and S. Jer. "For I have carried in my bosom all the iniquities of peoples."

VER. 52. Wherewith. Or "because," quod. H.—Change. Heb. also, "the supplanting or retardment." Why does not your Messiah come ? How are your kings fallen ! though God had promised them an eternal kingdom ! Boast no more of his power or veracity. This impious language disturbs me. C.—They deride the ignominious life of the Messiah. Euseb.

VER. 53. So be it. Some suppose that these words were added by the collector of the psalms into five books. C.—Here the third ends. H.—The psalmist loses not hope under adversity. Bert.—He begins and finishes with God's praises. C.—We beg that all may praise thee, O Lord. W.—This is the only reply which he makes to the sarcasms of infidels, being convinced of God's providence. C.

PSAL. LXXXIX. VER. 1 God. This characterizes the Jewish legislator

1 A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

LORD, thou hast been our refuge from generation to generation.

2 Before the mountains were made, or the earth and the world were formed; from eternity and to eternity thou art God.

3 Turn not man away to be brought low: and thou hast said: Be converted, O ye sons of men.

4 For a thousand years in thy sight are as yesterday, which is past.

And as a watch in the night, 5 things that are counted nothing, shall their years be.

6 In the morning man shall grow up like grass, in the morning he shall flourish and pass away: in the evening he shall fall, grow dry and wither.

7 For in thy wrath we have fainted away, and are troubled in thy indignation.

8 Thou hast set our iniquities before thy eyes: our life in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are spent; and in thy wrath we have fainted away.

Our years shall be considered as a spider: 10 the days of our years in them are threescore and ten years.

But if in the strong they be fourscore years: and what is more of them, is labour and sorrow.

For mildness is come upon us: and we shall be corrected.

11 Who knoweth the power of thy anger, and for thy fear 12 can number thy wrath?

• Eccl. xviii. 8.

Bert. Deut. xxxiii. 1. D.—The life of man was longer in the days of Moses than seventy or eighty years. Bell. Ver. 10.—Moses cannot be the author of the 94th and 95th Psalms. W.—In Psal. xlviii. 6, Samuel is mentioned, and it is not necessary to have recourse to the prophetic spirit. One of the descendants of Moses, during the captivity, may have been the author, (C.) or David may have predicted that event. H.

VER. 2. Formed. Heb. "brought forth." Job xxxviii. 8. C.—Here Origen improperly concluded the sentence. S. Jer. Ep. ad Cypr.—God, is not in Sept., Syr., or ancient Latin psalters. C.—Al signifies both God and not, and seems to be twice explained in the Vulg., as Heb. omits not, ver. 3. H.

VER. 3. Turn not man away, &c. Suffer him not quite to perish from thee, since thou art pleased to call upon him to be converted to thee. Ch.—God wills not the death of the sinner. W.

VER. 4. For, &c. This thought naturally tends to convert the sinner.—Watch. Consisting of three hours, (Bert.,) which were of unequal length, according to the seasons. C.—A thousand years seem not so long to God. H.—What then must be the short life of man? See Job vii. 8. C.

VER. 5. Their years be. Heb. "thou striketh," (C.) or inundatest them: they are a dream." But our version is accurate. Bert.

VER. 6. Fall. Heb. "it is cut down and dries." The heat of the climate caused the flowers to decay very soon. Isa. xl. 6. Man's youth touches on old age. C.—The present moment is all we can call our own. Bert.

VER. 8. Life. Lit. "age." Thou clearly discernest all our proceedings. H.—Man is condemned for Adam's sin. The Israelites who were fit for arms, and gave way to murmuring, were sentenced to die in the desert. He may allude to this event. Bert.—Heb. may signify also, "our hidden things," or "youth," (C.) "or mistakes," (Houbig.) or "negligence." S. Jer.—From these we should always pray to be delivered. Psal. xxiv. 7. H.—Sin occasions the shortness of life, (W.) as man was created to be immortal. H.—Before the deluge men lived inclined longer. M.

VER. 9. As a spider. As frail and weak as a spider's web; and miserable withal, whilst, like a spider, we spend our bowels in weaving webs to catch flies. Ch.—Meditabuntur is here used in a passive sense. T.—Heb. "we have spent our years like one speaking a word." S. Jer. When he has done the sound is no more; so their memory has perished with a sound. Psal. ix. 8. H.

VER. 10. In them. Years, (C.) "in the world." Chal. "altogether." Sym. years. This was the usual term of man's life in David's time, (H.) and about the captivity, when this was written. Many lived above one hundred years when Moses wrote. C.—Yet this proves nothing, as there are still instances of equal longevity, though it is true that people in general seldom live above seventy or eighty, or if they do, their days are a burden to them. He probably here alludes to those warriors who were cut off in the wilderness, few of whom would survive eighty. Bert. C.—Strong. Sept. "in dominion." But here it means in a vigorous constitution. Bell.—Princes live no longer than others. Heb. and Vulg. may

So make thy right hand known: and men learned in heart in wisdom.

13 Return, O Lord, how long? and be entreated in favour of thy servants.

14 We are filled in the morning with thy mercy: and we have rejoiced, and are delighted all our days.

15 We have rejoiced for the days in which thou hast humbled us: for the years in which we have seen evils.

16 Look upon thy servants and upon their works: and direct their children.

17 And let the brightness of the Lord, our God, be upon us: and direct thou the works of our hands over us: yea, the work of our hands do thou direct.

PSALM XC.

QUI HABITAT.

The just is secure under the protection of God.

1 The praise of a canticle for David.

HE that dwelleth in the aid of the Most High, shall abide under the protection of the God of Jacob.

2 He shall say to the Lord: Thou art my protector and my refuge: my God, in him will I trust.

3 For he hath delivered me from the snare of the hunters: and from the sharp word.

4 He will overshadow thee with his shoulders: and under his wings thou shalt trust.

5 His truth shall compass thee with a shield: thou shalt not be afraid of the terror of the night.

6 Of the arrow that flieth in the day, of the business that walketh about in the dark: of invasion, or of the noon-day devil.

be "the prime, or most of them," as even a great part of the time before seventy, as well as after, (H.) is usually spent in misery. Gen. xlvii. 9. C.—Mildness. God's mildness corrects us; inasmuch as he deals kindly with us, in shortening the days of this miserable life; and so weaning our affections from all its transitory enjoyments, and teaching us true wisdom. Ch.—Heb. "we pass quickly and fly away," (S. Jer.), like birds of passage, (C.) or "it is cut down soon," (Mont.) "in silence," (Drusius,) taciturne senescimus annis. H.—Corrected, (corripimur.) or "hurried away." Geneb.—But this is not the sense of the Sept. Amama.—"We grow tired." Houbig.

VER. 12. Thy right hand. Your Messiah, to liberate and instruct us. S. Aug.—"Make us know how to number our days thus, and we shall come to thee with a wise heart." S. Jer. Eccl. vii. 40. H.

VER. 17. Yea, the work. Each in particular. Sept. Rom., &c., omit this sentence.

PSAL. XC. VER. 1. David. Sept. add, "it has no title in Heb."—Some suppose that Moses composed it when he led the Israelites out of Egypt, or in the wilderness; while others think that it is the work of David under some imminent danger. The Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ.—Aid. Heb. "secret place."—Of heaven, is not in Heb. ssodi, which means, (H.) "the almighty, self-sufficient, or destroying God." C.—We must keep close to God by mental prayer, if we would enjoy the Divine protection. S. Greg. Mor. vii. 7. Bert.

VER. 3. Delivered me. Heb. and Sept. "shall deliver thee." Yet the Alex. copy has me. H.—The psalmist addresses his own soul. Bert.—Word, verbo: we sometimes find "sword," printed by mistake. Heb. dobor, signifies "word, thing, pestilence," &c. H.—The devil employs human respect to draw many into his nets. S. Aug. Bert.

VER. 4. With. Sept. "upon." S. Aug. "between," as the Lord carried Israel. Deut. xxxii. 11. C.—Heb. "he will cover thee with his feathers," (H.) like an eagle. M.

VER. 5. Shield. God's fidelity, or word, affords the best protection. Prov. xxx. 5. C.—Having the spirit of faith, a man is secure. But he whose heart is hardened, (Bert.,) is covered with the buckler of God's affliction, (Lam. iii. 64. H.) abuses every thing, and seems bewitched with self-love. Gal. i. Bert.

VER. 6. Day. Neither open attacks nor unforeseen accidents prevail. C.—Business. Heb. dobor, "thing," ver. 3, "the pestilence." S. Jer. H.—Invasion. Sept. and old Italic have, "ruin."—S. Jer. after Aquila, "from the bite of him who rageth, δαμονίζοντος, at noon." Kotob, (H.) according to an ancient tradition of the Jews, denotes one of the bolder devils, who attacks in open day, and seeks no aid from nocturnal craft. Geneb.—Thou shalt fear no danger of the day or night, (Bellar.,) nor any which disturbs the life of man. Scalig. Ep. i. p. 95.—This author mistakes when he supposes that Kotob is rendered devil. Amama.—He might also ask how the Chal., Aquila, and Symmachus came to discover that the devil is here mentioned, as well as the Sept. ? Bert.—These seem to have read usod, "and the devil," instead of issud, "from destruction which ravages."

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand : but it shall not come nigh to thee.

8 But thou shalt consider with thy eyes : and shalt see the reward of the wicked.

9 Because thou, O Lord, art my hope : thou hast made the Most High thy refuge.

10 There shall no evil come to thee : nor shall the scourge come near thy dwelling.

11 For he hath given his angels charge over thee : to keep thee in all thy ways.

12 In their hands they shall bear thee up : lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

13 Thou shalt walk upon the asp and the basilisk : and thou shalt trample under foot the lion and the dragon.

14 Because he hoped in me, I will deliver him : I will protect him, because he hath known my name.

15 He shall cry to me, and I will hear him : I am with him in tribulation, I will deliver him, and I will glorify him.

16 I will fill him with length of days ; and I will show him my salvation.

PSALM XCI.

BONUM EST CONFITERI.

God is to be praised for his wondrous works.

1 A psalm of a canticle on the sabbath day.

2 IT is good to give praise to the Lord : and to sing to thy name, O Most High.

• Matt. iv. 29 ; Luke iv. 10.

(Amama,) vastabit. Mont. H.—But allowing that the Sept., &c., are accurate, what is meant by this devil? S. Peter seems to explain the idea, when he exhorts us to sobriety. 1 Pet. v. 8. Bert.—Violent temptations of sloth, (S. Athan.) or impurity, (Theod.,) or the persecutions against the faithful, may be meant.—Noon-day. Grotius explains this of the heat of the sun, which is very dangerous to travellers in Palestine. C.

VER. 7. Fall. Or “attack, . . but shall not come nigh to thee.” Euseb. C.—How great soever may be the number of thy adversaries, they shall not be able to do thee any harm. They shall fall at thy feet, and their dart shall not reach thee. H.—More forsake God in prosperity than under adversity. W.

VER. 9. Because. Saying, Thou, &c. W. Ver. 1. C.—High. Heb. Alien is a title of God, (C.) not the adjective to refuge, (Bert.,) as Chal., Aquila, &c., have taken it. “Thou hast placed thy dwelling most high.” So that there, &c., ver. 10. It is evident that the following promises relate not to the Lord, (C.) but to the just man. Prot., “because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the Most High thy habitation.” This transposition is not authorized by the text. H.

VER. 10. Scourge. Aquila has ἀφ᾽, “the leprosy,” (C.) or any stroke of distress. H.—What the saints have suffered were not real evils, and they will be amply rewarded in heaven. They never complain, having God with them, (C. Ver. 15. H.) and his holy angels. M.

VER. 11. Angels. Many seem to be assigned to the just, to whom S. Hil., &c., would restrain this privilege. But it is more generally believed that each person has an angel guardian. This was the opinion even of the pagans. Porphy. Ap. 2. S. Clem. Strom. 5. C.—To keep. Instead of this, the tempter substituted and, (Matt. iv. 6,) finding it would not answer his purpose, (H.) and showed that the question was about walking, and not about precipitating oneself. S. Bern. Ser. 15, p. 90.—God has highly favoured man, by intrusting him to the care of those sublime ministers of his court, (S. Bern.,) and surely it is lawful for us to implore their assistance, as we may apply to our fellow creatures for redress in our temporal necessities. To refuse to do so, on the plea that we expect all immediately from God, would be going contrary to his appointment. Else why has God given them for our guardians, since He could have done all without them? In vain is it objected that this invocation is a religious worship. It may be so styled, because they are blessed, and help us to obtain salvation. But we only honour in them the gifts of God. Bert.

VER. 13. Asp. Which kills in eight hours time at furthest, making the blood congeal.—Basilisk. “The little king” of serpents. C.—Heb. saal means a lion in Job, (Bert.,) and pothou, “an asp,” (C.) or basilisk. Bochart.—Dragon. Crocodile. C.—The most noxious animals, both of sea and land, shall prove quite harmless to the true servants of God, when he intends to prove the truth of his religion, as he did in the cases of Daniel, and of the disciples of Christ. Mark xvi. If they be suffered to kill the saints here, it is in order that they may be glorified in heaven, ver. 15. H.—The devil is styled an asp, &c. Bert.—He sometimes attacks the Church by craft, and at other times by open violence. But she remains secure, (S. Aug.,) and her children can only be preserved by continuing in her bosom.

3 To show forth thy mercy in the morning, and thy truth in the night.

4 Upon an instrument of ten strings, upon the psaltery : with a canticle, upon the harp.

5 For thou hast given me, O Lord, a delight in thy doings : and in the works of thy hands I shall rejoice.

6 O Lord, how great are thy works ! thy thoughts are exceedingly deep.

7 The senseless man shall not know : nor will the fool understand these things.

8 When the wicked shall spring up as grass : and all the workers of iniquity shall appear :

That they may perish for ever and ever : 9 but thou, O Lord, art Most High for evermore.

10 For behold thy enemies, O Lord, for behold thy enemies shall perish : and all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

11 But my horn shall be exalted like that of the unicorn : and my old age in plentiful mercy.

12 My eye also hath looked down upon my enemies . and my ear shall hear of the downfall of the malignant that rise up against me.

13 The just shall flourish like the palm-tree : he shall grow up like the cedar of Libanus.

14 They that are planted in the house of the Lord, shall flourish in the courts of the house of our God.

15 They shall still increase in a fruitful old age : and shall be well treated, 16 that they may show,

VER. 15. Tribulation. The just are not exempt from it. C.—Glorify him with eternal salvation.

VER. 16. Days. Eternity alone can satisfy the heart.—Salvation. Or Jesus, who promises to manifest himself, John xiv. 21, 25. Bert.—Abraham saw him afar off; Simeon at hand. John viii. 56; Luke ii. 30. God insures the just a long life in this world, and an eternal one in the next. C.

PSAL. XCI. VER. 1. Day. The Jews say that Adam sung this at his creation, (Chal.,) or that it refers to the reign of the Messiah, which shall last one thousand years after this world is ended. Kimchi.—Others think it is a thanksgiving after the defeat of Sennacherib, (Ven. Bede.,) or Absalom. Ferrand.—It might be sung by the sons of Moses, who expected to be shortly delivered from Babylon, (C.) or by the people on the sabbath, (Bert.,) though many of the Fathers think that this word denotes “the repose” of the life to come. The occasion or author of this psalm cannot be clearly ascertained. C.

VER. 2. Praise. Lit. “to confess,” (H.) as we must be free from sin before we can worthily proclaim God’s praises. Euseb. S. Jer.—But here to confess means to praise, (C.) or give thanks. W.

VER. 3. Night. Of adversity, and at all times, (Bert.,) as well as in prosperity. W.—Morning and evening prayer must not be neglected. H.—These times were particularly pointed out. Psal. liv. 18.

VER. 4. Strings, upon. Heb. “on the assur, and on the nobol, on the cignun with the conur.” Yet the ten-stringed instrument seems to have been the same with the psaltery, or nobol. H.—Bellarmine thinks and is redundant, and was not in the copies of the Sept., or it is only explanatory, as we know that the psaltery had ten strings. Psal. xxxii. 2, and cxliii. 9. M.

VER. 6. Deep. We cannot easily explain thy ways, (M.) in exalting some, and depressing thy people. C. Rom. xi. 33.

VER. 7. Things. Pretended sages hence take occasion to blaspheme what-soever things they know not. Jude 10. The wise adore God in silence, (H.) and confess that the misery of the just here proves a future life, while the wicked prosper, to be more tormented. Euseb. M.

VER. 8. Appear. Heb. “flourish.” Still they are but as grass, (H.) short-lived, and of small utility. The just resembles the palm-tree, ver. 13. C.

VER. 10. Enemies. The Babylonians, (C.) or all the wicked at the last day Bert.—This shows God’s power, and insures the exaltation of the just. M.

VER. 11. Mercy. Heb. and some copies of the Sept. have “oil,” an emblem of mercy. Prov. xxi. 20.—Bert. “I shall be anointed with fresh oil.”—Prot. “My old age shall be like a verdant olive.” Houbig. Sym.

VER. 12. Me. I shall live to hear of the vengeance which God will take. Psal. cxi. 9. C.

VER. 13. Palm-tree. Sept. φοινῖξ, means also a “Phœnician, or the phœnix” bird, of which the ancients have said so much, Job xxix. 18, (C.) and of which Tertullian, (de Res. 13,) and S. Ambrose, (de fid. Res.,) seem to understand this passage. Amama.—But it must be explained in the sense of the Vulg., as the Heb. Thomor evinceth. C.

VER. 15. Well treated. Or affected. W.—Bene patientes, ὑπαθούρτες, flourishing, (Grot.,) tranquil, (S. Aug.,) or in a prosperous condition. Bert.

That the Lord, our God, is righteous, and there is no iniquity in him.

PSALM XCII.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

The glory and stability of the kingdom; that is, of the Church of Christ.

Praise in the way of a canticle, for David himself, on the day before the sabbath, when the earth was founded.

1 THE Lord hath reigned, he is clothed with beauty: the Lord is clothed with strength, and hath girded himself.

For he hath established the world which shall not be moved.

2 Thy throne is prepared from of old: thou art from everlasting.

3 The floods have lifted up, O Lord: the floods have lifted up their voice.

The floods have lifted up their waves, 4 with the noise of many waters.

Wonderful are the surges of the sea: wonderful is the Lord on high.

5 Thy testimonies are become exceedingly credible: holiness becometh thy house, O Lord, unto length of days.

PSALM XCIII.

DEUS ULTIONUM.

God shall judge and punish the oppressors of his people.

A psalm for David himself, on the fourth day of the week.

1 THE Lord is the God, to whom revenge belongeth: the God of revenge hath acted freely.

2 Lift up thyself, thou that judgest the earth, render a reward to the proud.

3 How long shall sinners, O Lord, how long shall sinners glory?

Erasmus, to show the utility of consulting the originals, informs us what a multiplicity of authors he consulted in vain, to know the import of this word. Amama.—"They shall be fat and covered with leaves," (S. Jer.) alluding to the afore-said comparison.

VER. 16. In him. The general judgment will set this in the clearest light. At present the ways of Providence may be mysterious. VER. 6. H.

PSAL. XCII. VER. 1. Founded. Sept. "inhabited." This title occurs not in Heb., (Theodoret,) nor are the copies of the Sept. uniform, which shows that it is a later insertion, intimating perhaps that it was sung on Friday, when the works of the creation were completed, (Bert.) and the world redeemed. W.—It seems to refer to the translation of the ark, (Muis. 1 Par. xvi. 30,) and the establishment of the Church, the house of God, though the universe may be so styled, (Bert.,) or it speaks of the return from captivity, (Ven. Bede,) as well as the preceding and following psalms.—Himself. As if to perform some great work, the liberation of his people from the captivity of Babylon, and of the devil, (C.) or to create the world. Bert.—Established. "Weighed." Houbig.—Moved, or disturbed in the order established by Him. H.

VER. 2. Of old. Lit. "that time," ex tunc, (W.) alluding to some distant period. Isa. xvi. 13. C.

VER. 3. Floods. The apostles, (Euseb. S. Aug.,) or persecutors, W.—Waves. This sentence is not in the Rom. Sept., &c. C.—But it is in the Alex. and Aldine edit. Storms and tides fill all with awe and astonishment. C.—The motion of waters, when they were first confined to their channels, and the persecutions of the Church, and rebellions against God, are described. M.

VER. 4. On high. In heaven, more to be admired than all the phenomena of nature, and more powerful than all the vast armies of the Babylonians. Isa. xl. 15. C.

VER. 5. Credible. S. Jer. "faithful."—Prot. "very sure." H.—A person must shut his eyes not to see the prophecies fulfilled concerning Christ and his Church. Euseb.—The majesty of God should strike us with a holy fear, and teach us to observe his commandments, and to behave with the utmost respect in his house, (C.) which is the whole world, or the society of the faithful. Bert.—Articles of faith are perfectly credible to those whose hearts are moved by grace, (W.) though they cannot be understood. H.

PSAL. XCIII. VER. 1. Himself. This intimates that he was inspired to write.—Week. Wednesday, on which day Judas sold our Saviour, and his punishment is here foretold. W.—"The title is not in Heb.," and has been added since the times of the Sept. Theod.—It refers to the persecutions of David, (Jans.,) or to the captives, (C.) or it contains an important instruction on Providence, and 4 Shall they utter, and speak iniquity: shall all speak who work injustice?

5 Thy people, O Lord, they have brought low: and they have afflicted thy inheritance.

6 They have slain the widow and the stranger: and they have murdered the fatherless.

7 And they have said: The Lord shall not see: neither shall the God of Jacob understand.

8 Understand, ye senseless among the people: and you fools, be wise at last.

9 He that planteth the ear, shall he not hear? or he that formed the eye, doth he not consider?

10 He that chastiseth nations, shall he not rebuke: he that teacheth man knowledge?

11 The Lord knoweth the thoughts of men, that they are vain.

12 Blessed is the man whom thou shalt instruct, O Lord: and shalt teach him out of thy law.

13 That thou mayest give him rest from the evil days till a pit be dug for the wicked.

14 For the Lord will not cast off his people: neither will he forsake his own inheritance.

15 Until justice be turned into judgment: and they that are near it, are all the upright in heart.

16 Who shall rise up for me against the evil doers? or who shall stand with me against the workers of iniquity?

17 Unless the Lord had been my helper: my soul had almost dwelt in hell.

18 If I said: My foot is moved: thy mercy, O Lord, assisted me.

19 According to the multitude of my sorrows in my heart, thy comforts have given joy to my soul.

on the judgment which Christ will pronounce. Bert.—Freely. Heb. "Lord God of vengeance, God of vengeance, shine forth." H.—This agrees better with the sequel. To appear or act freely have the same meaning. Bert.

VER. 6. Fatherless. Sept. place this after widow, and have here the stranger, or "proselyte," (H.) including those who were circumcised, or had only renounced idolatry. Jeremias and Ezechiel describe the cruelty of the Chaldees. C.

VER. 7. Of Jacob. A wretched people in captivity. This is spoken insultingly. He knows not, or cannot hinder, their distress. Psal. xlii. 1; and lxxii. 6. C.—The insolence and cruelty of infidels are reprobated.

VER. 8. Fools. Who talk in this manner, (H.) whether you really believe that God is thus ignorant and inactive; or you only act as if you did. Bert.

VER. 9. Consider? He does not say, "hath he not eyes?" lest any might attribute members to God. S. Jer.—It seems those whom the psalmist attacks denied the interference of God in human affairs, though they allowed that he created all. H.—Hence he justly stigmatizes them as fools, and inconsistent. Bert.—It is impossible that God should be ignorant of our actions, since he knows our most secret thoughts. W.

VER. 13. Rest from the evil days. That thou mayest mitigate the sorrows to which he is exposed, during the short and evil days of his mortality (Ch.); or mayest protect him, while the wicked are overwhelmed. C.—The pious bear afflictions with greater resignation, (M.) meditating on the law and the Holy Scriptures, where the ways of Providence are justified.

VER. 15. Until justice be turned into judgment, &c. By being put in execution: which will be agreeable to all the upright in heart. Ch.—They will be round the tribunal, and sit as judges with Christ. Cyrus was a figure of the Messiah, and all his counsellors, or the Jews, attached themselves to him, when he punished the Babylonians. Isa. xli. 2, and liii. 11. C.

VER. 17. Almost. Or shortly, as the Heb. means, (Bert.,) "within very little." W.—Hell. Heb. "silence," which is often put for the grave. 1 Kings ii. 9. C.

VER. 18. Me. I was no sooner in danger than I was relieved. C.

VER. 19. Sorrows. Heb. "afflicting thoughts." Bert.—Soul. Our future joy will bear proportion with the sufferings which we endure for the sake of justice. 1 Cor. xi. 13; and 2 Cor. i. 3. H.

VER. 20. Doth the seat of iniquity stick to thee? &c. That is, wilt thou, O God, who art always just, admit of the seat of iniquity; that is, of injustice, or unjust judges, to have any partnership with thee? Thou, who framest, or makest, labour in commandment; that is, thou who oblige us to labour with all dili-

20 Doth the seat of iniquity stick to thee, who framest labour in commandment?

21 They will hunt after the soul of the just, and will condemn innocent blood.

22 But the Lord is my refuge: and my God the help of my hope.

23 And he will render them their iniquity: and in their malice he will destroy them: the Lord, our God, will destroy them.

PSALM XCIV.

VENITE EXULTEMUS.

An invitation to adore and serve God, and to hear his voice.

Praise of a canticle for David himself.

1 COME, let us praise the Lord with joy: let us joyfully sing to God our Saviour.

2 Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving: and make a joyful noise to him with psalms.

3 For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

4 For in his hand are all the ends of the earth: and the heights of the mountains are his.

5 For the sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

6 Come, let us adore and fall down: and weep before the Lord that made us.

7 For he is the Lord, our God: and we are the people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand.

• Heb. iii. 7, and iv. 7.

gence to keep thy commandments (Ch.); as faith alone is not sufficient, (W.) and who art pleased that we should find therein some difficulty or repugnance of nature, that we may be the more entitled to consolation, ver. 19. H.

VER. 22. Help. Heb. "rock." Bert.—Sufferings force us to have recourse to God, whom few remember in the days of prosperity. S. Aug.

VER. 23. Will destroy them. Heb. itsmithom, occurs twice, to denote the certainty of the event, though the Sept., &c., omit the repetition. H.—Cyrus overturned the cruel empire of Babylon. C.

PSAL. XCIV. VER. 1. Himself. as David wrote it by inspiration. W.—Sept. Comp. "It is without a title in Heb." S. Paul (Heb. iv. 7) quotes it as the work of David. But this is only done incidentally, and it may have been written by the descendants of Moses, (Psal. lxxxix. C.) as the apostle only says, in David, (H.) referring to the psalter, which the common opinion attributed to him. C.—This opinion, it must be owned, acquires hereby great authority, (H.) as an inspired writer could not mistake; and Calmet himself, on the Epistle to the Heb., doubts not, but, as the drift of the apostle requires, he attributed this psalm to David. Bert. T. G.—The Church adopts the version of the Roman Psalter in her office books, as they were corrected by S. Pius V., and this psalm was considered as a hymn at the beginning of matins, though the Vulg. is retained in other parts. C.—Saviour. S. Jer. "to the rock, our Jesus." H.

VER. 2. Come. Earlier than usual, (M.) before the day be far spent; præoccupemus, to show our diligence in prayer, (H.) and to obtain God's favour, as Aman was first at the palace of Assuerus. Eth. vi. 4.—This sentence has probably determined the Church to place it at the beginning of matins. C.—Thanksgiving. S. Jer. lit. "in confession." H.—The prophet exhorts us both to lament and to praise. S. Aug. Bert.—Psalms and music. W.

VER. 3. Gods. Sept. Comp. "the earth." But the best editions agree with us, and God must be acknowledged superior to all angels, &c. Some copies of the Sept., S. Aug., &c., add, "for the Lord will not cast off his people," (C.) which seems to be taken from Psal. xciii. 14. Bert.

VER. 4. Ends. Heb. "depths."—Are his. This is grander, that "he beholds," as the Rom. Psalter. Bert. Isa. xl. 15, and xlv. 18.

VER. 5. Formed. Like a potter, plasmaverunt, (S. Jer. C.) or "have laid the foundations of the dry land." S. Aug. Brev. Rom. H.

VER. 6. And weep. Heb. also, "bend the knee;" though this sense would seem less proper, after he had mentioned prostration. Tears of contrition and tenderness may accompany our canticles. Bert.—Kneeling in prayer is a posture pleasing to God. Phil. ii. W.

VER. 7. The Lord is not in Heb. or Sept. Bert.—The people. Rom. Psal. and Syriac, "his people, and the sheep of his pasture," taken from Psal. xcix. 3. C.—God is the only Shepherd who creates his sheep. Bert.

VER. 8. To-day. S. Paul beautifully illustrates this passage. Heb. iv. H.—He follows not the present Heb. punctuation, which would join half this verse with the preceding.—His. God speaks of the Messias according to the apostle, who intimates that to-day comprises all the life of man. Heb. iii. 7, 13. Bert.—Harden not. Man is the author of his own obduracy, (Theod.) which God only permits. S. Aug. C.—We have free-will, and may resist God's grace, as we may 8 "To-day if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

9 As in the provocation, according to the day of temptation in the wilderness: where your fathers tempted me, they proved me, and saw my works.

10 "Forty years long was I offended with that generation, and I said: These always err in heart.

11 And these men have not known my ways: "so I swore in my wrath that they shall not enter into my rest.

PSALM XCV.

CANTATE DOMINO.

An exhortation to praise God for the coming of Christ and his kingdom.

1 A canticle for David himself, when the house was built after the captivity.

SING ye to the Lord a new canticle: sing to the Lord, all the earth.

2 Sing ye to the Lord and bless his name: show forth his salvation from day to day.

3 Declare his glory among the Gentiles: his wonders among all people.

4 For the Lord is great, and exceedingly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods.

5 For all the gods of the Gentiles are devils: but the Lord made the heavens.

6 Praise and beauty are before him: holiness and majesty in his sanctuary.

7 Bring ye to the Lord, O ye kindreds of the Gentiles, also consent to it, and thus co-operate to our first justification. Trid. Ses. vi. 5. W.

• Num. xiv. 34.—• Heb. iv. 3.

VER. 9. Provocation (irritatione). Rom. Brev. exacerbatione. Heb. moribhe, "contradiction," (S. Jer. H.) at Raphidim (Exod. xvii. 7); unless this be styled temptation, (Mose,) and the former provocation was that at Cades. Num. xx. 13. C.—The Israelites murmured frequently. But that rebellion which took place at the return of the spies, and which causes God to swear that the guilty should never enter the land of promise, seems to be chiefly meant. Num. xiv. Bert.—Proved me: to know by experience if I were so powerful as to work miracles; and I condescended to gratify them, (C.) or I had done it already. M.

VER. 10. Offended. Heb. and Sept. "disgusted." Rom. Psal., S. Aug. &c., "I was very near to" (C.); ready to punish, and eye-witness of their infidelity. S. Paul. reads προσέχθησα, infensus fui, "I was against, or disgusted with," and seems to refer the forty years to the Jews, who saw God's works. H.—But there is a variation in the Greek copies, as some omit, For which cause; and Heb. iii. 10, and ver. 17, intimates that the indignation of God was roused for forty years, at intervals, as often as the people rebelled. Bert.—The apostle also plainly shows that this psalm was written long after that period, and consequently not by Moses, as the Jews would now assert. He limiteth a certain day, saying in David: To-day, after so long a time, &c. Heb. iv. 7. W.—Always. Heb. "a people of those who err in the heart are they." Mont. II.

VER. 11. So. Psal. Rom. and Milan, "to whom." Both occur in S. Paul, and answer the Heb. assor, (Bert.,) quibus. S. Jer.—Not. Lit. "If they shall." The Israelites were excluded from a settled abode in Chanaan, on account of their repeated transgressions, particularly at Cades (Num. xiv.); and Christians, who do not continue faithful to the law of Jesus Christ, can never expect to enter heaven. Heb. iii. and iv. W.

PSAL. XCV. VER. 1. When the house was built, &c. Alluding to that time, and then ordered to be sung: but principally relating to the building of the Church of Christ, after our redemption from the captivity of Satan. Ch.—Captivity. The greater canticle of David (1 Par. xvi.) was probably divided, on that occasion, (C.) into three. This forms the second part, from ver. 23; as Psal. civ. to ver. 16, does the first. The three last verses of David's canticle (ver. 34) occur Psal. cv. 1, 47.—New canticle. As the blessed do, (Apoc. v. 9, and xv. 4,) and those who receive the Messias. Isa. xlii. 10. Bert.—Earth. And not Judea alone. Ver. 7. Bert.

VER. 2. Lord . . his name. As ver. 7 and 8. The plural and singular denote the Trinity. W.—Show forth. Sept. "evangelize," benenuntiat. S. Aug. "Tell the glad tidings" of salvation incessantly. This preaching shall continue for ever. H.

VER. 5. Devils. Heb. ahim, "diminutive gods, (H.) nothings, (C.) vain things." Mont. 1 Par.—We have idols, as Prot. read here. These were in fact either devils, or vain imaginations of men. S. Paul says, We know that an idol is nothing in the world. 1 Cor. viii. 4. They cannot claim self-existence, and if the true God were not to support those creatures, the sun, &c., which have been the objects of adoration, they would presently cease to be. H.

VER. 6. Before him. At his disposal; whereas the idols can bestow nothing. C.—Sanctuary, or "sanctification." W. 1 Par. in his place. H.

bring ye to the Lord glory and honour: 8 bring to the Lord glory unto his name.

Bring up sacrifices, and come unto his courts: 9 adore ye the Lord in his holy court.

Let all the earth be moved at his presence. 10 Say ye among the Gentiles, the Lord hath reigned.

For he hath corrected the world, which shall not be moved: he will judge the people with justice.

11 Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad, let the sea be moved, and the fulness thereof: 12 the fields and all things that are in them shall be joyful.

Then shall all the trees of the woods rejoice 13 before the face of the Lord, because he cometh: because he cometh to judge the earth.

He shall judge the world with justice, and the people with his truth.

PSALM XCVI.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

All are invited to rejoice at the glorious coming and reign of Christ.

1 For the same David, when his land was restored again to him.

THE Lord hath reigned, let the earth rejoice: let many islands be glad.

2 Clouds and darkness are round about him: justice and judgment are the establishment of his throne.

3 A fire shall go before him, and shall burn his enemies round about.

4 His lightnings have shone forth to the world: the earth saw and trembled.

5 The mountains melted like wax at the presence of the Lord: at the presence of the Lord all the earth.

6 The heavens declared his justice: and all people saw his glory.

7 Let them be all confounded that adore graven things, and that glory in their idols.

Adore him, all you his angels: 8 Sion heard, and was glad.

^a Exod. xx. 4; Lev. xxvi. 1; Deut. v. 8.—^b Heb. i. 6.

VER. 7. Kindreds; patria, or families, as it is expressed. 1 Par. xvi. 11.

VER. 8. Sacrifices. Heb. Monēe, "the oblation" of flour, &c., (H.) which denotes the blessed Eucharist, and the spiritual sacrifices of prayer, &c. M.—Victims shall cease, but the pure oblation shall continue among the Gentiles. Mal. i. 11. Bert.—Courts. This shows that their conversion is predicted, since they could not otherwise come thither. C.

VER. 9. Moved. Heb. "in labour," (Isa. xxvi. 17. Theod. C.) or "fear ye before him, all the earth." Houbig.

VER. 10. Reigned. S. Bernard says, "the kingdom of Jesus is in the wood." D.—S. Justin (Dial.) accuses the Jews of retrenching ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, "from the wood," which all the Latin Fathers, except S. Jerom, acknowledge in their copies. That ancient author, being born among the Samaritans, could hardly be so ignorant of the Hebrew text, and his antagonist does not attempt to refute the charge; so that it seems probable that they were in the original, (Bert.,) and since erased by the Jews from the Sept., who added them (W.) by the spirit of prophecy. Tournemine.—But how came Christians to permit this to be done in their Heb., Greek, and Latin copies? The words in question may have been, therefore, a marginal gloss, which had crept into the text. Faber, Justiniani, &c.—They do not occur in the parallel passage, (1 Par.) nor in the Vulg., though they be retained in the Rom. Breviary. C.—The Chaldee and Syriac, as well as all the copies of the Sept. extant, and the Arab. and Ethiop. versions taken from it, and all the Greek interpreters and Fathers, (except S. Justin,) with S. Jerom, both in his versions from the Heb. and Sept., omit these words, which are found in the Rom., Gothic, and other psalters. Origen's Hexapla seem to have most enabled the Greeks to discern the interpolation, which the Latins retained longer, not having such easy access to that work.—The positive testimony of S. Justin, and the Italic version used by the Latin Fathers, (Bert.,) Tertullian, S. Aug., &c., (W.) seems of more weight to prove the authenticity of the words than the simple mission in the copies of Origen, and S. Jerom, &c., to evince the contrary. Bert.—Corrected. Evil morals and idolatry, (M.) rather than the physical order of the globe. Psal. xcii. 1. Bert.—Heb. "he hath balanced," (Houbig.,) or established. 11.—The Christian faith shall not be abolished, (M.) or corrected. H.—

And the daughters of Juda rejoiced, because of thy judgments, O Lord.

9 For thou art the most high Lord over all the earth: thou art exalted exceedingly above all gods.

10 You that love the Lord, hate evil: the Lord preserveth the souls of his saints, he will deliver them out of the hand of the sinner.

11 Light is risen to the just, and joy to the right of heart.

12 Rejoice, ye just, in the Lord: and give praise to the remembrance of his holiness.

PSALM XCVII.

CANTATE DOMINO.

All are again invited to praise the Lord, for the victories of Christ.

1 A psalm for David himself.

SING ye to the Lord a new canticle: because he hath done wonderful things.

His right hand hath wrought for him salvation, and his arm is holy.

2 The Lord hath made known his salvation: he hath revealed his justice in the sight of the Gentiles.

3 He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel.

All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

4 Sing joyfully to God, all the earth: make melody, rejoice and sing.

5 Sing praise to the Lord on the harp, on the harp, and with the voice of a psalm: 6 with long trumpets, and sound of cornet.

Make a joyful noise before the Lord our King: 7 let the sea be moved and the fulness thereof: the world and they that dwell therein.

8 The rivers shall clap their hands, the mountains shall rejoice together 9 at the presence of the Lord: because he cometh to judge the earth.

He shall judge the world with justice, and the people with equity.

^c Amos v. 15; Rom. xvii. 9.—^d Isa. lii. 10, and lxiii. 8; Luke iii. 6.

"Faith is not to be reformed." Tert.—Justice. Ancient psalters add, "and the Gentiles in his wrath," ver. 13. Psal. xcvi. 8.

VER. 11. Fulness. Its raging billows, (C.) fishes, (M.) those who live upon the water. H.—Let all testify their joy. Every thing is animated by the psalmist. C.

VER. 13. Judge. Or "rule," as he invites all to rejoice. C.—But this will be done by all nature, when God shall punish the wicked. H.—He now judges by his ministers, and will pass sentence at the last day. W.—This ver. is added instead of the three last in 1 Par. xvi., which occur Psal. cv. H.

PSAL. XCVI. VER. 1. Same. Huic. The title is the same as usual in the Sept. M.—It occurs not in Heb. The psalm may refer to David's establishment on the throne, after the death of Saul or Absalom, or to the return from captivity, and to the first and second coming of Christ. C.—This last seems to be the most literal sense. Bert.—To him. Christ's body on the third day, and many souls were restored to life.

VER. 3. A fire. Preceding the last judgment. 2 Pet. iii. 12; Dan. vii. 10, Wisd. v. 22. M.

VER. 6. Heavens. Apostles. Psal. xviii. The judge appears publicly. C.

VER. 7. Idols. Heb. Alitim. Psal. xcv. 5. H.—Angels. Heb. Arim, means also all who have power. Chal. "idols." S. Paul (Heb. i. 6) quotes this in the third person, Let all the angels, (C.) or rather he alludes to the Sept., (Deut. xxxii. 43,) which clearly speaks of the Messias, and may therefore have been altered in the Heb. text, which S. Jerom translated.

VER. 9. Gods. Princes or angels, aleim. Ver. 7. H.

VER. 11. Light. Prosperity. The Babylonians are punished. C. PSAL. XCVII. VER. 1. David. His name occurs not in Heb., though the psalm is worthy of him. Bert.—It may refer to the return from captivity, as a figure of the world's redemption.—For him. Or alone. M.—Christ raised himself by his own power. C.—Isa. lxii. 5.—He redeemed mankind for his own glory, sibi. Bert.

VER. 3. Israel. The prophets foretold the liberation of the Jews, and of mankind. The blessed Virgin seems to allude to this passage, Luke i. 55. C.—Some Jews were converted. Rom. xi. W.

PSALM XCVIII.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

The reign of the Lord in Sion: that is, of Christ in his Church.

1 A psalm for David himself.

THE Lord hath reigned, let the people be angry: he that sitteth on the Cherubim: let the earth be moved.

2 The Lord is great in Sion, and high above all people.

3 Let them give praise to thy great name: for it is terrible and holy: 4 and the king's honour loveth judgment.

Thou hast prepared directions: thou hast done judgment and justice in Jacob.

5 Exalt ye the Lord, our God, and adore his footstool: for it is holy.

6 Moses and Aaron among his priests: and Samuel among them that call upon his name.

They called upon the Lord, and he heard them: 7 he spoke to them in the pillar of the cloud.

They kept his testimonies, and the commandment which he gave them.

8 Thou didst hear them, O Lord, our God: thou wast a merciful God to them, and taking vengeance on all their inventions.

9 Exalt ye the Lord, our God, and adore at his holy mountain: for the Lord, our God, is holy.

PSALM XCIX.

JUBILATE DEO.

All are invited to rejoice in God, the Creator of all.

1 A psalm of praise.

SING joyfully to God, all the earth: serve ye the Lord with gladness.

Come in before his presence with exceedingly great joy.

PSAL. XCVIII. VER. 1. Himself. There is no title in Heb. Hence many have attributed it to Moses, with the preceding psalms. But the name of Samuel destroys this pretension, and most people suppose that David wrote it at the removal of the ark. C.—Angry. Though many enemies rage, and the whole earth be stirred up to oppose the reign of Christ, he shall still prevail. Ch. Psal. ii.

VER. 4. Loveth judgment. Requireth discretion. Ch.—Heb. “the king’s strength loveth judgment.” He does nothing unjustly, as the enemy is forced to confess. C.—This is the highest glory of a king. Theod.—God requires that we should honour him, by correcting our faults. S. Aug.—Directions. Most right and just laws to direct men. Ch.—Jacob. There God principally instructed mankind, and punished the perverse. Other nations he seemed to have left to themselves. H.

VER. 5. Adore his footstool. The ark of the covenant was called, in the Old Testament, God’s footstool: over which he was understood to sit, on his prophetic, or mercy-seat, as on a throne, between the wings of the Cherubim, in the sanctuary: to which the children of Israel paid a great veneration. But as this psalm evidently relates to Christ, and the New Testament, where the ark has no place, the holy Fathers understand this text of the worship paid by the Church to the body and blood of Christ in the sacred mysteries: inasmuch as the humanity of Christ is, as it were, the footstool of the Divinity. So S. Ambrose, l. iii. de Spirito Sancto, c. 12, and S. Augustin upon this psalm. Ch.—The last-mentioned holy Doctor inculcates the obligation of adoring Jesus Christ in the blessed Eucharist, and refutes the Capharnaïtes, &c. John vi. W.—The Jews adored God, showing a relative honour, by prostrating themselves before the ark, in the same manner as Catholics do before holy images. Bert.—It is. Sept. and some psalters, “he is holy.” C.—Heb. is ambiguous. Bert.—“I discover how I may adore the footstool, . . . without impiety. Christ took flesh of Mary, . . . and gave it us to eat for our salvation. But none eats that flesh till he have first adored it.” S. Aug.

VER. 6. Moses and Aaron among his priests. By this it is evident, that Moses also was a priest, and indeed the chief priest, inasmuch as he consecrated Aaron, and offered sacrifice for him. Lev. viii. So that his pre-eminence over Aaron makes nothing for lay church headship. Ch. W.

VER. 7. Cloud. As he did to Samuel in the night. Bert.

VER. 8. All their inventions. That is, all the enterprises of their enemies against them, as in the case of Core, Dathan, and Abiron. Ch.—Num. xvi. W. Syr. “injuries.” The failings of these great men were punished in mercy. C.—Thou hast made them harmless in all their works. Houbig.

VER. 9. Mountain. On Sion, or in the Catholic Church. Bert.—“Those who do not adore on this mountain, are not heard unto eternal life.” S. Aug.

3 Know ye that the Lord, he is God: he made us, and not we ourselves.

We are his people and the sheep of his pasture. 4 Go ye into his gates with praise, into his courts with hymns: and give glory to him.

Praise ye his name: 5 for the Lord is sweet, his mercy endureth for ever, and his truth to generation and generation.

PSALM C.

MISERICORDIAM ET JUDICIUM.

The prophet exhorteth all, by his example, to follow mercy and justice.

1 A psalm for David himself.

MERCY and judgment I will sing to thee, O Lord: I will sing, 2 and I will understand in the unspotted way, when thou shalt come to me.

I walked in the innocence of my heart, in the midst of my house.

3 I did not set before my eyes any unjust thing: I hated the workers of iniquities.

4 The perverse heart did not cleave to me: and the malignant, that turned aside from me, I would not know.

5 The man that in private detracted his neighbour, him did I persecute.

With him that had a proud eye, and an unsatiable heart, I would not eat.

6 My eyes were upon the faithful of the earth, to sit with me: the man that walked in the perfect way, he served me.

7 He that worketh pride shall not dwell in the midst of my house: he that speaketh unjust things did not prosper before my eyes.

8 In the morning I put to death all the wicked of the PSAL. XCIX. VER. 1. Praise. Theodoret reads, “A psalm of David for confession, without a title in Heb.” But now that text and the Sept. agree with us. The psalm refers to the same events as the preceding. C.

VER. 2. Earth. Both Jews and Gentiles (W.) converted to the faith of Christ. H.—Gladness. God loves a cheerful giver. M.—He hears our prayers in all places. Yet appoints the temple more peculiarly for that duty. W.

VER. 5. Truth. This is commonly joined with mercy. C.—God faithfully executes what he has promised (W.) for the liberation of his people, and the conversion of the Gentiles. C.

PSAL. C. VER. 1. Himself. He describes the conduct which he was resolved to follow in ruling, (C.) or alludes to the pious king Josias. Theod. 4 Kings xxii. The sentiments are not confined to rulers alone, (Bert.,) though this psalm might be styled “the mirror of princes.” Muis.—Mercy and judgment. The chief qualifications of a king. C.—Whether I am treated with clemency or with rigour, I will praise thee. Chal.—No one should presume, since there is judgment, nor despair, since mercy goes before. S. Jer. S. Aug.

VER. 2. I will understand, &c. That is, I will apply my mind, I will do my endeavour, to know and to follow the perfect way of thy commandments: not trusting in my own strength, but relying on thy coming to me by thy grace. Ch.—I will watch over my conduct.—I walked. Or “will walk.” All the other verbs should be in the future (C.); though that is of no consequence. Bert.

VER. 3. Thing. Or Heb. “word of Belial.” I will neither suffer an evil word or action to pass without reproof. C.

VER. 4. Know. I looked upon them with such contempt, (Euseb.,) or I highly disapproved of their conduct, (S. Aug.,) and would have no society with them. C.

VER. 5. Persecute. Or abhor (W.) with a perfect hatred. We must show our displeasure if we hear detraction, (H.) that we may not partake in the crime. S. Jer.—The court is most likely to be infected with this vice, as people are continually endeavouring to supplant their rivals. C.—Secret thoughts of resentment must be stifled in their birth. Euseb.—Heart. Heb. “wide heart,” which is sometimes taken in a good sense. 3 Kings iv. 29. But here it denotes the ambitious and misers. Prov. xxviii. 25. C.

VER. 6. Faithful. A prince cannot do every thing himself. But he ought to make choice of the most virtuous and skilful ministers. C.

VER. 7. Prosper. Heb. “shall not be pleasing,” (S. Jer. H.) or “maintain himself.” C.

VER. 8. Morning. Without delay, (W. Jer. xxi. 12. H.) and with a mind composed. S. Isid. Pelus. l. Ep. 321.—The Jews explain this of the judgment of land : that I might cut off all the workers of iniquity from the city of the Lord.

PSALM CI.

DOMINE EXAUDI.

A prayer for one in affliction : the fifth penitential psalm.

1 The prayer of the poor man, when he was anxious, and poured out his supplication before the Lord.

2 HEAR, O Lord, my prayer : and let my cry come to thee.

3 Turn not away thy face from me : in the day when I am in trouble, incline thy ear to me.

In what day soever I shall call upon thee, hear me speedily.

4 For my days are vanished like smoke : and my bones are grown dry like fuel for the fire.

5 I am smitten as grass, and my heart is withered : because I forgot to eat my bread.

6 Through the voice of my groaning, my bone hath cleaved to my flesh.

7 I am become like to a pelican of the wilderness : I am like to a night-raven in the house.

8 I have watched, and am become as a sparrow, all alone on the house-top.

9 All the day long my enemies reproached me : and they that praised me, did swear against me.

10 For I did eat ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping.

11 Because of thy anger and indignation : for having lifted me up, thou hast thrown me down.

12 My days have declined like a shadow, and I am withered like grass.

13 But thou, O Lord, endurest for ever : and thy memorial to all generations.

14 Thou shalt arise and have mercy on Sion : for it is time to have mercy on it, for the time is come.

15 For the stones thereof have pleased thy servants : and they shall have pity on the earth thereof.

zeal, by which a person might kill a notorious criminal without any trial, (C.) in imitation of Phinees and Mathathias. 1 Mac. ii. 24. H.

PSAL. CI. VER. 1. Poor. Heb. "afflicted." This may refer to some of the captives, who were returning, (ver. 14. C.) or to Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.,) to whom S. Paul applies ver. 26, 28, and whose redemption was prefigured by the former event. C.

VER. 2. Cry. Fervent petition, though only in the heart. Exod. xiv. 15.

VER. 4. Fire. Cremum denotes any combustible matter. Colum. xii. 19. S. Jer. C.—While in mortal sin, our best actions, alms, &c., avail nothing. 1 Cor. xiii. W.

VER. 5. Bread. Through excessive sorrow (H.) I am fainting in captivity. C.

VER. 7. A pelican, &c. I am become, through grief, like birds that affect solitude and darkness. Ch.—Kath comes from a root that signifies to vomit, (H.) as this bird lives chiefly on shell-fish, which it swallows, and when the heat of its stomach has caused the shells to open, it throws them up again, and eats the fish. Bochart. Parkhurst in ka. H.—It seems to be the ouocratulus, which resembles the heron.—Raven. Owl, or rather another species of pelican, so called from having a bag under its chap, "to enclose" fish, &c. Parkhurst in cose.—With its prey it retires to solitary places. So the distressed love solitude and silence. H.

VER. 8. Sparrow. Heb. Tsopur means any "quick-moving" bird, &c., (Idem.) and as the sparrow is not a solitary bird, it may here signify the owl. Bochart. C.

VER. 9. Against me. To kill me, (Acts xxiii. 12,) or to prove my guilt. C.

VER. 10. For. Or "therefore."—Weeping. These figurative expressions denote excessive grief. Psal. lxxix. 6. C.

VER. 13. Memorial. Thou wilt be remembered by us with gratitude for all eternity, (H.) or wilt thou punish for ever such short-lived creatures? C.—S. Paul understands this of Jesus Christ, (Heb. i. 11. Bert.) or he rather refers to ver. 26. H.—The hope of the Messias gives me comfort. W.

VER. 14. Come. Pointed out (Jer. xxix. 10. C.); or David wishes to repair the ravages caused by Absalom, or foretells the return from captivity, (H.) and the grace granted to the Church, and to every faithful soul. W.

16 And the Gentiles shall fear thy name, O Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

17 For the Lord hath built up Sion : and he shall be seen in his glory.

18 He hath had regard to the prayer of the humble : and he hath not despised their petition.

19 Let these things be written unto another generation : and the people that shall be created, shall praise the Lord :

20 Because he hath looked forth from his high sanctuary : from heaven the Lord hath looked upon the earth.

21 That he might hear the groans of them that are in fetters : that he might release the children of the slain :

22 That they may declare the name of the Lord in Sion : and his praise in Jerusalem.

23 When the people assembled together, and kings to serve the Lord.

24 He answered him in the way of his strength : Declare unto me the fewness of my days.

25 Call me not away in the midst of my days : thy years are unto generation and generation.

26 In the beginning, O Lord, thou foundedst the earth : and the heavens are the works of thy hands.

27 They shall perish, but thou remainest : and all of them shall grow old like a garment :

And as a vesture thou shalt change them, and they shall be changed. 28 But thou art always the self-same, and thy years shall not fail.

29 The children of thy servants shall continue and their seed shall be directed for ever.

PSALM CII.

BENEDIC ANIMA.

Thanksgiving to God for his mercies.

1 For David himself.

BLESS the Lord, O my soul : and let all that is within me bless his holy name.

2 Bless the Lord, O my soul, and never forget all he hath done for thee.

VER. 15. Thereof. They had a great regard for the very soil. 4 Kings v. 17. C.—Heb. "dust," as it was then uncultivated. Bert.

VER. 16. Glory. The conversion of nations is often predicted as about to take place after the captivity ; yet not so fully, till the time of Christ. C.

VER. 18. Humble. Patriarchs, priests, and all true penitents. W.

VER. 19. Generation. Lit. "in another," by the subsequent writers of the Old and New Testaments. H.—Let all posterity become acquainted with this psalm, and know under what obligations we have been to the Lord.—Created. The Jews after the captivity, and, in a higher sense, (C.) Christians, the new creature. 2 Cor. v. 17. C. W.—This interpretation seems much the better, as kings and nations were converted only by the Messias and his apostles. Bert.

VER. 22. That. The faithful in the Church endeavour to serve Christ. W.

VER. 23. Kings. This did not take place till the gospel was preached, (C.) though some kings offered sacrifice before, yet without being converted. See Zach. ii. 10. H.

VER. 24. He answered him in the way of his strength. That is, the people mentioned in the foregoing verse, or the penitent, in whose person this psalm is delivered, answered the Lord in the way of his strength : that is, according to the best of his power and strength : inquiring after the fewness of his days : to know if he should live long enough to see the happy restoration of Sion, &c. Ch.

VER. 25. Days. Allow me time to grow in virtue. W.—If I be cut off in my youth, I may not be prepared. M.

VER. 27. Perish. Or be changed in their qualities, (W.) as well as all other things, like a garment.

VER. 28. Fail. This regards Christ, (Heb. i.,) who has established his Church, (C.) to be perpetual (W.) in this world, (H.) and triumphant in eternity, ver. 29. C.—The psalm must therefore be understood literally of Him ; unless it may have two senses, which those to whom S. Paul wrote must have known, otherwise it would not prove Christ's Divinity. The Socinians are greatly puzzled how to evade this argument. Bert.

PSAL. CII. VER. 1. Himself. All agree that David wrote this psalm as a model of resignation. The occasion is not known. Bert.

3 Who forgiveth all thy iniquities : who healeth all thy diseases.

4 Who redeemeth thy life from destruction : who crowneth thee with mercy and compassion.

5 Who satisfieth thy desire with good things : thy youth shall be renewed like the eagle's.

6 The Lord doth mercies, and judgment for all that suffer wrong.

7 He hath made his ways known to Moses : his wills to the children of Israel.

8 *The Lord is compassionate and merciful : long suffering and plenteous in mercy.

9 He will not always be angry : nor will he threaten for ever.

10 He hath not dealt with us according to our sins : nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 For according to the height of the heaven above the earth : he hath strengthened his mercy towards them that fear him.

12 As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our iniquities from us.

13 As a father hath compassion on his children, so hath the Lord compassion on them that fear him : 14 for he knoweth our frame.

He remembereth that we are dust : 15 man's days are as grass, as the flower of the field so shall he flourish.

16 For the spirit shall pass in him, and he shall not be : and he shall know his place no more.

17 But the mercy of the Lord is from eternity and unto eternity upon them that fear him :

And his justice unto children's children, 18 to such as keep his covenant,

And are mindful of his commandments to do them.

19 The Lord hath prepared his throne in heaven : and his kingdom shall rule over all.

* Exod. xxxiv. 6; Num. xiv. 8.

VER. 5. Eagle's. Which get fresh feathers every year, like other birds. Isa. xl. 31. C.

VER. 6. Mercies. Heb. "Justice" in protecting the innocent.

VER. 9. Ever. He executes his threats, but soon pardons us. C.—Heb. "he will not plead always, nor watch to surprise us for ever" (C.); or "retain" his anger. Bert.—He is inclined to pity us, and only inflicts a temporal punishment on the penitent, as Christ has paid their ransom. W.

VER. 11. Earth. There is no proportion between God's mercy and our crimes. C.—Sins are perfectly washed away, (W.) and not barely covered, as the east cannot be the west. Bert.—Sin remitted "sets for ever." S. Aug.

VER. 14. He remembereth. Rom. Sept. and Psalter, &c., "Remember." Other copies agree with us. C.—God "compassionates the frailty of those who fear him. Origen falsely inferred from ver. 9, that the devils and the damned would one day be saved. But this is contrary to Scripture. Ver. 17. Matt. xxv.; Apoc. xx., &c. W.

VER. 16. In him. Or "over it;" the flower. Or the spirit of God's indignation will overwhelm him. The soul of man departs, and cannot naturally be reunited with the body, though it greatly desire that union. C.

VER. 17. Justice. In protecting the oppressed, (C.) and rendering to every one according to his deserts abundantly. H.

VER. 19. All. When Christ shall sit in judgment, (Bert.), and the wicked be suffered no longer to disturb the order of things, and the joy of the elect. H.

VER. 20. His angels. You who have executed the orders of God for our delivery, help us to return him thanks. C.—Hearkening. Lit. "to hear," (H.) or that all may learn to obey God's mandates, when they perceive how carefully the angels put them in execution. Bert.

VER. 21. Hosts. Sun, &c., which never deviate from their regular course.

VER. 22. Soul. In vain should we behold all nature praising God, if we neglected that duty. Bert.

PSAL. CIII. VER. 1. Himself. Sept. Comp. adds, "a psalm on the creation," (H.) as this is the subject; but there is no title in the original. Bert. The psalm contains "a divine and natural philosophy" (Euseb.) respecting the creation and providence.—This psalm seems to be a continuation of the preceding one. C.—Great. Lit. "magnified," in the same sense as we say, hallowed be thy 20 Bless the Lord, all ye his angels : you that are mighty in strength, and execute his word, hearkening to the voice of his orders.

21 Bless the Lord, all ye his hosts : you ministers of his that do his will.

22 Bless the Lord, all his works : in every place of his dominion, O my soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIII.

BENEDIC ANIMA.

God is to be praised for his mighty works, and wonderful providence.

1 For David himself.

BLESS the Lord, O my soul : O Lord my God, thou art exceedingly great.

Thou hast put on praise and beauty : 2 and art clothed with light as with a garment.

Who stretchest out the heaven like a pavilion : 3 who coverest the higher rooms thereof with water.

Who makest the clouds thy chariot : who walkest upon the wings of the winds.

4 *Who makest thy angels spirits : and thy ministers a burning fire.

5 Who hast founded the earth upon its own bases : it shall not be moved for ever and ever.

6 The deep, like a garment, is its clothing : above the mountains shall the waters stand.

7 At thy rebuke they shall flee : at the voice of thy thunder they shall fear.

8 The mountains ascend, and the plains descend into the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou hast set a bound which they shall not pass over : neither shall they return to cover the earth.

10 Thou sendest forth springs in the vales : between the midst of the hills the waters shall pass.

11 All the beasts of the field shall drink : the wild asses shall expect in their thirst.

name, praying that God may be honoured by all his creatures (H.); though He cannot increase in holiness, &c. S. Aug.—We become acquainted with his greatness by considering his works. C.—Praise. Lit. "confession." (H.) Heb. "glory." C.—Thou art entitled to all praise. W.

VER. 2. Light. In this manner he always appeared. 1 Tim. vi. 16, Exod. iii. 2. C.—Christ only once assumed such a glorious form at his transfiguration, because he came to instruct our mind and heart. Bert.—Stretchest. Heb. and Sept. have the verbs in the third person, till ver. 6, as the Vulg. has here extendens. But S. Jerom. and others agree with us, though S. Paul quotes according to the Heb. Ver. 4. H.

VER. 3. Water. The Fathers are not agreed about the nature or situation of these waters. Some take them to be angels. S. Jer. Gen. i. 7.—Others suppose that the waters in the clouds, (C.) or the crystalline substance in the region of the stars, are designated. W.—These waters are represented as the roof of God's palace. Euseb.—Winds. With surprising velocity, his providence being every where. Theod.

VER. 4. Fire. The elements execute his will, (C.) or rather, as the apostle, and Chal., &c. intimate, the angels do this (Bert.) with zeal and activity, (Heb. i. 7. H.) and ease. W.

VER. 5. Ever. The established order shall subsist, though the earth may move. Psal. ci. 27. Bert.

VER. 6. The deep. Heb. "thou hast covered it with the abyss." This proves that there was no pre-existent matter, otherwise God would not have begun with plunging his work in the abyss, and in confusion. But he chose to bring this beautiful world out of a state of disorder in the space of six days, as Moses and the psalmist relate. Bert.—At first, all was created covered with the waters. Gen. i.

VER. 7. Fear. Heb. "retire precipitately" to their beds, at thy command, (H.) on the third day. C.

VER. 8, 9. The . . . descend. This should be within a parenthesis, (Bert.) as the sequel speaks of the waters. H.—Earth. This seemed miraculous to those who supposed that the earth was flat. S. Amb. Hex. iii. 22; Job vii. 12; Amos v. 8. C.

VER. 11. Expect, waiting for one another, as all cannot drink at the fountains at the same time. The Chal. has the same idea, though the Heb. is explained, "shall break (Houbig. 'shall satisfy') their thirst." Bert.

12 Over them the birds of the air shall dwell : from the midst of the rocks they shall give forth their voices.

13 Thou waterest the hills from thy upper rooms : the earth shall be filled with the fruit of thy works :

14 Bringing forth grass for cattle, and herb for the service of men.

That thou mayest bring bread out of the earth : 15 and that wine may cheer the heart of man.

That he may make the face cheerful with oil : and that bread may strengthen man's heart.

16 The trees of the field shall be filled, and the cedars of Libanus which he hath planted : 17 there the sparrows shall make their nests.

The highest of them is the house of the heron. 18 The high hills are a refuge for the harts, the rock for the urchins.

19 He hath made the moon for seasons : the sun knoweth his going down.

20 Thou hast appointed darkness, and it is night : in it shall all the beasts of the woods go about.

21 The young lions roaring after their prey, and seeking their meat from God.

22 The sun ariseth, and they are gathered together : and they shall lie down in their dens.

23 Man shall go forth to his work, and to his labour until the evening.

24 How great are thy works, O Lord . thou hast made all things in wisdom ; the earth is filled with thy riches.

25 So is this great sea, which stretcheth wide its arms : there are creeping things without number.

Creatures little and great. 26 There the ships shall go.

This sea-dragon which thou hast formed to play therein. 27 Al. expect of thee that thou give them food in season.

28 What thou givest to them they shall gather up : when thou openest thy hand, they shall all be filled with good.

29 But if thou turnest away thy face, they shall be troubled : thou shalt take away their breath, and they shall fail, and shall return to their dust.

30 Thou shalt send forth thy spirit, and they shall be created : and thou shalt renew the face of the earth.

31 May the glory of the Lord endure for ever : the Lord shall rejoice in his works.

32 He looketh upon the earth, and maketh it tremble he toucheth the mountains, and they smoke.

33 "I will sing to the Lord as long as I live : I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.

34 Let my speech be acceptable to him : but I will take delight in the Lord.

35 Let sinners be consumed out of the earth, and the unjust, so that they be no more : O my soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIV.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

A thanksgiving to God, for his benefits to his people Israel

1 Alleluia.

GIVE ^bglory to the Lord, and call upon his name . declare his deeds among the Gentiles.

2 Sing to him, yea sing praises to him : relate all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name : let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord.

4 Seek ye the Lord, and be strengthened : seek his face evermore.

5 Remember his marvellous works, which he hath done ; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth.

6 O ye seed of Abraham, his servant ; ye sons of Jacob, his chosen.

7 He is the Lord our God : his judgments are in all the earth.

8 He hath remembered his covenant for ever : the word which he commanded to a thousand generations .

9 Which he made to Abraham ; and his oath to Isaac :

10 And he appointed the same to Jacob for a law and to Israel, for an everlasting testament :

b 1 Par. xvi. 8 ; Isa. xii. 4.—c Gen. xxii. 16.

VER. 13. Rooms, with rain, ver. 3. C.—Earth, or its inhabitants. T.

VER. 14. Service. Cattle, or beasts of burden, are thus fed for man's service, though he may also eat legumes, &c. C.—Bring. God gives the increase. 1 Cor. iii. 7. H.

VER. 15. Oil. This was an article of food, (Bert.) and deemed almost as requisite for anointing the body as bread and wine to support nature. Pliny, xiv. 22. Hence it was prohibited in days of fasting. C.

VER. 16. Field. Heb. "of Jave."—Houbigant would substitute ssodi, "field," (H.) as this name of God is never used to denote "high" trees, &c. Bert.

VER. 17. Sparrows, or "birds" (Psal. ci. 8. H.) in general. Bert.—High-est ; or, lit. "the tribes of the heron is their leader," (H.) first making their nests. Sept. seem to have read better than the present Heb. "the stork, the fir-trees are its house." Bert.

VER. 18. Urchins. S. Aug. reads also, "hares." These desert places are not useless. C.

VER. 19. Seasons and festivals, which it points out : muad. H.—During the night w'd beasts seek their prey, as men and cattle may labour in the day-time.

VER. 24. Riches. Lit. "possession." H.—Heb. "The fulness of the earth is thy possession." Sept. and ancient psal. "creature ;" κτίσις. The other interpreters read κρητεις, (C.) which the Vulg. adopts. H.

VER. 25. Arms. Man acts thus to denote something very extensive. H.—The sea is frequently put for the same purpose. Job xi. 9 ; Lam. ii. 13. Arms is omitted in the Sept. and the ancient psalters.—Creeping. Fishes, (Gen. i. 20. C.) and all animals without feet (W.) in the waters. H.

VER. 26. Go. The sea, which seems to be placed as a barrier, tends, by means of navigation, to the general convenience of nations. C.—Dragon. Leviathan, a huge fish, (Job xl. 20. W.) which Bochart takes to be the crocodile ; though that monster is found rather in rivers. Bert.—It designates here all whales, and other great fishes which play in the sea without experiencing any fear like mortals. Some translate "to play with it," (C.) as αὐτῷ cannot agree with Θά- λασσα. Bert.—The prodigious size of these fishes costs God nothing. C.—The whole creation is but a plaything for him, ludens in orbe terrarum. Prov. viii. 31. H.

VER. 28. All, is not in Heb., Sept. C.—But the sense is the same. H.

VER. 30. Thy. Chal. adds, "holy ;" and the Fathers explain it of a spiritual renovation, or of the resurrection of the body. Bert.

VER. 31. Works. Seeing that they are good. Gen. i. 31.

VER. 35. No more. So S. Paul pronounced sentence on those who did not love the Lord Jesus, (1 Cor. xvi. 22,) yet without any animosity. Bert.—The saints thus pray for the conversion of all, (S. Athan.,) or express their approbation of God's sentence against the damned. W.

PSAL. CIV. VER. 1. Alleluia. This word occurs at the end of the preceding psalm in Heb., and means "Praise ye the Lord," though it is also used as an exclamation of joy ; for which reason it is left untranslated. See Apoc. xx. S. Aug. Ep. ad Casulan. C.—The first fifteen verses of this psalm nearly agree with that which was composed by David when the ark was to be removed from the house of Obcdedom. 1 Par. xvi. 8, 22. H.—But the last part seems to have been added by him, or by another afterwards, with some small alterations. Bert.—Gentiles. Their conversion is thus insinuated. C.—The apostles preached to all. Euseb.

VER. 3. Glory. 2 Cor. x. 17. Euseb.—Lit. "be praised," (H.) knowing it what an honour you have been raised, (Deut. xxx. 7 ; Jer. ix. 23,) and live accordingly.

VER. 6. His servant. Or "servants." Sept. Vulg. is ambiguous. Heb. declares for servant here ; but, his chosen, is certainly plural, and refers to all the people, and 1 Par. xvi. 13, we read, seed of Israel, his servants. H.

VER. 8. Generations. Or from the call of Abraham. But this was to be understood if the Israelites continued faithful, (Deut. xxviii.,) or the promise regards the spiritual children of Abraham, who are blessed for ever, (Bert.,) and continue till the end of the world. H.

VER. 11. Lot. Lit. "line," with which land was measured. C.—The de-

11 Saying: To thee will I give the land of Chanaan, the lot of your inheritance.

12 When they were but a small number: yea very few, and sojourners therein:

13 And they passed from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people.

14 He suffered no man to hurt them: and he reprov'd kings for their sakes.

15 *Touch ye not my anointed: and do no evil to my prophets.

16 And he called a famine upon the land: and he broke in pieces all the support of bread.

17 He sent a man before them: b Joseph, who was sold for a slave.

18 *They humbled his feet in fetters: the iron pierced his soul, 19 until his word came.

The word of the Lord inflamed him. 20 *The king sent, and he released him: the ruler of the people, and he set him at liberty.

21 He made him master of his house, and ruler of all his possession.

22 That he might instruct his princes as himself, and teach his ancients wisdom.

23 *And Israel went into Egypt: and Jacob was a sojourner in the land of Cham.

24 *And he increased his people exceedingly: and strengthened them over their enemies.

25 He turned their heart to hate his people: and to deal deceitfully with his servants.

26 *He sent Moses, his servant: Aaron, the man whom he had chosen.

27 *He gave them power to show his signs, and his wonders in the land of Cham.

28 *He sent darkness, and made it obscure: and grieved not his words.

* 2 Kings i. 14. 1 Par. xvi. 22.—b Gen. xxxvii.—c Gen. xxxix. 20.—d Gen. xli. 14.
 Gen. xli. 6.—f Exod. i. 7; Acts vii. 17.—g Exod. iii. 10, and v. 29.
h Exod. vii. 10.—i Exod. x. 21.—k Exod. vii. 20.

scendants of the patriarchs would never have lost this inheritance if they had observed the law. The promise was therefore conditional; though it was absolute, inasmuch as all were to be blessed in their seed: as they had begun to be, when Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus.

VER. 12. Very few. Heb. "as it were reduced to nothing," to avoid a tautology. Bert.—But this version is not necessary. H.—Jacob at this time was not married, (Bert.), and his parents had no part of the land.

VER. 15. Prophets. The word anointed is thus explained, as the patriarchs were not kings over any but their own families, though they were equal in riches to many kings. They foresaw future events, and offered sacrifice to God, as priests, in which sense also they may be styled anointed.

VER. 16. And. The psalmist continues to mention the favours of God till the Israelites entered the promised land, which the author of 1 Par. xvi. passes over. H.—Bread. In time of famine people are not strengthened with their food. Euseb. Ezech. iv. 16, and v. 16.

VER. 17. He sent. Drawing good from the malice of Joseph's brethren, (H.) in which he had no hand. Bert.

VER. 18. Fetters. Heb. cobol, (H.) "a chain, or the stocks." The meaning is not ascertained. C.

VER. 19. His word. By which he foretold his own glory, or what should befall the king's two officers, which brought him into notice. Gen. xxxvii. 9, and xl. 22. His word, may also refer to God's decree. C.—Inflamed him. He received the gift of prophecy, (H.) and being inflamed with the love of God, resisted the solicitations of Putiphar's wife.

VER. 22. Instruct. Heb. "bind" by precepts or chains, (Bert.), as he had all power.—Wisdom. Joseph was considered as the oracle of Egypt, and the prime minister. C.

VER. 23. Cham. Who resided there, and was worshipped under the name of Jupiter Ammon. Bochart, Phaleg. iv. 1. C.—Misraim was his son, and peopled the land. Gen. x. 13. W.

VER. 24. Exceedingly. In 215 years 600,000 warriors sprung from seventy people, (C.) or from seventy-five, as Sept. and S. Stephen read, comprising eight wives, Jacob, and sixty-six of his descendants.

29 *He turned, their waters into blood, and destroyed their fish.

30 *Their land brought forth frogs, in the inner chambers of their kings.

31 *He spoke, and there came divers sorts of flies, and cinifes in all their coasts.

32 He gave them hail for rain: a burning fire in their land.

33 And he destroyed their vineyards and their fig-trees: and he broke in pieces the trees of their coasts.

34 *He spoke, and the locusts came, and the bruchus. of which there was no number:

35 And they devoured all the grass in their land, and consumed all the fruit of their ground.

36 *And he slew all the first-born in their land: the first-fruits of all their labour.

37 *And he brought them out with silver and gold: and there was not among their tribes one that was feeble.

38 Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them lay upon them.

39 *He spread a cloud for their protection, and fire to give them light in the night.

40 *They asked, and the quail came: and he filled them with the bread of heaven.

41 *He opened the rock, and waters flowed: rivers ran down in the dry land.

42 *Because he remembered his holy word, which he had spoken to his servant, Abraham.

43 And he brought forth his people with joy, and his chosen with gladness.

44 And he gave them the lands of the Gentiles: and they possessed the labours of the people:

45 That they might observe his justifications, and seek after his law.

r Exod. xvi. 13.—s Num. xx. 11.—t Gen. xvii. 7.

VER. 25. He turned their heart, &c. Not that God (who is never the author of sin) moved the Egyptians to hate and persecute his people; but that the Egyptians took occasion of hating and envying them, from the sight of the benefits which God bestowed upon them. Ch. S. Aug.—He permitted the malice of the Egyptians, (Theod.), and employed them to chastise his people, who had adored idols. Euseb. Acts vii. 43.

VER. 28. Grieved not his words. That is, he was not wanting to fulfil his words: or he did not grieve Moses and Aaron, the carriers of his words: or he did not grieve his words, that is, his sons, the children of Israel, who enjoyed light whilst the Egyptians were oppressed with darkness. Ch.—He performed what he had threatened without reluctance. W.—We may also translate, "he added no threat" (H.) before this ninth plague was inflicted. Hef "and they did not irritate (or transgress) his word." The envoys of God were obedient to him.

VER. 29. Blood. In reality, so that the fishes were killed. S. Athan.

VER. 30. Land. Including the rivers. Exod. vii. 1, and viii. 3.—Kings, or noblemen. Bert.

VER. 31. Flies. This was revealed to David, or known by tradition, as it is not recorded by Moses. W.—Some copies of the Sept. have, "the dog-fly," cinifes, (Exod. viii. 16,) gnats, (H.) which are very common and tormenting in Egypt. The Jews understand lice. Joseph. and the Chal. C.

VER. 32. Rain. Which falls in Egypt, though less frequently. C. Wisd xvi. 17.

VER. 34. Bruchus. An insect of the locust kind, (Ch.) or a worm which spoils corn, &c. W.

VER. 36. Labour. This explains the first part of the verse. Gen. xlix. 3; Psal. lxxvii. 51. H.—The fifth and sixth plagues are not specified. W.

VER. 37. Gold. Which the Egyptians gave to get quit of them, (Exod. xi. 1,) and that with joy, (ver. 38,) though they might at first only intend to lend. S. Aug. Bert.

VER. 40. Asked. Chal. and ancient psalters add, "for meat." Heb. "he (Moses, or all he people) asked, and the quail came," at Sin. Exod. xvi. 13.

VER. 44. People. Whose crimes have deserved death. Num. xxxiii. 51 Deut. vii. 5. C.

PSALM CV.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

A confession of the manifold sins and ingratitude of the Israelites.

1 Alleluia.

GIVE^a glory to the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 ^bWho shall declare the powers of the Lord? who shall set forth all his praises?

3 Blessed are they that keep judgment, and do justice at all times.

4 Remember us, O Lord, in the favour of thy people: visit us with thy salvation.

5 That we may see the good of thy chosen, that we may rejoice in the joy of thy nation: that thou mayest be praised with thy inheritance.

6 ^cWe have sinned with our fathers: we have acted unjustly, we have wrought iniquity.

7 Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt: they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies:

And they provoked to wrath, going up to the sea, even the Red Sea.

8 And he saved them for his own name's sake: that he might make his power known.

9 ^dAnd he rebuked the Red Sea, and it was dried up: and he led them through the depths, as in a wilderness.

10 And he saved them from the hand of them that hated them: and he redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

11 ^eAnd the water covered them that afflicted them: there was not one of them left.

12 And they believed his words: and they sang his praises.

13 They had quickly done, they forgot his works: and they waited not for his counsel.

14 ^fAnd they coveted their desire in the desert: and they tempted God in the place without water.

^a Judg. xlii. 21.—^b Eccl. xlii. 35.—^c Judg. vii. 19.—^d Exod. xiv. 22.—^e Exod. xiv. 27.
^f Exod. xvii. 2.—^g Num. xi. 31.

VER. 45. His justifications. That is, his commandments: which here, and in many other places of the Scripture, are called justifications, because the keeping of them make men just. The Protestants render it by the word statutes, in favour of their doctrine, which does not allow good works to justify. Ch.

PSAL. CV. VER. 1. Alleluia. The word is repeated in some copies. S. Jer.—But Heb. has only one at the end of the preceding psalm: of which this appears to be a sequel. As in the former God's favours were specified, so here the ingratitude of his people is acknowledged. C.—It may refer to the Jews during (Euseb. Vatab.) or after the captivity, (C.) and to all in the state of sin. S. Jer. Bert.—The 47th and 48th verses agree with the three last, which were sung at the translation of the ark. 1 Par. xvi. 34. H.—Hence that canticle now makes part of our Psal. civ., xcv., and cv., with various alterations made by the prophet. Bert.

VER. 3. Times. He only who perseveres to the end shall be crowned. Matt. xxiv. 13; Ezec. xxxiii. H.—Such as these can alone worthily sound forth God's praises, (Bert.,) being so happy as to preserve their innocence, or at least to repent. W.

VER. 4. Us. Heb. "me." But Aquila, Syr., &c., agree with the Sept. Some of the Jews were already returned, and pray for the liberation of their brethren. C.—The Fathers explain it of Christian converts. S. Chrys.

VER. 6. Sinned. Here commences the confession of sins. The just man first accuses himself. Prov. xviii. 17. C.—The same prayer is repeated, Judith vii. 19, and Dan. ix. 5, as it might be applicable to the captives. Bert.—We have injured ourselves, our neighbours, and our God. W.

VER. 7. Going up. Or proceeding. The banks of the sea were more elevated than the country from which the Israelites came, (C.) and the land of Chanaan was still higher. See Psal. cvi. 23; Gen. xii. 9. H.

VER. 9. Rebuked. Commanding with power. Nah. i. 4. C.—Wilderness. Or plain country. H.

VER. 10. Redeemed. What price was given? This is a figure of baptism, in which the fruits of Christ's blood are applied to our souls. All sins are there destroyed, as the Egyptians were in the sea. S. Aug. Ser. 42, de Temp. W.

VER. 12. Words. And Moses his servant. Exod. xiv. 31, and xv. 1.

15 ^aAnd he gave them their request: and sent fulness into their souls.

16 And they provoked Moses in the camp, and Aaron, the holy one of the Lord.

17 ^bThe earth opened and swallowed up Dathan: and covered the congregation of Abiron.

18 And a fire was kindled in their congregation: the flame burned the wicked.

19 ^cThey made also a calf in Horeb: and they adored the graven thing.

20 And they changed their glory into the likeness of a calf that eateth grass.

21 They forgot God, who saved them, who had done great things in Egypt, 22 wondrous works in the land of Cham: terrible things in the Red Sea.

23 ^dAnd he said that he would destroy them: had not Moses, his chosen, stood before him in the breach:

To turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 And they set at nought the desirable land.

They believed not his word, 25 and they murmured in their tents: they hearkened not to the voice of the Lord.

26 ^eAnd he lifted up his hand over them: to overthrow them in the desert:

27 And to cast down their seed among the nations, and to scatter them in the countries.

28 They also were initiated to Beelphegor: and eat the sacrifices of the dead.

29 And they provoked him with their inventions: and destruction was multiplied among them.

30 ^fThen Phinees stood up, and pacified him: and the slaughter ceased.

31 And it was reputed to him unto justice, to generation and generation for evermore.

32 ^gThey provoked him also at the waters of contradiction: and Moses was afflicted for their sakes: 33 because they exasperated his spirit.

^b Num. xvi. 32.—^c Exod. xxxii. 4.—^d Exod. xxxii. 10.—^e Num. xiv. 32.
^f Num. xxv. 7.—^g Num. xx. 10.

VER. 13. Counsel. Three days after the passage of the sea God laid injunctions upon them at Mara, which they would not observe. Exod. xv. 22. C.—They coveted unnecessary things. W.

VER. 14. Desire. Or they greedily sought for flesh meat, (H.) at Sin, or Pharan. Exod. xvi. 13; Num. xi. 31. Chronological order is not observed. C.

VER. 16. Holy one. By his function (W.) of priest. Core wished to take his place, as the rest did to supplant Moses in the civil government. Num. xvi. C.

VER. 17. Abiron. With Core, though his children were preserved. C.—God presently resented the injury done to his ministers. Euseb.

VER. 18. Wicked. Two hundred and fifty accomplices, (Num. xv. 35. C.) and fourteen thousand seven hundred murmurers. M.

VER. 20. Grass. This enhances their folly. God is often styled the glory of his people. C.—Osce (x. 5) contemptuously calls the golden calf the glory of Samaria. H.—This idolatry was truly blameable, (Rom. i. 23,) and not the veneration paid by Catholics to the images of Christ, &c. W.—Those who pretend that the Hebrews meant to adore the true God, and not the idol Ap's, are here clearly refuted; they forgot God, &c. Acts vii. 40. Bert.

VER. 23. Breach. Like a valiant captain, (C.) or pastor. H.—God reproaches of those who neglected this duty. Ezec. xiii. 5, and xxii. 30. The psalmist alluded to the conduct of Moses, after the people had adored the calf, (Exod. xxxii. 10,) or when they had joined with Core. Num. xvi. 44. C.—The intercession of the saints is useful, (S. Aug.) still more after their victories. S. Jer. ad Vig. 2; 2 Mac. xv. 14. Bert.—God spared the people for the sake of Moses. W.

VER. 26. Over them. Swearing (C.) to destroy them, (H. Ezec. xx. 23,) and scatter them, as they now experienced. Lev. xxvi. 31, and Deut. xxviii. 36, 64.

VER. 29. Multiplied. All who had murmured perished, or this may relate to the 24,000. Num. xxv. 9. C.—Ezec. xx. 23. S. Paul (1 Cor. x. 8) speaks of those 23,000 slain by the Levites. The Heb., which has only 3000, must be incorrect.

VER. 33. He distinguished with his lips. Moses, by occasion of the people's rebellion and incredulity, was guilty of distinguishing with his lips; when, instead of speaking to the rock, as God had commanded, he said to the people, with a certain hesitation in his faith, Hear, ye rebellious and incredulous: Can we from

And he distinguished with his lips. 34 They did not destroy the nations, of which the Lord spoke unto them.

35 And they were mingled among the heathens, and earned their works: 36 and served their idols, and it became a stumbling-block to them.

37 And they sacrificed their sons, and their daughters, to devils.

38 And they shed innocent blood: the blood of their sons and of their daughters, which they sacrificed to the idols of Chanaan.

And the land was polluted with blood, 39 and was defiled with their works: and they went aside after their own inventions.

40 And the Lord was exceedingly angry with his people: and he abhorred his inheritance.

41 And he delivered them into the hands of the nations: and they that hated them had dominion over them.

42 And their enemies afflicted them: and they were humbled under their hands: 43 many times did he deliver them.

But they provoked him with their counsel: and they were brought low by their iniquities.

44 And he saw when they were in tribulation: and he heard their prayer.

45 And he was mindful of his covenant: and repented according to the multitude of his mercies.

46 And he gave them unto mercies, in the sight of all those that had made them captives.

47 Save us, O Lord, our God: and gather us from among the nations:

That we may give thanks to thy holy name, and may glory in thy praise.

48 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say: So be it, so be it.

VER. 38. Chanaan. These unnatural sacrifices were perhaps practised under the judges, or at least under the kings. W.—Some pretend that the children were only made to pass over, or between fires. But this is refuted by facts. Lev. xviii. 21, and 4 Kings xvi. 3; Jer. vii. 30.

VER. 39. And was. Heb. "and they were defiled." S. Jer.—Inventions. Idols of their imaginations (H.) and lusts. C.

VER. 45. Repented. Ceased to punish, (Euseb.) when the people repented. S. Jer.—God then regarded them in mercy, having given them grace to repent. W.

VER. 46. Mercies. He inspired their enemies with pity for them. Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes showed them favour. Psal. lxxxiii. 12. C.

VER. 48. So be it. The second Amen occurs not in Heb. But Alleluia is placed instead, which the Vulg. makes the title of the next psalm. H.

PSAL. CVI. VER. 1. Alleluia. S. Aug. repeats this word. But it occurs in the Heb., &c., at the end of the preceding psalm, of which this is a continuation, showing how God pardoned his people, and delivered them from captivity, (C.) and mankind from sin. H. Fathers. Bert.

VER. 2. Countries. The Jews from Babylon, and all who were redeemed by Christ. C.—He was promised immediately after the fall. W.

VER. 3. Sea. Heb. min, for which we should read imin, "the right," denoting the south. C.—But the sea, or ocean, is properly used in the same sense.

2 Let them say so that have been redeemed by the Lord, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy: and gathered out of the countries,

3 From the rising and from the setting of the sun, from the north, and from the sea.

4 They wandered in a wilderness, in a place without water: they found not the way of a city for their habitation.

5 They were hungry and thirsty: their soul fainted in them.

6 And they cried to the Lord in their tribulation: and he delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And he led them into the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men.

9 For he hath satisfied the empty soul, and hath filled the hungry soul with good things.

10 Such as sat in darkness, and in the shadow of death: bound in want and in iron.

11 Because they had exasperated the words of God: and provoked the counsel of the Most High:

12 And their heart was humbled with labours: they were weakened, and there was none to help them.

13 Then they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and he delivered them out of their distresses.

14 And he brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death: and broke their bonds in sunder.

15 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him, and his wonderful works to the children of men.

16 Because he hath broken gates of brass, and burst iron bars.

17 He took them out of the way of their iniquity: for they were brought low for their injustices.

18 Their soul abhorred all manner of meat: and they drew nigh even to the gates of death.

19 And they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and he delivered them out of their distresses.

20 He sent his word, and healed them: and delivered them from their destructions.

21 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men.

Bert.—The Ammonites, Philistines, Syrians, and Idumeans, from these four quarters, often reduced the Israelites to servitude, under the judges. Houbig.—From all parts the Jews of the ten tribes returned in the reigns of Darius and Alexander. C. Diss.—But the texts which are applied to this event speak rather of the conversion of the Gentiles, which the prophet has here in view. Bert.

VER. 5. Hungry. As both Jews and Gentiles were for the word of God, (Amos viii. 11.) when Christ appeared. H.—Their wants cried aloud, (S. Aug.,) though they sought him not. Isa. lxxv. 1. Bert.

VER. 8. Mercies. We are unworthy to open our mouths. This chorus is repeated (ver. 15, 21, 31) by the people, after the Levites had sung the intermediate sentences. C.—The ver. 6, 13, 19, are of the same nature, and refer to different sorts of calamities. Bert.—All the benefits of God, proceeding from his mercy, and not from man's deserts, praise him. W.

VER. 10. Darkness. This second allegory represents the condition of the captives, and of mankind, before Christ's coming. C.—The former enjoyed some liberty. Jer. xxix. 5.—But the latter were most miserable, (Matt ix. 15; Luke iv. 18,) and of these the words are most naturally explained. Bert.

VER. 11. Exasperated. Heb. "changed, or frustrated."

VER. 12. Labours. There were slaves of various descriptions: some were confined to hard labour, and chained down at night. C.

VER. 14. Bonds. Of their passions. See S. Aug. Conf. viii. 11. H.

VER. 17. Iniquity. Making them alter their conduct. Heb. seems less correct: "they are foolish on account of their way, and they," &c.

VER. 20. Word. Jesus Christ, according to the prophetic sense, adopted by the Fathers, (S. Athan. Or. 3, &c.,) though it literally implies, that at God's 22 And let them sacrifice the sacrifice of praise: and declare his works with joy.

23 They that go down to the sea in ships, doing business in the great waters:

24 These have seen the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.

25 He said the word, and there arose a storm of wind: and the waves thereof were lifted up.

26 They mount up to the heavens, and they go down to the depths: their soul pined away with evils.

27 They are troubled, and reeled like a drunken man: and all their wisdom was swallowed up.

28 And they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and he brought them out of their distresses.

29 And he turned the storm into a breeze: and its waves were still.

30 And they rejoiced because they were still: and he brought them to the haven which they wished for.

31 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him, and his wonderful works to the children of men.

32 And let them exalt him in the church of the people: and praise him in the chair of the ancients.

33 He hath turned rivers into a wilderness: and the sources of waters into dry ground:

34 A fruitful land into barrenness, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

35 He hath turned a wilderness into pools of waters, and a dry land into water-springs.

36 And he hath placed there the hungry: and they made a city for their habitation.

37 And they sowed fields, and planted vineyards: and they yielded fruit of birth.

38 And he blessed them, and they were multiplied exceedingly: and their cattle he suffered not to decrease.

39 Then they were brought to be few: and they were afflicted through the trouble of evils and sorrow.

40 Contempt was poured forth upon their princes: and he caused them to wander where there was no passing, and out of the way.

41 And he helped the poor out of poverty: and made him families like a flock of sheep.

42 *The just shall see, and shall rejoice: and all iniquity shall stop her mouth.

command the sick were healed. Matt. viii. 7.—This allegory again represents the state of captivity. C.

VER. 23. Down to the sea, &c. Captivity is here compared to a tempest. C.—The apostles carry the tidings of salvation to all places. Persecutions are raised; but God grants peace to his Church under Constantine. Euseb.

VER. 29. Breeze. Heb. "silence, or calm."

VER. 31. Men. We must thank God for having enabled us to repent. Ver. 8. W.

VER. 33. Wilderness. God caused his people to pass through the Red Sea, and the Jordan, to possess the fruitful country of Chanaan, part of which had been cursed for the crimes of the Sodomites. H.—He has punished Babylon, (Jer. xxv. 12,) made a strait road for his people, (Isa. xxxv. 8,) and enabled them to cultivate their country again. Ver. 41. C.—The synagogue has been abandoned, and the Church chosen. Bert.

VER. 34. Barrenness. Or "saltiness." H.—He alludes to the environs of Sodom. Gen. xiii. 10, and xix. 24. W.

VER. 40. Princes. Jechonias was humbled, (H.) and exalted, with Daniel, &c. 4 Kings xxv. 27. Others explain it of Nabuchodonosor and Baltassar, who were reduced to the state of ignominy and death. C.—The Jews experienced the greatest miseries at the last siege of Jerusalem. Bert.

VER. 41. Sheep. The Gentiles took the place of the obstinate Jews. S. Aug.

43 Who is wise, and will keep these things: and will understand the mercies of the Lord?

PSALM CVII.

PARATUM COR MEUM.

The prophet praiseth God for benefits received.

1 A canticle of a psalm for David himself.

2 MY heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready: I will sing, and will give praise, with my glory.

3 Arise, my glory; arise, psaltery and harp: I will arise in the morning early.

4 I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people: and I will sing unto thee among the nations.

5 For thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth even unto the clouds.

6 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and thy glory over all the earth: 7 that thy beloved may be delivered.

Save with thy right hand, and hear me. 8 God hath spoken in his holiness:

I will rejoice, and I will divide Sichem: and I will mete out the vale of tabernacles.

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim the protection of my head.

Juda is my king: 10 Moab the pot of my hope.

Over Edom I will stretch out my shoe: the aliens are become my friends.

11 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

12 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our armies?

13 O grant us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

14 Through God we shall do mightily: and he will bring our enemies to nothing.

PSALM CVIII.

DEUS LAudem MEAM.

David, in the person of Christ, prayeth against his persecutors; more especially the traitor Judas; foretelling and approving his just punishment for his obstinacy in sin, and final impenitence.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

2 O GOD, be not thou silent in my praise: for the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful man is opened against me.

3 They have spoken against me with deceitful tongues:

VER. 42. Mouth. The psalmist saw Babylon before its ruin, (C.) at least in spirit. God's judgments strengthen virtue, and repress the wicked. H.

PSAL. CVII. VER. 1. Himself. By repeating here what occurs in Psal. lvi. and lix., David teaches us to excite our fervour by such sentiments as have formerly made an impression upon us. Bert.—He spoke before of his own victories: now he considers those of Christ, and of his Church, (Gench.,) as well as the state of the captives. Theod. C.

VER. 4. Nations. David made various conquests, which prefigured those of Christ, to whom the rest of the psalm belongs. S. Aug. W.

VER. 8. Holiness. Or holy one, sancto (H.); meaning Jeremias xxv. 11, who foretold the end of the captivity, (C.) or David himself, and the Messiah, his Son, in whom he will rejoice. H.

PSAL. CVIII. VER. 1. David. S. Peter attributes it to him, and gives us the key to this psalm, by applying ver. 8 to the traitor Judas. Acts i. 16, 20. Bert. T. 7.—Our Saviour seems to allude to it, when he styles Judas the son of perdition. John xvii. 8. The Church used it in the deposition of bishops, and against the usurpers of ecclesiastical goods (Grot.): and, in times of ignorance, some thought hereby to discover thieves. The style is very vehement, (C.) containing the sentence pronounced by the sovereign Judge against the reprobate. H.

VER. 2. Praise. Heb. "God of my praise," (C.) whom I always adore, under every dispensation of providence. H.—Yet the original may agree with the and they have compassed me about with words of hatred ; and have fought against me without cause.

4 Instead of making me a return of love, they detracted me : but I gave myself to prayer.

5 And they repaid me evil for good : and hatred for my love.

6 Set thou the sinner over him : and may the devil stand at his right hand.

7 When he is judged, may he go out condemned ; and may his prayer be turned to sin.

8 May his days be few : and his bishopric let another take.

9 May his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10 Let his children be carried about vagabonds, and beg ; and let them be cast out of their dwellings.

11 May the usurer search all his substance : and let strangers plunder his labours.

12 May there be none to help him ; nor any one to pity his fatherless offspring.

13 May his posterity be cut off ; in one generation may his name be blotted out.

14 May the iniquity of his fathers be remembered in the sight of the Lord : and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out.

15 May they be before the Lord continually, and let the memory of them perish from the earth : 16 because he remembered not to show mercy.

17 But persecuted the poor man and the beggar ; and the broken in heart, to put him to death.

18 And he loved cursing, and it shall come unto him : and he would not have blessing, and it shall be far from him.

And he put on cursing, like a garment : and it

Vulg., and Christ desires to be glorified, (John xii. 23, and xvii. 5. Bert.) and styles his passion, his praise. Theod.—David appeals to God's judgment. C.

VER. 4. Detracted. Heb. and Sept. "calumniated," as ver. 20, and 29. C.—Prayer. Jesus Christ prayed for his enemies, (Luke xxiii. 34. Flam.,) and did many good works for the benefit of all. John x. 32 ; Acts x. 38. David had also signified himself in the defence of his country, and yet was banished. C.

VER. 6. Set thou the sinner over him, &c. Give to the devil, that arch-sinner, power over him : let him enter into him, and possess him. The imprecations, contained in the thirty verses of this psalm, are opposed to the thirty pieces of silver for which Judas betrayed our Lord : and are to be taken as prophetic denunciations of the evils that should befall the traitor, and his accomplices the Jews ; and not properly as curses. Ch.—The devil entered into Judas, (John xiii. 2. C.) who lunged himself in despair. W.

VER. 7. Prayer. Or may his supplication to judges for pardon irritate them, (C.) and let it not move God to mercy any more than a sin. M.—God rejects such prayers as are destitute of the proper conditions, as he did those of Antiochus, (S. Aug. C.) and they are a fresh sin. Bert.—Yet the prayer of a sinner is not so, when he acts sincerely. H.

VER. 8. Bishopric. Επισκοπήν, "inspection or pre-eminence" of any kind. Judas lost his spiritual office, and the Jews all dominion, in a very short time. S. Peter quotes this passage, and only the Socinians will assert that he does not adhere to the literal sense. Bert.—The apostleship (W.) was given to S. Matthias. C.

VER. 9. Widow. Judas was married, (S. Aug.,) and stole for his family (Lyr.); though, as the Scripture is silent, S. Chrys. believes the contrary. M.

VER. 10. Out. Heb. "seek." S. Jer. "be sought after," which implies that they are rejected. Houbig.—The being reduced to beg is terrible to one who has been brought up in a better manner.—Dwellings. Sept. (M.) and S. Jer. "ruins." The Jews were forbidden to weep over the ruins of Jerusalem, and are become vagabonds. C.

VER. 11. Usurer. The Romans forced the miserable Jews to pay taxes, and Domitian banished them from Rome, to live in a wood, where their furniture was only a basket and some hay, and their wives came to beg.

VER. 13. In one. Heb. "another." Let none remember them. The ruin of Jerusalem took place within forty years' time. C.

VER. 14. Out. As children derive great advantages from the piety of their parents, so they also feel the punishment of their crimes when they imitate them. Dent. xxiv. 16 ; Ezec. xviii. 20. If they share in the afflictions of their family, and are free from sin, this must be considered as a trial, and they will be amply 19 May it be unto him like a garment which covereth him ; and like a girdle with which he is girded continually.

20 This is the work of them who detract me before the Lord ; and who speak evils against my soul.

21 But thou, O Lord, do with me for thy name's sake : because thy mercy is sweet.

Do thou deliver me, 22 for I am poor and needy, and my heart is troubled within me.

23 I am taken away like the shadow when it declineth : and I am shaken off as locusts.

24 My knees are weakened through fasting : and my flesh is changed for oil.

25 And I am become a reproach to them : they saw me, and they shook their heads.

26 Help me, O Lord, my God : save me according to thy mercy.

27 And let them know that this is thy hand : and that thou, O Lord, hast done it.

28 They will curse, and thou wilt bless : let them that rise up against me be confounded : but thy servant shall rejoice.

29 Let them that detract me be clothed with shame. and let them be covered with their confusion as with a double cloak.

30 I will give great thanks to the Lord with my mouth ; and in the midst of many I will praise him.

31 Because he hath stood at the right hand of the poor, to save my soul from persecutors.

PSALM CIX.

DIXIT DOMINUS.

Christ's exaltation, and everlasting priesthood.

rewarded in a future world. God is the arbiter of the life and death of all. External miseries may afflict both the just and sinners ; but the motive for their being sent is very different. The Jews prayed, Let his blood be upon us, and upon our children (Matt. xxvii. 25) ; and they became chargeable with all the crimes of their ancestors. Matt. xxiii. 35. C.

VER. 16. Mercy. Therefore he, the chief, and each of his adherents, can expect to find no mercy. James ii. 13. H.

VER. 18. Bones. This strikingly describes the malediction of a person who has swallowed iniquity like water. Job xv. 16 ; Prov. iv. 17. The Jews had spoken ill of Christ, and of his disciples. Matt. xxvii. 25 ; John ix. 17. C.—Let all who delight in cursing attend to this sentence. W.—They like those things, which bring on both temporal and eternal misery. M.

VER. 21. With me. Many ancient psalters supply, "thy mercy," with the Arab. C.—Grace must always accompany our endeavours. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Bert.

VER. 23. Locusts. David was forced to wander about. Christ continually sought after the lost sheep, (C.) and was hurried to different tribunals. M.—S. Jeron applies this to the Jews ; and S. Aug. to Christians under persecution. C.

VER. 24. For oil, propter oleum. The meaning is, my flesh is changed, being perfectly emaciated, and dried up, as having lost all its oil, or fitness. Ch.—Or, "on account of the privation of perfumes," (Bert.,) which the Jews looked upon as necessary.

VER. 25. Heads, and saying. Vah, &c., (Matt. xxvii. 40.) as Semei insulted David, (2 Kings xvi. 5. C.) though he is not said to have shaken his head, for which reason the prophecy may rather relate solely to Christ. Bert.—"To pay our ransom, he was crucified ; to be crucified, he was despised ; and to be despised, he appeared in a state of abjection." S. Aug.—These three steps were requisite, as the Jews would never have dared to lay hands on him if he had appeared in glory. Bert.

VER. 29. Cloak. Διπλός means the outward robe. Heb. mā'il. H. Gal. iii. 13.—"The cross of Jesus Christ shall be the glory of believers, and the confusion of infidels." S. Leo, Ser. 18, de Pas.

VER. 30. Many. In the Catholic Church, (H.) till the end of the world. C.

VER. 31. My. Heb. "his soul from the judges," Pilate and the Jews, (C.) particularly the Sanhedrim. How many still continue to persecute Christ, and do not tremble ! Bert.

PSAL. CIX. VER. 1. David. It is of faith that he wrote this psalm on the Messiah. The Jews, in our Saviour's time, were convinced of it, (Matt. xxii. 42,) so that their posterity (Bert.) in vain attempt to explain it of Abraham, David,

1 A psalm for David.

THE *Lord said to my Lord: Sit thou at my right hand:

^bUntil I make thy enemies thy footstool.

2 The Lord will send forth the sceptre of thy power out of Sion: rule thou in the midst of thy enemies.

3 With thee is the principality in the day of thy strength; in the brightness of the saints: from the womb before the day-star I begot thee.

4 The Lord hath sworn, and he will not repent: *Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

5 The Lord at thy right hand hath broken kings in the day of his wrath.

6 He shall judge among nations, he shall fill ruins: he shall crush the heads in the land of many.

7 He shall drink of the torrent in the way: therefore shall he lift up the head.

PSALM CX.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

God is to be praised for his graces, and benefits to his Church.

1 Alleluia.

I WILL praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart; in the council of the just, and in the congregation.

^a Matt. xxii. 44.—^b 1 Cor. xv. 25; Heb. i. 13, and x. 13.

Solomon, Ezechias, or Zorobabel. S. Chrys.—Even some of them candidly own that it can relate to no other, (Thalmud,) and Christians are universally of this belief. C.—The Lord. Heb. Jeve, (H.) the Father. M.—To my Lord. Heb. Ladni, (H.) the Son incarnate, (M.) Lord of all, though the son of David. W.—Who else could be David's superior? as Christ argues. H.—The title Adoni is given to God, (ver. 5, &c. C.) as my is never united with the ineffable name.—Hand. In equal power (Bert.) as God, and in the highest dignity as man, after the ascension. C.—This thought should encourage us to suffer patiently, (Col. iii. 1,) as Christ was to suffer, and thus to enter into his glory.—Until. This word does not always mark the term of a thing. When all shall be subdued, then Christ will continue to sit with greater majesty, (1 Cor. xv. 25. C.) for ever. W. Heb. x. 13.—Footstool. As was customary with conquerors. Jos. x. 24.

VER. 2. Sion. Whence the empire of Christ extended over all the earth. Isa. ii. 3; Luke xxiv. 47. C.

VER. 3. Principality. Christ says, All power is given to me. Matt. xxviii. And this He will display (H.) in the day of judgment. S. Chrys.—The substantiality of the Son is hence manifest, and this insures every perfection. H.—Christ was in the beginning, (John i.,) and the very beginning. His eternal birth is here mentioned.—Saints. Or "holy places," sanctorum. Heb. "in the beauties, (bedri. H.) S. Jer. has read berri, in the mountains (C.) of holiness, (Mont.,) or of the sanctuary." Christ will come to judge, surrounded by his angels, (C.) and saints. H. S. Aug.—I begot thee. Prot. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness, from (marg., more than) the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth." H.—Thy offspring shall be very numerous, (Isa. xlvi. 1, and xlv. 8,) and people shall willingly join thy banners, or rather come to offer victims in the sanctuary. C.

VER. 4. Repent. Not that He can ever do so, or give way to error: but the sacred writer expresses himself thus to give us the greatest security. C.—The order. Heb. dobrothi, "my order," Melchisedech. The i has been perhaps designedly inserted, to render the argumentation in the Epistle to the Hebrews of no weight, "as the force of this text sinks into just nothing." Kennicott.—Prot. and Pagnin here abandon the Heb. But Montanus corrects the latter, and substitutes "upon my word," which is more honest, as he deemed the Heb. text unerring, though here it be not so unquestionably, as the Almighty would thus address Melchisedech, unless that title be here given to Christ. S. Jerom take no notice of my, no more than the apostle, &c. H.—This instance "may perhaps put all serious Christians upon deliberating—whether they should any longer maintain the absolute integrity of the present Heb. text." See Psal. xv. 10. Kennicott, Dis. 1, p. 219.—Melchisedech. Christ is declared king and priest for ever, (W.) like Melchisedech, who united in his person both dignities, and presided not over a particular people, nor stood in need of any stated place. His succession is not recorded, and his sacrifice consisted of bread and wine; in all which respects he differed from the Levitical priests, and prefigured Christ, who is immolated under the same species throughout the world. Mal. i. 11. M.—We read in Scripture of three orders of priesthood; 1st, of kings, 2nd, of the first-born, and 3rd, of Aaron. Melchisedech, in quality of king, exercised the priestly office, as both functions were formerly united; and hence the word Cen signifies both a temporal and spiritual prince. This light of nations insured to his order a perpetual duration, while that of Aaron was to have an end.—The apostle does not specify the oblation of bread and wine, as it was unnecessary, the sacrifice of Christ on the cross having put an end to the sacrifices of the old law, which could only be offered by the children of Aaron, from whom he did not spring. This was enough for

2 Great are the works of the Lord: sought out according to all his wills.

3 His work is praise and magnificence: and his justica continueth for ever and ever.

4 He hath made a remembrance of his wonderful works, being a merciful and gracious Lord: 5 he hath given food to them that fear him.

He will be mindful for ever of his covenant: 6 he will show forth to his people the power of his works.

7 That he may give them the inheritance of the Gentiles: the works of his hands are truth and judgment.

8 All his commandments are faithful: confirmed for ever and ever, made in truth and equity.

9 He hath sent redemption to his people: he hath commanded his covenant for ever.

Holy and terrible is his name: 10 "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

his purpose. But as Melchisedech offered bread and wine, Christ must also have done the same, to be of his order. S. Cyprian, and the other Fathers, with great unanimity observe, that the sacrifice of Melchisedech was a figure of that of Jesus Christ, in bread and wine; and of course (Bert.) our sacred mysteries must contain the substance. H.

VER. 5. The Lord. He speaks to God the Father concerning the Messiah, (M.) or God assisted the sacred humanity. S. Chrys.—In the Godhead the persons are equal. The Father is at the right of the Son, as He is at his Father's. Ver. 1. S. Aug. C.—Yet it seems more probable that the discourse is addressed to the first person. Bert.

VER. 6. Ruins. Heb. and Sept. "with dead bodies," (C.) or he will fill up the places of the fallen angels, Jans.—Implevit valles. S. Jer.—Christ was placed for the fall and for the resurrection of many.—Of many. Heb. "the head in an extensive territory." We might render the Vulg. "he shall crush the heads of many in the land." H.

VER. 7. Way. By the torrent Cedron: the passion of Christ is insinuated. Houbig.—During life he and his faithful servants shall be exposed to many sufferings, for which they will be amply rewarded. W. Phil. ii. 9.

PSAL. CX. VER. 1. Alleluia. This psalm consists of praise, and is alphabetical, (Bert.,) the first sixteen letters being found at the head of each hemistich, to ver. 8; and in the 9th and 10th we find the six last Heb. letters, which is also the case in the following psalm. H.

VER. 2. Sought out. Exquisite, or designed for our benefit. He saw that all was good, (Gen. i. 31,) though He could have made them better. C.

VER. 4. Remembrance. He has delivered us from captivity, as he did our ancestors from the Egyptian bondage. Isa. lxxiii. 11. C.

VER. 5. Food. Manna in the desert, and what is necessary for us who were in distress in Babylon. Psal. cvi. 5. In the spiritual sense (C.) He has given us Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.,) or the holy Eucharist. W.

VER. 8. Equity. Here we have the conditions of a just law. Bert.—Those who keep God's commandments are justified. W.

VER. 9. Redemption. Under Moses, Cyrus, and Jesus Christ, of whose redemption the former were figures. C.—Christ redeemed man, in order that he might be able to observe the law. W.—Terrible. Holy to the just, and terrible to sinners. S. Jer.—Most are lost by too much security. S. Chrys. hom. 19.—The Hebrews treat the name of God with a respect, which might appear superstitious, (C.) as they will not blot it out, or lean upon the book where it is written, &c. Schikard, Jus. ii. Theor. v. 6.

VER. 10. Fear. Heb. "is the chief part of wisdom." Jan.—This fear intimates the virtue of religion, to which the Israelites gave the preference over prudence, &c. Joseph. con. App. ii.—This distinguished them from other nations. Deut. iv. 8. C.—Fear is the beginning, clarity the end of wisdom. Euseb.—De it. Act conformably to this fear. H.—Speculative wisdom is good, but not sufficient. Rom. xi. 13. S. Chrys., &c.—Many read ea, "those things," with the Heb., while the Sept. have eam, this wisdom. But Houbigant sticks to the Vulg. Bert.—His. God's, (S. Chrys.,) though some would refer ius to intellectus. Bert.—He shall be praised for ever, who has been so well informed as to adopt the fear or wisdom of the Lord for his guide. H.

PSAL. CXI. VER. 1. Of the returning, &c. This is in the Greek and Latin, but not in the Hebrew. It signifies that this psalm was proper to be sung at the time of the return of the people from their captivity: to inculcate to them how happy they might be if they would be constant in the service of God. Ch.—Yet BLESSED is the man that feareth the Lord: he shall delight exceedingly in his commandments.

2 His seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the righteous shall be blessed.

3 Glory and wealth shall be in his house: and his justice remaineth for ever and ever.

4 To the righteous a light is risen up in darkness: he is merciful, and compassionate and just.

5 Acceptable is the man that showeth mercy and lendeth: he shall order his words with judgment: 6 because he shall not be moved for ever.

7 The just shall be in everlasting remembrance: he shall not fear the evil hearing.

His heart is ready to hope in the Lord: 8 his heart is strengthened, he shall not be moved until he look over his enemies.

9 He hath distributed, he hath given to the poor: his justice remaineth for ever and ever: his horn shall be exalted in glory.

10 The wicked shall see, and shall be angry, he shall gnash with his teeth, and pine away: the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM CXII.

LAUDATE PUERI.

God is to be praised, for his regard to the poor and humble.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE the Lord, ye children: praise ye the name of the Lord.

2 Blessed be the name of the Lord, from henceforth now and for ever.

3 *From the rising of the sun, unto the going down of the same, the name of the Lord is worthy of praise.

4 The Lord is high above all nations: and his glory above the heavens.

5 Who is as the Lord, our God, who dwelleth on high:

^a Mal. i. 11.

all Greek copies have not this title, (H.) but only Alleluia, with the Heb., Syr., &c.—Delight. We must love God for his own sake. S. Chrys.—Those who sincerely fear God, will take great delight in keeping his commandments. W.

VER. 2. Earth. Temporal rewards were proposed to the carnal Jews; but the more enlightened knew what was to be most desired. They sought after the riches mentioned by the apostle, 1 Cor. i. 5; 1 Tim. vi. 18. C.

VER. 4. Darkness. Christ appeared when the world was most corrupt. S. Aug.—God rescued his people from captivity.

VER. 5. Acceptable. Lit. "joyful." Χρηστός, "beneficent." H.—Give, and it shall be given to you. M.—Judgment. And by liberal alms prepare for the great accounting day. S. Chrys.

VER. 7. Hearing. Though detraction may assail him, he shall not fear, (C.) since God is the Judge. H.

VER. 8. Until. Not that he will be disturbed afterwards, (Psal. cix. 1. C.) when his enemies shall be punished. H.—The captives saw the fall of Babylon. C.

VER. 9. Poor. We must know whom we ought to relieve. Though we may be allowed to retain what is necessary, (2 Cor. viii. 13, and ix. 11,) yet the saints have often very laudably stripped themselves to clothe others, abandoning perishable goods, that they might obtain heaven. C.—Justice. Works of mercy are so called, because they concur to man's justification. W.

VER. 10. The wicked. The devil, enraged to see the converts to Christianity, (S. Athan.,) or the Jews, (S. Chrys.,) instigated by him. H.

PSAL. CXII. VER. 1. Alleluia. The Jews style this and the five following psalms "the great Alleluia," which they sing after eating the paschal lamb. Eusebius adds, "a psalm of Aggeus and of Zacharias," as it seems to speak of the captives, who return thanks for their deliverance (Isa. xlv. 6, &c. C.); or David has left this model of thanksgiving for all. Bert.—Children. Heb. "slaves." M.—The Greek and Latin may signify both. H.

VER. 3. Same. All the day long, (C.) or rather in all places. Muis. Mal. i. 10. S. Chrys.

VER. 6. Earth. Providence watches over all. Psal. cxxxvii. 6. H.—With respect to God, even those who are in heaven are low. W.

VER. 9. Children. Anna and Elizabeth, who were naturally barren, were blessed with what they so eagerly desired, by the Divine power. H.—It may be understood of the Gentile world, after it had embraced the faith, (S. Jer. Gal. iv.

6 and looketh down on the low things in heaven and in earth?

7 Raising up the needy from the earth, and lifting up the poor out of the dunghill:

8 That he may place him with princes, with the princes of his people.

9 Who maketh a barren woman to dwell in a house, the joyful mother of children.

PSALM CXIII.

IN EXITU ISRAEL.

God hath shown his power in delivering his people: idols are vain. The Hebrews divide this into two psalms.

1 Alleluia.

WHEN Israel went out of Egypt, ^bthe house of Jacob from a barbarous people:

2 Judea was made his sanctuary, Israel his dominion.

3 The sea saw and fled: Jordan was turned back.

4 The mountains skipped like rams, and the hills like the lambs of the flock.

5 What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou didst flee: and thou, O Jordan, that thou wast turned back?

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams, and ye hills, like the lambs of the flock?

7 At the presence of the Lord the earth was moved, at the presence of the God of Jacob:

8 Who turned the rock into pools of waters, and the stony hill into fountains of waters.

1 Not to us, O Lord, not to us: but to thy name give glory.

2 For thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake, lest the Gentiles should say: Where is their God?

3 But our God is in heaven: he hath done all things whatsoever he would.

^b Exod. xiii. 3.

17. S. Chrys.,) or of the captives, (Isa. liv. 1, and xlix. 21; Psal. lxxvii. 7. C.) though Isaiah may also refer to the Church. H.

PSAL. CXIII. VER. 1. Alleluia. This word is placed at the end of the preceding psalm in Heb., though it seems to have been there originally, (H.) as, ver. 2, we find his, with reference to "the Lord," who has not been otherwise mentioned before. Houbig.—The psalm may be joined with the former to ver. 9, when the Heb. begins a fresh one, relating to the captives, with the two which follow. C.—The division is of no great importance, (Bert.,) and we cannot easily decide whether it be here necessary. H.—The Heb. copies have not been always uniform, no more than the Greek in this place. C.—Barbarous. Cruel, (Bert.,) or which spoke a language unknown to them. Sym. and Aquila.—The Greeks styled all others barbarians, (Fest.,) as the Egyptians did. Herod. ii.—Joseph at first did not understand the language of the latter, (Psal. lxxx. 6,) and spoke to his brethren by an interpreter. Gen. xlii. 23. Laz denotes one who speaks in an unknown tongue, which Chal. expresses by the word borbra, "a stranger, or desert." C.—Infidels, and those who persecute the true religion, are styled barbarous, though otherwise the Egyptians were very polite and learned. W.

VER. 2. Judea. Heb. "Juda," though the sense of the Vulg. is very good, (Bert.,) as that country, which had been so abandoned, became holy, when God's people dwelt there. S. Chrys.—After the departure from Egypt, the Israelites were more known as God's inheritance, over whom he reigned. W. Exod. xix. 6.—Hence He complains, when they asked for a king, (1 Kings viii. 7,) though the throne is still called the Lord's. 1 Par. xxix. 23. The distinction of Juda and Israel insinuates that the kingdom had been divided. C.—But this had taken place for a time, after the death of Saul. H.

VER. 4. Skipped. Through joy, exultaverunt, (H.) or rather through fear. ver. 7. C.

VER. 8. Waters. They are mentioned twice, as referring to different miracles. Exod. xvii. 6, and Num. xx. 8. Inanimate things are introduced, giving this reply; or the psalmist gives it himself. Bert.

VER. 9, or 1. Not. Some Jews here commence the 115th psalm. H.—But S. Augustin shows, that this part is well connected with the preceding, the true God being known by his works, while idols are senseless, and therefore can have no pretensions to Divine worship. W.—Glory. We claim no share in these miracles; or we confess our unworthiness, but do thou deliver us. C.

4 "The idols of the Gentiles are silver, and gold, the works of the hands of men.

5 "They have mouths, and speak not: they have eyes, and see not.

6 They have ears, and hear not: they have noses, and smell not.

7 They have hands, and feel not: they have feet, and walk not: neither shall they cry out through their throat.

8 Let them that make them become like unto them: and all such as trust in them.

9 The house of Israel hath hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

10 The house of Aaron hath hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

11 They that fear the Lord have hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

12 The Lord hath been mindful of us, and hath blessed us.

He hath blessed the house of Israel: he hath blessed the house of Aaron.

13 He hath blessed all that fear the Lord, both little and great.

14 May the Lord add blessings upon you: upon you, and upon your children.

15 Blessed be you of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

16 The heaven of heaven is the Lord's: but the earth he has given to the children of men.

17 "The dead shall not praise thee, O Lord: nor any of them that go down to hell.

a Infra, cxxxiv. 15.—b Wisd. xv. 15.—c Bar. ii. 17.

VER. 3. Heaven. Sept. adu, "and on earth," which S. Augustin joins with the following words, he, &c.

VER. 4. Men. All Catholics agree that idolatry is the "giving of Divine honour to any creature." S. Justin, (con. Gent.) S. Aug. in the first ten books of the City of God, and other Fathers, refute all the species of idolatry.—How unjustly do heretics apply these words to the holy images used in the Church! though they must know (H.) that Catholics do not consider them as gods, no more than the saints and angels, whom they reverence only as the friends of God: treating their pictures with a relative honour, and endeavouring thus to excite themselves to the pursuit of virtue, by the memory of what they have done. Bert.

VER. 7. Throat. Rom. and Milar Psal. add, neither is there any breath in their mouths, which occurs, (Psal. cxxxiv. 17,) instead of this sentence. H.

VER. 8. Let. Zeal prompts him to make this imprecation, (C.) or prophecy. Heb. they "are, or shall be." The pagans (H.) could not well find fault with this wish, (M.) as it would be a great honour to resemble real gods. Yet none of their statuary would be willing to become such statues, or be charged with the wicked conduct of Jupiter, &c. S. Chrys. Bert.

VER. 9. The house, is not now in Heb. But it occurs in the parallel passage, (Psal. cxxxiv,) where the imperative is used, as the Heb. is here pointed. C.—"Israel trust . . . house of Aaron, trust ye in the Lord," (Mont.), which is much in favour of this text, though S. Jerom, &c. agree with the Sept. C.—Houbigant rejects the Heb. reading, and the house of Israel occurs, ver. 12. Bert.—All the people, the priests, and converts from paganism, are invited to praise the Lord. S. Chrys. Acts ii. 5, and x. 2, and xiii. 16. C.—The Church always comprised two distinct orders, the clergy and the laity. M.

VER. 12. Hath. Heb. "will be," which seems better. Let him bless us. C.—Both versions are true. Bert. Eph. i. 3.

VER. 16. Of heaven. Or the highest heaven, in which God displays his glory, though he fill every place. H.—His benefits to man claim a return of gratitude, and we are not dispensed from showing our adoration, as deists would hence unreasonably infer. Bert.—Worldly men say this in their hearts, abandoning their pretensions to heaven. W.

VER. 17. The dead. People who are thus affected give no praise to God when they die, but descend into hell. W.—Criminals are therefore said to be dead, while the saints only sleep. S. Chrys.—Hell. Heb. "silence," or the tomb, (Bert.), where none can sound forth God's praises, (H.) though the soul in a state of separation may adore him. Bert. See Psal. vi. 6, and xxix. 10.

VER. 18. Live. In the state of justice, and aspiring to God's kingdom. While we use this world only as the means to ascend thither, we shall praise him for evermore. W.

PSAL. CXIV. VER. 1. Alleluia occurs in Heb. at the end of the foregoing 18 But we that live bless the Lord: from this time now and for ever.

PSALM CXIV

DILEXI.

The prayer of a just man in affliction, with a lively confidence in God.

1 Alleluia

I HAVE loved, because the Lord will hear the voice of my prayer.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me: and in my days I will call upon him.

3 The sorrows of death have compassed me: and the perils of hell have found me.

I met with trouble and sorrow: 4 and I called upon the name of the Lord.

O Lord, deliver my soul. 5 The Lord is merciful and just, and our God showeth mercy.

6 The Lord is the keeper of little ones: I was humbled, and he delivered me.

7 Turn, O my soul, into thy rest: For the Lord hath been bountiful to thee.

8 For he hath delivered my soul from death: my eyes from tears, my feet from falling.

9 I will please the Lord in the land of the living.

PSALM CXV.

CREDIDI.

This, in the Hebrew, is joined with the foregoing psalm, and continues to express the faith and gratitude of the psalmist.

Alleluia.

10 I HAVE^d believed, therefore have I spoken: but I have been humbled exceedingly.

11 I said in my excess: "Every man is a liar.

^d 2 Cor. iv. 13.—^e Rom. iii. 4.

psalm, (H.) with which this and the following have an intimate connexion, alluding to the liberation of the captives. C.—The sentiments of our Saviour, or of his Church under persecution, (S. Aug.), or those of a saint entering into glory, are here expressed. S. Jerom.

VER. 2. Days. All my life. W.—Faith, hope, and charity, (S. Aug.), as well as gratitude, are here commended. Bert.—Love and confidence are necessary conditions of prayer; and increase the more it is employed. C.

VER. 3. Sorrows. Heb. "bands."—Perils. Heb. "the straitness of the grave, (C.) the fortifications of hell" S. Jer. H.—I am like one buried after the manner of the Egyptians, who bound up the dead, and laid them in small holes cut out of a rock. David uses similar expressions to denote the dangers to which he had been exposed. 1 Kings xxi. 12; Psal. xvii. 6. C.—They may be applicable to all the just. Bert.

VER. 6. Little ones. In their mother's womb, and infancy. S. Chrys.—Heb. "the simple." Bert.—He delights to protect those who have no dependence on any other. C.—Humbled. Or afflicted, (W.) and "brought low." S. Jer.

VER. 7. Rest. The peace of the soul, which must precede eternal happiness.

VER. 9. Living. In Judea, which is opposed to Babylon, the region of tears and of death, ver. 8; Psal. lv. 13. In a spiritual sense, the Fathers understand heaven, where the blessed cannot forfeit their felicity. C.—Christ here promises the propagation of the gospel. Houbig. 2 Cor. v. 8. Bert.

PSAL. CXV. VER. 10. Alleluia is not in Heb. There seems no necessity to join this psalm with the preceding, as the subject is not so much alike as that of many others, which are distinct pieces. S. Paul quotes two passages in their literal sense, (Bert.), as applicable to all who thirst after a future life.—Exceedingly. We must not be deterred from professing our faith by any danger. S. Aug. 2 Cor. iv. 13.—I never ceased to publish that I trusted entirely in thy promises, that we should be delivered (C.) in due time. H.—I believed that God would help me, and, as I ought to do, made profession of my faith, under the greatest tribulations. W.—With the mouth confession is made unto salvation. H.—I confess that there is a future world, (ver. 9,) though I do not see it, but remain in distress. M.

VER. 11. Excess. Sept. "ecstasy." Enlightened from above. If he had spoken thus by his own spirit, any one might have replied, that no dependence could be placed in what he said.—Many explain it of David's "flight" before Absalom. Heb. "in my precipitation," (C.) or "astonishment." S. Jer.—Liar. Weak and inconstant of his own corrupt nature, (H.) though not always guilty of lying: C.—S. Paul contrasts this natural weakness with the veracity of God, (Bert.), and the preaching of his apostles. Rom. iii. 4, and 2 Cor. i. 17. H.—In the midst of my afflictions, I professed that all man's help is vain, and I had recourse to God: W.

12 What shall I render to the Lord, for all the things that he hath rendered to me?

13 I will take the chalice of salvation; and I will call upon the name of the Lord.

14 I will pay my vows to the Lord, before all his people: 15 precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

16 O Lord, for I am thy servant: I am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid.

Thou hast broken my bonds: 17 I will sacrifice to thee the sacrifice of praise, and I will call upon the name of the Lord.

18 I will pay my vows to the Lord in the sight of all his people: 19 in the courts of the house of the Lord, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem.

PSALM CXVI.

LAUDATE DOMINUM.

All nations are called upon to praise God for his mercy and truth.

1 Alleluia.

O PRAISE *the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.

2 For his mercy is confirmed upon us: ^band the truth of the Lord remaineth for ever.

PSALM CXVII.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

The psalmist praiseth God for his delivery from evils; putteth his whole trust in him; and foretelleth the coming of Christ.

1 Alleluia.

GIVE praise to the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let Israel now say, that he is good: that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

^a Rom. xv. 11.—^b John xii. 34.

VER. 13. Chalice. I will submit to any afflictions, (S. Aug.,) seeing they procure such an ample reward. I will unite my sufferings with those of Jesus Christ, (H.) and accept the great benefit of his blood, shed for mankind. W.—Chaldee seems to have had this in view, calicem redemptionis levabo mundo ven- cato, and Houbigant explains it of Christ, who prayed that the chalice might be taken from him, (Bert.,) but presently resigned himself to God's will. It may also (H.) imply the cup of thanksgiving, which was used in pacific sacrifices. Psal. xxi. 27. Our Saviour followed this custom, when he instituted the blessed Eucharist, as (C.) the Jews do on solemn occasions. Leo, iii. 7, and ix. 2.

VER. 14. Pay. Heb. adds, "now or surely." Bert.—Vows. Voluntarily, (W.) which I could not do at Babylon. Psal. lxxv. 13. S. Aug. and the ancient psalms omit this, perhaps supposing it to be taken from ver. 18.

VER. 15. Precious. I am ready even to make a sacrifice of my life, if God's glory should require it; for he esteems the death of the saints. W. Bert.—God rewards the sufferings of his servants (C.); the psalmist will not therefore be deterred from paying his vows by the fear of death. M.

VER. 16. Handmaid. To be blessed, we must be in a state of grace, and children of the Church. W.—Out of it, death itself endured for Christ would profit nothing. (S. Aug.,) but only be "a punishment of perfidy." S. Cyp.—No worship can please God, unless we be joined in communion with her, as the Fathers observe. Bert.—Bonds. Of slavery, (C.) and sin, W. 1 Cor. vii. 22.

VER. 17. Praise. Or thanksgiving. Psal. xxvi. 6; Lev. vii. 12. C.—Lord. There is but one, as there is but one faith. Without the latter it is in vain to call upon God. Eph. iv. 4. Bert.—"Whosoever eats the lamb out of this house (the Church) is profane." S. Jer. Ep. 57, ad Dam.

PSAL. CXVI. Alleluia. This word is found at the end of the last psalm, in Heb. H.—The captives invite all to thank God for their delivery, which was a most striking figure of the world's redemption, in which sense the apostle (Rom. xv. 11) quotes this psalm, with the holy Fathers, though Ven. Bede puts it in the mouth of Ezechias, after the retrogradation of the sun. C.—Praise him. S. Paul reads, magnify him, as the Heb. means, "extol" by your praises. Bert.

VER. 2. Remaineth is not in Heb. Mercy and truth confirm us. H.—The psalmist acknowledges that he also stands in need of them, and S. John assures us that grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. Bert.

PSAL. CXVII. VER. 1. Alleluia is borrowed from the end of the former psalm in Heb. Our Saviour and the apostles determine us to explain this solely 4 Let them that fear the Lord now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 In my trouble I called upon the Lord: and the Lord heard me, and enlarged me.

6 The Lord is my helper: I will not fear what man can do unto me.

7 The Lord is my helper: and I will look over my enemies.

8 It is good to confide in the Lord, rather than to have confidence in man.

9 It is good to trust in the Lord, rather than to trust in princes.

10 All nations compassed me about: and in the name of the Lord I have been revenged on them.

11 Surrounding me, they compassed me about: and in the name of the Lord I have been revenged on them.

12 They surrounded me like bees, and they burned like fire among thorns: and in the name of the Lord I was revenged on them.

13 Being pushed, I was overturned, that I might fall: but the Lord supported me.

14 The Lord is my strength and my praise: and he is become my salvation.

15 The voice of rejoicing and of salvation is in the tabernacles of the just.

16 The right hand of the Lord hath wrought strength: the right hand of the Lord hath exalted me: the right hand of the Lord hath wrought strength.

17 I shall not die, but live: and shall declare the works of the Lord.

18 The Lord chastising, hath chastised me: but he hath not delivered me over to death.

19 Open ye to me the gates of justice: I will go in to

of the Messias, though some would also see another literal sense, applicable to the victories of David, or of the captives, at their return, over Gog or Cambyces. Bert.—Praise. Or, "confess," and praise God for his great mercies. W.

VER. 2. That he is good, is not here in Heb. The Sept. insert the words in the two next verses. The people, the priests, and all who fear God among the Gentiles must praise him, (Psal. cxlii. 11. C.) particularly now, under the new law, since they have received greater benefits. W.

VER. 5. Trouble. Both spiritual and temporal. W.—Enlarged me, or set me at liberty in a spacious place. C.

VER. 7. My helper. Heb. "to me among the helpers," (Mont.,) or most powerful, (Houbig.,) and the mover of all who lend me assistance. Jesus Christ prayed with tears, and was heard for his reverence. Heb. v. 7. We must expect afflictions, (Job xxxiii.,) and must have recourse to God. Bert.

VER. 9. Princes. For vain is the salvation of man. Psal. lix. 31; Jer. xvii 5. C.—So neither can man hurt those whom God protects. Rom. viii. 31. H.

VER. 10. Revenged. Heb. "I have broken them," (C.) or "will render to them." Houbig.

VER. 12. Bees. Sept. add, "do a honeycomb." But this is not in the original.—Burned. Heb. "were extinguished."—The rage of the enemy is well described by the similitudes of bees and fire. C.—Christ was attacked with mortal hatred by the Jews. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Fall. I was very near falling. Heb. "pushing thou hast pushed me that," &c. M.—"My sin has strongly pushed me." Chal. C.

VER. 15. Just. Such were the Jews by their vocation, though many answered very ill the designs of God. C.—Christians thank God for their redemption, and confessors are full of joy in their prisons and torments. Acts xvi. 25. Bert.

VER. 16. Me is not in Heb. All salvation is from God. Bert.—Right hand. repeated thrice, insinuates the blessed Trinity, as the word Lord is applied to Christ, who effected man's redemption with singular efficacy. W.

VER. 17. Live. The captives were dying daily, so that this rather belongs to the Church of Christ. Bert. John viii. 51.

VER. 18. Chastised me severely. H.—Sept. may also signify, "has instructed me," (C.) by means of tribulation. H.—God chastiseth as a parent, that his children may not perish eternally. W.

VER. 19. Justice. Of the temple, where the undefiled Israelites alone can enter, (Psal. xiv. 1,) or the land of Judea. Isa. xxvi. The Fathers explain it of them, and give praise to the Lord. 20 This is the gate of the Lord, the just shall enter into it.

21 I will give glory to thee, because thou hast heard me: and art become my salvation.

22 *The stone which the builders rejected; the same is become the head of the corner.

23 This is the Lord's doing: and it is wonderful in our eyes.

24 This is the day which the Lord hath made: let us be glad, and rejoice therein.

25 O Lord, save me: O Lord, give good success. 26 Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

We have blessed you out of the house of the Lord. 27 The Lord is God, and he hath shone upon us.

Appoint a solemn day, with shady boughs, even to the horn of the altar.

28 Thou art my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, and I will exalt thee.

I will praise thee, because thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

29 O praise ye the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXVIII.

BEATI IMMACULATI.

Of the excellence of virtue, consisting in the love and observance of the commandments of God.

I Alleluia.

ALEPH.

BLESSED are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord.

* Isa. xxviii. 16; Matt. xxi. 42; Luke xx. 17; Acts iv. 11; Rom. ix. 33; 1 Pet. ii. 7.

the Church, and of heaven, to which none can be admitted who have not departed in the communion of saints, (S. Chrys. S. Aug.,) having walked in the narrow path. Euseb.—Christ styles himself the way, (H.) and the gate. Bert. Apoc. xxii. 14.

VER. 22. Corner. This was a sort of proverb, and is applied to David, Zorobabel, or the Jewish nation; but they can only be considered as figures of Christ, in whom this prediction was fulfilled, when he established his Church, and made one people of those who were before divided. Isa. xxviii. 16; Matt. xxi. 42; Acts iv. 11. C.—The Pharisees pretended to build for the glory of God, when they opposed the designs of Christ, which, nevertheless, succeeded. They could not object to his application of this text, as they would have done, if it had been already verified in David, &c. Bert.

VER. 24. Day. Of grace. W.—The Church often repeats this during the paschal time, though God is equally the author of all days. H. See Eph. iv. 30; John viii. 56.

VER. 25. Save me. The person is not expressed in Sept. Or. (C.) Heb. eussiae na, "salvifica nunc." Mont.—Na means likewise, "I beg." H.—Quæso, Domine, saluum fac, obsecro: Quæso, Domine, fac prospere agere, obsecro. This formed the acclamations of the Jewish children, Hosanna, Matt. xxi. 9. The branches which were carried at the feast of tabernacles were also styled Hosannas. C.

VER. 27. Us. Christ, who comes in the name of the Lord, "is himself God," our instructor. S. Aug. Tit. ii. 11. Bert.—Day. The feast of tabernacles, for which this psalm was probably composed. The Jews dwelt under tents. C. Lev. xxiii. 40, and 2 Esd. vii. 15.—Altar. Heb. "Bind a festival with cords unto the horns," &c. To make sense, the Chal. inserts, bind the lamb for the festival. But this Houbigant ridicules, and he believes that the solemn entrance of Jesus Christ into Jerusalem is here foretold. Scarcely any prediction in the Old Testament is more clearly verified in the New. Matt. xxi. 8. Heb. Bāphthim certainly means "in rains opacis," and S. Jerom translates, "frequent the solemnity in shady boughs." Bert.—The victims were never tied to the altar, but slain in the porch of the northern gate. Ezec. xl. 39. C.

PSAL. CXVIII. VER. 1. Alleluia. There is no title in Heb. But (H.) this psalm contains the praises of the Lord, and of his holy law, under fourteen different names, (W.) of way, testimony, &c., repeated in every verse, except the 122nd, (Muis.,) with surprising variety, so as to avoid tautology, and to give a most perfect system of moral doctrine. It is written according to the order of the Heb. alphabet, (H.) that we may learn it from our infancy. S. Hil.—Eight verses begin with each of the twenty-two letters.—David is supposed to have written this psalm for the instruction of Solomon in his youth, (Bert.,) though others believe that he composed it while he himself was young, and persecuted by Saul. Muis. Bossuet, &c.—It seems very probable that Daniel wrote it for the consolation of the captives. C. Dan. ix. 2.—Origen and Ven. Bede refer it to those times;

2 Blessed are they that search his testimonies: that seek him with their whole heart.

3 For they that work iniquity, have not walked in his ways.

4 Thou hast commanded thy commandments to be kept most diligently.

5 O! that my ways may be directed to keep thy justifications.

6 Then shall I not be confounded, when I shall look into all thy commandments.

7 I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned the judgments of thy justice.

8 I will keep thy justifications: O! do not thou utterly forsake me.

BETH.

9 By what doth a young man correct his way? by observing thy words.

10 With my whole heart have I sought after thee: let me not stray from thy commandments.

11 Thy words have I hidden in my heart, that I may not sin against thee.

12 Blessed art thou, O Lord: teach me thy justifications

13 With my lips I have pronounced all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I have been delighted in the way of thy testimonies, as in all riches.

15 I will meditate on thy commandments: and I will consider thy ways.

16 I will think of thy justifications: I will not forget thy words.

though it seems in reality to appertain to all who desire to live piously, (H.) and it is only a conjecture that any other but David was the author, to whom it is generally attributed. Its excellency cannot be denied, and the Church has adopted it for her daily office, dividing it into eleven psalms. Bert.—S. Aug. has written thirty-two, and S. Amb. twenty-two sermons on the contents; and S. Basil observes that David has here comprised in one psalm the sum of all that he has written in the rest. Among other points of morality and doctrine, we may remark, that the psalmist insists on the necessity of God's grace, and the co-operation of free-will. (W.) and overturns the Prot. system of justification. D.—Lord. Such only are happy here, (W.) or hereafter. H.—All aim at happiness, but only the virtuous take the proper means to attain it. S. Aug.

VER. 2. His testimonies. The commandments of God are called his testimonies, because they testify his holy will unto us. Note here, that in almost every verse of this psalm (which in number are 176) the word and law of God, and the love and observance of it, are perpetually inculcated, under a variety of denominations, all signifying the same thing. Ch.

VER. 3. Ways. They may, however, repent. The just are subject to fall. 1 John i. 8. But venial faults are not incompatible with justice. C.—Heb. "They also do no iniquity: they walk in his ways." Prot. Bert.

VER. 4. Diligently. Nimis. -Lit. "too much." But this is a Heb. idiom, to imply the greatest diligence. H.—Some would refer it to "God's strong injunction;" which is not necessary. The psalmist henceforward speaks to God Bert.

VER. 5. O! that. Conscious of his own insufficiency, he prays for grace to be justified. W.—Moses acknowledged that man could not observe the law without Christ. Deut. xxx. 11; Rom. x. 6.

VER. 6. All. At the day of judgment it will not suffice to have observed only some of the commandments. See S. Jer., S. Amb., &c., who all seem to follow Origen. C.

VER. 8. Utterly. Heb. nimis, as ver. 4. H.—It may be advantageous to us to be left awhile, that we may know our own weakness. S. Greg. Mor. 20, 21. W.—He does not beg never to be tempted, or in tribulation (H.); but only that he may not yield to sin. S. Hil.

VER. 9. Correct. Sym. "illustrate." C.—The observance of the law is the only method to preserve innocence, or to regain it. H.—The Holy Ghost gives this direction to youth, and to all who are exposed to the dangers of pleasure, (W.) as David might do to his son, 2 Kings ii. 3. Bert.—In the same sense as we pray, Lead us not into temptation.

VER. 10. Let. Lit. "do not cast me off." H.—God rejects none but the negligent. S. Hil. S. Amb., &c.—The just, or the Church in general, here confess (W.) that perseverance is a gift of God. H.—Deprived of grace, we should fall, no less than if God "made us err," as the Heb. strictly implies. Bert.

VER. 11. Heart. To guard against the temptations of vanity. C.—Christians

GIMEL.

17 Give bountifully to thy servant, enliven me: and I shall keep thy words.

18 Open thou my eyes: and I will consider the wondrous things of thy law.

19 I am a sojourner on the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

20 My soul hath coveted to long for thy justifications, at all times.

21 Thou hast rebuked the proud: they are cursed who decline from thy commandments.

22 Remove from me reproach and contempt: because I have sought after thy testimonies.

23 For princes sat, and spoke against me: but thy servant was employed in thy justifications.

24 For thy testimonies are my meditation; and thy justifications my counsel.

DALETH.

25 My soul hath cleaved to the pavement: quicken thou me according to thy word.

26 I have declared my ways, and thou hast heard me: teach me thy justifications.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy justifications: and I shall be exercised in thy wondrous works.

28 My soul hath slumbered through heaviness: strengthen thou me in thy words.

29 Remove from me the way of iniquity: and out of thy law have mercy on me.

30 I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments I have not forgotten.

31 I have stuck to thy testimonies, O Lord: put me not to shame.

32 I have run the way of thy commandments, when thou didst enlarge my heart.

formerly concealed the mysteries of religion with the utmost care. S. Hil. and S. Amb.

VER. 12. Justifications. He considers himself as placed at the feet of his Divine Master. C.—Though just, he wishes to increase in virtue. Apoc. xxii. W.

VER. 17. Give. Heb. "avenge." Psal. xii. 6, and cxxxvii. 9. Draw me from this state of oppression, (C.) or rather, give me abundant grace, (Bert.,) and eternal life. S. Hil.—I cannot fulfil the law without thy grace. W.—Enliven me. So the Sept. of Aldus reads, though the Roman and Heb. have, "I shall live." Deut. xxx. 19. Bert.

VER. 18. Law. In rewarding, punishing, &c. This thou wilt enable me to perceive, (W.) as thy law is too much above my comprehension. C.

VER. 20. Coveted. Heb. "burns, (Aquila, Houbig.,) or is bruised, (Bert.,) and faints through the desire of thy laws," (C.) or "judgments." S. Jer.—If I have but a short time to live, I ardently seek for instruction, (W.) and wish to advance daily in virtue. C.—His humility makes him fear, lest his desire should not be sincere. Bert.

VER. 21. Cursed. Becoming victims of hell. Matt. xxiv. Bert. Deut. xxvii. 26. M.

VER. 24. Counsel. Heb. "the princes of my counsel," (Houbig.,) in opposition to those who endeavoured to make him fall. Ver. 23. H.

VER. 25. Pavement. Heb. "dust," (Bert.,) weighed down by concupiscence, (S. Aug.,) and infected by the union with the body. S. Amb.—The just, in great distress, beg to be delivered, conformably to God's promise. W.—Wisd. ix. 15; Rom. vii. 24.

VER. 28. Slumbered. Ενύσταζεν, for which Origen, thinking it a mistake of copyists, substituted ἐσταζεν, "has melted," (C.) or "distilled," (Aquila, &c. Houbigot.,) as more conformable to the original, though the sense is much the same. Loss of blood often causes people to slumber. Bert.—S. Hil. would not abandon the Sept. C.—Heaviness, being in such anxiety, as to be almost distracted. W.—Chal. "has been in an agony." Sleep is often put for death. C.—My soul perishes through grief. Houbig.—Hence the three apostles slept. Luke xxii. H.

VER. 29. Iniquity. Heb. "lying." Let me not imitate the wicked. H.—Remit the punishment of my sins, (Psal. cvi. 17. C.) also original sin, and its effects. S. Hil.

VER. 32. Heart. Man runs but God must impart grace. W.—An enlarged

HE.

33 Set before me for a law the way of thy justifications, O Lord: and I will always seek after it

34 Give me understanding, and I will search thy law, and I will keep it with my whole heart.

35 Lead me into the path of thy commandments; for this same I have desired.

36 Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, and not to covetousness.

37 Turn away my eyes, that they may not behold vanity: quicken me in thy way.

38 Establish thy word to thy servant, in thy fear.

39 Turn away my reproach, which I have apprehended for thy judgments are delightful.

40 Behold, I have longed after thy precepts: quicken me in thy justice.

VAU.

41 Let thy mercy also come upon me, O Lord: thy salvation according to thy word.

42 So shall I answer them that reproach me in any thing; that I have trusted in thy words.

43 And take not thou the word of truth utterly out of my mouth: for in thy words I have hoped exceedingly.

44 So shall I always keep thy law, for ever and ever.

45 And I walked at large: because I have sought after thy commandments.

46 And I spoke of thy testimonies before kings, and I was not ashamed.

47 I meditated also on thy commandments, which I loved.

48 And I lifted up my hands to thy commandments, which I loved: and I was exercised in thy justifications.

ZAIN.

49 Be thou mindful of thy word to thy servant, in which thou hast given me hope.

heart sometimes denotes the capacity of understanding. 3 Kings iv. 29. C.—But it is a singular mercy of God to make us love his commands. S. Aug.

VER. 33. Always. Heb. āhob, means also, "for the reward," (Pagn. H. Ver. 112,) or step by step. S. Jer. C.—Make me love thy commandments. W.

VER. 35. Desired. Free-will concurs with grace. W.

VER. 36. Covetousness. Either of money, or any unlawful object. 1 Tim. vi 10. H.—The word is very comprehensive. Bert.—Botsa is rendered mammon by the Chal. C.

VER. 37. Vanity. Idols, worldly prosperity, &c., (Psal. xxxvi. 1, 7. C.) shows, (S. Amb.,) and all dangerous objects. H.

VER. 39. Reproach. Hidden sins of thought, (S. Amb.,) or the sarcasms of the Babylonians. C.

VER. 41. Salvation. The Messiah, foretold by the prophets, (Gen. xlix.; Rom. iii. 23; Tit. ii. 13. Bert.,) or grace, freely promised to all who ask for it. W.

VER. 42. In any thing. Lit. "the word" that I, &c. Thus he stops their mouths, by professing his confidence in God. H.—The Babylonians insultingly ask, Where is their God? If thou free me from captivity, I may reply, that my hopes were not vain. C.

VER. 43. Mouth. Let those who preach the truth live up to it. S. Hil. and S. Amb.—Though the psalmist may be under some fear, he prays that he may not omit to make open profession of his faith. W.—God never hinders his servants from doing this, though he sometimes suffers them to fall. But the Church will never cease to proclaim the truth.

VER. 44. Ever. Heb. "and after." The sanction of the law will remain after this world is at an end. These expressions relate to the Church. Bert.

VER. 45. Large. The Jews could not practise the law out of their country, (C.) as to the ceremonial part. H.—He hopes to be soon set at liberty. The verbs should be explained in the future, as S. Jerom has them, (C.) though this is immaterial. Bert.

VER. 46. Of thy, (de, &c.,) but the true reading is, in testimonies, "conformably to," &c., as in the Heb., Sept., and Vulg. H. Bert.

VER. 48. Hands. To pray, labour, or rather to swear an eternal fidelity. C.

VER. 49. Mindful. He does not intimate that God can forget, but shows his fervour, (S. Aug.,) and begs that he may be worthy to receive the effects of God's promises. S. Hil.—Though his decrees be most certain, means must be employed, which the just pray may not be wanting. W.

50 This hath comforted me in my humiliation: because thy word hath enlivened me.

51 The proud did iniquitously altogether: but I declined not from thy law.

52 I remembered, O Lord, thy judgments of old: and I was comforted.

53 A fainting hath taken hold of me, because of the wicked that forsake thy way.

54 Thy justifications were the subject of my song, in the place of my pilgrimage.

55 In the night I have remembered thy name, O Lord: and have kept thy law.

56 This happened to me: because I sought after thy justifications.

HETH.

57 O Lord, my portion, I have said, I would keep thy law.

58 I entreated thy face with all my heart: have mercy on me according to thy word.

59 I have thought on my ways: and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I am ready, and am not troubled: that I may keep thy commandments.

61 The cords of the wicked have encompassed me: but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 I rose at midnight to give praise to thee; for the judgments of thy justification.

63 I am a partaker with all them that fear thee, and that keep thy commandments.

64 The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy: teach me thy justifications.

TETH.

65 Thou hast done well with thy servant, O Lord, according to thy word.

66 Teach me goodness, and discipline, and knowledge; for I have believed thy commandments.

VER. 50. This hope, hæc, though some would suppose it is put for hoc. Bert.—"This is my consolation in my distress." S. Jer. H.—Word. The expectation of thy promises has given me courage. W.

VER. 51. Did. Heb. "greatly derided me." H.

VER. 52. Of old. Upon the rebel angels, and sinful men, whom thou wilt punish for ever. This encourages me to adhere to the cause of virtue. W.

VER. 53. Fainting. So much was the psalmist grieved at the sight of sinners! Bert.—He would have died through zeal if he had not seen God's justice. W.—Apostates particularly filled him with horror. C.

VER. 54. Song. Here on earth I am comforted with singing the praises of thy law, which makes the observers just. W.—The captives would not give holy things to dogs; but, among themselves, they sung canticles. Psal. cxxxvi. C. Col. iii. 16; 1 Par. xxix. 15; Heb. xi. 16.—These pious exercises were opposed to the scandalous discourses of sinners. Bert.

VER. 55. Night. Of tribulation (W.) and captivity. C.

VER. 56. This. Hæc facta est mihi. The feminine is put for the neuter, (C.) which the Heb. have not. Bert.—We may also understand, This night of calamity. Ver. 55. H.

VER. 57. Portion. With the just tending to perfection, I desire no other inheritance. W.—"He who possesses God, has all things." S. Amb.

VER. 59. My ways. Many read, "thy ways." Sept. Arab.—But this is the true sense of the Heb., &c. The consciousness of having adhered to thy commands makes me hope that thou wilt not abandon me. C.—I have bewailed my past transgressions, and am resolved henceforward to live piously. S. Amb.

VER. 60. And am. Heb. "and delay not." For cursed is he who does the work of God negligently, (Sept.) or with deceit. Jer. xlviii. 10. C.

VER. 61. Cords. Temptations of the devil, (S. Aug.) and of the wicked, who strive by force, or by caresses, to ensnare the virtuous. Ver. 110. C.

VER. 62. Midnight. Under tribulation, (S. Aug.) or to avoid the malice of those who pried into my conduct. I was so delighted with thy law, that I meditated on it both in the day-time and at night. C.

VER. 63. Partaker. Heb. "a friend." I do not fear to approve of their conduct, (C.) and condole with them. S. Hil.—The true living members of Christ enjoy the great benefit of participating in the prayers and good works of the whole 67 Before I was humbled, I offended; therefore have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art good; and in thy goodness teach me thy justifications.

69 The iniquity of the proud hath been multiplied over me: but I will seek thy commandments with my whole heart.

70 Their heart is curdled like milk: but I have meditated on thy law.

71 It is good for me that thou hast humbled me, that I may learn thy justifications.

72 The law of thy mouth is good to me, above thousands of gold and silver.

JOD.

73 Thy hands have made me, and formed me: give me understanding, and I will learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee shall see me, and shall be glad: because I have greatly hoped in thy words.

75 I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are equity: and in thy truth thou hast humbled me.

76 O! let thy mercy be for my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, and I shall live: for thy law is my meditation.

78 Let the proud be ashamed, because they have done unjustly towards me: but I will be employed in thy commandments.

79 Let them that fear thee turn to me: and they that know thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be undefiled in thy justifications, that I may not be confounded.

CAPH.

81 My soul hath fainted after thy salvation: and in thy word I have very much hoped.

82 My eyes have failed for thy word, saying: When wilt thou comfort me?

Church militant and triumphant, in the communion of saints. W. See S. Aug. Conf. iv. 4.

VER. 66. Goodness to others (M.) in want. W.—Discipline, or patience under chastisement. S. Aug. Theod.—Heb. "wisdom," or discernment how to act, and knowledge of what regards thy law and revealed truths. Bert.

VER. 67. Humbled. S. Jer. "before I heard, I was ignorant." He speaks of the gift of prophecy: or "before I was afflicted, I went astray." C.—Therefore, chastisements are very salutary. Bert. Ver. 71, and Jer. x. 24, and xxxi. 19. C.

VER. 69. Iniquity. Heb. "the proud have forged lies against me," (H.) which was verified in Daniel, (C.) David, &c. H.

VER. 70. Curdled. Grown hard, like milk that is curdled and turned to cheese. Ch.—Heb. "like fat." They have no compassion or wisdom. Isa. vi. 10. C.

VER. 71. Humbled me. "It is good for the proud to fall into some open sin, (C.) whence they may be displeased at themselves." S. Aug.

VER. 73. Hands. Power (Bert.) and love. Theod.—We may confidently pray to our Creator for light, (W.) and that he may perfect his work. M.

VER. 74. See me advance in virtue. W.—The angels rejoice at the conversion of a sinner, (Luke xv. 10,) as the Church does at her children's progress. S. Jer.

VER. 75. Truth. Though we may not discern the particular causes of our suffering, we must be convinced that they are right. W.—Sinners are afflicted that they may amend, and the just for their advancement. C.

VER. 76. Mercy. Jesus Christ, according to S. Jerom.

VER. 78. Ashamed. Lit. "confounded," not accomplishing their wicked designs. C.—Done. Heb. "falsely perverted," (Mont.) in desire (C.); or "have wished to pervert me without cause." Pagn.—But, to pervert means also to treat ill; and truthuni has that sense here, (H.) according to the best authors. Bert.

VER. 81. Salvation. All the saints sighed after our Saviour's coming, (Matt. xiii. 17,) as they still do, 2 Tim. iv. 8. W.—The deliverance from Babylon was a figure of redemption. The next verse is of the same import. C.

VER. 83. Like a bottle in the frost. In the Hebrew, like a bottle in the smoke. That is, I am become, through my sufferings in this mortal pilgrimage, as a leathern bottle, shrunk up by being exposed to the frost or the smoke. Ch.—So the bodies of the just are exposed to mortification, that they may become 83 For I am become like a bottle in the frost: I have not forgotten thy justifications.

84 How many are the days of thy servant: when wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The wicked have told me fables: but not as thy law.

86 All thy statutes are truth: they have persecuted me unjustly, do thou help me.

87 They had almost made an end of me upon earth: but I have not forsaken thy commandments.

88 Quicken thou me according to thy mercy: and I shall keep the testimonies of thy mouth.

LAMED.

89 For ever, O Lord, thy word standeth firm in heaven.

90 Thy truth unto all generations: thou hast founded the earth, and it continueth.

91 By thy ordinance the day goeth on: for all things serve thee.

92 Unless thy law had been my meditation, I had then perhaps perished in my abjection.

93 Thy justifications I will never forget: for by them thou hast given me life.

94 I am thine, save thou me: for I have sought thy justifications.

95 The wicked have waited for me to destroy me: but I have understood thy testimonies.

96 I have seen an end of all perfection: thy commandment is exceedingly broad.

MEM.

97 O how have I loved thy law, O Lord! it is my meditation all the day.

98 Through thy commandment, thou hast made me wiser than my enemies: for it is ever with me.

like new bottles, capable of containing the new wine of the gospel doctrine. Matt. ix. 17. W.

VER. 84. Servant. The just may lawfully desire the term of their sufferings, with submission to God's will, (W.) and to be freed from the power of persecutors, (Heb. "the proud." Bert.,) and from exile, after their enemies are punished. Psal. xxxviii. 5. C.

VER. 85. Fables. Idle tales, not agreeable to God's law. W.—"The proud have dug pits for me, which is not conformable to thy law," (C.) but forbidden expressly. H.—The Sept. seem to have followed a better reading. C.

VER. 86. Help me. He does not pray to be exempted from trials, but that he may have grace to gain the victory. S. Hil.

VER. 89. In heaven. In the faithful angels, (S. Aug.,) or Jesus Christ. Bellanger.—The promises seem not to have their effect here; but they will in heaven. Bert.—The word of God is as unchangeable as heaven. C.

VER. 90. All. Lit. "unto generation and generation," which the Fathers explain of the true faith, which has subsisted in the synagogue and in the Church of Christ alone. S. Hil., S. Amb., &c.—Those who did not belong to the former, in the first ages of the world, might still form a part of the latter, like Job, &c. Without faith it is, and always was, impossible to please God. Heb. xi. 6.

VER. 92. Abjection. Man cannot rise from sin without grace, and attention to the law. W.—This supports him under the punishment of sin. H.—Meditation alleviates his grief, which might otherwise have proved mortal. Bert.

VER. 95. Understood. Or "shall understand." I am already able to encounter my enemies. Phil. ii. 15. Bert.

VER. 96. Perfection, of a worldly nature. H.—All have their limits. But God's law bindeth for ever, as the rewards and punishments are eternal. W.—Broad. Charity, which extends both to God and our neighbour. S. Aug.—The law is above my comprehension, though I am able to discern its superiority over all created things. Some understand Jesus Christ, the end of the law; or martyrdom, the height of charity; or extreme distress, by the word perfection. Bert.—Lit. "consummation." H.

VER. 97. Loved. Constraint takes away all merit. S. Hil.—Son, give me thy heart. Prov. xxiii. 26. H.

VER. 98. Enemies of salvation, (Bert.,) or the Babylonians, whom Daniel far surpassed; though we would not absolutely assert that it refers to him. Dan. i. 19, and xiii. 1; Eze. xxviii. 3. C.—David was no less enlightened (Bert.) by the prophetic spirit above his earthly instructor, how aged soever. H.

VER. 99. Teachers. Who do not follow the rules of virtue. The ancients, (ver. 100,) of the same description, must yield the palm to those who are less advanced in years, but more observant of God's law. W.

99 I have understood more than all my teachers: be cause thy testimonies are my meditation.

100 I have had understanding above ancients: be cause I have sought thy commandments.

101 I have restrained my feet from every evil way; that I may keep thy words.

102 I have not declined from thy judgments, because thou hast set me a law.

103 How sweet are thy words to my palate! more than honey to my mouth.

104 By thy commandments I have had understanding: therefore have I hated every way of iniquity.

NUN.

105 Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths.

106 I have sworn and am determined to keep the judgments of thy justice.

107 I have been humbled, O Lord, exceedingly: quicken thou me according to thy word.

108 The free offerings of my mouth make acceptable, O Lord: and teach me thy judgments.

109 My soul is continually in my hands: and I have not forgotten thy law.

110 Sinners have laid a snare for me: but I have not erred from thy precepts.

111 I have purchased thy testimonies for an inheritance for ever: because they are the joy of my heart.

112 I have inclined my heart to do thy justifications for ever, for the reward.

SAMECH.

113 I have hated the unjust: and have loved thy law.

VER. 103. Honey. S. Amb., &c., add, "and the honeycomb." Psal. xviii. 11. See Prov. xvi. 24; Eze. iii. 3; Apoc. x. 10.

VER. 104. Hated. We must come to the practice of the law, (C.) and hate sin. W.—Iniquity. Heb. "lying." But every sin is contrary to truth. Bert.

VER. 105. Thy word. Jesus Christ, (S. Hil.,) who enlightens every man. John i.—Lamp, (2 Pet. i. 19; Prov. vi. 23,) while sin is the light of the wicked. Prov. xxi. 4, and xxiv. 20. Bert.

VER. 106. Sworn. By the ceremony of circumcision, &c., as we now engage by vows in baptism, to observe all the commandments. W.—Those who receive not the sacrament, are still under a strict obligation to obey the truth; as all were created only for this purpose. H.

VER. 107. Quicken. This petition, with the praise of the law, is the subject of this psalm. C.—All the godly must suffer, 2 Tim. iii. 12. W.

VER. 108. Free offerings of praise and thanks, (S. Aug.,) or the works of supererogation, (S. Hil., Theod., &c.,) which are not commanded, though acceptable to God, (W.) and undertaken for the sake of greater perfection. C.—The evangelical counsels of voluntary poverty, &c., are of this nature. Still we acknowledge that we are useless servants, (Luke xvii. 10,) with regard to God. We can give him nothing, which he has not first given us. Our piety will redound to our own advantage. H.

VER. 109. My hands. In danger of being thrown by, or of falling, (W.) ready to appear before God's tribunal. I watch over myself, and strive to keep my soul tranquil. The prophet might have all this in view. Bert.

VER. 110. Snare, ver. 67. In such dangers I still remain faithful. C.

VER. 111. Inheritance. I will strive to imitate the faith of Abraham, &c. H.

VER. 112. Inclined. He had said, (ver. 36,) incline, as the work proceeds from grace and free-will. S. Aug.—Reward. S. Jer. "for the eternal reward." All agree that the Heb. may have this sense. He is influenced by hope, though the motive of charity is placed first.—This text evidently shows that the keeping of the commandments merits a reward, for which we may labour. W.—Prot. evade this, by reading, "always, even unto the end;" because akob is ambiguous, and means also, the end. H.—"As if the Sept. were not sufficient to determine the same . . . But . . . they are resolved to take their liberty, though contrary to S. Jerom, and the ancient Fathers." Ward's Errat. p. 75.—God authorizes us to aim at the reward, though he would not have this to be the only motive. Ver. 33. C.

VER. 113. Unjust. Inasmuch as they oppose thy law. Bert.—So Christ orders us to hate our parents, when they are an obstacle to our salvation. We must love their persons and welfare, (S. Aug.,) but hate their iniquity. W.—Heb. "the turbulent." S. Jer. "vain thoughts," and inconstant men.

VER. 114. Helper. Heb. "asylum and buckler." We must keep in his 114 Thou art my helper and my protector: and in thy word I have greatly hoped.

115 Depart from me, ye malignant: and I will search the commandments of my God.

116 Uphold me according to thy word, and I shall live: and let me not be confounded in my expectation.

117 Help me, and I shall be saved: and I will meditate always on thy justifications.

118 Thou hast despised all them that fall off from thy judgments; for their thought is unjust.

119 I have accounted all the sinners of the earth prevaricators: therefore have I loved thy testimonies.

120 Pierce thou my flesh with thy fear: for I am afraid of thy judgments.

AIN.

121 I have done judgment and justice: give me not up to them that slander me.

122 Uphold thy servant unto good: let not the proud calumniate me.

123 My eyes have fainted after thy salvation: and for the word of thy justice.

124 Deal with thy servant according to thy mercy: and teach me thy justifications.

125 I am thy servant, give me understanding that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is time, O Lord, to do: they have dissipated thy law.

127 Therefore have I loved thy commandments above gold and the topaz.

128 Therefore was I directed to all thy commandments: I have hated all wicked ways.

PHE.

129 Thy testimonies are wonderful: therefore my soul hath sought them.

presence, (H.) and avoid the society of the wicked, if we would search the law. Ver. 115. W.

VER. 116. Live. S. Aug. (tr. 124, in Joan.) beautifully describes the life of the just here and in heaven. Bert.—We may thus pray for grace and spiritual life with confidence, if we be resolved to keep the commandments. W.

VER. 119. Prevaricators. For though they be not acquainted with revelation, (H.) they have the natural law written in their hearts by God. Rom. ii. 12. S. Aug.

VER. 120. Afraid. Servile fear is therefore profitable, though perfect charity expel it, and move us to do well for the love of God. 1 John iv. W.—Yet fear sometimes returns, that the just may not give way to presumption. C.

VER. 121. Justice. This he declares out of zeal, praying to be freed from calumniators, (W.) particularly the devil. Apoc. xii. 9. The Babylonians probably laid falsehoods to the charge of the Jews, in order to oppress them, as they frequently accused Daniel.

VER. 122. Uphold. Heb. "answer for," (S. Jer.) as a bondsman.—Unto good. Thus the law is insinuated, though it is not here expressed. Bert.—In attacking the devil, who is so experienced, we must take God with us, or we shall surely be overcome. S. Aug. tr. 4, in Joan.

VER. 123. Salvation. The Messiah, (S. Hil., ver. 41,) or liberty. Ver. 82.

VER. 124. Mercy. When we have been most diligent, there still remains much to be done, and in many things we offend. S. Amb.

VER. 126. To do, our best, since so many prove rebellious (Heb. iv. 11; Eccli. v. 8. Bert.); or we stand in the utmost need of the Messiah, since even the Jews give erroneous explanations of the law. S. Amb.—Heb., &c. "It is time for the Lord to act," by punishing the guilty; or, "to act for the Lord," faciendi Domino, by striving to repair the injuries done to his name and worship. C.

VER. 127. Topaz. Heb. poz, which denotes "the purest gold" of Phison. Gen. ii. 11. C.—The topaz was discovered only in the reign of Ptolemy, father of Philadelphus. S. Hil. Plin. xxvii. 8.

VER. 128. Directed. In my steps. Bert.—Pagn. "I judged all, yea all thy precepts to be right." H.

VER. 130. Declaration. By God's ministers renders them intelligible, though so wonderful in themselves. Heb. styles this "the door of opening." Bert.—The Scriptures are full of difficulties, and Daniel (ix. 2) made them his study. Since the coming of Christ, the mysteries and prophecies have been more developed.

130 The declaration of thy words giveth light: and giveth understanding to little ones.

131 I opened my mouth, and panted: because I longed for thy commandments.

132 Look thou upon me and have mercy on me, according to the judgment of them that love thy name.

133 Direct my steps according to thy word: and let no iniquity have dominion over me.

134 Redeem me from the calumnies of men: that I may keep thy commandments.

135 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: and teach me thy justifications.

136 My eyes have sent forth springs of water: because they have not kept thy law.

SADE.

137 Thou art just, O Lord: and thy judgment is right.

138 Thou hast commanded justice thy testimonies: and thy truth exceedingly.

139 My zeal hath made me pine away: because my enemies forgot thy words.

140 Thy word is exceedingly refined: and thy servant hath loved it.

141 I am very young and despised; but I forgot not thy justifications.

142 Thy justice is justice for ever: and thy law is the truth.

143 Trouble and anguish have found me; thy commandments are my meditation.

144 Thy testimonies are justice for ever; give me understanding, and I shall live.

COPH.

145 I cried with my whole heart, hear me, O Lord: I will seek thy justifications.

But those who refuse to acknowledge him grope at midday. Matt. xi. 25, and xviii. 5, and 1 Cor. xiv. 20. C.

VER. 131. Panted. He asked and obtained the Holy Spirit, (S. Aug.) enabling him to understand the law, (H.) and to comply with it. See Ezech. iii. 2; Psal. lxxx. 11. C.

VER. 132. Judgment. Or custom, (C.) as thou art wont to treat such. W.—Let us not be looked upon as criminals. C.

VER. 134. Calumnies. That they may not cause me to abandon virtue. S. Aug.—A person must be well grounded not to yield on such occasions, when he is exposed to ridicule, &c., ver. 122. C.—Even the psalmist dreaded this situation. Bert.

VER. 135. Shine. (Ver. 133.) Let me never go astray. Bert.—But show me favour. W.

VER. 136. Law. This shows that David composed this psalm, as he fell by seeing Bethsabce.—They. The eyes and all the senses lead to our ruin. Rom. vii. 18, 24. Bert.—True repentance requires lamentation, as well as a firm purpose of amendment, (W.) commissa diluere et abluta non iterare. S. Jer.

VER. 137. Right. He therefore makes people just indeed, and does not barely impute justice to them. W.

VER. 138. Truth. Thy laws are just and true in all respects, though we may not be able to discern it always. Rom. ix. 20, and xi. 33. Bert.—God punishes the wicked in his justice, and rewards the just in his truth, or according to his promises. Theod.

VER. 139. My. Sept. "thy zeal." The just are animated with the zeal of God, like S. Paul. The enemies here mentioned were the Israelites, who attacked David, and not the Babylonians, who never knew God's law, or apostate captives, since we do not find that they attempted to injure Daniel, &c. Bert.—Many, however, both at Ninive and Babylon prevaricated. Tob. i. 12. C.

VER. 140. Refined. Lit. "of fire." H.—Pure as any thing which has passed through the fire. W.—"It consumes sin, and enlightens the penitent." S. Jer.

VER. 141. Young. The Fathers explain this of David, who was preferred before his brothers; and of the Gentiles, who were chosen by Jesus Christ. W.

VER. 143. Trouble. Such is the portion of the just. Rom. v. 3.—Meditation. Heb. "joy." Sym. C.—The sense is the same. Sept. generally give the former meaning, as they render by seeking what moderns would restrain to signify observing. Ver. 145, &c. Bert.

VER. 144. Live. In justice, as thy law enjoins. W.—Christ is the life. Bert.

146 I cried unto thee, save me: that I may keep thy commandments.

147 I prevented the dawning of the day, and cried: because in thy words I very much hoped.

148 My eyes to thee have prevented the morning: that I might meditate on thy words.

149 Hear thou my voice, O Lord, according to thy mercy: and quicken me according to thy judgment.

150 They that persecute me have drawn nigh to iniquity; but they are gone far off from thy law.

151 Thou art near, O Lord: and all thy ways are truth.

152 I have known from the beginning concerning thy testimonies: that thou hast founded them for ever.

RES.

153 See my humiliation and deliver me: for I have not forgotten thy law.

154 Judge my judgment and redeem me: quicken thou me for thy word's sake.

155 Salvation is far from sinners; because they have not sought thy justifications.

156 Many, O Lord, are thy mercies; quicken me according to thy judgment.

157 Many are they that persecute me, and afflict me; but I have not declined from thy testimonies.

158 I beheld the transgressors, and I pined away; because they kept not thy word.

159 Behold I have loved thy commandments, O Lord: quicken me thou in thy mercy.

160 The beginning of thy words is truth: all the judgments of thy justice are for ever.

SIN.

161 Princes have persecuted me without cause: and my heart hath been in awe of thy words.

162 I will rejoice at thy words, as one that hath found great spoil.

VER. 147. The. Lit. "in maturity." Some think that we should read immaturitate, ἀωπία, (S. Aug.,) "in the dead of the night." The psalmist not only rose at midnight, but before sun-rise, to meditate. H.—S. Amb. encourages people to come early to the church, to offer the first-fruits of their heart and voice to God (C.); and S. Aug. informs us that such was the practice of S. Monica. Conf. ix. 7. You are not in a higher station than the holy king who said, I rose, &c. Ver. 22. S. Chrys. Ser. 42, ad Pop. Bert.

VER. 150. Law. There is no medium between faith and infidelity. If we do not observe the law, we sin. Not to advance is to go back. C.

VER. 151. Near. To reward or punish. We wander from thee, yet there is no place between. S. Aug. x. 26, 27. Bert.—God is ever ready to hear our just requests. W.—His law may be easily known. Deut. xxx. 11. C.

VER. 152. Ever. God's law is always the same in substance. W.—That of Moses receives its perfection in Christianity. C.—Though after this life we can no longer observe them, the reward of our past virtue will remain for ever. Bert.

VER. 153. Humiliation. Or "humility," as S. Aug. understands it of that virtue. C.

VER. 155. Sinners. Such cannot expect to be liberated. C.—Yet, as the captivity was fixed for seventy years, and many who were almost ignorant of the law, and had married strange wives, returned, this verse overturns that system, and shows that eternal salvation is meant. Bert.

VER. 157. Many. The Babylonians on one hand, and false brethren on the other, attack me; but I am grieved most to see God offended. C.—All the earth is stained with the blood of martyrs, whom the Church honours with festivals, and whose intercession heals many sick. S. Aug.

VER. 158. Transgressors. Sept. "fools," ἀσυνετοὺς. If o were placed before e, the exact meaning of the Heb. would be preserved, though the wicked are often styled fools. H.—The prevaricating Jews are here designated. Ver. 136. C.

VER. 160. Truth. Hence all such commandments are immutable. W.

VER. 161. Princes. Of darkness, or the chiefs of the Philistines, &c. Bert.—Daniel was much exposed to the fury of the Babylonian princes, but he was more afraid of the terrors of the law, (Lev. xxvi.,) than of all that they could do against him. C.—Thus the martyrs despised the threats of tyrants. S. Aug.—Cause. The powerful men of this world have no just reason to persecute the just, nor can they make them abandon virtue. W.

VER. 162. Spoil. Having just mentioned fear; lest any should think that 163 I have hated and abhorred iniquity; but I have loved thy law.

164 Seven times a day I have given praise to thee, for the judgments of thy justice.

165 Much peace have they that love thy law; and to them there is no stumblingblock.

166 I looked for thy salvation, O Lord; and I loved thy commandments.

167 My soul hath kept thy testimonies, and hath loved them exceedingly.

168 I have kept thy commandments, and thy testimonies; because all my ways are in thy sight.

TAU.

169 Let my supplication, O Lord, come near in thy sight; give me understanding according to thy word.

170 Let my request come in before thee; deliver thou me according to thy word.

171 My lips shall utter a hymn, when thou shalt teach me thy justifications.

172 My tongue shall pronounce thy word: because all thy commandments are justice.

173 Let thy hand be with me to save me; for I have chosen thy precepts.

174 I have longed for thy salvation, O Lord; and thy law is my meditation.

175 My soul shall live, and shall praise thee; and thy judgments shall help me.

176 I have gone astray like a sheep that is lost: seek thy servant, because I have not forgotten thy commandments

PSALM CXIX.

AD DOMINUM.

A prayer in tribulation.

1 A gradual canticle.

IN my trouble I cried to the Lord: and he heard me.

he entertained any secret dislike for the law; he adds, that it gives him more content than the greatest treasures or conquests can the miser or the hero. Ver. 14, 72, and 127. C.

VER. 163. Iniquity. Heb. "lying." The Babylonians have attempted to draw me over to their false religion; but I perceive its vanity, (C.) and stick closer to the truth, (H. Ver. 85,) and to thy holy law. C.

VER. 164. Seven. Often, (W.) as the word signifies. Prov. xxiv. 16, &c. Vat.—Yet here it may determine the precise number, as the Church seems to have taken it, by instituting the seven canonical hours of the day, and matins and lauds for the night, in imitation of the psalmist. Bert. Ver. 147.—The Church has enjoined matins to be said at night, lauds in the morning, prime, tierce, sext, none, vespers, and complin, in the course of the day. S. Ben. Reg. 8, and 16. C.—This ecclesiastical office consists of hymns, psalms, &c. S. Isid.—Against it some have risen up, particularly against that part which was said in the night, pretending that God had made the night for rest; and hence they were called nuctazonotes, or "drowsy" heretics. S. Isid. Of. i. 22.—S. Clement, as many suppose, (W.) or at least some author before the fourth century, (H.) explains the reason why we should pray at these set times; but cautions us not to join with heretics, neither in the Church nor at home. Const. Apost. viii. 40.—For what society is there between light and darkness? 2 Cor. vi.

VER. 166. Loved. Heb., &c. "performed." C.—The difference is but small. Bert.—He is actuated by real charity. W.

VER. 168. Sight, whom I would not offend. W.—The presence of God ought to deter us most effectually from sin. H. Tit. ii. 13.

VER. 169. Supplication. Heb. "cry." Eusebius reads ἀξιώματα, "dignity," which S. Amb. thinks has been substituted for ἀξιώσεις, "prayer;" though all our copies of the Sept. have δεσποίς, (C.) a word of the same import. H.

VER. 173. Save me. Though a person be endued with grace, he requireth more grace to resist temptations. W.—Actual grace is requisite. H.

VER. 175. Live in grace and glory. To serve God, it was not requisite that one should be at Jerusalem. Daniel, Tobias, &c., were saints elsewhere. Bert.—Yet it was more easy to worship God in his temple, where every thing moved to piety (H.); and this the psalmist desires, deeming it a new life. C.

VER. 176. Lost. I am in captivity. C.—All men have been involved in sin, and Christ came to save them; but only such as keep the law will obtain salvation. W.

PSAL CXIX. VER. 1. A gradual canticle. The following psalms, in num-

2 O Lord, deliver my soul from wicked lips, and a deceitful tongue.

3 What shall be given to thee, or what shall be added to thee, to a deceitful tongue?

4 The sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals that lay waste.

5 Woe is me, that my sojourning is prolonged! I have dwelt with the inhabitants of Cedar: 6 my soul hath been long a sojourner.

7 With them that hated peace I was peaceable; when I spoke to them, they fought against me without cause.

PSALM CXX.

LEVAVI OCULOS.

God is the keeper of his servants.

1 A gradual canticle.

I HAVE lifted up my eyes to the mountains, from whence help shall come to me.

2 My help is from the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

3 May he not suffer thy foot to be moved: neither let him slumber that keepeth thee.

4 Behold he shall neither slumber nor sleep, that keepeth Israel.

5 The Lord is thy keeper, the Lord is thy protection, upon thy right hand.

6 The sun shall not burn thee by day, nor the moon by night.

7 The Lord keepeth thee from all evil: may the Lord keep thy soul.

ber fifteen, are called gradual psalms or canticles, from the word gradus, signifying steps, ascensions, or degrees: either because they were appointed to be sung on the fifteen steps, by which the people ascended to the temple; or that in the singing of them the voice was to be raised by certain steps or ascensions; or that they were to be sung by the people returning from their captivity, and ascending to Jerusalem, which was seated amongst mountains. The holy Fathers, in a mystical sense, understand these steps, or ascensions, of the degrees by which Christians spiritually ascend to virtue and perfection, and to the true temple of God in the heavenly Jerusalem. Ch.—Both these last interpretations seem more plausible and literal, as given by S. Chrysostom, &c. Bert.—The allusion to the steps of the temple (Ezec. xl.) is very uncertain, as well as the raising of the voice in higher notes during each psalm. C.

VER. 3. Added. This is an usual form of denouncing vengeance. Ruth i. 17. The Babylonians are threatened with God's judgments, ver. 4. Some place these words in the mouth of God, answering the captives. How shall you be screened from the shafts of detraction? Fear not. The sharp, &c. C.

VER. 4. Waste. Heb. "of juniper" or thorn trees. Job xxx. 4. The former is said to retain its heat a long time, and the latter is easily inflamed. Psal. cxvii. 12.

VER. 5. Is prolonged. Heb. "is Mossoc." H.—But Houbigant rejects this as a place unknown; and the word may have the former signification, given by the Sept. and S. Jerom. C. Bert.—Moses speaks of Mosoch, (Gen. x. 2,) or of the mountains separating Chelcis from Armenia, where the Jews might be dispersed, (4 Kings xvii. 23, and 1 Esd. ii. 59, and viii. 15,) as well as in Cedar, or Arabia Petrea, (Isa. xlii. 11,) where the Saracens afterwards inhabited, according to S. Jerom. (Loc. Heb.) C.—Inhabitants. Heb. "tents," in which the people chiefly dwelt. Bert.

VER. 7. Peaceable. Heb. "I spoke peaceable, and they warlike things." S. Jer.—Lit. "I was peace, and when I spoke, they flew to war." H.

PSAL. CXX. VER. 1. Canticle. David wrote this during his flight from Absalom (Grot.); and de Muis judges from the martial air that it was composed in the midst of danger. It relates to the captives, (Orig. C.) and to all in the pilgrimage of this world. Bert.—Mountains. Jerusalem, and heaven, whence all our help must come. God most readily hears the prayers which are poured forth in places appointed by him. W.

VER. 3. May. Heb. "he will not." Many have read in the second person, both in the Heb. and Sept. "Suffer not thy," &c. Aquila, S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 4. Israel. The Church militant. W.—These figurative expressions show that God will never cease to protect his people. Bert.

VER. 6. Night. Neither prosperity nor adversity shall hurt thee, (S. Jer.,) or the Church. W.

VER. 7. Keepeth. Heb. also, "shall or may." The words of a prophet are always true, and the tenses are varied at pleasure by S. Jerom, &c. Bert.—Soul, or spiritual life. W. 1 Pet. i. 4.

VER. 8. Coming in. Heb. has "going out" first. Bert.—Yet Pagnin agrees

8 May the Lord keep thy coming in and thy going out; from henceforth now and for ever.

PSALM CXXI.

LÆTATUS SUM IN HIS.

The desire and hope of the just for the coming of the kingdom of God and the peace of his Church.

1 A gradual canticle.

I REJOICED at the things that were said to me: We shall go into the house of the Lord.

2 Our feet were standing in thy courts, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem, which is built as a city, which is compact together.

4 For thither did the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord; the testimony of Israel, to praise the name of the Lord.

5 Because their seats have sat in judgment, seats upon the house of David.

6 Pray ye for the things that are for the peace of Jerusalem: and abundance for them that love thee.

7 Let peace be in thy strength: and abundance in thy towers.

8 For the sake of my brethren and of my neighbours, I spoke peace of thee.

9 Because of the house of the Lord our God, I have sought good things for thee.

PSALM CXXII.

AD TE LEVAVI.

A prayer in affliction, with confidence in God.

1 A gradual canticle.

with us. H.—This expression denotes all the occurrences of life. Deut. xxviii. 6. C.—We may discover a beautiful progression in this psalm; God protects us from each and from every danger. Bert.—He is not like earthly friends, who have not always the will or the power to do it. S. Chrys.

PSAL. CXXI. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb., Chal., and Syr. add, "of David," (C.) who saw in spirit the glory of the temple under Solomon, or the return of the captives, and the felicity of souls in heaven. Bert. Sec Psal. xli.—What is said of the earthly Jerusalem, is beautifully applied to heaven by S. Aug., &c. The captive Levites might write this psalm. C.—Lord. Many prophets assured the Jews of their speedy deliverance, as preachers still set before the people the joys of heaven; all which filled the psalmist with rapture. W.—The motive for this joy is disinterested and edifying. The captives had begged for redress in the former psalms. C.—Before they had been chastised, they profaned the temple. S. Chrys.

VER. 2. Were. Heb. also, "shall," &c. Yet many of the Levites had officiated in the temple, 1 Esd. iii. 12.—Courts, or gates, where justice was administered. C.—We may better (H.) rejoice in the Church, (W.) and in the prospect of heaven. H.

VER. 3. Together. Well built and inhabited. The Jews throughout the world considered it as their most dear country. C.—The participation of spiritual graces (Psal. cxviii. 63, &c.) is a great comfort to Catholics, (W.) who look upon the chair of S. Peter at Rome as the centre of unity. H.

VER. 4. The. This was the testimony, (H.) or ordinance of the Lord, (C.) which Israel had solemnly engaged to perform. H.—All were obliged to repair thither thrice in the year (Exod. xxiii. 17. M.); and this contributed most to the splendour of the city. C.—Houbigant would translate "the congregations of Israel;" or juxta may be understood, "according to the testimony." Bert.

VER. 5. Upon. Or "over." H.—The Jews made their sanhedrim superior to the kings, as the Chal. here insinuates. But the text rather means that both the ecclesiastical and civil courts shall be re-established, and bring an immense concourse of people to the city. C.

VER. 6. Pray. Sept. "Ask Jerusalem for," &c., (H.) as if she were to give it. C.—And may there be abundance. Heb. "those who love thee shall be at rest." H.

VER. 7. Strength. Fortifications, (Bert.) or army.—Towers, or "palaces." Heb. Jer. xxxi. 23. C.—He insists so much on the blessing of peace, because he foresaw that Jerusalem would one day neglect it. Luke xix. 42. Charity dwells in the towers or saints, (Bert.) and makes us resemble God. S. Chrys. de Laud. S. Paul. 3.

VER. 8. I. Heb. adds, "I will now" (Mont.); or rather, "I have now spoken." Bert.—It was forbidden to beg for the peace of Chanaan. Deut. vii. 3. But Jeremias (xxix. 7) exhorts the captives to desire this blessing for the city, to which they were going, as it would redound to their own advantage. C.

PSAL. CXXII. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb. adds, "of David." H.—Syriac also attributes it to him, though Zorobabel, &c., might recite it at their return.

TO thee have I lifted up my eyes, who dwellest in heaven.

2 Behold as the eyes of servants are on the hands of their masters :

As the eyes of the handmaid are on the hands of her mistress : so are our eyes unto the Lord our God, until he have mercy on us.

3 Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us ; for we are greatly filled with contempt.

4 For our soul is greatly filled : we are a reproach to the rich, and contempt to the proud.

PSALM CXXIII.

NISI QUIA DOMINUS.

The Church giveth glory to God for her deliverance from the hands of her enemies.

1 A gradual canticle.

IF it had not been that the Lord was with us, let Israel now say : 2 If it had not been that the Lord was with us,

When men rose up against us, 3 perhaps they had swallowed us up alive.

When their fury was enkindled against us, 4 perhaps the water had swallowed us up.

5 Our soul hath passed through a torrent : perhaps our soul had passed through a water insupportable.

6 Blessed be the Lord, who hath not given us to be a prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul hath been delivered, as a sparrow out of the snare of the fowlers.

The snare is broken and we are delivered.

8 Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and-earth.

PSALM CXXIV.

QUI CONFIDUNT.

The just are always under God's protection.

VER. 2. Masters. Expecting liberty, or rather food ; though it may also imply that they are ready to run at the first sign, which they observe with attention. All must come from Him.—Until. Or “waiting for his having mercy on us.” We shall not cease to look up to Him afterwards. Bert.

VER. 4. A reproach. Heb. “with the reproach of those at ease,” &c., (H.) or “let reproach fall upon,” &c. We are treated with too much scorn. Lam. iii. 30. C.

PSAL. CXXIII. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb., &c., with some Latin copies, add, “of David,” (C.) who might write it after being delivered from some danger. It may also be applicable to the martyrs, and to all who have been freed from temptation. Bert.

VER. 3. Perhaps. This word is here affirmative. Heb. “Then.” Sept. “Surely.” C.—He modestly leaves it to others to judge what would have been the event if God had not sent help. The weak would have been destroyed, as soon as if they had become a prey to wild beasts, as Jonas was swallowed up. W.—See Prov. i. 12. M.

VER. 5. Insupportable. Without bottom, or beyond our strength, ἀνυπόστατον. C.—Heb. “Then the swelling waters it had passed over our soul.” Mont. C.—S. Jerom has, “perhaps they,” &c., which is more correct. See Psal. lxxvii. 3. H.—A torrent implies sudden great troubles. W.

VER. 7. Sparrow. Heb. “bird.” This comparison shows at once the dangers to which the Jews had been exposed, and their miraculous deliverance. C.—We must therefore fly : but who will give us wings except God ? S. Amb.

PSAL. CXXIV. VER. 1. Canticle of thanksgiving, relating to the times of the Messias, (Abenezra,) or to the Jews, who overcame the attempts of the nations at their return. 2 Esd. iv. and vi. Ven. Bede, &c. C.—It exhorts all to confide in God. Bert.—Trust. The Jews complied not with this condition, and are become “agabonds ;” but the faithful inherit this promise, (Heb. x. 19. Bert.) which is verified in the Catholic Church. S. Aug.—To be secure, like Sion, which is defended by other mountains, we must belong to her society. W.

VER. 2. About it. Coming from Joppe, travellers cannot see the city till they are very near it, though with respect to Judca, it is very elevated.—The construction of the Vulg. is very natural. C.—For the promise regards the inhabitants, rather than the place, as Heb. would insinuate.—Lord. Zac. ii. 5.

VER. 3. Rod. Sceptre, or violent dominion. Isa. x. 5.—That. Or “therefore.” Interp. in S. Chrys. God always concludes his threats with promises of

1 A gradual canticle.

THEY that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Sion he shall not be moved for ever that dwelleth 2 in Jerusalem.

Mountains are round about it : so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth, now and for ever.

3 For the Lord will not leave the rod of sinners upon the lot of the just : that the just may not stretch forth their hands to iniquity.

4 Do good, O Lord, to those that are good, and to the upright of heart.

5 But such as turn aside into bonds, the Lord shall lead out with the workers of iniquity : peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXV.

IN CONVERTENDO.

The people of God rejoice at their delivery from captivity.

1 A gradual canticle.

WHEN the Lord brought back the captivity of Sion, we became like men comforted.

2 Then was our mouth filled with gladness ; and our tongue with joy.

Then shall they say among the Gentiles : The Lord hath done great things for them.

3 The Lord hath done great things for us : we are become joyful.

4 Turn again our captivity, O Lord, as a stream in the south.

5 They that sow in tears, shall reap in joy.

6 Going they went and wept, casting their seeds.

7 But coming they shall come with joyfulness, carrying their sheaves.

PSALM CXXVI.

NISI DOMINUS.

Nothing can be done without God's grace and blessing.

1 A gradual canticle of Solomon.

pardon to the penitent, 1 Cor. x. 13. C.—He tries his servants for their good, and will not abandon them. W.

VER. 4. Heart. This God will certainly perform. W.—He asks not for himself alone, and leaves all to the Divine disposal. H.

VER. 5. Bonds, obligationes. “Knots,” as σπαραγγαλιᾶς also means, (Bert.,) rather than duties. Bell.—Some suspect that obligationes was put originally, as Heb. means “crooked ways,” (C.) “embarrassments.” Aquila.—He may allude to the dark machinations of false brethren, who endeavoured to thwart the pious designs of Nehemias, vi. 14. Apostates shall be treated like infidels, (C.) or rather worse, as we shall be if we act not up to the lights (H.) and graces which we have received. C.—Israel. S. Paul adds, of God, to show who may be entitled to this blessing. Bert.

PSAL. CXXV. VER. 1. Sion. It cannot be doubted but this regards the captives of Babylon : but still David might compose it, as he was a prophet ; and herein the redemption of mankind may also be described. Bert.—The captives pray for the return of the rest of their brethren. C.—Comforted. Heb. “dreaming.” C.—They could hardly believe their own eyes, like S. Peter. Acts xii. 9. This extraordinary joy is felt by devout souls, when freed from sin. W.

VER. 2. Shall. Or “did” (C.) ; though the future is here well employed. Bert.—The prophet uses both tenses, showing the certainty of the event. W.—It would require some time before the Gentiles would become sufficiently acquainted with the concerns of the Jews. Bert.—As soon as they did, they expressed their admiration, while the former were careful not to imitate the conduct of those who murmured at leaving Egypt. S. Chrys.

VER. 4. South. As the Egyptians hope for the overflowing of the Nile (Hammond) ; or as the south wind melts the snow, so as to make the Jordan overflow its banks. Theod.—The return of our brethren will be as agreeable to us as water to a thirsty soil. Chal. Muis.—Make them come quickly, and in great numbers Isa. lx. 3, and lvi. 12. C.

VER. 5. Joy. This was the case of the martyrs, &c., (Luke vi. 21 ; John xvi. 20,) as well as of the captives. Jer. xxxi. 9 ; Isa. lvi. 10 ; Bar. v. 6. C.—Tribulation commonly attends the virtuous in this life. Their reward is reserved for the next. S. Aug. W.—Sowing, we know not whether we shall ever reap. H.—This is a sort of proverb, which is applied to the captives. Bert.

PSAL. CXXVI. VER. 1. Of, or “for” Solomon. This word is not in the Sept. Bert.—Some suppose that David put the psalm into his hands, to teach him

UNLESS the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it.

Unless the Lord keep the city, he watcheth in vain that keepeth it.

2 It is vain for you to rise before light: rise ye after you have sitten, you that eat the bread of sorrow.

When he shall give sleep to his beloved: 3 behold the inheritance of the Lord are children: the reward, the fruit of the womb.

4 As arrows in the hand of the mighty, so the children of them that have been shaken.

5 Blessed is the man that hath filled his desire with them; he shall not be confounded when he shall speak to his enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVII.

BEATI OMNES.

The fear of God is the way to happiness.

1 A gradual canticle.

BLESSED are all they that fear the Lord; that walk in his ways.

2 For thou shalt eat the labours of thy hands: blessed art thou, and it shall be well with thee.

3 Thy wife as a fruitful vine, on the sides of thy house. Thy children as olive plants, round about thy table.

4 Behold, thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord.

5 May the Lord bless thee out of Sion: and mayest thou see the good things of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

6 And mayest thou see thy children's children, peace upon Israel.

that all depends on God. Muis.—He was to undertake various important works during his reign, (H.) particularly the temple, at the dedication of which this might be sung. W.—The chiefs of the captives might also appropriate it to their use, (Bert.,) when they were rebuilding the temple, 2 Esd. iv. and vi. C.—It seems to refer to the times of the Messias. Bert.—House, or temple, and grant children. Exod. i. 21; Gen. xxx. 2. Without God's assistance all your endeavours to rebuild the temple and city will prove fruitless.—It. Nehemias had ordered the citizens to watch the attempts of Sanaballat. C.—But still depended more on Providence than on his own industry. H.

VER. 2. Light. That is, your early rising, your labour and worldly solicitude, will be vain, that is, will avail you nothing, without the light, grace, and blessing of God. Ch.—Rise ye, is not in Heb. H.—Sitten. Allow yourselves proper time for rest, after your labours and sorrows: for his beloved, whom he favours with his grace, shall sleep and rest under his wing, and yet abound with offspring, and all blessings. Ch.—Sorrow. S. Jer. "of idols." This worship of God is odious.—Beloved. Solomon. Houb.—Yet some explain the Heb. in the plural, as it is applicable to all the people. The Jews were under great alarms: but were encouraged to hope that God would protect them, and give them a numerous progeny; though, as the country was probably never so well peopled as under Solomon, this may rather refer to the elect, who after the sleep of death (Bert.) shall behold those whom Christ shall acknowledge for his children, (H.) and obtain an eternal reward. S. Hil.

VER. 4. As arrows, &c. The offspring which God shall give his servants, that have been shaken and tossed about, (as the children of Israel were in their captivity,) shall be like arrows in the hand of the mighty, which shall prosper and do great execution. Ch.—The patient sufferer will obtain a glorious recompense. W.—Children defend their parents.—Of them, &c. Heb. "of youth." S. Jer.—Such may be able to assist their aged parents, whereas those who are born in their old age must frequently be left orphans, (H.) and distressed. C.

VER. 5. Desire. Who has as many children as he could wish. Heb. "his quiver." They are like arrows for his defence. C.—The Sept. may have put the thing signified instead of the figure; or assopthu may not be restrained to the former sense.—He shall. Heb. "they," father and son: yet the Chal., &c., retain he.—Gate. The enemies' envoys were not admitted into the city, 4 Kings xviii. 17. Orig., &c.

PSAL. CXXVII. VER. 1. Canticle. Being a sequel to the former, (C.) and similar to the 111th, as both promise felicity to the captives at their return, if they prove faithful, 2 Esd. ix. 38. Ferrand.—Both temporal and spiritual blessings are set before us. Bert.—Ways. Many saints have not received temporal rewards; and this confirms our faith that there is a world to come. C.—In effect, no temporal advantages are here specified, as they are below. Bert.

VER. 2. Hands. The idle are not entitled to blessings, which God will be-

PSALM CXXVIII.

SÆPE EXPUGNAVERUNT.

The Church of God is invincible: her persecutors come to nothing.

1 A gradual canticle.

OFTEN have they fought against me from my youth, let Israel now say.

2 Often have they fought against me from my youth: but they could not prevail over me.

3 The wicked have wrought upon my back: they have lengthened their iniquity.

4 The Lord, who is just, will cut the necks of sinners: 5 let them all be confounded, and turned back, that hate Sion.

6 Let them be as grass upon the tops of houses: which withereth before it be plucked up:

7 Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that gathereth sheaves, his bosom.

8 And they that passed by have not said: The blessing of the Lord be upon you: we have blessed you in the name of the Lord.

PSALM CXXIX.

DE PROFUNDIS.

A prayer of a sinner trusting in the mercies of God. The sixth penitential psalm.

1 A gradual canticle.

OUT of the depths I have cried to thee, O Lord: 2 Lord, hear my voice.

Let thy ears be attentive to the voice of my supplication.

3 If thou, O Lord, wilt mark iniquities; Lord, who shall stand it?

stow on the industrious who fear him, preserving them from evils. Lev. xxvi. 16, and Deut. xxviii. 30. C. 2 Cor. iii. 10.—Some have explained καρπων, "fruits," though here it means hands. Bert.

VER. 3. Sides. Against which vines were planted. C.

VER. 5. Sion. Where he displayed his bounty. C.—Jerusalem. In heaven, 1 Cor. xv. 19. Bert.—Mayest thou live happy in the holy city, after thy long captivity. C.

VER. 6. Israel. This is best secured by a well-regulated and numerous people. Bert.—The good works, performed on earth, will be rewarded in heaven. W.

PSAL. CXXVIII. VER. 1. Canticle. In which David, (H.) or the Jews, at their return, after they had got the better of their enemies, render thanks to God. S. Chrys. C.—Fought against. Heb. "afflicted."—Expugn. verunt might seem to imply that they had obtained the victory. But this was not the case, at least eventually, though the people of God might sometimes be oppressed, and yield to sin. H.—Youth. Since the Israelites left Egypt. Osee ii. 15; Jer. ii. 2. C.

VER. 2. But. Or, "for," etenim. On this account they repeated their attacks. H.—But the psalmist testifies that they will not succeed. W.

VER. 3. Back. Heb. "labourers have laboured on my neck," (S. Jer.,) or "back." They have made me bear the yoke, or have ploughed up my back. This proverbial expression shows the cruelty of the Babylonians, (C.) and of the enemies of Christ, (Isa. i. 6,) and the martyrs. Theod.—Heb. eress, means also to work like a blacksmith. Gen. iv. 22. Bert.—The Church bears patiently all crosses.

VER. 4. Necks. Heb. "collars," (Theodot.,) "snares," (Sym.,) or "bands," with which they have oppressed us. Cyrus abandoned the Babylonians to be slaves of those Persians who had taken them, and made them till the land, &c. Xenoph. 7. C.

VER. 5. Back. By a sincere conversion. C.—God will cover the presumptuous with eternal confusion, so that none shall bless them, ver. 8. W.

VER. 6. Houses. Which were flat, so that grass might grow, but the heat of the climate would not suffer it to come to perfection.—Up. S. Jer.—Chal. "flourish," as some copies of the Sept. read. Yet Hammond, &c., declare for our version. The precise import of the Heb. is not known.

VER. 8. Upon you. Chal. adds, "and they did not reply."—We, &c. H.—The custom of blessing reapers continued in the days of S. Aug. Ruth ii. 4. C.

PSAL. CXXIX. VER. 1. Canticle. David might compose it after his sin, though it might suit the captives, and all sinners, as well as the souls in purgatory. Bert.—It has long been recited in their behalf. W.—Depths of the prison of expiation, or from this vale of misery, (Bert.,) captivity, (C.) and from the bottom of my heart. S. Chrys.

VER. 3. Mark. Heb. "observe or keep."—It. Heb. "who shall stand upright, (C.) or make opposition." H.

4 For with thee there is merciful forgiveness: and by reason of thy law, I have waited for thee, O Lord.

My soul hath relied on his word: 5 my soul hath hoped in the Lord.

6 From the morning watch even until night, let Israel hope in the Lord.

7 Because with the Lord there is mercy; and with him plentiful redemption.

8 And he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXX.

DOMINE NON EST.

The prophet's humility.

1 A gradual canticle of David.

LORD, my heart is not exalted: nor are my eyes lofty.

Neither have I walked in great matters, nor in wonderful things above me.

2 If I was not humbly minded, but exalted my soul:

As a child that is weaned is towards his mother, so reward in my soul.

3 Let Israel hope in the Lord, from henceforth, now and for ever.

PSALM CXXXI.

MEMENTO DOMINE.

A prayer for the fulfilling of the promise made to David.

1 A gradual canticle.

O LORD, remember David, and all his meekness.

2 How he swore to the Lord, he vowed a vow to the God of Jacob.

• 2 Kings vii. 2.—b 2 Par. vi. 41.

VER. 4. Law. The promises of pardon contained therein. W.—Heb. is now different from what the ancient interpreters read. C.—“Therefore shalt thou be feared.” Mont. H.—Sym. and Theodotion agree with us.—Word. And promises that the captivity should end, (C.) and sin be remitted. H.

VER. 6. From. Or Heb. “more than the morning watch; yea, more than the morning watch.” I expect my deliverance with greater eagerness than sentinels do the return of morning. All the day and night long I am filled with these sentiments. C.

PSAL. CXXX. VER. 1. Of David, is not in Sept. But he probably composed this psalm to exculpate himself from the accusation of pride. Bert.—David proposes his own humility to the imitation of others, without any evil intention. W.—Sometimes the saints may speak their own praises, as S. Paul did, particularly when they are inspired. Bert.

VER. 2. So reward, &c. The meaning is, that according to his disposition with regard to humility, so he expected a reward in his soul to return to him, and stick as close to him as the child just weaned, which would willingly never be separated from the mother. Ch.—If I was not humble, may my soul be treated like an infant, &c. Heb. “If I did not render (or humble and silence) my soul, like an infant weaned from his mother, let my soul be to me as a weaned child.” I willingly submit to all thy rigours, if I did not adore thy ways in silence and in humiliation. C.

PSAL. CXXXI. VER. 1. David. Jesus Christ, (S. Hil., &c.,) or the pious king David, when he intended to build the temple. Solomon adopts some of the verses at his dedication, (ver. 8; 2 Par. vi. 41. H.) and some have attributed the psalm to him, to the captives, or to some prophet in the time of the Machabees, though the prophets then, in fact, appeared no longer. Bert. See Psal. xliii., lxxiii., lxxvi., lxxxviii., and xcvi.—The Jews allow that some verses regard the Messiah, of whom the whole may be explained in a spiritual, (C.) or even in the second literal sense. Bert.—Meekness. Heb. also “humility,” (C.) or “affliction,” (S. Jer.,) as the prophet might have all this in view.

VER. 2. Jacob. Probably after he had removed the ark to Sion. Bert.—What is omitted in one place, is thus explained elsewhere. C.—David had a most earnest desire to build the temple; and though the honour was reserved for his son, he prepared the materials. W.

VER. 3. If. He expresses his vow in the form of an imprecation, without expressing the penalty, as he submits to the rigour of God’s justice, if he proves faithless. C.—He vows to take no rest, till he might, if it so pleased God, find a place to build a temple. W.

VER. 5. Temples. This seems to have been in the copies of Sept. and Theodotion. It is not correct to say that the former added it by inspiration, as they were only interpreters. Bert.—It was marked as an addition in the Hexapla. C.

VER. 6. Heard of it in Ephrata. When I was young, and lived in Bethlehem, otherwise called Ephrata, I heard of God’s tabernacle and ark, and had a

3 ^a If I shall enter into the tabernacle of my house: if I shall go up into the bed wherein I lie:

4 If I shall give sleep to my eyes, or slumber to my eye-lids,

5 Or rest on my temples: until I find out a place for the Lord, a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

6 Behold we have heard of it in Ephrata: we have found it in the fields of the wood.

7 We will go into his tabernacle: we will adore in the place where his feet stood.

8 ^b Arise, O Lord, into thy resting place: thou and the ark, which thou hast sanctified.

9 Let thy priests be clothed with justice: and let thy saints rejoice.

10 For thy servant David’s sake, turn not away the face of thy anointed.

11 The Lord hath sworn truth to David, and he will not make it void: ^c of the fruit of thy womb I will set upon thy throne.

12 If thy children will keep my covenant, and these my testimonies, which I shall teach them:

Their children also for evermore shall sit upon thy throne.

13 For the Lord hath chosen Sion: he hath chosen it for his dwelling.

14 This is my rest for ever and ever: here will I dwell, for I have chosen it.

15 Blessing, I will bless her widow: I will satisfy her poor with bread.

c 2 Kings vii. 12; Luke i. 55; Acts ii. 30.

devout desire of seeking it; and accordingly I found it at Cariathiarim, the city of the woods: where it was till it was removed to Jerusalem. See 1 Par. xiii. Ch.—It seems rather, that the psalmist alludes to the ark, first at Silo, secondly in the country of Ephraim, or the Ephratheans, (Psal. lxxvii. 60, 67, and Judg. xii. 5,) for 328 years, and afterwards at Cariathiarim, for other 70.—It, (eam,) the tabernacle, which in Heb. is fem. C.—Yet, as the text has tabernacles, or “dwellings,” mosocnuth, (ver. 5,) and as the Mosaic tabernacle was kept at Silo, or Gabaon, and was not with the ark at Cariathiarim, we may perhaps suppose that the psalmist alludes to the ark, (H.) or to the thing indefinitely, (Bert.,) where the glory of the Lord was displayed. S. Jer. and Houbigant have “him,” the God of Jacob. H.—The Fathers explain it of Jesus Christ, (Theod.,) who was born at Bethlehem, (W.) and was prefigured by the temple, (C.) styled “the fields of wood.”

VER. 8. Sanctified. Heb. “ark of thy strength,” which title proceeds from the sanctity of God, who resides there. 1 Kings vi. 20. Our heart ought to be his resting-place. Isa. lxvi. 2. Bert.—Leaving Silo, &c., come into thy temple, with the ark where thou sanctifiest thy people. He contemplates a higher mystery, the coming of the Messias, and his glorious resurrection. W.

VER. 9. Justice. And all virtues, (Bert.,) of which their robes were emblematical.—Saints. Levites. Chal. C.—Let both priests and Levites perform well their sacred functions, (W.) and may all the faithful act up to their vocation. Bert.—Rejoice. Heb. “sing,” which was the office of the Levites. C.—Yet the original term is more comprehensive, and denotes all the emotions of joy. H.

VER. 10. Sake. What confidence are we not taught to place in the merits of the saints! The captives remind God of the virtues of David and Solomon, and use their expressions to move him to show mercy, and to restore the temple to its ancient splendour. C.—The future obstinacy of many Jews in rejecting him was foreseen and deprecated. S. Aug.

VER. 11. Make. Lit. “deceive him.” Heb. “will not turn from it,” th. truth. Bert.—Thy. S. Cyprian and S. Hil. read, “my throne,” which belonged to the Lord. 1 Par. xxix. 23. C.—But it might also be styled David’s, as the promises were made to him. H.—Christ was born of the virgin’s womb, without having any man for his father. S. Aug.—This promise actually was fulfilled in Solomon, and in Christ, who would infallibly possess the throne. 2 Kings vii., and Acts ii. But Christ reigns over all. Bert. Luke i. 32.—S. Peter hence proves our Saviour’s resurrection, (W.) and power in the Church. H.

VER. 12. If. The promises made to the carnal posterity of David were conditional, and seem to imply that they would forfeit them. S. Hil.—But those regarding the Messias are absolute. C.—Yet heaven is only promised to his children in the Church, if they observe God’s commandments. Rom. viii. 17. W.

VER. 14. This. God is introduced speaking to the end. H.—Chosen. Heb. “desired.” This relates to his spouse, the Church. C.—He dwelleth in this Sion for ever. W.—It was the figure of the Christian Church, as this is of heaven. Heb. xii. 22. Bert.

16 I will clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall rejoice with exceedingly great joy.

17 *There will I bring forth a horn to David: I have prepared a lamp for my anointed.

18 His enemies I will clothe with confusion: but upon him shall my sanctification flourish.

PSALM CXXXII.

ECCE QUAM BONUM.

The happiness of brotherly love and concord.

1 A gradual canticle of David.

BEHOLD how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

2 Like the precious ointment on the head, that ran down upon the beard, the beard of Aaron,

Which ran down to the skirt of his garment: 3 as the dew of Hermon, which descendeth upon Mount Zion.

For there the Lord hath commanded blessing, and life for evermore

PSALM CXXXIII.

ECCE NUNC BENEDICITE.

An exhortation to praise God continually.

1 A gradual canticle.

BEHOLD now bless ye the Lord, all ye servants of the Lord:

Who stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

2 In the nights lift up your hands to the holy places, and bless ye the Lord.

3 May the Lord out of Zion bless thee, he that made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXXIV.

LAUDATE NOMEN.

An exhortation to praise God: the vanity of idols.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the name of the Lord: O you, his servants, praise the Lord:

2 You that stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

* Mal. iii. 1; Luke i. 69.—b Jer. x. 13.—c Exod. xii. 29.

VER. 15. Widow. Whose name is often joined with orphans, and the poor, as the Heb. Tside may imply one "desolate." 1 Tim. v. 5. Bert.—The Greek copies vary: some have widow, and others, "prey," which is most commonly given as the sense of the Heb. H.—The poor priests and Levites, who had no land, shall be abundantly supplied. C.

VER. 16. Salvation. To instruct others. Bert.

VER. 17. There. Lit. "thither," (H.) Illuc, as Christ came from heaven. Bert.—Horn. Power and glory. This regards Solomon, and the Messias. Heb. "I will make to bud," &c., alluding to Christ's miraculous birth. Isa. iv. 2. C.—Lamp. S. John the Baptist, (John v. 35. S. Athan.) or Christ himself, (Luke ii. 32; Apoc. xxi. 23,) though it may also be understood of David's son and successor. C.—Yet this lamp was too dreadfully extinguished. Bert.—Christ protects his Church, which is placed for the instruction of all. W.

VER. 18. My. Heb. "his diadem," (S. Jer.) or "consecration." The glory of David was great, as a figure of Christ, to whom this more properly belongs. He is the King of ages, without sin, &c. C.

PSAL. CXXXII. VER. 1. "Of David." as we read in Heb. and the Alex. Sept., being composed by him, when all Israel acknowledged his dominion, (Bert.) after his third anointing. Houbig.—Others explain it of the captives returned, and particularly of the sacred ministers resolving to perform their duties with unanimity. C.

VER. 2, 3. Precious. Is expressed in Heb. The name of Aaron would sufficiently denote that it was of this nature. Bert. See Exod. xxx. 23.—Moses poured it on his head with such profusion that it ran upon all his beard, and even to the skirt, or neck, as the Sept. insinuate, though the Heb. means "the mouth," or orifice, through which the head entered, (C.) as the robes resembled our sacred vestments. H.—The union of priests is no less sweet. C.—Of this we need no other proof than to behold the advantages of concord in every community, and especially in the Church of God. Unity is equally desirable, as moisture to a thirsty soil. H.—Sion may here denote any "dry" mountain. Muis.—The enemies of Chris-

3 Praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good: sing ye to his name, for it is sweet.

6 Whatsoever the Lord pleased he hath done, in heaven, in earth, in the sea, and in all the deeps.

7 *He bringeth up clouds from the end of the earth: he hath made lightnings for the rain.

He bringeth forth winds out of his stores: 8 *He slew the first-born of Egypt, from man even unto beasts.

9 He sent forth signs and wonders in the midst of thee, O Egypt: upon Pharaoh, and upon all his servants.

10 *He smote many nations, and slew mighty kings:

11 *Sehon, king of the Amorrites, and Og, king of Basan, and all the kingdoms of Chanaan.

12 And gave their land for an inheritance, for an inheritance to his people Israel.

13 Thy name, O Lord, is for ever: thy memorial, O Lord, unto all generations.

14 For the Lord will judge his people, and will be entreated in favour of his servants.

15 *The idols of the Gentiles are silver and gold, the works of men's hands.

16 *They have a mouth, but they speak not: they have eyes, but they see not.

17 They have ears, but they hear not: neither is there any breath in their mouths.

18 Let them that make them be like to them: and every one that trusteth in them.

19 Bless the Lord, O house of Israel: bless the Lord, O house of Aaron.

20 Bless the Lord, O house of Levi: you that fear the Lord, bless the Lord.

tinity observed how the disciples loved each other, being of one heart and soul, (Bert.) as their Divine Master had taught them to be thus distinguished. H.

PSAL. CXXXIII. VER. 1. Canticle. David composed it for the Levites going on duty, (H.) or Solomon for the dedication of the temple. The people might use it on the last day of the three great festivals; or the Levites are exhorted to watch carefully.—In the courts, &c. seems to be taken from Psal. cxxxiv. 2, (C.) as it is not in Heo. S. Hil.—The court of the people was divided for the men and women, and perhaps there was a separate place for the priests, and for the Levites, in the court allotted to them, where the latter kept watch. C.

VER. 2. Lift up. This posture was very natural and expressive. 1 Tim. ii. 8. H.—Earth. All things were made to praise God. W.

PSAL. CXXXIV. VER. 1. Alleluia. The psalm turns on God's praises, and might be composed by David, after he had settled the order of the Levites, though it may suit all people. Bert.—The latter part agrees with Psal. cxlii., and Jer. x., which might lead us to conclude that it was composed after the captivity, perhaps for the dedication of the second temple. The next psalm is a repetition of this, with the chorus interspersed. C.

VER. 4. Possession. Heb. "jewel, property." Chal. "well-beloved." See Deut. xxxii. 8; Eccl. xvii. 14. C.—The first patriarchs corresponded with God's goodness: but their descendants were for the most part ungrateful: so that Christians have now entered into their place, and must praise God. Bert.

VER. 5. Gods. Whatever is so esteemed by men. S. Chrys.—He then proceeds to show the vanity of such false gods. C.

VER. 7. Earth. The Mediterranean Sea is so called. Luke xii. 54.—Rain Indicating, or causing rain. H.—The most incompatible things are united. Theod.—The sinner melts into tears at the sight of God's judgments. S. Aug.—Sinner, which are his will and decrees. Theod. Jer. li 16

PSALM CXXXV.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

God is to be praised for his wonderful works.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE the Lord, for he is good : for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Praise ye the God of gods : for his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Praise ye the Lord of lords : for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Who alone doth great wonders : for his mercy endureth for ever.

5 *Who made the heavens in understanding : for his mercy endureth for ever.

6 Who established the earth above the waters : for his mercy endureth for ever.

7 Who made the great lights : for his mercy endureth for ever.

8 The sun to rule the day : for his mercy endureth for ever.

9 The moon and the stars to rule the night : for his mercy endureth for ever.

10 *Who smote Egypt with their first-born : for his mercy endureth for ever.

11 *Who brought out Israel from among them : for his mercy endureth for ever.

12 With a mighty hand and with a stretched-out arm : for his mercy endureth for ever.

13 Who divided the Red Sea into parts : for his mercy endureth for ever.

14 And brought out Israel through the midst thereof : for his mercy endureth for ever.

15 *And overthrew Pharaoh and his host in the Red Sea : for his mercy endureth for ever.

16 Who led his people through the desert : for his mercy endureth for ever.

17 Who smote great kings : for his mercy endureth for ever.

18 *And slew strong kings : for his mercy endureth for ever.

* Gen. i. 1.—b Exod. xii. 29.—c Exod. xiii. 17.—d Exod. xiv. 28.

VER. 14. Entreated. Deut. xxxii. 36. "Have pity," (Bert.,) or revenge.

VER. 20. Fear. It was important to distinguish the priests from the people. C.

PSAL. CXXXV. VER. 1. Alleluia, in Heb., is at the end of the last psalm. H.—It is omitted entirely in S. Aug., &c. Origen thinks that the captives sung this psalm at their return, as it greatly resembles the 106th, 134th, &c. C.—We read, (2 Par. vii. 6,) the priests stood in their offices, and the Levites, with the instruments of music of the Lord, which king David made to praise the Lord, "because his mercy endureth for ever," &c. This chorus is found only in this psalm, which seems therefore to have been sung at the dedication of the temple. Bert.—The first part of the verse was sung by the priests, or cantors, (H.) and the second was repeated perhaps by the people, (C.) or by other musicians, as we now answer at the litanies, and often repeat the Rosary, Gloria, &c. W.—Praise. Lit. "confess" (H.) your sins, and praise God. S. Hil.—For ever. Or is unbounded. His heart overflows at this thought. Bert.

VER. 4. Wonders. If saints or others work miracles, it is only by God's permission. Theod.

VER. 5. Understanding. Or Son, who is the uncreated Wisdom, (S. Aug.) or to lead us to the knowledge of him. All has been made by the Divine power and wisdom.

VER. 7. Lights. The stars, (S. Jer.,) or the sun and moon. Ver. 8. Gen. i. 16. C.—All are great lights, though the moon be comparatively small. Bert.

VER. 16. Desert. This was very astonishing, as they were not incommoded by the heat, or destitute of food and clothes for forty years, (C.) except when God tried them for their improvement, or for their sins.

VER. 23. Affliction. Lit. "humility," (H.) when we entered into ourselves under the judges, or during the captivity. C.

PSAL. CXXXVI. VER. 1. For Jeremias. For the time of Jeremias, and the 19 Sehon, king of the Amorrites : for his mercy endureth for ever.

20 *And Og, king of Basan : for his mercy endureth for ever.

21 *And he gave their land for an inheritance : for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 For an inheritance to his servant Israel : for his mercy endureth for ever.

23 For he was mindful of us in our affliction : for his mercy endureth for ever.

24 And he redeemed us from our enemies : for his mercy endureth for ever.

25 Who giveth food to all flesh : for his mercy endureth for ever.

26 Give glory to the God of heaven : for his mercy endureth for ever.

27 Give glory to the Lord of lords : for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVI.

SUPER FLUMINA.

The lamentation of the people of God, in their captivity, in Babylon.

1 A psalm of David, for Jeremias.

UPON the rivers of Babylon, there we sat and wept. when we remembered Sion :

2 On the willows in the midst thereof, we hung up our instruments. 3 For there they that led us into captivity required of us the words of songs.

And they that carried us away, said : Sing ye to us a hymn of the songs of Sion.

4 How shall we sing the song of the Lord in a strange land ?

5 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem ! let my right hand be forgotten.

6 Let my tongue cleave to my jaws, if I do not remember thee :

If I make not Jerusalem the beginning of my joy.

7 Remember, O Lord, the children of Edom, in the day of Jerusalem :

Who say : Rase it ; rase it, even to the foundation thereof.

* Num. xxi. 24.—f Num. xxi. 33.—g Jos. xiii. 7.

captivity of Babylon. Ch.—Or "of" (Jeremias. H.) Jeremias ; on which subject he composed his Lamentations, as the Sept. thus insinuate. W.—The title may be a later insertion, and is not the same in all the Greek or Latin copies. It is wholly omitted in Heb., &c. Theodoret blames those who have written the name of Jeremias, as he was never at Babylon. C.—He might send the psalm to the captives, (Grot.,) though it were written by David, (Gerer.,) who was a prophet. See Psal. lxxviii. Bert.—The captives express their sentiments at Babylon, (Bossuet,) or at their return (C.) ; and thus, under the figure of the earthly Jerusalem, (Bert.,) aspire to heaven. S. Aug.—Rivers. Euphrates, &c. The Jews retired to such places to pray. Philo, con. Flac. Acts xvi. 13. H.—Sion, and all the ceremonies of religion. W.

VER. 2. Willows. With which the Euphrates was lined. Isa. xv. 7. It passed through the city, which was adorned with trees, and contained extensive tracts of land for cultivation. C.—Babylon may also include all the territory. Bert.—Instruments. Heb. Kinnor means properly the ancient lyre, but here it is put for all instruments of music. C.

VER. 3. Sion. The Levites were trained to singing from their infancy, at the expense of the nation. Under David there were 288 masters, and 8000 Levites who played on music. 1 Par. xv. The Babylonians wished to hear them, (C.) or (W.) spoke insultingly, (Theod.,) as the pagans asked what good Christ had done ? S. Aug.

VER. 4. Land. They were oppressed with grief, (Eccl. xxii. 6,) and unwilling to expose sacred things to profanation, though there was no prohibition for them to sing out of Judea for their mutual comfort. C.

VER. 7. Day. When Jerusalem was taken, or when it shall be re-established. H.—The Idumeans incited the Babylonians to destroy it entirely, and even cut in pieces such as had escaped. Abdias. Ver. 11. Jer. xii. 6.—The illusions of our 8 O daughter of Babylon, miserable: blessed shall he be who shall repay thee thy payment which thou hast paid us.

9 Blessed be he that shall take and dash thy little ones against the rock.

PSALM CXXXVII.

CONFITEBOR TIBI.

Thanksgiving to God for his benefits.

1 For David himself.

I WILL praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: for thou hast heard the words of my mouth.

I will sing praise to thee in the sight of the angels:
2 I will worship towards thy holy temple, and I will give glory to thy name.

For thy mercy, and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy holy name above all.

3 In what day soever I shall call upon thee, hear me: thou shalt multiply strength in my soul.

4 May all the kings of the earth give glory to thee: for they have heard all the words of thy mouth.

5 And let them sing in the ways of the Lord: for great is the glory of the Lord.

6 For the Lord is high, and looketh on the low: and the high he knoweth afar off.

7 If I shall walk in the midst of tribulation, thou wilt quicken me: and thou hast stretched forth thy hand against the wrath of my enemies: and thy right hand hath saved me.

8 The Lord will repay for me: thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever: O despise not the works of thy hands.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

DOMINE PROBASTI.

God's special providence over his servants.

own imagination and vanity are most dangerous and domestic enemies, as the Edomites sprung from the same stock as Israel. Bert.

VER. 8. Daughter. Citizens.—Miserable “plunderer,” (Sym.,) or “ruined,” (Aquila,) or “which shalt be given up to plunder.” Theod.—Cyrus reduced the city to a state of abjection, and it has since experienced other miseries, (C.) so that its situation is now unknown. H.—Isaiah (xlii.) foretold this destruction. W.

VER. 9. Dash thy little ones, &c. In the spiritual sense we dash the little ones of Babylon against the rock, when we mortify our passions, and stifle the first motions of them, by a speedy recourse to the rock, which is Christ. Ch. S. Aug. S. Greg. Psal. l. W.

PSAL. CXXXVII. VER. 1. David. It contains a form of thanksgiving for him, or for any other. W. Bert.—Some Greek copies add, “of Aggeus and Zacharias.” But this is of small authority, though they might sing this psalm (C.) when the Jews had been delivered from all their enemies, (Origen,) under Darius, who married Esther.—Praise. Lit. “confess,” (H.) by repentance, (S. Jer.,) and praise. S. Hil.—For, &c. This sentence is placed after angels in Sept., and is not at all in Heb., Bert., Chal., Syr., &c. C.—It seems probable that the Sept. found this reason for praise in their copies.—Angels. Some would translate “judges, gods,” &c. But the psalmist would rather pray before the angels, who would attend in the temple, and present his petitions. Bert. Apoc. v. and viii. Const. Apost. viii. 4.—Their presence ought to fill us with awe, (Luke xii. 8, and 1 Tim. v. 21,) and with confidence, if our prayer comes from the heart. H.—Such God will hear, and the angels will present. Tob. xii.; Acts x.; 1 Cor. xi. 10.; Psal. xxiv. 10.

VER. 2. Towards. Thus the Jews acted when they were at a distance from the temple, and in captivity. W.—Truth. Which thou hast displayed in my regard.—Holy. Sept. may have perhaps written λογιον, “Word,” agreeably to the Heb., though our version seems more easy. Bert.—S. Jerom (ad. Sun.) explains it of Jesus Christ, the Word, whose name is so exalted, (Phil. ii. 9. C.) as well as the Divine majesty. W.—The holy doctor translates, “thou hast magnified thy word above every name.” But thy is joined with name in Heb. Others would supply “thy name and thy word.” Bert.

VER. 3. Strength. Sept., &c., add, “thy.” C.
VER. 4. Mouth. All kingdoms shall, sooner or later, become acquainted with the gospel. W.—The predictions of Jeremias, &c., had been communicated to the neighbouring princes, (C.) and all might know that God had executed his threats and promises. H.—Yet none of them embraced the true religion, soon after the captivity, so that this relates to Christ. Bert.

VER. 6. The high, &c. The proud and haughty, who exalt themselves, God knoweth afar off: that is, he despiseth them, and setteth them at a distance from him; whilst he stoopeth down to favour and embrace the low and humble. Ch.—

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

LORD, thou hast proved me, and known me: 2 thou hast known my sitting down and my rising up.

3 Thou hast understood my thoughts afar off: my path and my line thou hast searched out.

4 And thou hast foreseen all my ways: for there is no speech in my tongue.

5 Behold, O Lord, thou hast known all things, the last and those of old: thou hast formed me, and hast laid thy hand upon me.

6 Thy knowledge is become wonderful to me: it is high, and I cannot reach to it.

7 Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy face?

8 “If I ascend into heaven, thou art there: If I descend into hell, thou art present.

9 If I take my wings early in the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea:

10 Even there also shall thy hand lead me: and thy right hand shall hold me.

11 And I said: Perhaps darkness shall cover me: and night shall be my light in my pleasures.

12 But darkness shall not be dark to thee, and night shall be light as the day: the darkness thereof, and the light thereof, are alike to thee.

13 For thou hast possessed my reins: thou hast protected me from my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee, for thou art fearfully magnified: wonderful are thy works, and my soul knoweth right well.

15 My bone is not hidden from thee, which thou hast made in secret: and my substance in the lower parts of the earth.

• Amos ix. 2.

He treats the proud as strangers to him. W.—If kings would sing in the ways of the Lord, they also must love, and be humble. S. Aug.

VER. 7. Wilt quicken me. And not otherwise. S. Aug.—There is no going to heaven without crosses. H.—Wrath. Most furious and cruel enemies. C.

VER. 8. Repay. Taking me under his protection, (S. Chrys.,) he will punish my oppressors; or he has done it already. C.—Hands. Rescue me from the oppression of my temporal and spiritual enemies. Bert.

PSAL. CXXXVIII. VER. 1. David. Some Greek copies add, “a psalm or alleluia of Zacharias in the dispersion,” when the Israelites were at Babylon.—It is the most beautiful and sublime piece in all the psalter. Abenezra.—Proved me. God makes trial of his servants, to let them know themselves, as all things are open to him. W.—Me. Houbigant supplies the omission in Heb. “hast known.”

VER. 2. Up. Or all the occurrences of my life. Lam. iii. 63. H.—The expression is similar to that of coming in and going out. Acts i. 21. This may be explained of Christ, whose sufferings and resurrection were foreseen. C.

VER. 3. Off. Before they were formed. S. Chrys.—Line. Or the measure of my life and actions. C.—Heb. “my lying down,” alluding to hares, &c., which are followed to their resting-places. Houbig.—Some read, “my direction,” (S. Hil., &c.,) or “limit.” S. Aug. C.

VER. 4. No speech, &c., viz. unknown to thee: or when there is no speech in my tongue, yet my whole interior and my most secret thoughts are known to thee. Ch.—Sept. Vat. “no evil speech.” Ald. “no deceit.” Bert.

VER. 6. To me. Lit. “from me,” ex me. Heb. “above me,” (H.) or “more than I,” (Houbig.,) which seems little. “The knowledge which thou hast of me is admirable.” Bert.

VER. 7. Face, or anger. S. Aug. Chal. C. Isa. xxx. 28. M.—The power of God extends every where. Wisd. i. 7. C.—The third Divine person is truly God, and immense. S. Jer.—As God's knowledge comprehends every thing, so his presence reaches to all. W.

VER. 8. Descend. Heb. “make my bed the grave or hell.” Job xvii. 13. The living and the dead are equally in God's power. C.

VER. 9. In the morning. Seer is so rendered by S. Jer. H.—Some would understand “the black eagle,” (Lycan.,) or the east, (Orig.,) or aurora. The poets assign wings to the sun, &c. Mal. iv. 2. C.

VER. 11. Cover. Lit. “tread me under foot,” conculcabunt. H.—Heb. “shall cover or be my aurora.” C.

VER. 12. Thereof. Alluding to day and night. Bert.

VER. 14. Magnified. Chal. and S. Jer. “hast magnified me.” Heb. seems less correct, “I have been terribly magnified,” though the sense is much the same. Bert.—I have been stricken with awe and astonishment at thy works. C.

16 Thy eyes did see my imperfect being, and in thy book all shall be written: days shall be formed, and no one in them.

17 But to me thy friends, O God, are made exceedingly honourable: their principality is exceedingly strengthened.

18 I will number them, and they shall be multiplied above the sand: I rose up and am still with thee.

19 If thou wilt kill the wicked, O God: ye men of blood depart from me:

20 Because you say in thought: They shall receive thy cities in vain.

21 Have I not hated them, O Lord, that hated thee: and pined away because of thy enemies?

22 I have hated them with a perfect hatred: and they are become enemies to me.

23 Prove me, O God, and know my heart: examine me, and know my paths.

24 And see if there be in me the way of iniquity: and lead me in the eternal way.

PSALM CXXXIX.

ERUPE ME DOMINE.

A prayer to be delivered from the wicked.

1 Unto the end, a psalm of David.

2 DELIVER me, O Lord, from the evil man: rescue me from the unjust man.

3 Who have devised iniquities in their hearts: all the day long they designed battles.

4 *They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent: the venom of asps is under their lips.

• Supra, v. 11; Rom. iii. 13.

VER. 15. Bone. Heb. "substance."—And my. Heb. "and curiously wrought." Prot. H.—Sept. have read rather differently, and give a very good sense; "and is my substance in?" &c.

VER. 16. My imperfect being, &c., viz. When I was as yet but an embryo, in my mother's womb; and even then, in the book of thy knowledge, all the parts and members of my body were exactly set down; which by succession of days were formed, and brought to perfection; and no one of them but what was fashioned by thee. Ch.—Or none shall return from the grave, nemo in eis. Bert.—No man can form the body. Job x. 8. W.—None of these days, (H.) or men, shall escape thee, (C.) or "live for ever." Syr.—Prot. "in thy book all my members (marg. all of them) were written, which in continuance were fashioned, (marg. or what days they should be fashioned,) when as yet there was none of them." H.—Imperfect. Chal. "body." Syriac, "reward."—Book here alludes to the list of the living, kept by God, (Exod. xxxii. 32,) or to the decree of predestination. Phil. iv. 3. C.

VER. 17. Friends. Many pervert this passage, translating "thoughts," because the word may have that sense in Chal., (W.) though the paraphrase agree with us (C.); and all confess that our version is accurate. The other may also be admitted. While the dead seem to have no longer any existence, the saints are still with God, and the psalmist hopes to rise with them. Bert.—Principality. S. Jer. and Theod. "poor," who are generally employed by God in his greatest works, that no flesh may glory in his sight.

VER. 18. I rose up, &c. I have taken a resolution to rise up from sloth and sleep; and to be still with thee, whose friends are so honourable and so happy. Ch.—I hope to persevere in thy service. W.

VER. 19. If. Heb. "surely." Houbig.—From me. How long shall I be forced to live among the enemies of the Lord? C.—Since he will regard the good, and punish the wicked eternally, I renounce the society of the latter. W.—He specifies murderers, as he had described the wonderful formation of man. M.

VER. 20. Because you say in thought, &c. Depart from me, ye wicked, who plot against the servants of God, and think to cast them out of the cities of their habitation; as if they had received them in vain, and to no purpose. Ch.—Thy cities. Sixtus V., &c. read, "their." C.—Schismatics, and all innovators, endeavour to withdraw all their dependencies from the truth (S. Aug.); and infidels wish to prevent the propagation of the gospel. Bert.—The enemies of Nehemias, &c., may be here meant. 2 Esd. iv. 2. C.—Depart from me, all you who would represent the felicity of heaven to be a dream. W.

VER. 22. Hatred. Christ commands, "Love your enemies;" not those who hate God. S. Aug.—We must love in them what God loves, and detest what he condemns. Theod.—The Jews abused this passage, thinking they might hate those who were not of their nation. C.—The example of the prophet might have rectified them. Bert.—Fervent zeal against God's enemies is commendable.

5 Keep me, O Lord, from the hand of the wicked: and from unjust men deliver me.

Who have proposed to supplant my steps. 6 the proud have hidden a net for me.

And they have stretched out cords for a snare: they have laid for me a stumblingblock by the way side.

7 I said to the Lord: Thou art my God: hear, O Lord, the voice of my supplication.

8 O Lord, Lord, the strength of my salvation: thou hast overshadowed my head in the day of battle.

9 Give me not up, O Lord, from my desire to the wicked: they have plotted against me; do not thou forsake me, lest they should triumph.

10 The head of them compassing me about: the labour of their lips shall overwhelm them.

11 Burning coals shall fall upon them; thou wilt cast them down into the fire: in miseries they shall not be able to stand.

12 A man full of tongue shall not be established in the earth: evils shall catch the unjust man into destruction.

13 I know that the Lord will do justice to the needy and will revenge the poor.

14 But as for the just, they shall give glory to thy name: and the upright shall dwell with thy countenance.

PSALM CXL.

DOMINE CLAMAVI.

A prayer against sinful words, and deceitful flatterers.

1 A psalm of David.

I HAVE cried to thee, O Lord, hear me: hearken to my voice, when I cry to thee.

2 Let my prayer be directed as incense in thy sight; the lifting up of my hands, as evening sacrifice.

VER. 23. Paths. No one knowing, without a special revelation, whether he be worthy of love or hatred, (Eccli. ix.) the just submit to God's examination.

VER. 24. Way. If I be in sin, pardon me, and prepare me for heaven. W. PSAL. CXXXIX. VER. 1. David. He, (C.) Ezechias, (Ven. Bede,) the captives, (Bossuet,) or Jesus Christ and his servants under persecution, speak in this psalm. Holy Fathers. See Psal. lv. C.

VER. 2. Man. Saul, (C.) Judas, (S. Hil.), or self-love, the old man, who is our most dangerous enemy. Bert.

VER. 3. Battles. And formed plots to destroy the just. W.

VER. 6. Side. The enemies of David calumniated him, and strove to make him follow idols. 1 Kings xxvi. 19.

VER. 8. Battle. Against Goliath, or against the attempts of Saul, &c. C.—Prayer and Divine grace are necessary to guard us from sin. W.

VER. 9. Desire. If I yield to my passions, (S. Aug.,) or after I have expressed my request, or contrary to my desire, &c. Heb. "Grant not the desire of the sinner, complete not his thought. They will be elated." Some supply, "lest they be."

VER. 10. Head. Heb. also "poison," (Bert.,) or "sum" of their mischievous devices. W.—Labour, or punishment. C.

VER. 11. Fire of hell, (W. Chal.,) as well as temporal afflictions, from lightning, &c. Psal. xvii. 9. H.

VER. 12. Tongue. This member is very dangerous. Pet. Bles. 119. James iii. 6.—The just man is not styled "a man of tongue," but "of heart;" for which reason Christ exhorted his disciples not to make long speeches in prayer. Matt. vi. 7. Bert.—Into. Lit. "in;" though (H.) it should be into, conformably to the Sept. Bert.

VER. 13. I know. Heb. "thou knowest." But some copies read more accurately. Houbig.—Poor. Thus, in the end, was Lazarus treated. W.

VER. 14. Countenance in glory, when thou shalt appear. 1 John iii. 2. H.—They shall dwell under thy special protection in the tabernacle. C.

PSAL. CXL. VER. 1. David. When persecuted by Saul. C.—It is very difficult, and was used in the evening service in the Oriental churches, (S. Chrys.,) as it is on Friday in the Rom. Breviary. The psalm may be applicable to all in distress, (Bert.,) who are members of Christ. S. Aug.—Hearken. Heb. "hasten to me, hear my voice," &c. H.—God approves such cries. C.

VER. 2. As. May be understood, "My prayer is an evening sacrifice," or equally acceptable. H.—Sacrifice. Heb. "offering," which may be the same with the incense, or the evening holocaust. C.—The Church prays that her petitions may ascend to the throne of God, and be accepted. The morning sacrifice was rather more solemn. But the evening one is here specified, in allusion to Christ's, at the last supper, and on the cross, (W.) which was consummated in the evening. S. Aug. T.

3 Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: and a door round about my lips.

4 Incline not my heart to evil words; to make excuses in sins.

With men that work iniquity: and I will not communicate with the choicest of them.

5 The just man shall correct me in mercy, and shall reprove me: but let not the oil of the sinner fatten my head.

For my prayer also shall still be against the things with which they are well pleased: 6 their judges falling upon the rock, have been swallowed up.

They shall hear my words, for they have prevailed: 7 as when the thickness of the earth is broken up upon the ground:

Our bones are scattered by the side of hell. 8 But to thee, O Lord, Lord, are my eyes: in thee have I put my trust, take not away my soul.

9 Keep me from the snare, which they have laid for me, and from the stumblingblocks of them that work iniquity.

10 The wicked shall fall in his net: I am alone until I pass.

PSALM CXLI.

VOCE MEA.

A prayer of David in extremity of danger.

1 Of understanding for David. A prayer when he was in the cave. 1 Kings xxiv.

2 I CRIED *to the Lord with my voice: with my voice I made supplication to the Lord.

• Supra, lxxvi. 2.

VER. 3. And. Heb. "keep guard at the door of my lips," (Mont.) or "on the poverty of," &c., (S. Jer.) that I may not speak too much, or imprudently; as I shall do, if left to myself. H.—Heb. dol is rendered "elevation," (Chal.) and may here stand for "a door." Theod.—David prays that he may not be unguarded in his speech. He always spoke of Saul with the greatest respect. 1 Kings xxiv. 18. C.

VER. 4. Sins. Such excuses are always vain. S. Jer.—God does not incline any to sin, as the Manichee elect pretended. S. Aug.—Our first parents excused themselves; but David candidly confessed his sins, and was presently pardoned. Bert.—Choicest. Heb. also, "I will not eat of their most delicious meats." I will have no society with libertines, (Bert.) nor with those who teach false doctrine. 2 John 10, and Tit. iii. 10.

VER. 5. In mercy. Prov. xxvii. 16, and Ezec. xix. 8. H.—Let not the oil of the sinner, &c. That is, the flattery, or decedious praise. Ch.—This is pernicious; while the reprehension of the just may do us good. W.—Sinner. Heb. "of poison, or of the head, (vass,) break, or fatten, (S. Jer.) or be broken upon my head." The vessel was usually broken. Mark xiv. 3. Bert.—Prot. "Let the righteous smite me, it shall be a kindness, and let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break," &c. H.—Or "he shall not," &c., as his only aim tends to my advantage. Many other senses may be given. C.—For my prayer, &c. So far from coveting their praises, who are never well pleased but with things that are evil; I shall continually pray to be preserved from such things as they are delighted with. Ch.—Against. Lit. "in or concerning their desirable things." H.

VER. 6. Their judges, &c. Their rulers, or chiefs, quickly vanish and perish, like ships dashed against the rocks, and swallowed up by the waves. Let them then hear my words, for they are powerful and will prevail; or, as it is in the Hebrew, for they are sweet. Ch.—The Israelites were long governed by judges, and the supreme magistrates at Carthage had the same title. C.—Sept. "their strong ones" have or shall become victims of the Divine justice. H.—Prevailed. Or, "been able" to hear.

VER. 7. As when the thickness, &c. If this is to be connected with what goes before, it declares the efficacy of those powerful words, capable to break up the thick and hard earth, of the hearts of man. But if it is to be connected with the following words, our bones are scattered, &c., it means that the malice of our enemies has, as it were, scattered our bones near the confines of death and hell; as the husbandman, ploughing up or digging the earth, scatters and breaks the clods. Ch.—These are made small, that they may bear fruit, which is the effect of persecution upon the faithful. S. Aug. W.—Heb. "like the labourer breaking up the earth, so our," &c. C.

VER. 10. His. "Own," (Prot.) the devil's, (S. Hil.) or God's net. S. Chrys., &c.—Saul twice fell into David's power. C.—Alone. Singularly protected

3 In his sight I pour out my prayer, and before him I declare my trouble.

4 When my spirit failed me, then thou knewest my paths.

In this way wherein I walked, they have hidden a snare for me.

5 I looked on my right hand, and beheld: and there was no one that would know me.

Flight hath failed me: and there is no one that hath regard to my soul.

6 I cried to thee, O Lord; I said: Thou art my hope, my portion in the land of the living.

7 Attend to my supplication: for I am brought very low.

Deliver me from my persecutors; for they are stronger than I.

8 Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: the just wait for me, until thou reward me.

PSALM CXLI.

DOMINE EXAUDI.

The psalmist in tribulation calleth upon God for his delivery. The seventh penitential psalm.

1 A psalm of David, when his son, Absalom, pursued him. 2 Kings xvii.

HEAR, O Lord, my prayer: give ear to my supplication in thy truth: hear me in thy justice.

2 And enter not into judgment with thy servant: for in thy sight no man living shall be justified.

3 For the enemy hath persecuted my soul: he hath brought down my life to the earth.

He hath made me to dwell in darkness as those that by the Almighty, until I pass all their nets and snares. Ch.—Though alone, fear no danger. H.—I will have no connexion with the wicked in this life, (S. Chrys.) which is beset with snares. C.—Heb. "I will be a witness till I pass. Houbig.—Jed means, "together," &c. Bert.

PSAL. CXLI. VER. 1. Cave. Of Engaddi, (Bossuet. C.) or of Odollam Bellar. Bert.—Here David was a figure of Christ praying in the garden, &c. S. Hil.

VER. 3. Pour out. Explaining all the sentiments of my heart. Psal. lxi. 9. C. This is never perfectly done with earthly friends. 1 Pct. v. 7. Bert.

VER. 4. Knewest. With approbation. (Psal. i. 6. H.) my deportment towards Saul, and also the dangers to which I was exposed, and the means of escaping.—They. Ancient psalters add, "the proud," from Psal. cxxxvi. 6. C.—The devil and his agents attack the just at all times. S. Jer.

VER. 5. Hand. For succour. Psal. xv. 8. So was David situated at Engaddi, as our Saviour was, when he was abandoned by his disciples. C.—None would appear to be acquainted with those in distress. H.

VER. 6. Living. On the earth, (Bert.) or land of Judea, (S. Chrys.) in this life, (C.) or in the next. In all, God is our only protector and reward. Psal. xv. 5. Bert.

VER. 8. Prison. Or the cave. C.—As David was never in prison, this is more applicable to Christ, seized by his enemies, and consigned to the tomb. Houbig.—Name. God expects it from us. Psal. xlix. 15.—Wait. Heb. "will crown." Sym. S. Jer. H.—But Aquila adopts the Chal. and Syr. sense of the word, with the Sept., (C.) and this may very well be the meaning, as David and his friends did not pretend to reign till the death of Saul. Bert.

PSAL. CXLI. VER. 1. Absalom is not specified in Rom. Sept., &c., (C.) though it be in other copies. H.—The latter part of the title has been added by the Greeks. S. Hil.—If David composed the psalm on occasion of his son's revolt, he considered it as a punishment of his former transgression. The Fathers explain it of Jesus Christ, who suffered for our sins. Bert.—It might also relate to the captives, (Ferrand,) or to the same event as the preceding psalm, (Bossuet,) though there is no reason for abandoning the title. C.—Justice. Or mercy. S. Chrys.—Absalom had no just cause of complaint, (H.) and God had promised to protect David on the throne.

VER. 2. Justified. Compared with thee, (C.) and without mercy. God is bound by his promise to hear the penitent. W.—David and S. Paul had been assured of the remission of their sins, yet never ceased to beg for pardon. Bert.

VER. 3. Of old. Lit. "of an age," (H.) who are quite forgotten. Lam. iii. 6. C.—The devil had violently tempted me, by means of temporal and spiritual calamities. W.—The greatest darkness is that of the heart. Eph. iv. 17. H.

VER. 4. Troubled. David knew not what course to take. 1 Kings xv. 25. 31. Our Saviour was in the greatest agony. C.

have been dead of old: 4 and my spirit is in anguish within me: my heart within me is troubled.

5 I remembered the days of old, I meditated on all thy works: I meditated upon the works of thy hands.

6 I stretched forth my hands to thee: my soul is as earth without water unto thee.

7 Hear me speedily, O Lord: my spirit hath fainted away.

Turn not away thy face from me, lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me to hear thy mercy in the morning, for in thee have I hoped.

Make the way known to me, wherein I should walk: for I have lifted up my soul to thee.

9 Deliver me from my enemies, O Lord, to thee have I fled: 10 teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God.

Thy good spirit shall lead me into the right land: 11 for thy name's sake, O Lord, thou wilt quicken me in thy justice.

Thou wilt bring my soul out of trouble: 12 and in thy mercy thou wilt destroy my enemies.

And thou wilt cut off all them that afflict my soul: for I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIII.

BENEDICTUS DOMINUS.

The prophet praiseth God, and prayeth to be delivered from his enemies. No worldly happiness is to be compared with that of serving God.

1 A psalm of David against Goliath.

BLESSED be the Lord, my God, who teacheth my hands to fight, and my fingers to war.

2 My mercy, and my refuge: my support, and my deliverer.

My protector, and I have hoped in him: who subdued my people under me.

3 Lord, what is man, that thou art made known to him; or the son of man, that thou makest account of him?

VER. 5. Of old. What God had done formerly for me and others. W.

VER. 6. Water. We can add nothing to this idea. C.—Man can do no good without God's grace, which David implores with his hands stretched out, both to mortify himself, and to denote fervour. W.

VER. 7. Pit. Or "lake," meaning (H.) the grave. C.—If man be left to himself, he will presently yield to sin, from which he will not be delivered without God's grace.

VER. 8. Morning. At the first assault of temptation, (W.) or speedily.—To thee. With the most ardent desire. Jer. xxii. 27. This might suit the captives. Ver. 5, 11. C.

VER. 9. Fled. Heb. "to thee I have hidden myself," (Mont.) or "am protected." S. Jer.—But the Sept. seem to have read better, esithi, "I have hoped." Chal.

VER. 10. Spirit. I look for a favourable wind, like one at sea, in danger of suffering shipwreck, and I apply to God, to the Holy Ghost the Comforter.—Right. Even, (C.) and not like this country, full of precipices. The Holy Ghost is here represented as a distinct person. Bert.

VER. 12. Mercy. Towards me. Justice required that the rebels should be punished, as they were, even contrary to David's intention. 1 Kings xviii. 5. C.

PSAL. CXLIII. VER. 1. Goliath. Heb. has simply, "of David." H.—S. Hilary thinks that the Sept. added the rest by inspiration, (C.) because this was David's first exploit in war. W.—But others pay no deference to this part of the title. The Chaldee, however, seems to allude to the same victory, (ver. 10.) and the Syriac to that which David obtained over Asaph, brother of Goliath. 1 Par. xx. 5. C.—David prays that he may overcome the Philistines, and gives thanks in Psal. xvii. Ferrand.—Kimchi and Gaon refer the psalm to the Messiah. C.—God. Heb. "rock."—Fingers. Which chose the five pebbles. He was to exert himself, and yet to acknowledge that all success came from God. Bert.

VER. 2. Mercy. "All the titles of God remind us of his benefits." S. Jer.—My people. After the defeat of the rebels, (C.) and the death of Isboseth. Bert.—Heb. may also be "peoples," as Psal. xvii. (Syr. &c.), including them, and the various nations that were subdued by David. C.

VER. 3. To him. Heb. "thou dost acknowledge him." S. Jer. H.—In the 4 Man is like to vanity: *his days pass away like a shadow.

5 Lord, bow down thy heavens, and descend: touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 Send forth lightning, and thou shalt scatter them: shoot out thy arrows, and thou shalt trouble them.

7 Put forth thy hand from on high, take me out, and deliver me from many waters: from the hand of strange children.

8 Whose mouth hath spoken vanity: and their right hand is the right hand of iniquity.

9 To thee, O God, I will sing a new canticle: on the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings I will sing praises to thee.

10 Who givest salvation to kings: who hast redeemed thy servant, David, from the malicious sword: 11 deliver me,

And rescue me out of the hand of strange children; whose mouth hath spoken vanity: and their right hand is the right hand of iniquity:

12 Whose sons are as new plants in their youth:

Their daughters decked out, adorned round about after the similitude of a temple:

13 Their storehouses full, flowing out of this into that.

Their sheep fruitful in young, abounding in their goings forth: 14 their oxen fat.

There is no breach of wall, nor passage, nor crying out in their streets.

15 They have called the people happy, that hath these things: but happy is that people whose God is the Lord.

PSALM CXLIV.

EXALTABO TE DEUS.

A psalm of praise, to the infinite majesty of God.

1 Praise, for David himself.

I WILL extol thee, O God, my King: and I will bless thy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

* Job viii. 9, and xiv. 2.

transport of gratitude he reflects on his own weakness. Job vii. 17; Rom. viii. 31. C.—Before Christ all mankind were undeserving of revelation. W.

VER. 4. Vanity. Heb. ebol, "nothing, a vapour," &c. Eccles. i. 1; James iv. 15. H.—Our lives resemble a shadow, which is the less distinct the more it increases. Bert.

VER. 5. Mountains. The proud, (Orig.) spirits. S. Hil.—Come to my assistance, as thou didst appear on Sinai. Exod. xix. 16; Psal. xvii. 8. C.

VER. 8. Iniquity. Heb. "lying."

VER. 10. Kings. Their power cannot protect them. H.—Ilst. Severa. read, "wilt redeem."—Malicious. Heb. "his servant from the evil sword" (Mont.) of Goliath, (Chal.) or of Saul, (Bert.) and all his other enemies. H.—He represents himself in the midst of danger, from the rebels. C.

VER. 12. Whose. Heb. "our." This makes quite a different sense from the ancient versions, which refer what follows to the rebels, who had no cause to complain of David's government. Ver. 14. C.—S. Jerom, however, agrees with the Heb. "that our sons may be," &c. Prot. assor means "whose (ver. 11) and that." H.—If we supply, they said, the text and versions will give the same sense, (Geneb. Bert.) as it is inserted ver. 15. H.—Decked. Heb. "our daughters, like corner-stones cut like a temple," (Mont.) or "palace." Prot.

VER. 13. That. The partitions are too small; or fresh fruits come before the old ones are consumed. Lev. xxvi. 10. C.—Fruitful. Heb. "our sheep (or small cattle, pecudes) producing a thousand, bringing forth ten thousand, in our streets." Pagn.

VER. 14. Fat. Heb. "our bulls (oxen or cows) are burdened," &c.—Of wall. Sym. "nor burying nor mourning in their places." The other interpreters cited by Theodoret, have also "their." C.—Passage. Of the enemy. H.

VER. 15. They. Heb. "happy the people, to which such things belong; happy," &c. S. Jer. H.—This text speaks all along of the temporal blessings attending the virtuous. C.—But the Sept. being convinced that these were rather the sentiments of David's enemies, give it this turn, (Bert.) and show that real happiness consists rather in the possession of God, as the psalmist intimates, by the concluding sentence. H.

PSAL. CXLIV. VER. 1. Praise. The remaining seven psalms relate to the 2 Every day will I bless thee: and I will praise thy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

3 Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised: and of his greatness there is no end.

4 Generation and generation shall praise thy works: and they shall declare thy power.

5 They shall speak of the magnificence of the glory of thy holiness: and shall tell thy wondrous works.

6 And they shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts: and shall declare thy greatness.

7 They shall publish the memory of the abundance of thy sweetness: and shall rejoice in thy justice.

8 The Lord is gracious and merciful: patient and plenteous in mercy.

9 The Lord is sweet to all: and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10 Let all thy works, O Lord, praise thee: and let thy saints bless thee.

11 They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom: and shall tell of thy power:

12 To make thy might known to the sons of men: and the glory of the magnificence of thy kingdom.

13 Thy kingdom is a kingdom of all ages: and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

The Lord is faithful in all his words: and holy in all his works.

14 The Lord lifteth up all that fall: and setteth up all that are cast down.

15 The eyes of all hope in thee, O Lord: and thou givest them meat in due season.

16 Thou openest thy hand, and fillest with blessing every living creature.

17 The Lord is just in all his ways: and holy in all his works.

18 The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him: to all that call upon him in truth.

praises of God, to intimate that this occupation ought to be our glory both in time and in eternity, as all were created for that purpose. Ven. Bede.—This is the seventh of the alphabetical psalms, the last four of which are only recognised by S. Jer. as perfect. See Psal. xxiv., xxxiii., xxxvi., cx., cxi., and cxviii. Yet here the ver. 14, which should commence with N, is wanting in Heb., though it was probably there at first, as it is in the Greek and Latin, (W.) as well as in the Syr. and Arabic. C.—Hence it appears that our versions ought not always to be corrected by the Heb., which might be rendered more perfect by a collation with them. W.—My King. On whom I entirely depend. Bert.—And ever. S. Jer. “and after,” (H.) both in time and in eternity. Christ is styled King, to whom the nations were promised (Psal. ii.); and David gives the highest honour to the blessed Trinity. W.

VER. 3. End. Heb. “finding out,” because he is infinite. Bert. Job v. 9.

VER. 4. And. Heb. “to generation.” The vocation of the Gentiles is insinuated. C.

VER. 5. And shall. Heb. “and I shall relate the words of thy wonders,” (S. Jer.) or “shall meditate on,” &c. Pagn. H.—Yet our version is more followed. C.

VER. 7. Justice. Or mercy. S. Chrys. C.—They shall approve of thy judgments. H.

VER. 8. Patient. Heb. “slow to anger,” which is more expressive. Bert.

VER. 9. Works. The people of Israel, (ver. 10; Psal. lxxxix. 18. Ferrand,) and all mankind, who are all invited to embrace the true faith, and the mercy of God. C.—His mercy extends to all. Bert.—Yet he punishes the reprobate for ever, chastising their works. S. Aug.

VER. 12. Thy. Heb. “his.” But the Sept. read more correctly, with the Chal., &c.—Men. The Gentiles, to whom the saints, (Bert.,) or converted Jews, preached. H.

VER. 13. The. Heb., Chal., Aquila, S. Jer., &c., omit this verse, which is necessary to complete the alphabet. It probably commenced with Namon, “Faithful.” C.—The Sept. could not insert it by inspiration, as they were only interpreters. Bert.—It was consequently in their Heb. copies. Houbig.

VER. 15. Hope. For sustenance. Psal. cxvii. 2; Matt. vi. 26.

19 He will do the will of them that fear him: and he will hear their prayer, and save them.

20 The Lord keepeth all them that love him: but all the wicked he will destroy.

21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLV

LAUDA ANIMA.

We are not to trust in men, but in God alone.

1 Alleluia, of Aggeus and Zacharias.

2 PRAISE^a the Lord, O my soul, in my life I will praise the Lord: I will sing to my God as long as I shall be.

Put not your trust in princes: 3 in the children of men, in whom there is no salvation.

4 His spirit shall go forth, and he shall return into his earth: in that day all their thoughts shall perish.

5 Blessed is he who hath the God of Jacob for his helper, whose hope is in the Lord, his God: 6^b who made heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them.

7 Who keepeth truth for ever: who executeth judgment for them that suffer wrong: who giveth food to the hungry.

The Lord looseth them that are fettered: 8 the Lord enlighteneth the blind.

The Lord lifteth up them that are cast down: the Lord loveth the just.

9 The Lord keepeth the strangers, he will support the fatherless and the widow: and the ways of sinners he will destroy.

10 The Lord shall reign for ever: thy God, O Sion, unto generation and generation.

PSALM CXLVI.

LAUDATE DOMINUM.

An exhortation to praise God for his benefits.

^b Acts xiv. 14; Apoc. xiv. 7.

VER. 18. Truth. Observing his commandments. Matt. vii. 21. Theod.

VER. 19. Will. He will obey their voice (Jos. x. 14); or rather he will grant their requests (C.) of eternal happiness. Bert.

PSAL. CXLV. VER. 1. Of, &c. This addition of the Sept. intimates that these prophets would thus exhort the people to trust in Providence, and to prefer his service before worldly cares. See Psal. cxxxvi. W.—In my. Heb. begins here the second verse, with the answer of the soul to the prophet's invitation. Bert.

VER. 3. Children. Heb. “sons of Adam.” The greatest prince is of the same frail condition as other men. He is not always willing, nor able to save. He must die, and all his projects cease. H.—In one Son of man (Christ) we may trust; not because he is the Son of man, but because he is the Son of God. S. Aug. W.

VER. 4. Forth. From the body, which shall be consigned to the earth, from which it was taken. Eccles. xii. 7.—And he. Man, (C.) or each of the princes, (H.) with respect to the body. W.—It does not refer to the spirit, which in Heb. is feminine. C.—It is the want of faith which causes people to confide in great ones, rather than in Providence. S. Aug.—Thoughts. Projects of ambition, &c. C.

VER. 7. Truth. Houb. “his truth,” and promises. H.—The disposition of Cyrus towards the Jews had changed, in consequence of some false insinuations of their enemies.

VER. 8. Enlighteneth. Heb. “openeth the eyes.” Sept. “gives wisdom to the blind.” Many of these favours seem to be understood in a spiritual sense, and allude to the times of Christ, when these miracles were performed. Bert. Isa. xxxv. 5; Matt. xi. 5. C.

VER. 9. Strangers. He charges his people to be compassionate towards such. Exod. xxii. 21; James i. 27. Bert.—We have been captives. Psal. cxii. 9.—Sinners, who have calumniated us, ver. 7. C.

VER. 10. Sion. Figure of the true Church. God is now no more attached to Sion than to any other place. Bert.—He lives for ever, and therefore alone deserves our confidence. C.—Generation. Heb. adds, “Alleluia,” which we have in the next title, as the psalm also begins with the same word. H.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the Lord, because psalm is good : to our God be joyful and comely praise.

2 The Lord buildeth up Jerusalem : he will gather together the dispersed of Israel.

3 Who healeth the broken of heart, and bindeth up their bruises.

4 Who telleth the number of the stars : and calleth them all by their names.

5 Great is our Lord, and great is his power : and of his wisdom there is no number.

6 The Lord lifteth up the meek : and bringeth the wicked down even to the ground.

7 Sing ye to the Lord with praise : sing to our God upon the harp.

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds : and prepareth rain for the earth.

Who maketh grass to grow on the mountains, and the herb for the service of men.

9 Who giveth to beasts their food : and o the young ravens that call upon him.

10 He shall not delight in the strength of the horse : nor take pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him, and in them that hope in his mercy.

PSALM CXLVII.

LAUDA JERUSALEM.

The Church is called upon to praise God for his peculiar graces and favours to his people. In the Hebrew this psalm is joined to the foregoing.

12 Alleluia.

PRAISE the Lord, O Jerusalem : praise thy God, O Sion.

PSAL. CXLVI. VER. 1. Alleluia. In some editions of the Sept., (H.) and in Syr., Arab., &c., the same inscription occurs as in the former psalm.—Good. Agreeable and advantageous for us.—Praise. This consists in purity of life, rather than in the sweetest accents. C.

VER. 2. Jerusalem. After the captivity, (W.) or at the beginning of David's reign, when he had taken Sion, and Israel acknowledged his dominion. 2 Kings v. It may also allude to the Church, (John xi. 51,) and to heaven. Heb. xii. 22; Apoc. xxi. Bert.

VER. 3. Bruises. God delivered the captives, after chastising them. Deut. xxxii. 39. C.—He gives life to the penitent, as Christ healed the sick, &c. Isa. lxi. 1. Bert.

VER. 4. Stars. Which to man are innumerable. God has the most perfect knowledge of all. They are like his soldiers, whom he knows by name, (Isa. xl. 25,) as the good shepherd does his sheep. John x. 3. C.

VER. 5. Power. God the Son. Earthly monarchs are forced to depend on others for the execution of their orders. But God is infinite. C.—Number. He knows innumerable things (W.); or rather, (H.) the Divine wisdom hath no parts. Jer. x. 6. Bert.

VER. 6. Ground. As he has done the Egyptians, &c. C.

VER. 7. Praise. Lit. "confession," (H.) including both compunction and praise. Bert.

VER. 8. Clouds. This is represented as something wonderful, (Job v. 9, and xxxvii. 6,) though conformable to the laws of nature. The preservation of things is like a new creation. C.—And the herb, &c. Herbam (Psal. ciii. 14. H.) is now wanting in Heb., as it was in the days of S. Jer. and the Chal., though the Sept., Aquila, &c. read it, and it is not probable that they would borrow it from another psalm. Bert.—Their copies must therefore have varied. H.—The herb may denote corn, and all vegetables for food. These productions evince the goodness and wisdom of God, (Bert.,) as well as his power. W.

VER. 9. Young. Lit. "the sons of ravens," which may denote those birds in general, as well as their young. God provides for all. C.—S. Luke (xii. 24) specifies ravens, though S. Matthew (vi. 26) has the birds, when relating the same speech.—Upon him, must be understood in Heb. See Psal. ciii. 21 (Bert.); Joel i. 20. C.—If God take such care of the neglected ravens, how much more will he provide for his servants! S. Chrys. W.

PSAL. CXLVII. VER. 12. Alleluia. This word is not in Heb. H.—Many with the Sept. add, "of Aggæus and Zacharias." C.—The psalm has the same object in view as the preceding. Bert.—The Fathers explain it of the Church, and of heaven. C.—Sion. This place was highly favoured before the captivity, and rebuilt afterwards so as to enjoy many blessings. But all this was only a figure of the privileges belonging to the Church, and to the heavenly Sion, the true 13 Because he hath strengthened the bolts of thy gates : he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 Who hath placed peace in thy borders : and filleth thee with the fat of corn.

15 Who sendeth forth his speech to the earth : his word runneth swiftly.

16 Who giveth snow like wool ; who scattereth mist like ashes.

17 He sendeth his crystal like morsels : who shall stand before the face of his cold ?

18 He shall send out his word, and shall melt them : his wind shall blow, and the waters shall run.

19 Who declared his word to Jacob : his justices and his judgments to Israel.

20 He hath not done in like manner to every nation : and his judgments he hath not made manifest to them. Alleluia.

PSALM CXLVIII.

LAUDATE DOMINUM DE CÆLIS.

All creatures are invited to praise their Creator.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the Lord from the heavens : praise ye him in the high places.

2 Praise ye him all his angels : praise ye him all his hosts.

3 Praise ye him, O sun and moon : praise him all ye stars and light.

4 *Praise him ye heavens of heavens : and let all the waters that are above the heavens 5 praise the name of the Lord.

• Dan. iii. 59, 60.

vision of peace. W.—The earthly Jerusalem was too often faithless (Gal. iv. 26; Heb. xii. 22); so that the psalmist cannot have it alone in view. Bert.

VER. 13. Within thee. Jerusalem was better fortified than (H.) other cities. But the Church is built upon a rock, and enriched with many graces, while heaven is free from all danger, and its inhabitants secure. W.—Nehemias repeopled the city, which he had surrounded with walls, (C.) despising the sarcasms of his enemies. 2 Esd. vii. 4.

VER. 14. Peace. To obtain this, the peace of Jesus Christ must triumph in our hearts. Col. iii. 15. H.—Borders. People perceiving that Assuerus favoured the Jews, durst no longer attack them. 2 Esd. vi. 16. C.—Fat. The best (H.) of all sorts of fruit. Theod.—The Fathers understand the blessed Eucharist, or the Holy Scriptures. S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 15. Speech. Rain, (Kimchi.) Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.,) or the gospel, (S. Hil. S. Jer.,) which was presently propagated over all the earth. Rom. x. 18. W.

VER. 16. Like wool. Because it is white, and light, and covereth the earth as with a fleece, which keeps it warm, and makes it fruitful. On which account also, in the following words, mists (or as it is in the Hebrew, hoar frosts) are compared to ashes, which give a fruitfulness to the ground. Ch.

VER. 17. His crystal. Some understand it of hail, which is as it were ice, divided into bits, or morsels. Ch. Eccli. xliii. 22. C.—In summer and winter God sends proper moisture for the earth. T.—The most hardened are sometimes converted; but this must be the effect of grace. W.—Cold. If it were to continue, all would perish. He therefore sends the warm (C.) "south wind." Syr.

VER. 18. Wind. "Spirit." The blessed Trinity (S. Jer.) grants compunction. Bert.—By preaching and grace conversions are wrought.

VER. 19. Jacob. These spiritual blessings pertain only to the true Church. W.

VER. 20. Them. He hath not announced his decrees to them. This glory was reserved for Israel. Deut. iv. 7. C.—The written law was granted to the latter. Yet God had sufficiently manifested his will to all mankind, so that they must also appear before his tribunal. S. Chrys. Bert.

PSAL. CXLVIII. VER. 1. Alleluia. Sept., Syr., &c., add, "of Aggæus and Zacharias," as it seems to have been composed after the captivity, ver. 13. C.—But why might not David thus invite all to praise God? He descends from the highest creatures to those on earth. Bert.

VER. 2. Hosts. Stars, (C.) or rather angels. S. Chrys. Matt. xxvi. 52.—The three children made the same invitation to them, rejoicing in this holy communion. Bert.

VER. 3. And light. Heb. "of light," meaning the planets. Kimchi.—The harmony of these things invites us to praise the Lord. Origen and S. Hilary seem to represent them as intelligent. But (C) when God is praised on their account . . . they all praise him. S. Aug.

For he spoke, and they were made : he commanded, and they were created.

6 He hath established them for ever, and for ages of ages : he hath made a decree, and it shall not pass away.

7 Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all ye deeps.

8 Fire, hail, snow, ice, stormy winds, which fulfil his word.

9 Mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars.

10 Beasts and all cattle, serpents and feathered fowls.

11 Kings of the earth, and all people : princes and all judges of the earth.

12 Young men and maidens : let the old with the younger, praise the name of the Lord : 13 for his name alone is exalted.

14 The praise of him is above heaven and earth : and he hath exalted the horn of his people.

A hymn to all his saints : to the children of Israel. a people approaching to him. Alleluia.

PSALM CXLIX.

CANTATE DOMINO.

The Church is particularly bound to praise God.

1 Alleluia.

SING ye to the Lord a new canticle : let his praise be in the church of the saints.

2 Let Israel rejoice in him that made him : and let the children of Sion be joyful in their King.

VER. 4. Of heavens. The highest and most excellent, (C.) though not the abode of the angels, which had been specified before.—Heavens, in the clouds.

VER. 5. He spoke, and they were made, is not in Heb. or Chal., being taken from Psal. xxxii. 9, (C.) or lost in the original. Bert.

VER. 6. Away. The heavenly bodies observe the most constant order. H.—They are not liable to change, like sublunary things, (C.) though God may suspend the laws which he has established. Bert.

VER. 8. Word. For the punishment of the wicked, (C.) and to strike the saints with awe. H.

VER. 11. Kings, &c. God is to be praised for the diversity of states, whereby the whole community is preserved.

VER. 14. Earth. All contribute towards the Divine praise, yet they cannot afford as much as God deserves.—Horn. Glory, (C.) or the Messiah ; though this cannot easily be proved to be the literal sense. Bert.—People. Establishing his Church. W.—Saints. Israelites, (Bert.,) particularly the sacred ministers. Deut. iv. 7. C.—To him. By free-will, assisted by God's grace. W. Heb. xi. 6 ; James iv. 8. Bert.

PSAL. CXLIX. VER. 1. Alleluia. Theodoret repeats this word here and in the following psalm. The author of this psalm is unknown. It was sung after the captivity, to thank God for the favours and peace granted to his people, and to foretell the conquests gained under the Machabees, and more fully under the Messias. Orig.—Muis refers the psalm to the beginning of David's reign over Israel, when the people entertained the strongest expectations of victory ; and this opinion is very plausible, though we prefer that of the Fathers. C.—New, and excellent (C.) ; nova carmina, (Virg. Ec. 3,) is explained magna miranda, by Servius. This psalm deserves the title, as it speaks of the new covenant. S. Chrys.—Saints of Israel, dedicated to God's service. Exod. xxii. 31. C.

VER. 2. In him. Heb. "them." The plural is used out of respect, (Rabins. C.) or rather to insinuate the blessed Trinity, as in Gen. i. ; Job xxxv. 10 ; Isa. liv. 5. Bert.—King David, or the Lord, who was the true King of Israel. Kings viii. 7.

VER. 3. Choir. A musical instrument, though it imply also a dance, &c.

3 Let them praise his name in choir : let them sing to him with the timbrel and the psaltery.

4 For the Lord is well pleased with his people : and he will exalt the meek unto salvation.

5 The saints shall rejoice in glory : they shall be joyful in their beds.

6 The high praises of God shall be in their mouth : and two-edged swords in their hands :

7 To execute vengeance upon the nations, chastisements among the people :

8 To bind their kings with fetters, and their nobles with manacles of iron.

9 To execute upon them the judgment that is written : this glory is to all his saints. Alleluia

PSALM CL.

LAUDATE DOMINUM IN SANCTIS.

An exhortation to praise God with all sorts of instruments.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the Lord in his holy places : praise ye him in the firmament of his power.

2 Praise ye him for his mighty acts : praise ye him according to the multitude of his greatness.

3 Praise him with sound of trumpet : praise him with psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with timbrel and choir : praise him with strings and organs.

5 Praise him on high sounding cymbals : praise him on cymbals of joy : let every spirit praise the Lord. Alleluia.

VER. 4. Unto. Heb. "in Jesus," (S. Jer.,) or "he will adorn the meek with salvation," as with a precious robe. Psal. cxxxi. 9, 10.—The captives shall be restored to glory. C.

VER. 5. Beds. In eternal rest. W.—The prosperity of the Israelites but feebly represents the happiness of the elect. C.

VER. 6. Hands. He seems to allude to the regulation of Nehemias, (2 Esd. iv. 17. H.) or to the Machabees, who were priests and soldiers. They shall proclaim God's praises, and defend the nation.—This chiefly regards such as have left all things, like the apostles, and those who embrace a monastic life. Matt. iv. 20, and xix. 27 ; Acts iv. 34 ; 1 Cor. vi. 3. They shall judge whether people have made good or bad use of their possessions. S. Aug. Ven. Bede.

VER. 9. Written. In God's decrees. W. Job xxxi. 35 ; Dan. vii. 10. C.—This judicial power is part of the glory of the saints. W. 1 Cor. vi. 2 ; Wisd. iii. 7. H.—All shall judge the wicked who have imitated the disinterestedness of the apostles. C.

PSAL. CL. VER. 1. Alleluia. This invitation is addressed to the sacred ministers, as the people and all creatures had been already exhorted to praise God. C.—This psalm was sung when the first-fruits were brought to the temple. Seiden, Syn. 3. H.—Places. Heb. "his sanctuary," (H.) or heaven. C.

VER. 3. Trumpet. This instrument was reserved for priests. Num. x. 2. The nine others might be used by Levites. C.—The precise signification of them is not known. Bert.

VER. 5. Spirit. Wind instrument, (M.) or man, who is bound to praise God even more than the angels, as Christ has assumed his nature, and will bring him to sing with them Alleluia. W.—Let "all that breathes" praise, (Bert.,) including every living creature, (C.) as well as the celestial spirits. H.—Alleluia is not in Sept., Syr., &c. But it is in Heb., and no word could answer better for a conclusion of the psalms, which are almost wholly employed in the Divine praises. This ought to be our occupation both on earth and in heaven. Amen. C.—Pope Damasus, A. D. 380, ordered the Gloria, &c., to be added to each of the psalms, as it has been since observed. W.—An apocryphal psalm, concerning David encountering Goliath, occurs in many Greek and Latin copies ; but it is of no authority. C.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.

This Book is so called because it consists of wise and weighty sentences, regulating the morals of men, and directing them to wisdom and virtue. And these sentences are also called PARABLES, because great truths are often couched in them under certain figures and similitudes. Ch.—Wisdom is introduced speaking in the first nine chapters. Then to chap. xxv., more particular precepts are given. W.—Ezechias caused to be collected (H.) what comes in the next five chapters, and in the last two. Some other, or rather Solomon himself, under (W.) different titles, gives us Agur's and his mother's instructions, and his own commendations of a valiant woman, (H.) which is prophetic of the Catholic Church. He also wrote the two next works, besides many other things, which have been lost. This is the first of those five, which are called "sapiential," giving instructions how to direct our lives by the dictates of sound reason. W.—It is the most important of Solomon's works, though collected by different authors. C.

CHAPTER I.

The use and end of the proverbs. An exhortation to flee the company of the wicked: and to hearken to the voice of wisdom.

THE parables of Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel,

2 To know wisdom, and instruction :

3 To understand the words of prudence : and to receive the instruction of doctrine, justice, and judgment, and equity :

4 To give subtilty to little ones, to the young man knowledge and understanding.

5 A wise man shall hear, and shall be wiser : and he that understandeth, shall possess governments.

6 He shall understand a parable, and the interpretation, the words of the wise, and their mysterious sayings.

7 *The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Fools despise wisdom and instruction.

8 My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother :

9 That grace may be added to thy head, and a chain of gold to thy neck.

10 My son, if sinners shall entice thee, consent not to them.

11 If they shall say : Come with us, let us lie in wait for blood, let us hide snares for the innocent without cause :

12 Let us swallow him up alive like hell, and whole as one that goeth down into the pit.

13 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoils.

14 Cast in thy lot with us, let us all have one purse.

15 My son, walk not thou with them, restrain thy foot from their paths.

• Psal. cx. 10; Eccli. i. 10.—b Isa. lix. 7.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Israel. The dignity of the author, and the importance of the subject, invite us to read. S. Bas.—Solomon is the first whose name is placed at the head of any work in Scripture. C.

VER. 2. To know. This is the design of these parables. C.—They tend to instruct both the unexperienced and the wise. Ver. 5. There are three sorts of wisdom; the Divine, which is God himself (chap. iii. 16); the supernatural, which is his gift, to lead us into all virtue; and the worldly, which is mixed with error, &c. W. Wisd. vii. 25.

VER. 4. Subtilty. Discretion to the innocent. C.

VER. 7. Fear. Thus we arrive at charity. S. Aug. in Ep. John ix.; Job xxviii. 28, &c. This fear includes religion, but not barren speculations. C.—It implies a desire to act, and not simply to understand.

VER. 8. Mother. The first precept is to learn of our elders, and the second, to resist evil counsels. Ver. 10. W.—Our parents have the greatest influence over us. Solomon presupposes that they are virtuous and well informed. C.

16 ^bFor their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.

17 But a net is spread in vain before the eyes of them that have wings.

18 And they themselves lie in wait for their own blood, and practise deceits against their own souls.

19 So the ways of every covetous man destroy the souls of the possessors.

20 Wisdom preacheth abroad, she uttereth her voice in the streets :

21 At the head of multitudes she crieth out, in the entrance of the gates of the city she uttereth her words, saying :

22 O children, how long will you love childishness, and fools covet those things which are hurtful to themselves, and the unwise hate knowledge ?

23 Turn ye at my reproof : behold I will utter my spirit to you, and will show you my words.

24 ^cBecause I called, and you refused : I stretched out my hand, and there was none that regarded.

25 You have despised all my counsel, and have neglected my reprehensions.

26 I also will laugh in your destruction, and will mock when that shall come to you which you feared.

27 When sudden calamity shall fall on you, and destruction, as a tempest, shall be at hand : when tribulation and distress shall come upon you :

28 Then shall they call upon me, and I will not hear. they shall rise in the morning, and shall not find me :

29 Because they have hated instruction, and received not the fear of the Lord, 30 Nor consented to my counsel, but despised all my reproof.

• Isa. lxxv. 12, and lxxvi. 4; Jer. vii. 13.

VER. 17. Wings. If thou attend, therefore, to my instructions, their arts will be vain. Ven. Bede.—They unjustly seek to deceive the pious. C.

VER. 19. Possessors. Of money. C.

VER. 20. Streets. In every place we may learn wisdom. "The wise learn more from fools, than fools do from the wise," as Cato well observed. C.

VER. 22. Fools. Heb. "and scorners delight in their scorning." Prot.—Such are the pests of society. H.

VER. 26. Mock. God is too much above us to act thus; but he will treat us as an enraged enemy. C.

VER. 28. Find me. Because their repentance was false, like that of Antiochus. 2 Mac. ix. 13; Psal. xi. 4. C.

VER. 30. Despised. Lit. "detracted," (H.) supposing my threats would not be put in execution. Heb. "they abhorred." C.

VER. 32. Turning. Heb. "the ease of the simple," who have given way to deceit. C.—Them. The objects of their eager desires prove their ruin. Ezecl. xvi. 49

31 Therefore they shall eat the fruit of their own way, and shall be filled with their own devices.

32 The turning away of little ones shall kill them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But he that shall hear me, shall rest without terror, and shall enjoy abundance, without fear of evils.

CHAP. II.

The advantages of wisdom : and the evils from which it delivers.

MY son, if thou wilt receive my words, and wilt hide my commandments with thee,

2 That thy ear may hearken to wisdom : incline thy heart to know prudence.

3 For if thou shalt call for wisdom, and incline thy heart to prudence :

4 If thou shalt seek her as money, and shalt dig for her as for a treasure :

5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and shalt find the knowledge of God :

6 Because the Lord giveth wisdom : and out of his mouth cometh prudence and knowledge.

7 He will keep the salvation of the righteous, and protect them that walk in simplicity,

8 Keeping the paths of justice, and guarding the ways of saints.

9 Then shalt thou understand justice, and judgment, and equity, and every good path.

10 If wisdom shall enter into thy heart, and knowledge please thy soul :

11 Counsel shall keep thee, and prudence shall preserve thee,

12 That thou mayest be delivered from the evil way, and from the man that speaketh perverse things :

13 Who leave the right way, and walk by dark ways :

14 Who are glad when they have done evil, and rejoice in most wicked things :

15 Whose ways are perverse, and their steps infamous.

16 That thou mayest be delivered from the strange woman, and from the stranger, who softeneth her words ;

17 And forsaketh the guide of her youth,

18 And hath forgotten the covenant of her God : for her house inclineth unto death, and her paths to hell.

19 None that go in unto her, shall return again, neither shall they take hold of the paths of life.

* Job xviii. 17.—† Rom. xii. 16.

VER. 33. Evils. Both the just and the wicked (ver. 31. H.) shall be treated according to their deserts. 2 Cor. v. 10. W.—Even in this world the just enjoy the peace of a good conscience. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. If. This proves free-will. To become truly wise we must desire it with the same avidity as a miser seeks for riches. W.—We must also pray (ver. 3) with humility (ver. 2) to God, the giver of wisdom, ver. 6. Every science which has not Him for the beginning and end is vain and dangerous. C.

VER. 7. Salvation. Prot. "sound wisdom."

VER. 8. Justice. In his servants. C.—God gives them grace to follow virtue, (H.) and protects them from every danger. C.

VER. 12. Things. The danger of such company for young people is very great, as the heart is misled by the understanding, (C.) if it do not itself show the way to error. H.

VER. 14. Evil. These signs prove whom we ought to shun. S. Aug. depicts his own conduct before his conversion in the darkest colours. C.

VER. 16. Strange. Idolatress, (Grot.) or rather the abandoned woman, whether married or not. C.

VER. 17. Youth. Her husband, whom she married young, when love is more lasting. This increases her guilt. It may also signify her father or preceptor.

20 That thou mayest walk in a good way : and mayest keep the paths of the just.

21 For they that are upright, shall dwell in the earth ; and the simple shall continue in it.

22 * But the wicked shall be destroyed from the earth : and they that do unjustly, shall be taken away from it.

CHAP. III.

An exhortation to the practice of virtue.

MY son, forget not my law, and let thy heart keep my commandments.

2 For they shall add to thee length of days, and years of life, and peace.

3 Let not mercy and truth leave thee, put them about thy neck, and write them in the tables of thy heart.

4 And thou shalt find grace, and good understanding before God and men.

5 Have confidence in the Lord with all thy heart, and lean not upon thy own prudence.

6 In all thy ways think on him, and he will direct thy steps.

7 ^b Be not wise in thy own conceit : fear God, and depart from evil :

8 For it shall be health to thy navel, and moistening to thy bones.

9 ^c Honour the Lord with thy substance, and give him of the first of all thy fruits ;

10 And thy barns shall be filled with abundance, and thy presses shall run over with wine.

11 ^d My son, reject not the correction of the Lord : and do not faint when thou art chastised by him :

12 For whom the Lord loveth, he chastiseth : and as a father in the son he pleaseth himself.

13 Blessed is the man that findeth wisdom, and is rich in prudence :

14 The purchasing thereof is better than the merchandise of silver, and her fruit than the chief and purest gold :

15 She is more precious than all riches : and all the things that are desired, are not to be compared to her.

16 Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and glory.

17 Her ways are beautiful ways, and all her paths are peaceable.

18 She is a tree of life to them that lay hold on her : and he that shall retain her is blessed.

* Tob. iv. 7 ; Luke xiv. 13.—^d Heb. xii. 5 ; Apoc. iii. 10.

VER. 18. God. The law forbids adultery, and all impurities. Deut. xxiii. 17 ; Lev. xx. 10. Both the parties, guilty of adultery, were punished with death. C.

VER. 19. Life. A sincere conversion is so rare among people once addicted to impurity, (H.) which resembles a deep pit. C.

VER. 21. Earth. Happily. This was the wish of the carnal Jews. But the more enlightened raised their thoughts to heaven.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. My son. God speaks, or the master instructs his disciple, ver. 21. C.

VER. 4. Good. Sept. "forecast good before the Lord and men." S. Paul seems to allude to this version, Rom. xii. 17 ; and 2 Cor. viii. 22. H.

VER. 5. All. God will have nothing by halves.—Lean not. By pride. 2 Cor. xii. 13. All must be referred to God. C.

VER. 9. Fruits. Sept. add, "of justice ;" to intimate that no presents will be acceptable which have been unjustly acquired.

VER. 11. Him. Correction is rather a proof of love than of anger. Psal. m. 19. C.—God thus shows that he approves of his servants ; and therefore his other promises, which seem of a temporal nature, must be understood with reference to the next life. W.

VER. 12. And as. Sept. "but he scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." as S. Paul quotes this passage. Heb. xii. 6.

19 The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth, hath established the heavens by prudence.

20 By his wisdom the depths have broken out, and the clouds grow thick with dew.

21 My son, let not these things depart from thy eyes : keep the law and counsel :

22 And there shall be life to thy soul, and grace to thy mouth.

23 Then shalt thou walk confidently in thy way, and thy foot shall not stumble :

24 If thou sleep, thou shalt not fear : thou shalt rest, and thy sleep shall be sweet.

25 Be not afraid of sudden fear, nor of the power of the wicked falling upon thee.

26 For the Lord will be at thy side, and will keep thy foot that thou be not taken.

27 Do not withhold him from doing good, who is able : if thou art able, do good thyself also.

28 Say not to thy friend : Go, and come again : and to-morrow I will give to thee : when thou canst give at present.

Practise not evil against thy friend, when he hath confidence in thee.

30 Strive not against a man without cause, when he hath done thee no evil.

31 "Envy not the unjust man, and do not follow his ways :

32 For every mocker is an abomination to the Lord, and his communication is with the simple.

33 Want is from the Lord in the house of the wicked : but the habitations of the just shall be blessed.

34 He shall scorn the scornors, and to the meek he will give grace.

35 The wise shall possess glory : the promotion of fools is disgrace.

CHAP. IV.

A further exhortation to seek after wisdom.

HEAR, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend, that you may know prudence.

2 I will give you a good gift, forsake not my law.

3 For I also was my father's son, tender, and as an only son in the sight of my mother :

4 And he taught me, and said : Let thy heart receive my words, keep my commandments, and thou shalt live.

5 Get wisdom, get prudence : forget not, neither decline from the words of my mouth.

* Psal. xxxvi. l.

VER. 19. Wisdom. Hitherto he had spoken of that virtue. Now he treats of the uncreated wisdom, (C.) which is God the Son. M. Jans. S. Greg. Mor. xii. 4.

VER. 20. Out. The higher and lower waters being divided, (C.) or the channels formed to receive the waters. Piscat.—It may also speak of the deluge. Ven. Bede.—With. Heb. "have distilled dew." This is so copious, as to resemble rain in Palestine. Judg. vi. 37, and 2 Kings xvii. 12.

VER. 22. Mouth. There have been wise and virtuous men afflicted, ver. 11. But they have borne all with patience, and have merited a more glorious reward than this earth could afford. C.

VER. 27. Able. Prot. "withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it." Relieve the distressed. II.

VER. 28. Present. Alms in season are doubly valuable. W.

VER. 30. Cause. We may defend ourselves ; but herein great discretion is necessary. C.

VER. 33. Want. Heb. "a curse."—Shall be. Heb. "he blesseth." II.

VER. 34. Scorners. Lit. "he will delude the scornors." H.—He will treat them as they would treat others. Psal. xvii. 27. C.—Sept. "the Lord resisteth the proud," &c. So the apostles quote this passage. 1 Pet. v. 5 ; James iv. 6. H.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall keep thee : love her and she shall preserve thee.

7 The beginning of wisdom, get wisdom, and with all thy possession purchase prudence.

8 Take hold on her, and she shall exalt thee : thou shalt be glorified by her, when thou shalt embrace her.

9 She shall give to thy head increase of graces, and protect thee with a noble crown.

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my words, that years of life may be multiplied to thee.

11 I will show thee the way of wisdom, I will lead thee by the paths of equity :

12 Which when thou shalt have entered, thy steps shall not be straitened, and when thou runnest, thou shalt not meet a stumbling block.

13 Take hold on instruction, leave it not : keep it, because it is thy life.

14 Be not delighted in the paths of the wicked, neither let the way of evil men please thee.

15 Flee from it, pass not by it : go aside, and forsake it.

16 For they sleep not except they have done evil : and their sleep is taken away unless they have made some to fall.

17 They eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of iniquity.

18 But the path of the just, as a shining light, goeth forwards, and increaseth even to perfect day.

19 The way of the wicked is darksome : they know not where they fall.

20 My son, hearken to my words, and incline thy ear to my sayings.

21 Let them not depart from thy eyes, keep them in the midst of thy heart :

22 For they are life to those that find them, and health to all flesh.

23 With all watchfulness keep thy heart, because life issueth out from it.

24 Remove from thee a froward mouth, and let detracting lips be far from thee.

25 Let thy eyes look straight on, and let thy eyelids go before thy steps.

26 Make straight the path for thy feet, and all thy ways shall be established.

27 Decline not to the right hand, nor to the left : turn away thy foot from evil. For the Lord knoweth the ways that are on the right hand : but those are perverse

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Father. He shows the greatest respect for his parents, ver. 3. C.

VER. 3. As. This is not expressed. II.—But Solomon was not the only son of Bethsabee, as S. Luke (iii. 23) specifies Nathan, his brother. See 2 Kings xii. 24. Sept. have "beloved in." &c.

VER. 7. Beginning. The first part of wisdom is to desire it. For nothing hindereth from being just, but that justice is not desired. S. Aug. in Psal. cxviii. 20. W.—"Wisdom is the principal thing ; therefore get," &c. Prot. II.—It is the one thing necessary. C.

VER. 18. Day. They are children of light, (John xii. 35,) and give edification, always advancing in virtue. M.

VER. 19. Fall. They are unconcerned about sin, and neither avoid it, nor strive to repent. C.

VER. 23. From it. As the heart is the principal part of the body, so the will is the chief power of the soul, from which good or evil proceeds. W.

VER. 24. From thee. Neither detract, nor give any countenance to detractors.

VER. 26. Straight. Heb. "ponder." Examine what thou takest in hand, and walk not at random. Heb. xii. 13.

which are on the left hand. But he will make thy courses straight, he will bring forward thy ways in peace.

CHAP. V.

An exhortation to fly unlawful lust, and the occasions of it.

MY son, attend to my wisdom, and incline thy ear to my prudence,

2 That thou mayest keep thoughts, and thy lips may preserve instruction. Mind not the deceit of a woman.

3 For the lips of a harlot are like a honeycomb dropping, and her throat is smoother than oil.

4 But her end is bitter as wormwood, and sharp as a two-edged sword.

5 Her feet go down into death, and her steps go in as far as hell.

6 They walk not by the path of life, her steps are wandering, and unaccountable.

7 Now, therefore, my son, hear me, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the doors of her house.

9 Give not thy honour to strangers, and thy years to the cruel.

10 Lest strangers be filled with thy strength, and thy labours be in another man's house,

11 And thou mourn at the last, when thou shalt have spent thy flesh and thy body, and say :

12 Why have I hated instruction, and my heart consented not to reproof,

13 And have not heard the voice of them that taught me, and have not inclined my ear to masters ?

14 I have almost been in all evil, in the midst of the church and of the congregation.

15 Drink water out of thy own cistern, and the streams of thy own well :

16 Let thy fountains be conveyed abroad, and in the streets divide thy waters.

17 Keep them to thyself alone, neither let strangers be partakers with thee.

18 Let thy vein be blessed, and rejoice with the wife of thy youth :

19 Let her be thy dearest hind, and most agreeable fawn : let her breasts inebriate thee at all times ; be thou delighted continually with her love.

^a Job xiv. 16. and xxxi. 4, and xxxiv. 21.

CHAP. V. VER. 2. Thoughts. Or wisdom ; and act with discretion.—Mind, &c., is omitted in Heb. and S. Jer. C.—By woman all concupiscence, or the inducement to sin, is commonly understood. W.

VER. 4. Sword. "It is a crime even to hearken." S. Amb. de Abrah. ii. 11.

VER. 6. They. Heb. "if perhaps thou ponder the path of life." Pagn. H.—Or "she ponders not," &c. She walks inconsiderately, and consults only her passions. Chap. vii. 10. C.

VER. 10. Strength. Or children. Ver. 16. Gen. xlix. 3. C.

VER. 14. Evil. Infirm and worn out, having lost my reputation, &c. C.

VER. 15. Well. Live comfortably on your own property, (Cajet.,) with your own wife. C.

VER. 16. Waters. Mayest thou have a numerous offspring, (ver. 10,) and be liberal. Many copies of the Sept., &c., have a negation, with Aquila, "let not thy," &c., (C.) though it may be read with an interrogation, "are the waters of thy fountain to be?" &c. De Dieu.—By no means. Origen (in Num. xii.) acknowledges both readings. C.

VER. 19. Love. This is spoken by way of permission, and to withdraw people from unlawful connexions. Eccles. ii. 1, and 1 Cor. vii. 29. C.

VER. 22. Ropes. "Evil habits unrestrained induce a necessity," (S. Aug. Conf. viii. 5,) though not absolute. H.—The libertine thinks he can get free as soon as he pleases ; not being aware of the chains which he is forging for himself. C.

20 Why art thou seduced, my son, by a strange woman, and art cherished in the bosom of another ?

21 *The Lord beholdeth the ways of man, and considereth all his steps.

22 His own iniquities catch the wicked, and he is fast bound with the ropes of his own sins.

23 He shall die, because he hath not received instruction, and in the multitude of his folly he shall be deceived.

CHAP. VI.

Documents on several heads.

MY son, if thou be surety for thy friend, thou hast engaged fast thy hand to a stranger,

2 Thou art insnared with the words of thy mouth, and caught with thy own words.

3 Do, therefore, my son, what I say, and deliver thyself : because thou art fallen into the hand of thy neighbour. Run about, make haste, stir up thy friend :

4 Give not sleep to thy eyes, neither let thy eyelids slumber.

5 Deliver thyself as a doe from the hand, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 Go to the ant, O sluggard, and consider her ways, and learn wisdom :

7 Which, although she hath no guide, nor master, nor captain,

8 Provideth her meat for herself in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

9 How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard ? when wilt thou rise out of thy sleep ?

10 *Thou wilt sleep a little, thou wilt slumber a little, thou wilt fold thy hands a little to sleep :

11 And want shall come upon thee, as a traveller, and poverty as a man armed. But if thou be diligent, thy harvest shall come as a fountain, and want shall flee far from thee.

12 A man that is an apostate, an unprofitable man, walketh with a perverse mouth, 13 He winketh with the eyes, presseth with the foot, speaketh with the finger.

14 With a wicked heart he deviseth evil, and at all times he soweth discord.

15 To such a one his destruction shall presently come,

^b Infra, xxiv. 33.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Stranger. Sept. "enemy." He will presently be such, or thy friend's creditor will soon lay hold on thee. By standing surety for another we expose ourselves to be ruined by his negligence. C.

VER. 3. Make. Heb. "humble thyself, and make sure thy friend," (Prot.,) entreating (H.) and forcing him to pay his debts. The Fathers apply this to pastors, who have undertaken to direct others. Their soul is at stake. S. Greg. C.

VER. 8. Harvest. The economy and diligence of this little republic is admirable. Pliny, xxx. 11.—Some copies of the Sept. add, with S. Amb., (Hex. v. 21, &c. C.) "or go to the bee, and behold what a worker it is, and how beautiful is its work ; whose labours kings and private people use for health. But it is desirable and glorious to all ; and though it be weak in strength, by the love of wisdom it has got forward" (H.) in esteem. C.—Nature has given the form of a monarchy in bees, and of a democracy in the regulations of the ant. Tournemine.

VER. 11. A traveller. Sept. add, "wicked," and Heb. gives the idea of a robber. M.—But, &c. This is not in Heb., Complut., or S. Jerom. C.

VER. 12. Apostate. Heb. "of Belial," without restraint of religion and law. C.—Deut. xiii. 13. M.—Mouth. No reliance can be had on his promises. C.

VER. 13. Finger. These signs imply haughtiness, &c. Psal. xxxiv. 19 : Isa. lviii. 9. The posture indicates the interior sentiments, (S. Amb. Off. i. 18,) inasmuch that S. Ambrose would not receive among the clergy one whose gestures were too light. The Persians still speak by signs. C.

VER. 16. Detesteth. This expression does not always mean that the last is and he shall suddenly be destroyed, and shall no longer have any remedy.

16 Six things there are, which the Lord hateth, and the seventh his soul detesteth :

17 Haughty eyes, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood,

18 A heart that deviseth wicked plots, feet that are swift to run into mischief,

19 A deceitful witness that uttereth lies, and him that soweth discord among brethren.

20 My son, keep the commandments of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother.

21 Bind them in thy heart continually, and put them about thy neck.

22 When thou walkest, let them go with thee : when thou sleepest, let them keep thee, and when thou awakest, talk with them.

23 Because the commandment is a lamp, and the law a light, and reproofs of instruction are the way of life :

24 That they may keep thee from the evil woman, and from the flattering tongue of the stranger.

25 Let not thy heart covet her beauty, be not caught with her winks :

26 For the price of a harlot is scarce one loaf : but the woman catcheth the precious soul of a man.

27 Can a man hide fire in his bosom, and his garments not burn ?

28 Or can he walk upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt ?

29 So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife, shall not be clean when he shall touch her.

30 The fault is not so great when a man hath stolen : for he stealeth to fill his hungry soul :

31 And if he be taken, he shall restore seven-fold, and shall give up all the substance of his house.

32 But he that is an adulterer, for the folly of his heart shall destroy his own soul :

33 He gathered to himself shame and dishonour, and his reproach shall not be blotted out ;

34 Because the jealousy and rage of the husband will not spare in the day of revenge,

35 Nor will he yield to any man's prayers, nor will he accept for satisfaction ever so many gifts.

CHAP. VII.

The love of wisdom is the best preservative from being led astray by temptation.

wiser than the former. M.—All the six sins are damnable, but the seventh is here most so, being against charity and unity, and the devil's sin. W.—Lying seems to be reprobated by three different terms. C.

VER. 24. Stranger. This is often inculcated, because nothing is more dangerous in youth, nor more contrary to the study of wisdom.

VER. 27. Burn. No one can deal with an adulteress without guilt. M.—All probable occasions of sin must be shunned. W.

VER. 29. Clean. Or be left unpunished. No crime disturbs the order of society so much, nor is pardoned with more difficulty. C.

VER. 30. The fault is not so great, &c. The sin of theft is not so great, as to be compared with adultery : especially when a person pressed with hunger (which is the case here spoken of) steals to satisfy nature. Moreover, the damage done by theft may much more easily be repaired than the wrong done by adultery. But this does not hinder but that theft also is a mortal sin, forbidden by one of the ten commandments. CH.—Heb. “they will not despise a thief, when he hath stolen to fill his soul, when he is hungry.” Mont. H.

VER. 31. Seven-fold. Or as much as may be required. The law never subjected the thief to restore above five-fold. If he had not enough, his person might be sold. C.

VER. 35. Gifts. “A husband would rather hear that his wife had been slain, than that she had been deluded.” S. Jer. in Amos vi.

MY son, keep my words, and lay up my precepts with thee. Son,

2 Keep my commandments, and thou shalt live : and my law as the apple of thy eye :

3 Bind it upon thy fingers, write it upon the tables of thy heart.

4 Say to wisdom : Thou art my sister : and call prudence thy friend,

5 That she may keep thee from the woman that is not thine, and from the stranger who sweeteneth her words.

6 For I looked out of the window of my house through the lattice,

7 And I see little ones, I behold a foolish young man,

8 Who passeth through the street by the corner, and goeth nigh the way of her house,

9 In the dark, when it grows late, in the darkness and obscurity of the night.

10 And behold a woman meeteth him in harlot's attire, prepared to deceive souls : talkative and wandering,

11 Not bearing to be quiet, not able to abide still at home,

12 Now abroad, now in the streets, now lying in wait near the corners.

13 And catching the young man, she kisseth him, and with an impudent face, flattereth, saying :

14 I vowed victims for prosperity, this day I have paid my vows.

15 Therefore I am come out to meet thee, desirous to see thee, and I have found thee.

16 I have woven my bed with cords, I have covered it with painted tapestry, brought from Egypt.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us be inebriated with the breasts, and let us enjoy the desired embraces, till the day appear.

19 For my husband is not at home, he is gone a very long journey.

20 He took with him a bag of money : he will return home the day of the full moon.

21 She entangled him with many words, and drew him away with the flattery of her lips.

22 Immediately he followeth her as an ox led to be a victim, and as a lamb playing the wanton, and not knowing that he is drawn like a fool to bonds,

23 Till the arrow pierce his liver : as if a bird should

CHAP. VII. VER. 5. Thine. But another's. Ver. 19. Give thy heart to wisdom, that it may be guarded against impure love.

VER. 10. Attire. Covered with a veil, (Gen. xxxviii. 15,) though different from that of honest women. C.—Prepared. &c. Heb. “guarded,” (C.) or “subtle of heart.” Prot. “who makes the hearts of youths take flight.” Sept. Cant. vi. 4. H.

VER. 11. Not . . . quiet, is not in Heb. C.—“She is loud and stubborn, her feet abide not in her house.” Prot. H.—Chaste women are guarded in their speech, and keep at home. M.

VER. 14. Prosperity. Or thy welfare, (Corn. a Lap. T.) so great is my love for thee. M.—Vows. And therefore I have a feast prepared. People might carry home the greatest part of the victim to eat, if they were clean. Lev. vii. 29. C.

VER. 17. Aloes. Of Syria, (John xix. 39,) different from ours. Num. xxxiv. 6. C.

VER. 20. The day. Sept. “after many days.” Heb. “at the day concealed,” or when the people will dwell under tents, (Chal. C.) or “at the new moon,” when it does not appear. Piscat.—He will not return for a long time, so that we need apprehend no danger from him. M.

VER. 22. Lamb. Prot. “fool to the correction of the stocks,” (H.) or “like a shackle (ābs.) for the chastisement of a fool.” Mont.—Interpreters have read different words. C.

make haste to the snare, and knoweth not that his life is in danger.

24 Now, therefore, my son, hear me, and attend to the words of my mouth.

25 Let not thy mind be drawn away in her ways: neither be thou deceived with her paths.

26 For she hath cast down many wounded, and the strongest have been slain by her.

27 Her house is the way to hell, reaching even to the inner chambers of death.

CHAP. VIII.

The preaching of wisdom. Her excellence.

DOOTH not wisdom cry aloud, and prudence put forth her voice?

2 Standing in the top of the highest places by the way, in the midst of the paths,

3 Beside the gates of the city, in the very doors she speaketh, saying:

4 O ye men, to you I call, and my voice is to the sons of men.

5 O little ones, understand subtlety, and ye unwise, take notice.

6 Hear, for I will speak of great things: and my lips shall be opened to preach right things.

7 My mouth shall meditate truth, and my lips shall hate wickedness.

8 All my words are just, there is nothing wicked, nor perverse in them.

9 They are right to them that understand, and just to them that find knowledge.

10 Receive my instruction, and not money: choose knowledge rather than gold.

11 For wisdom is better than all the most precious things: and whatsoever may be desired cannot be compared to it.

12 I, wisdom, dwell in counsel, and am present in learned thoughts.

13 The fear of the Lord hateth evil; I hate arrogance, and pride, and every wicked way, and a mouth with a double tongue.

14 Counsel and equity is mine, prudence is mine, strength is mine, 15 By me kings reign, and lawgivers decree just things.

16 By me princes rule, and the mighty decree justice.

VER. 26. Her. Solomon gave a melancholy proof of this, as well as David, and Amnon. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Voice. Men are wanting to themselves: they cannot plead ignorance. C.—Some explain this of the light which is communicated to men; but the Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ, some of the expressions regarding his Divine, and others his human nature. Eccl. xxiv.

VER. 3. Doors. Amid disputants, whose eagerness ought to convince us of the preference due to wisdom over all terrestrial concerns. Ver. 10.

VER. 15. Things. Power and knowledge are the gift of the Almighty. Rom. xiii. 1.

VER. 18. Glorious. Lit. "proud." H.—But here it only means great. Isa. ix. 15, and lxi. 6. Riches but too commonly nourish pride, and it is very rare to see them joined with justice. C.

VER. 19. Stone. So the Sept. translate poz, (H.) which designates a more pure sort of gold. Gen. ii. 11. C.

VER. 21. Enrich. Heb. "grant what is (real goods) an inheritance to them," &c.—Treasures. Sept. add, "with goods. If I announce to you daily occurrences, I will admonish you to number the things of the world," (H.) and all past events. C.

VER. 22. Possessed. As Christ was with God, equal to him in eternity. John i. Sept. "created," which many of the Fathers explain of the word incar-

17 I love them that love me: and they that in the morning early watch for me, shall find me.

18 With me are riches and glory, glorious riches and justice.

19 For my fruit is better than gold and the precious stone, and my blossoms than choice silver.

20 I walk in the way of justice, in the midst of the paths of judgment, 21 That I may enrich them that love me, and may fill their treasures.

22 The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways, before he made any thing from the beginning.

23 I was set up from eternity, and of old, before the earth was made.

24 The depths were not as yet, and I was already conceived, neither had the fountains of waters as yet sprung out:

25 The mountains, with their huge bulk, had not as yet been established: before the hills, I was brought forth:

26 He had not yet made the earth, nor the rivers, nor the poles of the world.

27 When he prepared the heavens, I was present: when with a certain law, and compass, he enclosed the depths:

28 When he established the sky above, and poised the fountains of waters:

29 When he compassed the sea with its bounds, and set a law to the waters that they should not pass their limits: when he balanced the foundations of the earth;

30 I was with him forming all things: and was delighted every day, playing before him at all times;

31 Playing in the world: and my delights were to be with the children of men.

32 Now, therefore, ye children, hear me: Blessed are they that keep my ways.

33 Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

34 Blessed is the man that heareth me, and that watcheth daily at my gates, and waiteth at the posts of my doors.

35 He that shall find me, shall find life, and shall have salvation from the Lord.

36 But he that shall sin against me, shall hurt his own soul. All that hate me love death.

CHAP. IX.

Wisdom invites all to her feast. Folly calls another way.

WISDOM hath built herself a house, she hath hewn her out seven pillars.

nate, (see Corn. a Lapide. Bossuet,) or he hath "placed me," (S. Athan. 3. con. Arian. Euseb.,) a pattern of all virtues. C.

VER. 26. Poles. Heb. "head or height of the dust of the world." H.—I subsisted with the chaos, before things appeared in their present form. C.—The poles denote the north and south, or the four quarters of the world. M.

VER. 30. Forming. Heb. "one nursed," (C.) or nursing, nutritus. Pagn.—He was not an idle spectator.—Playing. With ease and surprising variety. C.

VER. 31. Men. God saw that all was good, but delighted most in his own image. M.

VER. 35. Lord. Wisdom, or Jesus Christ, is our salvation, happiness, and life. Sept. "and the will is prepared by the Lord." S. Aug. often quotes this, to prove the necessity of prevenient grace. Ep. 217, and 186. C.

VER. 36. Death. Not in itself, (H.) but by adhering to such things as bring death. M.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. House. The sacred humanity, (S. Ignat. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xvii. 20,) or the Church. S. Greg. Mor. xxxiii. 15.—Here we may receive all instruction, the seven sacraments, and the gifts of the Holy Ghost. C.—They are all included in the number seven, both before and under the law, as well as in the gospel, where S. Paul styles SS. Peter, James, and John, pillars. Gal. ii. This is the literal sense, on which the mystical is grounded, and both are intended by the Holy Ghost, intimating that the uncreated wisdom took flesh of the blessed

2 She hath slain her victims, mingled her wine, and set forth her table.

3 She hath sent her maids to invite to the tower, and to the walls of the city :

4 Whosoever is a little one, let him come to me. And to the unwise she said :

5 Come, eat my bread, and drink the wine which I have mingled for you.

6 Forsake childishness, and live, and walk by the ways of prudence.

7 He that teacheth a scorner, doth an injury to himself; and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himself a blot.

8 Rebuke not a scorner, lest he hate thee. Rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

9 Give an occasion to a wise man, and wisdom shall be added to him. Teach a just man, and he shall make haste to receive it.

10 *The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom : and the knowledge of the holy is prudence.

11 For by me shall thy days be multiplied, and years of life shall be added to thee.

12 If thou be wise, thou shalt be so to thyself : and if a scorner, thou alone shalt bear the evil.

13 A foolish woman and clamorous, and full of allurements, and knowing nothing at all,

14 Sat at the door of her house, upon a seat, in a high place of the city,

15 To call them that pass by the way, and go on their journey :

16 He that is a little one, let him turn to me. And to the fool she said :

17 Stolen waters are sweeter, and hidden bread is more pleasant.

18 And he did not know that giants are there, and that her guests are in the depths of hell.

THE PARABLES OF SOLOMON.

CHAP. X.

In the twenty following chapters are contained many wise sayings and axioms, relating to wisdom and folly, virtue and vice.

A WISE son maketh the father glad : but a foolish son is the sorrow of his mother.

* Psal. cx. 10; Supra, i. 7; Eccli. i. 16.—^b Infra, xi. 4.

Virgin, prepared the table of bread and wine, as Priest according to the order of Melchisedec, and chose the weak of this world to confound the strong, as S. Aug. explains this passage. Sup. and q. 51. W.

VER. 2. Victims. Moses ordered the blood to be poured out at the door of the tabernacle, and a part to be given to the priests, after which the rest might be taken away. The like was probably done at Jerusalem. Lev. xvii. 4. These victims are contrasted with those of pleasure. Chap. vii. 14.—Mingled. It was not customary for any but barbarians and the gods to take pure wine. Some mixed two, others three, five, or even twenty parts of water.—The Fathers often apply this text to the feast of Jesus Christ in the blessed Eucharist. C.—S. Cyprian (ep. 3) citeth the whole passage of Christ's sacrifice in the forms of bread and wine. W.

VER. 3. Maids. Sept. "servant men," the pastors of the Church, inviting all to piety in so public a manner, that none can plead ignorance. S. Greg. C.—To invite. Prot. "she crieth upon the highest places of the city." H.—Christ enjoins his apostles to preach on the roofs. Matt. x. 37.

VER. 7. Scorner. This is the reason why wisdom speaks only to the simple. The conceited would only laugh at her instructions. These scoffers represent heretics and libertines. Chap. i. 22. C.—Yet S. Paul commands public reprehension. 1 Tim. v. 20. M.—When there is any prospect of good, all, particularly superiors, are bound to correct. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, l. 9, and S. Bas. reg. fus. 158. W.

VER. 10. Prudence. Or "prudence is the science of the saints," (H.) directing what to choose on all occasions to obtain heaven. C.

2 ^bTreasures of wickedness shall profit nothing : but justice shall deliver from death.

3 The Lord will not afflict the soul of the just with famine, and he will disappoint the deceitful practices of the wicked.

4 The slothful hand hath wrought poverty : but the hand of the industrious getteth riches.

He that trusteth to lies feedeth the winds : and the same runneth after birds, that fly away.

5 He that gathered in the harvest, is a wise son : but he that snorteth in the summer, is the son of confusion.

6 The blessing of the Lord is upon the head of the just : but iniquity covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 The memory of the just is with praises : and the name of the wicked shall rot.

8 The wise of heart receiveth precepts : a fool is beaten with lips.

9 He that walketh sincerely, walketh confidently : but he that perverteth his ways, shall be manifest.

10 *He that winketh with the eye, shall cause sorrow . and the foolish in lips shall be beaten.

11 The mouth of the just is a vein of life : and the mouth of the wicked covereth iniquity.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes : and charity covereth all sins.

13 In the lips of the wise is wisdom found : and a rod on the back of him that wanteth sense.

14 Wise men lay up knowledge : but the mouth of the fool is next to confusion.

15 The substance of a rich man is the city of his strength : the fear of the poor is their poverty.

16 The work of the just is unto life : but the fruit of the wicked unto sin.

* Eccli. xxvii. 25.—^d 1 Cor. xiii. 4; 1 Pet. iv. 8.

VER. 13. And full. Prot. "she is simple, and knoweth nothing." Sept. "as in want of a piece of bread." They have several verses before this, which are here omitted. H.

VER. 18. Giants. Who lived when all flesh had corrupted its ways, (Gen. vi. 12,) and were sentenced to hell. Job xxvi. 5; Isa. xiv. 9. C.

CHAP. X. Solomon. This title is not found in Sixtus V. or Sept. Hitherto the preface extends, showing the advantages of wisdom. C.—The subsequent chapters more properly contain the parables, and are written with great elegance, so as to oppose vice to virtue. See Bain., S. Jer., &c. W.

VER. 4. Poverty. Even of those who had plenty. This is true in a spiritual sense likewise. C.—The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence. H.

VER. 5. He. Sept. "a son well educated shall be wise, and shall have the unwise for his servant. An intelligent son has been saved from the heat. But the wicked son is destroyed by the wind in time of harvest." H.

VER. 6. Wicked. Or, as the Heb. seems to indicate, "the wicked covereth iniquity, by an hypocritical exterior," (C.) or, "the injury" (Mont.) done to another, (ems. H.) "unseasonable, or infinite incurring." πένθος ἄπορον. Sept.

VER. 8. Lips. He will not bear correction. M.—But suffers the punishment of his own unguarded speeches; or rather the man who hath foolish lips shall be beaten. VER. 13. C.

VER. 9. Sincerely. Or simply, Heb. "in uprightness," (H.) or innocence. M.

VER. 10. Sorrow. Sept. add, "to men," as well as to himself. C.—"But he who chides boldly shall make peace," (H.) or "work safety," as the Syr. and Arab. also read, instead of Heb. "a prating fool shall fall." "When a man conspires at his friend's failings, . . . the offender is encouraged to sin on, and to heap up matter for very sorrowful reflections; but the man who, with an honest freedom, prudently reproves him, most effectually contrives his honour and safety." The consequences of a virtuous and a vicious friendship seem to be also expressed in the next verse. Thus the latter hemistic generally illustrates the first. But here, part of ver. 8 may have been improperly inserted. Kennicott.

VER. 12. Sins. Sept. "all who contend." Charity pardons all. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

VER. 13. Sense. Lit. "a heart." But the Hebrews use this expression in a different sense from what we do, and thus designate a fool. Osee vii. 11.

VER. 15. Poverty. Diffidence hinders the advancement of the poor, as presumption is too common among the rich. A happy mediocrity is best. Ver. 16.

VER. 16. Life. In abundance he is not puffed off: but the wicked make use of their fruit or revenue to do evil.

17 The way of life, to him that observeth correction : but he that forsaketh reproofs, goeth astray.

18 Lying lips hide hatred : he that uttereth reproach, is foolish.

19 In the multitude of words there shall not want sin : but he that refraineth his lips, is most wise.

20 The tongue of the just is as choice silver : but the heart of the wicked is nothing worth.

21 The lips of the just teach many : but they that are ignorant, shall die in the want of understanding.

22 The blessing of the Lord maketh men rich : neither shall affliction be joined to them.

23 A fool worketh mischief as it were for sport : but wisdom is prudence to a man.

24 That which the wicked feareth, shall come upon him : to the just their desire shall be given.

25 As a tempest that passeth, so the wicked shall be no more : but the just is an everlasting foundation.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to them that sent him.

27 The fear of the Lord shall prolong days : and the years of the wicked shall be shortened.

28 The expectation of the just is joy : but the hope of the wicked shall perish.

29 The strength of the upright is the way of the Lord : and fear to them that work evil.

30 The just shall never be moved : but the wicked shall not dwell on the earth.

31 The mouth of the just shall bring forth wisdom : the tongue of the perverse shall perish.

32 The lips of the just consider what is acceptable : and the mouth of the wicked uttereth perverse things.

CHAP. XI.

A DECEITFUL balance^a is an abomination before the Lord : and a just weight is his will.

2 Where pride is, there also shall be reproach :^b but where humility is, there also is wisdom.

3 The simplicity of the just shall guide them : and the deceitfulness of the wicked shall destroy them.

4 Riches shall not profit in the day of revenge : but justice shall deliver from death.

5 The justice of the upright shall make his way prosperous : and the wicked man shall fall by his own wickedness.

6 The justice of the righteous shall deliver them : and the unjust shall be caught in their own snares.

^a Infra, xx. 10, 23.—^b Infra, xv. 33.

VER. 18. Foolish. We must neither dissemble our resentment, through hypocrisy, nor manifest it without reason. C.

VER. 19. Sin. A prolix discourse on subjects of importance is not reprehended. S. Aug. Retrac. 1.—But it is very difficult to speak much, without going against some virtue. C.

VER. 23. Man. He is enabled to see the evil of sin, and to avoid it. Job xv. 16.

VER. 29. Evil. Conscience upbraids them, and punishment is before their eyes. H.

VER. 30. Earth. This the Jews frequently experienced. The more enlightened understood that such promises regarded also eternity. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Balance. Both in commerce, (Deut. xxv. 13. C.) and in passing sentence on others. Ven. Bede.

VER. 11. Overthrown. Ten just men would have saved Sodom. Achan alone threw all Israel into confusion. C.

VER. 12. Mean. Lit. "indigent" of sense. H.—We must put up with some faults, as none are without. Hor. 1 Sat. iii. C.

7 When the wicked man is dead, there shall be no hope any more : and the expectation of the solicitous shall perish.

8 The just is delivered out of distress : and the wicked shall be given up for him.

9 The dissembler with his mouth deceiveth his friend : but the just shall be delivered by knowledge.

10 When it goeth well with the just, the city shall rejoice : and when the wicked perish, there shall be praise.

11 By the blessing of the just the city shall be exalted : and by the mouth of the wicked it shall be overthrown.

12 He that despiseth his friend, is mean of heart : but the wise man will hold his peace.

13 He that walketh deceitfully, revealeth secret : but he that is faithful, concealeth the thing committed to him by his friend.

14 Where there is no governor, the people shall fall : but there is safety where there is much counsel.

15 He shall be afflicted with evil, that is surety for a stranger : but he that is aware of snares, shall be secure.

16 A gracious woman shall find glory : and the strong shall have riches.

17 A merciful man doth good to his own soul : but he that is cruel casteth off even his own kindred.

18 The wicked maketh an unsteady work : but to him that soweth justice, there is a faithful reward.

19 Clemency prepareth life : and the pursuing of evil things death.

20 A perverse heart is abominable to the Lord : and his will is in them that walk sincerely.

21 Hand in hand the evil man shall not be innocent : but the seed of the just shall be saved.

22 A golden ring in a swine's snout, a woman fair and foolish.

23 The desire of the just is all good, the expectation of the wicked is indignation.

24 Some distribute their own goods, and grow richer : others take away what is not their own, and are always in want.

25 The soul that blesseth, shall be made fat : and he that inebriateth, shall be inebriated also himself.

26 He that hideth up corn, shall be cursed among the people : but a blessing upon the head of them that sell.

27 Well doth he rise early who seeketh good things : but he that seeketh after evil things, shall be oppressed by them.

• Supra, x. 2.

VER. 13. Walketh. Sept. "the double-tongued," dissembler, or great talker. C. VER. 15. That is. Heb. "that hateth those who maketh agreements is secure." Mont.

VER. 16. Gracious. Virtuous and beautiful, as God hath granted beauty also for good purposes. This and virtue tend to the advancement of women, while men can use their strength to acquire riches. C.—Glory. Sept., Syr., and Arab add, "of her husband. But she that hateth righteousness is a throne of disgrace. The slothful, though rich, shall come to poverty ; but the laborious shall retain their riches."

VER. 17. Kindred. Heb. "flesh." Gen. xxix. 14. The miser is cruel even to himself.

VER. 21. In hand. At rest, or making agreements. God will punish the race of the wicked.

VER. 22. Foolish. Beauty, without prudence, leads to ruin, as ornaments are ill bestowed on swine.

VER. 25. Himself. He shall receive abundantly. 2 Cor. ix. 6. The beneficent shall be amply rewarded both in this world and in the next.

28 He that trusteth in his riches shall fall: but the just shall spring up as a green leaf.

29 He that troubleth his own house, shall inherit the winds: and the fool shall serve the wise.

30 The fruit of the just man, as a tree of life: and he that gaineth souls, is wise.

31 *If the just man receive in the earth, how much more the wicked and the sinner?

CHAP. XII.

HE that loveth correction, loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof, is foolish.

2 He that is good, shall draw grace from the Lord: but he that trusteth in his own devices, doth wickedly.

3 Man shall not be strengthened by wickedness: and the root of the just shall not be moved.

4 A diligent woman is a crown to her husband: and she that doth things worthy of confusion, is as rottenness in his bones.

5 The thoughts of the just are judgments: and the counsel of the wicked are deceitful.

6 The words of the wicked lie in wait for blood: the mouth of the just shall deliver them.

7 Turn the wicked, and they shall not be: but the house of the just shall stand firm.

8 A man shall be known by his learning: but he that is vain and foolish, shall be exposed to contempt.

9 *Better is the poor man that provideth for himself, than he that is glorious and wanteth bread.

10 The just regardeth the lives of his beasts: but the bowels of the wicked are cruel.

11 *He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread: but he that pursueth idleness is very foolish.

He that is delighted in passing his time over wine, leaveth a reproach in his strong holds.

12 The desire of the wicked is the fortification of evil men: but the root of the just shall prosper.

13 For the sins of the lips ruin draweth nigh to the evil man: but the just shall escape out of distress.

14 By the fruit of his own mouth shall a man be filled

* 1 Pet. iv. 18.—b Eccli. x. 30.

VER. 29. House. By his profligacy, or law-suits, shall be impoverished, (ver. 17. C.) or if he act with violence, he will make his house empty. Eccli. iv. 35. M.

VER. 31. Receive. Punishment, for almost inevitable faults, or be treated according to his deserts. Sept., Syr., Arab., "if the just be hardly saved, where shall the impious and the sinner appear?" 1 Pet. iv. 18. C.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Knowledge. It is a great kindness to show us our faults. But God's grace is necessary to make us reap benefit from correction, (C.) as self-love recoils at it.

VER. 2. But. Heb. "and he will condemn the man of devices," (Mont. II.) or, "the man of thoughts doth wickedly," (C.) as he trusts in them, rather than in God. M.

VER. 4. Diligent. Heb. "strong or virtuous," (H.) including all the perfections of the sex, and in particular those of economy and chastity. Chap. xiv. 1, and xxxi. 10.

VER. 7. Turn. In a moment the wicked is not to be found. Chap. x. 25, and Psal. xxxvi. 35.

VER. 10. Beasts. Those who treat them with cruelty would do the like with men. God gives regulations to let brute beasts have rest. Lev. xxii. 28. C. S. Chrys. in Rom. 29.

VER. 11. Idleness. Heb. "the idle." Their company is seducing.—Wine. Or "in taverns."—Holds. Soldiers have thus been often surprised. M.—"Drunkenness is an incitement to lust and madness, the poison of wisdom." S. Amb.

VER. 13. Lips. Liars often become the victims of their own deceit.

VER. 16. Wise. It is more difficult to repress, than to avoid anger. S. Amb. *to assemble, so as to seek an opportunity of revenge, is not commended.

with good things, and according to the works of his hands it shall be repaid him.

15 The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that is wise hearkeneth unto counsels.

16 A fool immediately sheweth his anger: but he that dissembleth injuries is wise.

17 He that speaketh that which he knoweth, sheweth forth justice: but he that lieth, is a deceitful witness.

18 There is that promiseth, and is pricked as it were with a sword of conscience: but the tongue of the wise is health.

19 The lip of truth shall be stedfast for ever: but he that is a hasty witness, frameth a lying tongue.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that think evil things: but joy followeth them that take counsels of peace.

21 Whatsoever shall befall the just man, shall not make him sad: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

22 Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord: but they that deal faithfully, please him.

23 A cautious man concealeth knowledge: and the heart of fools publisheth folly.

24 The hand of the valiant shall bear rule: but that which is slothful, shall be under tribute.

25 Grief in the heart of a man shall bring him low, but with a good word he shall be made glad.

26 He that neglecteth a loss for the sake of a friend, is just: but the way of the wicked shall deceive them.

27 The deceitful man shall not find gain: but the substance of a just man shall be precious gold.

28 In the path of justice is life: but the by-way leadeth to death.

CHAP. XIII.

A WISE son heareth the doctrine of his father: but he that is a scorner, heareth not when he is reproved.

2 Of the fruit of his own mouth shall a man be filled with good things: but the soul of transgressors is wicked.

3 He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his soul: but he that hath no guard on his speech shall meet with evils.

* Eccli. xx. 30.

VER. 17. That. Heb. "the truth announceth justice." We easily give credit to an honest man. C.

VER. 18. Promiseth. Sept. "there are, who speaking, wound with the sword; but," &c. Heb. bute (H.) means also, making a foolish promise, which causes remorse. M.

VER. 19. Frameth. He studies how to escape detection. Heb. "a lying tongue is but for a moment;" it is presently discovered.

VER. 21. Sad. Even if he fall into sin, he will not lose all hope. C.—The accidents accompanying this life will not overwhelm him. S. Chrys.—Heb. "no evil shall befall the just." If he be afflicted here, he will be amply rewarded hereafter.

VER. 23. Cautious. Versutus is taken in a good, as well as in a bad sense. The wise are reserved in speaking. Prov. xvi. 14. C.

VER. 25. Grief. Sept. "a fearful speech troubleth the heart of a (just) man." Grabe. H.

VER. 26. Just. A true friend will make any sacrifice. C.—Heb. "the just hath more, (C. Prot.,) or is more excellent than his neighbour."

VER. 28. By-way. Of vice. Heb. "and a way which leadeth to death," or "its paths conduct to death." C.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Doctrine. Or he gives proof of his good education, (C.) and excites even his father to advance in piety. Ven. Bede.—Sept. "is obedient to his father; but the disobedient son is in destruction." H.

VER. 2. Mouth. In reward of his good speeches. C.—Sept. "of justice the good man eateth; but the souls of the lawless perish before the time." Chap. xii. 13

VER. 3. Hath. Heb. "who openeth his lips inconsiderately, is lost." Judg. xi. 35. H.

4 The sluggard willeth, and willeth not : but the soul of them that work, shall be made fat.

5 The just shall hate a lying word : but the wicked confoundeth, and shall be confounded.

6 Justice keepeth the way of the innocent : but wickedness overthroweth the sinner.

7 One is as it were rich, when he hath nothing : and another is as it were poor, when he hath great riches.

8 The ransom of a man's life are his riches : but he that is poor, beareth not reprehension.

9 The light of the just giveth joy : but the lamp of the wicked shall be put out.

10 Among the proud there are always contentions : but they that do all things with counsel, are ruled by wisdom.

11 Substance got in haste shall be diminished : but that which by little and little is gathered with the hand, shall increase.

12 Hope that is deferred afflicteth the soul : desire when it cometh, is a tree of life.

13 Whosoever speaketh ill of any thing, bindeth himself for the time to come : but he that feareth the commandment, shall dwell in peace.

Deceitful souls go astray in sins : the just are merciful, and show mercy.

14 The law of the wise is a fountain of life, that he may decline from the ruin of death.

15 Good instruction shall give grace : in the way of scorers is a deep pit.

16 The prudent man doth all things with counsel : but he that is a fool, layeth open his folly.

17 The messenger of the wicked shall fall into mischief : but a faithful ambassador is health.

18 Poverty and shame to him that refuseth instruction : but he that yieldeth to reproof, shall be glorified.

19 The desire that is accomplished, delighteth the soul : fools hate them that flee from evil things.

20 He that walketh with the wise, shall be wise : a friend of fools shall become like to them.

VER. 5. Confounded. The detractor is like swine, stirring up dirt. S. Chrys. 32, ad Pop.

VER. 6. Sinner. Sym. "draweth on sin." Virtue is the best safeguard.

VER. 7. Riches. Such was S. Paul. 2 Cor. vi. 10. Some affect to be rich, while others are never satisfied.

VER. 8. Reprehension. Or is not able to defend himself, like the rich. C.

VER. 9. Out. They are hated, as well as their offspring. C.

VER. 10. Contentions. As none will yield. M.—Heb. "only by pride cometh contention." Prot.—"Pride is the mother of all sects." S. Aug.

VER. 11. Haste. Heb. "by vanity," and injustice.—By little. Heb. "he that gathereth by labour, (Sept. piety,) shall increase." Prot. H.

VER. 12. Hope. Sept. "the just shows mercy and lends) better is he who begins heartily to assist, than he who promises and leads to hope. For a bad (Grabe substitutes good) desire is a tree of life."—Soul. Prot. "maketh the heart sick." H.

VER. 13. Come. To defend what he has asserted, or to pass for a liar. Heb. "shall be destroyed by it." Mont. H.—Those who despise God's order shall perish.—Deceitful, &c. This is not in Heb., nor in some of the Lat. edit. C.—Sept. "to the deceitful son nothing shall be good. But the ways of the wise servant shall prosper, and his path shall be made straight." Chap. xiv. 15. H.

VER. 14. That. Sept. "but the fool is slain in the snare." H.

VER. 15. Grace. God assists those who strive to be well instructed. C.

VER. 17. Of the. Heb. "a wicked ambassador."

VER. 18. To him. Heb. "destroy discipline," so that the most wretched are often noted for immorality. Sept. "instruction takes away poverty," as "the whole earth supports the man that has a trade." C.

VER. 19. That is. Sept. "of the pious, but the works of the impious are far from knowledge." H.

VER. 20. Become. Sept. "be known." A person's dispositions may be seen by the company which he frequents.

21 Evil pursueth sinners : and to the just good shall be repaid.

22 The good man leaveth heirs, sons, and grandsons : and the substance of the sinner is kept for the just.

23 Much food is in the tillage of fathers : but for others it is gathered without judgment.

24 *He that spareth the rod, hateth his son : but he that loveth him, correcteth him betimes.

25 The just eateth and filleth his soul : but the belly of the wicked is never to be filled.

CHAP. XIV.

A WISE woman buildeth her house : but the foolish will pull down with her hands that also which is built.

2 He that walketh in the right way, and feareth God, is despised by him that goeth by an infamous way.

3 In the mouth of a fool is the rod of pride : but the lips of the wise preserve them.

4 Where there are no oxen, the crib is empty : but where there is much corn, there the strength of the ox is manifest.

5 A faithful witness will not lie : but a deceitful witness uttereth a lie.

6 A scorner seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not : the learning of the wise is easy.

7 Go against a foolish man, and he knoweth not the lips of prudence.

8 The wisdom of a discreet man is to understand his way : and the imprudence of fools erreth.

9 A fool will laugh at sin, but among the just grace shall abide.

10 The heart that knoweth the bitterness of his own soul, in his joy the stranger shall not intermeddle.

11 The house of the wicked shall be destroyed : but the tabernacles of the just shall flourish.

12 There is a way which seemeth just to a man : but the ends thereof lead to death.

13 Laughter shall be mingled with sorrow, and mourning taketh hold of the ends of joy.

b Job xii. 4.

VER. 22. Heirs. This was more observable under the old law : yet we often see the distress to which the unjust are exposed. C.

VER. 23. Fathers. Heirs often lose their property by their misconduct. Heb. and (H.) Chal. read, "of the poor," who till their land better than those who have too large farms. M.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. House. Giving her children a proper education, and taking care of her house. Chap. xii. 4, and Tit. ii. 5. C.

VER. 2. And, is not in Heb.—Is. Heb. "but the perverse in his ways despiseth him" (H.) ; showing by his conduct that he cares not for the Lord. C.—Sept. "he shall be dishonoured that," &c.

VER. 4. Empty. As the land has not been cultivated. H.—Strength, or number of oxen. C.

VER. 6. Not. Because they seek it ill, like the pagan sages. Sept. "thou shalt seek wisdom among the wicked, and shalt not find it," &c.

VER. 7. Prudence. Thou wilt presently perceive his weakness. Heb. "abandon a," &c.

VER. 8. Way. This science of the saints is the only true wisdom.—Erreth. They are inconstant. Heb. "is deceit." They are bent on it.

VER. 9. Sin. Chap. x. 23. Heb. "excuse sin," (C.) or "mock at sin," (H.) committed by others. M.—Grace, or good-will.

VER. 10. Stranger. Such cannot well comfort the afflicted. A man is alone acquainted with the affections of his own heart.

VER. 12. Death. How many, under the garb of piety, follow their passions ! How many are misled by their singularity, or by unskilful directors ! C.—We must suspect our own judgment. M.—If any Turks, Jews, or heretics, lead a moral good life, it seemeth both to themselves and to other ignorant people that they are in the right way to salvation ; but their error in faith leadeth them to eternal damnation. W.

VER. 13. Laughter. Sept. "with content sorrow is not mixed." H.

VER. 14. Above him. Sept. "with his counsels," enjoying the content of a 14 A fool shall be filled with his own ways, and the good man shall be above him.

15 The innocent believeth every word: the discreet man considereth his steps.

No good shall come to the deceitful son: but the wise servant shall prosper in his dealings, and his way shall be made straight.

16 A wise man feareth, and declineth from evil: the fool leapeth over, and is confident.

17 The impatient man shall work folly; and the crafty man is hateful.

18 The childish shall possess folly, and the prudent shall look for knowledge.

19 The evil shall fall down before the good: and the wicked before the gates of the just.

20 The poor man shall be hateful even to his own neighbour: but the friends of the rich are many.

21 He that despiseth his neighbour, sinneth: but he that sheweth mercy to the poor, shall be blessed.

He that believeth in the Lord, loveth mercy.

22 They err that work evil: but mercy and truth prepare good things.

23 In much work there shall be abundance: but where there are many words, there is oftentimes want.

24 The crown of the wise, is their riches: the folly of fools, imprudence.

25 A faithful witness delivereth souls: and the double dealer uttereth lies.

26 In the fear of the Lord is confidence of strength, and there shall be hope for his children.

27 The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to decline from the ruin of death.

28 In the multitude of people is the dignity of the king: and in the small number of the people the dishonour of the prince.

29 He that is patient, is governed with much wisdom: but he that is impatient, exalteth his folly.

30 Soundness of heart is the life of the flesh: but envy is the rottenness of the bones.

31 He that oppresseth the poor, upbraideth his Maker: but he that hath pity on the poor, honoureth him.

good conscience, and a heavenly reward; while the wicked, with all his self-approbation, shall be punished.

VER. 15. Innocent. Good, and unsuspecting (Jos. ix. 14, and 1 Cor. xiii. 7); or rather credulous. 1 John iv. 1. C.—Sept. "the man who is not bad."—Steps. Sept. "repenteth." H.—No, &c. This occurs (chap. xiii. 13) in several copies: but here it is omitted in Heb., &c.

VER. 17. Folly. Wrath betrays us into great extravagances.—Hateful. Heb. also, "hateth" folly. Sept. "the prudent beareth much." Job v. 2. C.

VER. 20. Many. "Riches make friends, poverty tries them." Syrus.

VER. 21. He . . . mercy, is not found in Heb., Greek, or Lat. MSS. C.

VER. 22. Truth. Those who are kind and faithful. H. Chap. iii. 3.—Sept. add, (C.) as a second version, (Grabe,) "the workers of evils understand not mercy and truth; but kind and faithful actions are with those who do good."

VER. 28. King. Who formerly was styled "a shepherd," to remind him of the care with which he ought to seek the welfare of his subjects. C.

VER. 30. Bones. As a sound heart preserves the rest of the body, so a good intention often excuses from mortal sin, when the error is not gross. But envy corrupts the works which might seem good, and which cannot bear a strict examination. S. Greg. Mor. v. 34. W.

VER. 31. Him. God takes the poor under his special protection, (Matt. xxv. 40,) and is the distributor of all riches. What would the rich do without the poor? C.

VER. 33. And. Prot. "but that which is in the midst of fools is made known." H.

32 The wicked man shall be driven out in his wickedness: but the just hath hope in his death.

33 In the heart of the prudent resteth wisdom, and it shall instruct all the ignorant.

34 Justice exalteth a nation: but sin maketh nations miserable.

35 A wise servant is acceptable to the king: he that is good for nothing shall feel his anger.

CHAP. XV.

A MILD answer^b breaketh wrath: but a harsh word stirreth up fury.

2 The tongue of the wise adorneth knowledge: but the mouth of fools bubbleth out folly.

3 The eyes of the Lord in every place behold the good and the evil.

4 A peaceable tongue is a tree of life: but that which is immoderate, shall crush the spirit.

5 A fool laugheth at the instruction of his father: but he that regardeth reproofs shall become prudent.

In abundant justice there is the greatest strength: but the devices of the wicked shall be rooted out.

6 The house of the just is very much strength: and in the fruits of the wicked is trouble.

7 The lips of the wise shall disperse knowledge: the heart of fools shall be unlike.

8 The victims of the wicked are abominable to the Lord: the vows of the just are acceptable.

9 The way of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord: he that followeth justice is beloved by him.

10 Instruction is grievous to him that forsaketh the way of life: he that hateth reproof shall die.

11 Hell and destruction are before the Lord: how much more the hearts of the children of men?

12 A corrupt man loveth not one that reproveth him: nor will he go to the wise.

13 A glad heart maketh a cheerful countenance: but by grief of mind the spirit is cast down.

14 The heart of the wise seeketh instruction: and the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness.

15 All the days of the poor are evil: a secure mind is like a continual feast.

* Infra, xxi. 27; Eccli. xxxiv. 21.—d Infra, xvii. 22.

VER. 34. Miserable. This sentence ought to be engraven in all public places. Heb. "and mercy the sinful people," whom God spares on account of their alms-deeds, (Dan. iv. 24,) or "sin is the shame of peoples." C.

VER. 35. Nothing. Lit. "useless," which often means bad. H.—A servant who does not discharge his duty is such. Heb. "he that causeth to blush," and has no economy. C.—Sept. "he removes shame by his good management. Anger destroys the prudent; but a mild," &c. H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Fury. This was seen in Nabal and Roboam, while Gedeon and Abigail showed the good effects of a mild answer. Judg. viii. 1, and 1 Kings x. 25, and 3 Kings xii. 11.

VER. 4. Life. This comparison was become proverbial for something very excellent.—Immoderate. Heb. "perverse." C.—Evil discourse kills the souls both of those who speak, and of those who pay attention to it. H.

VER. 7. Unlike. The wise, or themselves. Heb. and Sept. "inconstant."

VER. 8. Wicked. Still unconverted. Eccli. xxxiv. 23. When they repent, and offer sacrifice with sincerity, they will obtain mercy. The Donatists abused this text, to prove that baptism conferred by wicked ministers was unavailing. But S. Aug. showed them that Christ was the principal agent, and conferred grace, even though the minister might draw down judgments on his own head. Con. Parm. ii. 6.

VER. 10. Instruction. Heb. "a heavy punishment." H.—The mind which gives way to vice, must have embraced some false doctrine.

VER. 13. Down. Compunction is salutary, but worldly grief blameable. Chap. xxv. 20, and 2 Cor. vii. 10. S. Greg. Past. ii. 10.

VER. 15. Feast. Those who repine at their condition are miserable; while 16 Better is a little with the fear of the Lord, than great treasures without content.

17 It is better to be invited to herbs with love, than to a fatted calf with hatred.

18 A passionate man stirreth up strifes: he that is patient appeaseth those that are stirred up.

19 The way of the slothful is as a hedge of thorns: the way of the just is without offence.

20 A wise son maketh a father joyful: but the foolish man despiseth his mother.

21 Folly is joy to the fool: and the wise man maketh straight his steps.

22 Designs are brought to nothing where there is no counsel: but where there are many counsellors, they are established.

23 A man rejoiceth in the sentence of his mouth: and a word in due time is best.

24 The path of life is above for the wise, that he may decline from the lowest hell.

25 The Lord will destroy the house of the proud: and will strengthen the borders of the widow.

26 Evil thoughts are an abomination to the Lord: and pure words most beautiful, shall be confirmed by him.

27 He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house: but he that hateth bribes shall live.

*By mercy and faith sins are purged away: and by the fear of the Lord every one declineth from evil.

28 The mind of the just studieth obedience: the mouth of the wicked overfloweth with evils.

29 The Lord is far from the wicked: and he will hear the prayers of the just.

30 The light of the eyes rejoiceth the soul: a good name maketh the bones fat.

31 The ear that heareth the reproofs of life, shall abide in the midst of the wise.

32 He that rejecteth instruction, despiseth his own soul: but he that yieldeth to reproof, possesseth understanding.

33 The fear of the Lord, is the lesson of wisdom: and humility goeth before glory.

VER. 30. Fat. And contributes to health.

VER. 33. Lesson. Or "what teacheth."—Humility, or docility; as those who acknowledge no master will never become wise. Matt. xxiii. 12 C.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. It is the part of man, &c. That is, a man should prepare in his heart and soul what he is to say: but after all, it must be the Lord that must govern his tongue, to speak to the purpose. Not that we can think any thing of good without God's grace: but after that we have (with God's grace) thought and prepared within our souls what we would speak, if God does not

CHAP. XVI.

IT^b is the part of man to prepare the soul: and of the Lord to govern the tongue.

2 *All the ways of a man are open to his eyes: the Lord is the weigher of spirits.

3 Lay open thy works to the Lord: and thy thoughts shall be directed.

4 The Lord hath made all things for himself: the wicked also for the evil day.

5 Every proud man is an abomination to the Lord: though hand should be joined to hand, he is not innocent.

The beginning of a good way, is to do justice: and this is more acceptable to God, than to offer sacrifices.

6 *By mercy and truth iniquity is redeemed; and by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil.

7 When the ways of man shall please the Lord, he will convert even his enemies to peace.

8 Better is a little with justice, than great revenues with iniquity.

9 *The heart of man disposeth his way: but the Lord must direct his steps.

10 Divination is in the lips of the king, his mouth shall not err in judgment.

11 Weight and balance are judgments of the Lord: and his work all the weights of the bag.

12 They that act wickedly are abominable to the king: for the throne is established by justice.

13 Just lips are the delight of kings: he that speaketh right things shall be loved.

14 The wrath of a king is as messengers of death: and the wise man will pacify it.

15 In the cheerfulness of the king's countenance is life: and his clemency is like the latter rain.

16 Get wisdom, because it is better than gold: and purchase prudence, for it is more precious than silver.

17 The path of the just departeth from evils: he that keepeth his soul keepeth his way.

18 Pride goeth before destruction: and the spirit is lifted up before a fall.

19 It is better to be humbled with the meek, than to divide spoils with the proud.

govern our tongue, we shall not succeed in what we speak. Ch.—He will put into our mouths what we have to say to persecutors. Luke xxi. 14. He often causes us to utter the reverse of what we intended, as Balaam did. Num. xxiii. M.—The fairest projects miscarry without God's blessing. The enemies of grace would infer from this text, that the beginning of salvation depends on free-will. But S. Aug. (con. 2 Epist. Pelag. ii. 8) has solidly refuted them, and Solomon does not mean that man acts alone. Chap. viii. 35. Sept. John xv. 5, and 2 Cor. iii. 5 "Man," says S. Aug., "does no good things, which God does not cause him to perform." C.

VER. 4. Day. His obduracy is of his own choice, and must serve to set the Divine justice in the clearest light. Eccl. xxxiii. 14; Exod. ix. 16. Others hence infer that predestination is gratuitous, and reprobation in consequence of sin. It seems rather that temporal goods and evils are here meant. C.

VER. 5. Hand. And he seems to be very quiet. Chap. xi. 21. Sept. "but he who putteth his hand in hands unjustly, to make a contract, is," &c.

VER. 10. Judgment. Or "let it not err," as people look upon the decisions of kings as so many oracles. We ought to act in this manner, as long as they are not visibly unjust.

VER. 11. Bag. Many read saculi, "of the world." So Ven. Bede, &c. All God's appointments are perfectly just. Chap. xi. 21. It was the custom for people to carry balances to weigh money, before it was coined. C.

VER. 16. Get. Sept. "the nests of wisdom . . . and the nests of prudence;" or Churches of Christ, or places of education, may be intended. C.

VER. 18. Fall. Our first parents had given way to pride, before they sinned publicly. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xiv. 13.

20 The learned in word shall find good things: and he that trusteth in the Lord is blessed.

21 The wise in heart, shall be called prudent: and he that is sweet in words, shall attain to greater things.

22 Knowledge is a fountain of life to him that possesseth it: the instruction of fools is foolishness.

23 The heart of the wise shall instruct his mouth. and shall add grace to his lips.

24 Well ordered words are as a honeycomb: sweet to the soul, and health to the bones.

25 There is a way that seemeth to a man right: and the ends thereof lead to death.

26 The soul of him that laboureth, laboureth for himself, because his mouth hath obliged him to it.

27 The wicked man diggeth evil, and in his lips is a burning fire.

28 A perverse man stirreth up quarrels: and one full of words separateth princes.

29 An unjust man allureth his friend: and leadeth him into a way that is not good.

30 He that with fixed eyes deviseth wicked things, biting his lips, bringeth evil to pass.

31 Old age is a crown of dignity, when it is found in the ways of justice.

32 The patient man is better than the valiant: and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh cities.

33 Lots are cast into the lap, but they are disposed of by the Lord.

ceptable jewel: whithersoever he turneth himself, he understandeth wisely.

9 He that concealeth a transgression, seeketh friendships: he that repeateth it again, separateth friends.

10 A reproof availeth more with a wise man, than a hundred stripes with a fool.

11 An evil man always seeketh quarrels: but a cruel angel shall be sent against him.

12 It is better to meet a bear robbed of her whelps, than a fool trusting in his own folly.

13 He that rendereth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house.

14 The beginning of quarrels is as when one letteth out water: and before he suffereth reproach, he forsaketh judgment.

15 He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, both are abominable before God.

16 What doth it avail a fool to have riches, seeing he cannot buy wisdom?

He that maketh his house high, seeketh a downfall: and he that refuseth to learn, shall fall into evils.

17 He that is a friend loveth at all times: and a brother is proved in distress.

18 A foolish man will clap hands, when he is surety for his friend.

19 He that studieth discords, loveth quarrels: and he that exalteth his door, seeketh ruin.

20 He that is of a perverse heart, shall not find good: and he that perverteth his tongue, shall fall into evil.

21 A fool is born to his own disgrace: and even his father shall not rejoice in a fool.

22 A joyful mind maketh age flourishing: a sorrowful spirit drieth up the bones.

23 The wicked man taketh gifts out of the bosom, that he may pervert the paths of judgment.

24 Wisdom shineth in the face of the wise: the eyes of fools are in the ends of the earth.

25 A foolish son is the anger of the father: and the sorrow of the mother that bore him.

26 It is no good thing to do hurt to the just: nor to strike the prince, who judgeth right.

27 He that setteth bounds to his words, is knowing and wise: and the man of understanding is of a precious spirit.

VER. 12. Fool. Heb. "fool in his folly."

VER. 14. Water. It is scarcely possible to prevent the bad effects of detraction.—Judgment. And gives up the cause, as being much more prudent. Matt. v. 25, 40.

VER. 18. Hands. Through joy, or as a mark of his consent.

VER. 19. Door. Sixtus V. reads, "mouth;" as some explain the door to mean. A large door supposes that the house is elevated, and thus exposed to danger from winds, &c.

VER. 24. Earth. Wandering and insatiable, and deeming the acquisition of wisdom too difficult.

VER. 27. Precious and reserved spirit. This is a mark of wisdom. C.

counted wise: and if he close his lips, a man of understanding.

CHAP. XVIII.

HE that hath a mind to depart from a friend, seeketh occasions: he shall ever be subject to reproach.

2 A fool receiveth not the words of prudence: unless thou say those things which are in his heart.

3 The wicked man, when he is come into the depths of sins, contemneth: but ignominy and reproach follow him.

4 *Words from the mouth of a man are as deep water: and the fountain of wisdom as an overflowing stream.

5 It is not good to accept the person of the wicked, to decline from the truth of judgment.

6 The lips of a fool intermeddle with strife: and his mouth provoketh quarrels.

7 The mouth of a fool is his destruction: and his lips are the ruin of his soul.

8 The words of the double-tongued are as if they were harmless: and they reach even to the inner parts of the bowels.

Fear casteth down the slothful: and the souls of the effeminate shall be hungry.

9 He that is loose and slack in his work, is the brother of him that wasteth his own works.

10 The name of the Lord is as a strong tower: the just runneth to it, and shall be exalted.

11 The substance of the rich man is the city of his strength, and as a strong wall compassing him about.

12 ^bBefore destruction, the heart of a man is exalted: and before he be glorified, it is humbled.

13 ^cHe that answereth before he heareth, sheweth himself to be a fool, and worthy of confusion.

14 The spirit of a man upholdeth his infirmity: but a spirit that is easily angered, who can bear?

15 A wise heart shall acquire knowledge: and the ear of the wise seeketh instruction.

16 A man's gift enlargeth his way, and maketh him room before princes.

17 The just is first accuser of himself: his friend cometh, and shall search him.

* Infra, xx. 5.—^b Supra, xi. 2; Eccli. x. 15.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Reproach. True friendship resembles charity, and bears all things. 1 Cor. xiii. 4. Heb. now reads Thave, "desire;" instead of Thuane, occasion, or "pretext," which must have been in the copies of the Sept. and Vulg. C.

VER. 2. Heart. Conformable to his passions. C.—Heb. "unless to lay open his heart." He wishes to appear wise, and to justify his wicked designs. H.

VER. 3. Contemneth both God and man. Luke xviii. 4. Heb. "is contemned" in his turn. C.

VER. 4. Man, who is just and wise. His advice deserves attention. Chap. xx. 5.

VER. 6. Quarrels. Heb. "blows." Sept. "death" (ver. 7); which are the usual consequences of quarrels.

VER. 8. Tongued. Heb. "calumniator." He pretends to wish well to those of whom he speaks, or else to guard the company against deceit. C.

VER. 9. Brother. Like him, as both end in poverty. Chap. x. 4, and xii. 11.

VER. 10. Name. Essence, or protection of God. The rich depends on his own wealth.

VER. 13. Heareth the end of the question. Chap. i. 5.

VER. 14. Infirmity of the flesh. Matt. xxvi. 41.—That is. Theodot. "is wounded, who shall support?"

VER. 18. Lot. Chap. xvi. 33. Sept. "silence." C.—But Grabe substitutes "lot." H.

VER. 19. Judgments of many are more deserving of credit. Heb. "a brother offended, is like a strong place, and their quarrels," &c. They are not easily reconciled. C.

VER. 21. Love it, and speak well or ill, shall receive accordingly. Matt. xii. 37.

18 The lot suppresseth contentions, and determineth even between the mighty.

19 A brother that is helped by his brother, is like a strong city: and judgments are like the bars of cities.

20 Of the fruit of a man's mouth shall his belly be satisfied: and the offspring of his lips shall fill him.

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue: they that love it, shall eat the fruits thereof.

22 He that hath found a good wife, hath found a good thing, and shall receive a pleasure from the Lord. He that driveth away a good wife, driveth away a good thing: but he that keepeth an adulteress, is foolish and wicked.

23 The poor will speak with supplications, and the rich will speak roughly.

24 A man amiable in society, shall be more friendly than a brother.

CHAP. XIX.

BBETTER is the poor man, that walketh in his simplicity, than a rich man that is perverse in his lips, and unwise.

2 ^aWhere there is no knowledge of the soul, there is no good: and he that is hasty with his feet shall stumble.

3 The folly of a man supplanteth his steps: and he fretteth in his mind against God.

4 Riches make many friends: but from the poor man, even they whom he had, depart.

5 ^aA false witness shall not be unpunished: and he that speaketh lies, shall not escape.

6 Many honour the person of him that is mighty, and are friends of him that giveth gifts.

7 The brethren of the poor man hate him: moreover also his friends have departed far from him.

He that followeth after words only, shall have nothing.

8 But he that possesseth a mind, loveth his own soul, and he that keepeth prudence, shall find good things.

9 A false witness shall not be unpunished: and he that speaketh lies, shall perish.

10 Delicacies are not seemly for a fool: nor for a servant to have rule over princes.

11 The learning of a man is known by patience: and his glory is to pass over wrongs.

* Eccli. xi. 8.—^a Infra, xxi. 16.—^a Dan. xiii. 61.

VER. 22. Good wife. Good is not in Heb., but should be understood, as it is expressed in Sept. of Complut. (C.) and Alex. H.—He that, &c., occurs not in Heb., Sixtus V., &c. But it is found in Sept. and Arab. The Syriac omits the last sentence.—Wicked. S. Aug. had frequently asserted that a divorce was only of counsel: but this he retracted, when he reflected on this text. Ret. i. 19.—In case of divorce, the Fathers still permit not a second marriage, that the parties may be reconciled. They enjoin the husband to put away only such as are incorrigible. S. Aug. Adul. ii. 3. C.

VER. 24. Brother. The ties of nature are not so strong as those of friendship. C.—Heb. "a man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Prot. H.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Rich, is not in Heb., Sept. Compl., or S. Jerom. C.—But as there is no antithesis between a poor man and a fool, it ought to be inserted, as it is in the Syriac, which reads, "than he who is perverse in his ways, though he be rich." The MS. 2, confirms "ways." Kennicott.

VER. 2. Soul. Wholesome and spiritual. Heb. "the soul or life is not good."

VER. 3. Fretteth. Lit. "burneth." Sept. "blameth." Heb. "his heart rageth against the Lord." H.—Thus Adam tacitly laid the blame on him, as all those do who excuse themselves on account of their temper, habits, stars, the violence of temptation, &c. C.

VER. 8. Mind. Heb. "heart," intelligence. Chap. xv. 32.—Loveth. This does not contradict the gospel (John xii. 25); as those who refrain from what the soul would crave to its own detriment, truly love it.

VER. 10. Fool. He would eat them so as to prejudice his health.—Princes. Chap. xxx. 21.

VER. 11. Wrongs. The wise man is not vindictive or punctilious.

12 As the roaring of a lion, so also is the anger of a king: and his cheerfulness as the dew upon the grass.

13 A foolish son is the grief of his father: and a wrangling wife is like a roof continually dropping through.

14 House and riches are given by parents: but a prudent wife is properly from the Lord.

15 Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep, and an idle soul shall suffer hunger.

16 He that keepeth the commandment, keepeth his own soul: but he that neglecteth his own way, shall die.

17 He that hath mercy on the poor, lendeth to the Lord: and he will repay him.

18 Chastise thy son, despair not: but to the killing of him set not thy soul.

19 He that is impatient, shall suffer damage: and when he shall take away, he shall add another thing.

20 Hear counsel, and receive instruction, that thou mayest be wise in the latter end.

21 There are many thoughts in the heart of a man: but the will of the Lord shall stand firm.

22 A needy man is merciful: and better is the poor than the lying man.

23 The fear of the Lord is unto life: and he shall abide in the fulness without being visited with evil.

24 *The slothful hideth his hand under his arm-pit, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth.

25 *The wicked man being scourged, the fool shall be wiser: but if thou rebuke a wise man, he will understand discipline.

26 He that afflicteth his father, and chaseth away his mother, is infamous and unhappy.

27 Cease not, O my son, to hear instruction, and be not ignorant of the words of knowledge.

28 An unjust witness scorneth judgment: and the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity.

29 Judgments are prepared for scorners: and striking hammers for the bodies of fools.

VER. 18. Killing. Prot. "crying;" or by his complaint be not deterred. H.—Chal. agrees with us.

VER. 19. Thing. A child neglected will continue to steal, or to offend (C.); while too much harshness will do no good, but tend to the damage of all parties. H.

VER. 21. Firm. Ignorance and weakness cause men to change.

VER. 23. Life. Both temporal and eternal. Chap. x. 27. C.—With evil. Lit. "the worst," pessima. H.—Sixtus V. "by the most wicked one." The devil shall have no power over him.

VER. 25. Wicked. Heb. "scoffer." Chastisements have always some good effect either on the sufferer, or on the spectators, who will be cautioned not to imitate what is wrong.

VER. 26. Infamous. Heb. "a son of confusion and reproach;" a spend-thrift.

VER. 27. Nat. Heb. shemta to say the reverse. C.—But we may read it with 24 "The steps of man are guided by the Lord: but who is the man that can understand his own way?

25 It is ruin to a man to devour holy ones, and after vows to retract.

26 A wise king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth over them the wheel.

27 The spirit of a man is the lamp of the Lord, which searcheth all the hidden things of the bowels.

11 "When a pestilent man is punished, the little one will be wiser: and if he follow the wise, he will receive knowledge.

12 The just considereth seriously the house of the wicked, that he may withdraw the wicked from evil.

13 He that stoppeth his ear against the cry of the poor, shall also cry himself, and shall not be heard.

14 A secret present quencheth anger: and a gift in the bosom, the greatest wrath.

15 It is joy to the just to do judgment: and dread to them that work iniquity.

16 A man that shall wander out of the way of doctrine, shall abide in the company of the giants.

17 He that loveth good cheer, shall be in want: he that loveth wine, and fat things, shall not be rich.

18 The wicked is delivered up for the just: and the unjust for the righteous.

19 "It is better to dwell in a wilderness, than with a quarrelsome and passionate woman.

20 There is a treasure to be desired, and oil in the dwelling of the just: and the foolish man shall spend it.

21 He that followeth justice and mercy, shall find life, justice, and glory.

22 The wise man hath scaled the city of the strong, and hath cast down the strength of the confidence thereof.

23 He that keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from distress.

24 The proud and the arrogant is called ignorant, who in anger worketh pride.

25 Desires kill the slothful: for his hands have refused to work at all.

26 He longeth and desireth all the day. but he that is just, will give, and will not cease.

27 "The sacrifices of the wicked are abominable, because they are offered of wickedness.

VER. 4. Heart. Or when it is proud, it causes the eyes to appear so too. C.—Lamp. Prot. "ploughing of the wicked is sin." When it is done with a bad motive, out of pride.—Sept. and Vulg. may also mean, "sin is the lamp and exultation of the wicked." H.

VER. 5. Sluggard. Heb. "hasty man," as the slothful is ironically styled.

VER. 9. Top, (domatis,) as the roofs in Palestine were flat. S. Jer. ad Sun.

VER. 10. Neighbour. Sym. "he has no idea of friendship." Sept. "he shall not be treated with mercy by any man." H.

VER. 12. Evil. He tries every expedient to save him.—That. Sept. "he despises." Sym. "throws down."

VER. 15. To do judgment. Or to see it done, while the wicked depend only on the corruption of their judges.

VER. 16. Giants, in hell. Chap. xv. 11; Job xxvi. 5; Ezec. xxii. 21.

VER. 17. Rich. Economy is constantly recommended. C.

VER. 18. Righteous. Many are deterred from wickedness by the punishment of malefactors, whose injuries are frequently irreparable.

VER. 20. Treasure of provisions. Temporal blessings were promised as a figure of more lasting ones, which are set before Christians.

VER. 24. Ignorant. Heb. "a scoffer." Sept. "pestilent." H.—Such a one is always actuated by pride, when he attempts to turn good advice and religion to ridicule.

VER. 27. Wickedness. Heb. "with an evil thought." Mont. Eccl. xxiv. 24. H. —

28 A lying witness shall perish: an obedient man shall speak of victory.

29 The wicked man impudently hardeneth his face: but he that is righteous, correcteth his way.

30 There is no wisdom, there is no prudence, there is no counsel against the Lord.

31 The horse is prepared for the day of battle: but the Lord giveth safety.

CHAP. XXII.

A GOOD name is better than great riches: and good favour is above silver and gold.

2 The rich and poor have met one another: the Lord is the Maker of them both.

3 The prudent man saw the evil, and hid himself: the simple passed on, and suffered loss.

4 The fruit of humility is the fear of the Lord, riches and glory and life.

5 Arms and swords are in the way of the perverse: but he that keepeth his own soul, departeth far from them.

6 It is a proverb: A young man according to his way, even when he is old, he will not depart from it.

7 The rich ruleth over the poor: and the borrower is servant to him that lendeth.

8 He that soweth iniquity, shall reap evils, and with the rod of his anger he shall be consumed.

9 He that is inclined to mercy, shall be blessed: for of his bread he hath given to the poor.

He that maketh presents, shall purchase victory and honour: but he carrieth away the souls of the receivers.

10 Cast out the scoffer, and contention shall go out with him, and quarrels and reproaches shall cease.

11 He that loveth cleanness of heart, for the grace of his lips shall have the king for his friend.

12 The eyes of the Lord preserve knowledge: and the words of the unjust are overthrown.

13 The slothful man saith: There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the midst of the streets.

14 The mouth of a strange woman is a deep pit: he whom the Lord is angry with, shall fall into it.

15 Folly is bound up in the heart of a child, and the rod of correction shall drive it away.

^a Eccli. vii. 2.

VER. 28. Obedient. Attentive, faithful witness, shall speak with triumph; or he who obeys the law shall gain the victory over the devil, &c. Phil. ii. 8.

VER. 31. Buttle. It was kept for no other purpose by the eastern nations, who used oxen to till the land, asses and camels to carry burdens. Job xxxix. 18; Psal. xix. 8, and xxxii. 17. C.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Good. Heb. "a name," or reputation. H.—It is preferable to riches, but not to be compared with virtue, which is the only solid good; and even to be placed above riches, it must be well grounded. C.—Favour with all. H.

VER. 2. Another. They stand in need of one another. S. Chrys. hom. 34, in 1 Cor.—They are equal in God's sight, who only values real virtue. He disposes of riches, so that the poor may one day become rich. C.

VER. 6. It is a proverb, is added by S. Jerom, to make the sentence more striking.—It. He is like a tender plant, (C.) or wax, or a new vessel.

VER. 7. Servant. He might be sold, &c. Exod. xxii. 3; Matt. xviii. 25. These laws appear to be severe; but they are founded on wisdom, as nothing impoverishes more than the facility of borrowing.

VER. 8. Consumed. Or beaten with the flail of God's anger.

VER. 9. Is. Heb. "has a good eye," in opposition to the evil, or malicious one. Matt. xx. 15.—He, &c., is not in Heb., nor in the Lat. edit. of Comp. and S. Jer.

VER. 11. He. Sept. "the Lord loveth pious hearts. All the irreproachable are acceptable to him. The king feeds with lips," by his just ordinances. H.

VER. 14. It. Debauchery resembles hell. Chap. xxiii. 23. C.

VER. 15. Folly. Ignorance and innate corruption are corrected by a good education.

16 He that oppresseth the poor, to increase his own riches, shall himself give to one that is richer, and shall be in need.

17 Incline thy ear, and hear the words of the wise: and apply thy heart to my doctrine:

18 Which shall be beautiful for thee, if thou keep it in thy bowels, and it shall flow in thy lips:

19 That thy trust may be in the Lord, wherefore I have also shown it to thee this day.

20 Behold I have described it to thee three manner of ways, in thoughts and knowledge:

21 That I might show thee the certainty, and the words of truth, to answer out of these to them that sent thee.

22 Do no violence to the poor, because he is poor: and do not oppress the needy in the gate:

23 Because the Lord will judge his cause: and will afflict them that have afflicted his soul.

24 Be not a friend to an angry man, and do not walk with a furious man:

25 Lest perhaps thou learn his ways, and take scandal to thy soul.

26 Be not with them that fasten down their hands, and that offer themselves sureties for debts:

27 For if thou have not wherewith to restore, what cause is there that he should take the covering from thy bed?

28 Pass not beyond the ancient bounds which thy fathers have set.

29 Hast thou seen a man swift in his work? he shall stand before kings, and shall not be before those that are obscure.

CHAP. XXIII.

WHEN thou shalt sit to eat with a prince, consider diligently what is set before thy face:

2 And put a knife to thy throat, if it be so that thou have thy soul in thy own power.

3 Be not desirous of his meats, in which is the bread of deceit.

4 Labour not to be rich: but set bounds to thy prudence.

^b Eccli. xxxi. 28.

VER. 17. Incline. Thus Solomon concludes his discourse (chap. xxiv. 23) in the same manner as he began it, to chap. x. Some commence the third book of Proverbs in this place; others, chap. xxv. C.

VER. 18. Lips. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. H.

VER. 20. Ways. Repeatedly. Boss. T. 2 Cor. xii. 8; Amos i. 11. C.—Prot. "have not I written to thee excellent things in counsels and knowledge?"

VER. 21. Sent. Sept. "are sent to thee" Thou mayest become a teacher, (H.) or give satisfaction to thy parents, who have sent thee to my school. C.

VER. 25. Soul. By imitating him, or by falling a victim to his rage.

VER. 26. Hands. Engaging to stand bond. H. Chap. vi. 1.—Such a one might be required to pay the debt. Chap. xx. 16.

VER. 29. Obscure. By industry he shall raise himself to notice. H.—Kings employ those who are most active. C.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Sit. Saul sat at table, and the custom of lying down was adopted only a little while before the captivity. It was recent among the Romans. C.

VER. 2. Throat. Restrain intemperance and talkativeness. Eccli. xxxi. 12. Sept. "stretch forth thy hand, knowing that thou must prepare the like; but if thou be more insatiable, (3) desire not his meats, for he has them of a deceitful life." They cannot afford real happiness, (H.) and to vie with the rich would only reduce thee to poverty. Eccli. xiii. 2. S. Aug. (tr. 47 in Joan.) explains this text of the blessed Eucharist, observing, that we must give our life for our brethren, as Christ did for us. Before communion we must slay the old man, and subdue our passions. C.—Power. Prot. "if thou be a man given to appetite."

VER. 3. Deceit. Poison. He wishes to discover thy secret.

VER. 4. Prudence. Be more solicitous for this than to acquire riches. C.—

5 Lift not up thy eyes to riches which thou canst not have: because they shall make themselves wings like those of an eagle, and shall fly towards heaven.

6 Eat not with an envious man, and desire not his meats:

7 Because, like a soothsayer, and diviner, he thinketh that which he knoweth not. Eat and drink, will he say to thee: and his mind is not with thee.

8 The meats which thou hadst eaten, thou shalt vomit up: and shalt lose thy beautiful words.

9 Speak not in the ears of fools: because they will despise the instruction of thy speech.

10 Touch not the bounds of little ones: and enter not into the field of the fatherless:

11 For their near kinsman is strong: and he will judge their cause against thee.

12 Let thy heart apply itself to instruction: and thy ears to words of knowledge.

13 ^aWithhold not correction from a child: for if thou strike him with the rod, he shall not die.

14 Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and deliver his soul from hell.

15 My son, if thy mind be wise, my heart shall rejoice with thee:

16 And my reins shall rejoice, when thy lips shall speak what is right.

17 ^bLet not thy heart envy sinners: but be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long:

18 Because thou shalt have hope in the latter end, and thy expectation shall not be taken away.

19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise: and guide thy mind in the way.

20 Be not in the feasts of great drinkers, nor in their revellings, who contribute flesh to eat:

21 Because they that give themselves to drinking, and that club together, shall be consumed: and drowsiness shall be clothed with rags.

22 Harken to thy father, that begot thee: and despise not thy mother, when she is old.

23 Buy truth, and do not sell wisdom, and instruction, and understanding.

24 The father of the just rejoiceth greatly: he that hath begotten a wise son, shall have joy with him.

^a Supra, xiii. 24; Eccl. xxx. 1.

Yet this wisdom must be sober. Rom. xii. 3; 1 Tim. vi. 9. Sept. "being poor, do not stretch forth thyself to the rich, but prudently retire." Ver. 2. H.

VER. 5. Riches. Sept. "to him, the rich man, he no where appears. He has prepared," &c. H.—Like. Heb. "as the eagle, it will fly," &c. H.—We must therefore fix our hearts on more durable goods.

VER. 7. Like. Prot. "as he thinketh in his heart, so is he: eat," &c. H.—He is still convinced that his guests will ruin him: or "like one guarding, or trembling for his soul."—Diviner. Such endeavour to speak what may come to pass, but are full of anxiety: so the miser's words are contrary to his real sentiments, (C.) as the diviner knows that he is imposing on mankind. H.

VER. 11. Kinsman. Heb. Gal, "tutor, defendant, or redeemer," the Lord (C.) himself. Lev. xxv. 25.

VER. 27. Pit. It is difficult to overcome this passion, when once it has got possession of the heart. We must therefore watch over it, and consecrate it invariably to wisdom. Ver. 26.

VER. 29. Whose father. S. Jerom has read ab avi, instead of abvi, (C.) which is an interjection, (Boch.,) alas! or it means "trouble." Sept. "drunken-

25 Let thy father and thy mother be joyful, and let her rejoice that bore thee.

26 My son, give me thy heart: and let thy eyes keep my ways.

27 For a harlot is a deep ditch: and a strange woman is a narrow pit.

28 She lieth in wait in the way as a robber, and him whom she shall see unwary, she will kill.

29 Who hath woe? whose father hath woe? who hath contentions; who falls into pits? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes?

30 Surely they that pass their time in wine, and study to drink off their cups.

31 Look not upon the wine when it is yellow, when the colour thereof shineth in the glass: it goeth in pleasantly.

32 But in the end, it will bite like a snake, and will spread abroad poison like a basilisk.

33 Thy eyes shall behold strange women, and thy heart shall utter perverse things.

34 And thou shalt be as one sleeping in the midst of the sea, and as a pilot fast asleep when the stern is lost.

35 And thou shalt say: They have beaten me, but I was not sensible of pain: they drew me, and I felt not: when shall I awake, and find wine again?

CHAP. XXIV.

SEEK not to be like evil men, neither desire to be with them:

2 Because their mind studieth robberies, and their lips speak deceits.

3 By wisdom the house shall be built, and by prudence it shall be strengthened.

4 By instruction the store-rooms shall be filled with all precious and most beautiful wealth.

5 A wise man is strong: and a knowing man, stout and valiant.

VER. 35. Drew. Chal. "plundered." Sept. "mocked at me."—Again. This is the woeful effect of drunkenness, that men are not deterred from it, though they be sensible of its dreadful consequences. M.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Like. Be not allured by their prosperity to imitate them. Psal. xxxvi. 1.

VER. 3. Wisdom and virtue, and not by injustice can the house be established. VER. 7. High. Thus the fool excuses himself. But wisdom condescends to our weakness, if we be truly in earnest. Deut. xxxii. 12.—Mouth. To defend himself, or to give advice. C.

VER. 9. Of a fool. Inasmuch as he is wicked. Though he may have some pious thoughts, he attends not to them. H.—He thinks how he may commit evil, and renders himself hateful. C.—Heb. "a wicked thought is the sin of folly." Sept. "the fool dieth in sins."—Detractor. Heb. "scoffer." H.

VER. 11. Deliver. The Jews often put people to death without any formal trial, pretending zeal, as they did S. Stephen, &c. Our Saviour rescued the adul-

10 If thou lose hope, being weary in the day of distress, thy strength shall be diminished.

12 If thou say: I have not strength enough: he that seeth into the heart, he understandeth, and nothing deceiveth the keeper of thy soul, and he shall render to a man according to his works.

13 ^a Eat honey, my son, because it is good, and the honeycomb most sweet to thy throat.

14 So also is the doctrine of wisdom to thy soul: which when thou hast found, thou shalt have hope in the end, and thy hope shall not perish.

15 Lie not in wait, nor seek after wickedness in the house of the just, nor spoil his rest.

16 For a just man shall fall seven times, and shall rise again: but the wicked shall fall down into evil.

17 When thy enemy shall fall, be not glad, and in his ruin let not thy heart rejoice:

18 Lest the Lord see, and it displease him, and he turn away his wrath from him.

19 Contend not with the wicked, nor seek to be like the ungodly.

20 For evil men have no hope of things to come, and the lamp of the wicked shall be put out.

21 My son, fear the Lord, and the king: and have nothing to do with detractors.

22 For their destruction shall rise suddenly: and who knoweth the ruin of both?

23 These things also to the wise: ^aIt is not good to have respect to persons in judgment.

24 They that say to the wicked man: Thou art just: shall be cursed by the people, and the tribes shall abhor them.

25 They that rebuke him, shall be praised: and a blessing shall come upon them.

26 He shall kiss the lips, who answereth right words.

27 Prepare thy work without, and diligently till thy ground: that afterward thou mayest build thy house.

28 Be not witness without cause against thy neighbour: and deceive not any man with thy lips.

VER. 12. I have. Heb. "behold, we know not this man." Pagn. H.—He is a stranger. But all mankind are brethren, and have a charge to assist one another, even though they be enemies. Eccli. xvii. 12; Exod. xxiii. 4. C.

VER. 13. Honey. Of wisdom, which is most delicious. M.

VER. 14. Thou shalt. Heb. "yea, it is the last." Mont.—"Then there shall be a reward." Prot.—Thou shalt enjoy old age, or have posterity. C.

VER. 16. Fall into smaller sins. (S. Greg. 6, in 2 Reg. 15, &c.) or into disgrace, as ipul (H.) rather intimates. Vat. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xi. 31.—Both significations agree with the context. See Job v. 27; Matt. xviii. 21. C.—He who is not subject to mortal sin may still be exposed to many failings, and venial sins, which do not deprive him of the title of just; whereas the wicked consents to mortal sin, from which he riseth not so easily. W.

VER. 18. From. To punish thee. C.—Thus will thy thirst of vengeance be disappointed. H.—The Hebrews believed that there was no evil which was not caused by sin: and this was true in some sense. But still God often afflicts his servants, (ver. 16,) as the whole book of Job tends to prove. C.

VER. 21. Detractors. Or those who speak ill of God, or the king. C.—Prot. "that are given to change," (H.) and relapses.

VER. 23. These. Sept. have an addition, and then our chap. xxx., to ver. 15, after which follows the remainder of this chap., and the first ten verses of the 31st. H.

VER. 26. Lips. And be deemed a friend. M.

VER. 27. House, and support thy family. Those who attempt to instruct others must first set good example

29 ^a Say not: I will do to him as he hath done to me: I will render to every one according to his work.

30 I passed by the field of the slothful man, and by the vineyard of the foolish man:

31 And behold it was all filled with nettles, and thorns had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall was broken down.

32 Which when I had seen, I laid it up in my heart, and by the example I received instruction.

33 Thou wilt sleep a little, said I, thou wilt slumber a little, thou wilt fold thy hands a little to rest:

34 And poverty shall come to thee as a runner, and beggary as an armed man.

CHAP. XXV.

THESE are also parables of Solomon, which the men of Ezechias, king of Juda, copied out.

2 It is the glory of God to conceal the word, and the glory of kings to search out the speech.

3 The heaven above and the earth beneath, and the heart of kings, is unsearchable.

4 Take away the rust from silver, and there shall come forth a most pure vessel:

5 Take away wickedness from the face of the king, and his throne shall be established with justice.

6 Appear not glorious before the king, and stand not in the place of great men.

7 For it is better that it should be said to thee: Come up hither; than that thou shouldst be humbled before the prince.

8 The things which thy eyes have seen, utter not hastily in a quarrel: lest afterward thou mayest not be able to make amends, when thou hast dishonoured thy friend.

9 Treat thy cause with thy friend, and discover not the secret to a stranger:

10 Lest he insult over thee, when he hath heard it, and cease not to upbraid thee.

Grace and friendship deliver a man: keep these for thyself, lest thou fall under reproach.

11 To speak a word in due time, is like apples of gold on beds of silver.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. These. Solomon wrote 3000, and we have only 915 verses extant. C.—Men. Isaias, Sobna, &c. C.

VER. 2. Speech. The Scriptures will denounce the truth to them, and show them how to reign with justice. We must adore the mysteries of God; but are allowed to examine the secret designs of princes.

VER. 3. Unsearchable. Their counsellors must not betray their secrets. Tob. xii. 7.

VER. 5. Justice. The wicked in a kingdom resemble rust on silver. C.

VER. 6. Glorious, or a boaster. H.—We must not seek the first places. Luke xiv. 10.

VER. 8. Not. Sept. "repent when thy friend may reproach thee." H.—Friend. A word spoken in haste may expose him to ridicule.

VER. 9. Stranger. It sometimes happens that friends fall out; but if either disclose the secret of the other, he will be deemed infamous. C. Jos. con. Ap. 2.—S. Ambrose says of his brother Satyrus, "though we had all things in common, yet the secret of our friends was not so."

VER. 10. Grace, &c., is not in Heb. Compl., S. Jerom., &c. But it is in the Sept. "favour and friendship may give liberty; which keep thou for thyself, that thou mayest not be exposed to great shame. But guard thy ways unchangeably." H.—Avoid quarrels.

12 As an ear-ring of gold and a bright pearl, so is he that reproveth the wise, and the obedient ear.

13 "As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to him that sent him, for he refresheth his soul.

14 As clouds, and wind, when no rain followeth, so is the man that boasteth, and doth not fulfil his promises.

15 By patience a prince shall be appeased, ^aand a soft tongue shall break hardness.

16 Thou hast found honey, eat what is sufficient for thee, lest being gluttoned therewith thou vomit it up.

17 Withdraw thy foot from the house of thy neighbour, lest having his fill he hate thee.

18 A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour, is like a dart and a sword and a sharp arrow.

19 To trust in an unfaithful man in the time of trouble, is like a rotten tooth, and weary foot, 20 And one that looseth his garment in cold weather.

As vinegar upon nitre, so is he that singeth songs to a very evil heart. As a moth doth by a garment, and a worm by the wood: so the sadness of a man consumeth the heart.

21 "If thy enemy be hungry, give him to eat: if he thirst, give him water to drink:

22 For thou shalt heap hot coals upon his head, and the Lord will reward thee.

23 The north wind driveth away rain, as doth a sad countenance a backbiting tongue.

VER. 17. Having. Heb. "being tired of thee." No man is so perfect but he will manifest some defect, and become importunate. C.

VER. 20. And. Prot. "as he taketh away a, &c., and as vinegar . . to a heavy heart." H.—The former sentence may be joined with the preceding, as it is improper to deprive a person of his garment, no less than to trust in the faithless; though some would suppose (C.) that this conduct, as well as the mixing of vinegar with nitre, is no less absurd than to attempt to relieve by music those who are extremely afflicted. Eccli. xxii. 6. T.—But Solomon does not speak of such, but only of those who are "heavy," and we know that music has wonderful efficacy in relieving them. 1 Kings xvi. 17.

"raiseth the clouds." Job xxxvii. 9; Joel ii. 20; Eccli. xviii. 23.—Tongue. If the hearers would show their displeasure, detractors would soon be reduced to silence. S. Jer. ad Rust. S. Bern.

VER. 25. Tidings. Heb. and Sept. The Vulg. seems rather to speak of a "good messenger."

VER. 26. Falling into disgrace, or sin, occasions the wicked to exult, as if there were no God or religion. C.

VER. 27. Majesty, viz. of God. For to search into that incomprehensible Majesty, and to pretend to sound the depths of the wisdom of God, is exposing 26 A just man falling down before the wicked, is as a fountain troubled with the foot and a corrupted spring.

27 As it is not good for a man to eat much honey, ^aso he that is a searcher of majesty shall be overwhelmed by glory.

28 As a city that lieth open and is not compassed with walls, so is a man that cannot refrain his own spirit in speaking.

CHAP. XXVI.

AS snow in summer and rain in harvest: so glory is not seemly for a fool.

2 As a bird flying to other places, and a sparrow going here or there: so a curse uttered without cause shall come upon a man.

3 A whip for a horse, and a snaffle for an ass, ^aand a rod for the back of fools.

4 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou be made like him.

5 Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he imagine himself to be wise.

6 ^aHe that sendeth words by a foolish messenger, is lame of feet and drinketh iniquity.

7 As a lame man hath fair legs in vain: so a parable is unseemly in the mouth of fools.

8 As he that casteth a stone into the heap of Mercury: so is he that giveth honour to a fool.

9 As if a thorn should grow in the hand of a drunkard: so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

10 Judgment determineth causes: and he that putteth a fool to silence, appeaseth anger.

11 ^aAs a dog that returneth to his vomit, so is the fool that repeateth his folly.

12 Hast thou seen a man wise in his own conceit? there shall be more hope of a fool than of him.

^a Eccli. iii. 22.—^f Supra, xxiii. 13.—^g Supra, xxv. 13.—^h 2 Pet. ii. 22.

our weak understanding to be blinded with an excess of light and glory, which it cannot comprehend. Ch.—When the Church proposes to us any mystery, we have only to believe. Heb. "but it is glorious to sound their glory," and see where the wicked end, that we may not envy them. Chap. iii. 31; Psal. xxxvi. 7. C.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Glory and power. A fool in a high office will endanger himself and the public. C.

VER. 2. As a bird, &c. The meaning is, that a curse uttered without cause shall do no harm to the person that is cursed, but will return upon him that curseth; as whithersoever a bird flies, it returns to its own nest. Ch.—Come. Chal. "shall not come in vain," if it be just, like that of Noe, Josue, &c. Heb. "shall not come" (C.) to the person against whom it is uttered, though God will not hold the curser guiltless, as the Vulg. intimates. H.

VER. 3. Snaffle. "Bit," or muzzle, (canus), to prevent the animal from biting. H.—Sect., Arab., &c., "a goad for an ass." But mothog denotes a bridle, (Mont. H.) asses being there very large, and commonly used for riding. Chap. xiii. 13. C.

VER. 4. Answer not a fool, &c. Viz. so as to imitate him; but only so as to reprove his folly. Ch.—If thou answer at all, (ver. 5,) do it to the purpose, and to prevent others from taking scandal, (C.) as well as to humble the wicked for his good. H.

VER. 8. Mercury. The god of travellers, who were wont to throw a stone at the foot of his statue, as the Indians (Vincent. Bellor. 24) and Arabs did. But Sept., &c. give another sense, "as he that bindeth a stone (C.) in the boss of a ring, σφειδών, (M.) or in a sling," can do no good, but only endanger himself or others, "so," &c. Yet morgue is never used elsewhere for a sling, and it means undoubtedly "a heap of stones," (C.) as Mont. substitutes instead of "the sling," in Pagn.—Honour, or an office, in which he may do harm. C.

VER. 9. If. Heb. "as a thorn goeth up into the," &c. Prot. H.—Parable. Sept. "but slavery in the hand of fools" groweth up. H.

VER. 10. Anger, and prevents lawsuits. Heb. is variously read and translated. C.—Prot. "the great God, that formed all things, both rewardeth the fool and rewardeth the transgressors." Marg. "a great man grieveth all, and he hirerh the fool," &c. Sept. "all the flesh of fools is exposed to many storms, for their excess is punished." H.

VER. 11. Dog. This is the only animal which is known to do so. S. Peter uses this comparison to deter any from renouncing the faith; as the Fathers do, to show the misery attending a relapse. C.

13 The slothful man saith: There is a lion in the way, and a lioness in the roads.

14 As the door turneth upon its hinges, so doth the slothful upon his bed.

15 The slothful hideth his hand under his arm-pit, and it grieveth him to turn it to his mouth.

16 The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit, than seven men that speak sentences.

17 As he that taketh a dog by the ears, so is he that passeth by in anger, and meddleth with another man's quarrel.

18 As he is guilty that shooteth arrows and lances unto death:

19 So is the man that hurteth his friend deceitfully: and when he is taken, saith: I did it in jest.

20 When the wood faileth, the fire shall go out: and when the tale-bearer is taken away, contentions shall cease.

21 As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire, so an angry man stirreth up strife.

22 The words of a tale-bearer are as it were simple, but they reach to the innermost parts of the belly.

23 Swelling lips joined with a corrupt heart, are like an earthen vessel adorned with silver dross.

24 An enemy is known by his lips, when in his heart he entertaineth deceit.

25 When he shall speak low, trust him not: because there are seven mischiefs in his heart.

26 He that covereth hatred deceitfully, his malice shall be laid open in the public assembly.

27 He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that rolleth a stone, it shall return to him.

28 A deceitful tongue loveth not truth: and a slippery mouth worketh ruin.

CHAP. XXVII.

BOAST not for to-morrow, for thou knowest not what the day to come may bring forth.

2 Let another praise thee, and not thy own mouth: a stranger, and not thy own lips.

3 A stone is heavy, and sand weighty: but the anger of a fool is heavier than them both.

4 Anger hath no mercy: nor fury, when it breaketh forth: and who can bear the violence of one provoked?

5 Open rebuke is better than hidden love.

6 Better are the wounds of a friend, than the deceitful kisses of an enemy.

VER. 16. Seven, or many wise men, who used to speak in a sententious manner. C.—So seven is used. ver. 25.

VER. 17. Anger. Heb. "passeth by, and meddleth with a quarrel not to him" pertaining. 11.—Such expose themselves foolishly to danger. Great discretion is requisite to reconcile those at variance.

VER. 20. Faileth. Heb. Syn. C. "aboundeth, the fire is bright, or flourisheth." Sept. H.

VER. 24. Lips. He will speak of what he hates much.

VER. 26. Deceitfully. Heb. "in desolation." He will cringe, but when he finds an opportunity, he will discover his evil designs. C.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 2. Lips. All hate affection and vanity. John v. 51.

VER. 4. And who. Sept. "but envy (zeal) beareth nothing." The more we yield to the envious, the more he is offended at our good behaviour.

VER. 6. Enemy. Joab slew Amasa, while he kissed him. 2 Kings xx. 9; Matt. xxvi. 48.

VER. 8. Place, or vocation, like the prodigal son, Luke xv.

VER. 9. And. Sept. add "wine and incense . . . but accidents tear the soul." H.

7 A soul that is full shall tread upon the honeycomb: and a soul that is hungry shall take even bitter for sweet.

8 As a bird that wandereth from her nest, so is a man that leaveth his place.

9 Ointment and perfumes rejoice the heart: and the good counsels of a friend are sweet to the soul.

10 Thy own friend, and thy father's friend forsake not: and go not into thy brother's house in the day of thy affliction.

Better is a neighbour that is near than a brother afar off.

11 Study wisdom, my son, and make my heart joyful, that thou mayest give an answer to him that reproacheth.

12 The prudent man seeing evil hideth himself: little ones passing on have suffered losses.

13 Take away his garment that hath been surety for a stranger: and take from him a pledge for strangers.

14 He that blesseth his neighbour with a loud voice, rising in the night, shall be like to him that curseth.

15 Roofs dropping through in a cold day, and a contentious woman are alike.

16 He that retaineth her, is as he that would hold the wind, and shall call the oil of his right hand.

17 Iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.

18 He that keepeth the fig-tree, shall eat the fruit thereof: and he that is the keeper of his master, shall be glorified.

19 As the faces of them that look therein, shine in the water, so the hearts of men are laid open to the wise.

20 Hell and destruction are never filled: so the eyes of men are never satisfied.

21 As silver is tried in the fining-pot, and gold in the furnace: so a man is tried by the mouth of him that praiseth.

The heart of the wicked seeketh after evils, but the righteous heart seeketh after knowledge.

22 Though thou shouldst bray a fool in the mortar, as when a pestle striketh upon sodden barley, his folly would not be taken from him.

23 Be diligent to know the countenance of thy cattle, and consider thy own flocks:

24 For thou shalt not always have power: but a crown shall be given to generation and generation.

VER. 22. Mortar. Such were used by those who could not afford handmills. C.

VER. 23. Flocks. John x. 3; Eccli. vii. 24. This may be applied to pastors.

VER. 24. Generation. Thou wilt be cited as an example of prudence, if thou hast foreseen the change of thy affairs, and provided for it.

26 *Lambs are for thy clothing: and kids for the price of the field.

27 Let the milk of the goats be enough for thy food, and for the necessities of thy house, and for maintenance for thy handmaids.

CHAP. XXVIII.

THE wicked man fleeth, when no man pursueth: but the just, bold as a lion, shall be without dread.

2 For the sins of the land many are the princes thereof: and for the wisdom of a man, and the knowledge of those things that are said, the life of the prince shall be prolonged.

3 A poor man that oppresseth the poor, is like a violent shower, which bringeth a famine.

4 They that forsake the law, praise the wicked man: they that keep it, are incensed against him.

5 Evil men think not on judgment: but they that seek after the Lord, take notice of all things.

6 ^bBetter is the poor man walking in his simplicity, than the rich in crooked ways.

7 He that keepeth the law, is a wise son: but he that feedeth gluttons, shameth his father.

8 He that heapeth together riches by usury and loan, gathereth them for him that will be bountiful to the poor.

9 He that turneth away his ears from hearing the law, his prayer shall be an abomination.

10 He that deceiveth the just in a wicked way, shall fall in his own destruction: and the upright shall possess his goods.

11 The rich man seemeth to himself wise: but the poor man that is prudent shall search him out.

12 In the joy of the just there is great glory: when the wicked reign, men are ruined.

13 He that hideth his sins, shall not prosper: but he that shall confess, and forsake them, shall obtain mercy.

14 Blessed is the man that is always fearful: but he that is hardened in mind shall fall into evil.

15 As a roaring lion, and a hungry bear, so is a wicked prince over the poor people.

16 A prince void of prudence shall oppress many by calumny: but he that hateth covetousness, shall prolong his days.

17 A man that doth violence to the blood of a person, if he flee even to the pit, no man will stay him.

18 He that walketh uprightly, shall be saved: he that is perverse in his ways, shall fall at once.

19 *He that tilleth his ground, shall be filled with bread: but he that followeth idleness, shall be filled with poverty.

* 1 Tim. vi. 8.—^b Supra, xix. 1.—^c Supra, xli. 11; Eccl. xx. 30.

20 A faithful man shall be much praised: *but he that maketh haste to be rich, shall not be innocent.

21 He that hath respect to a person in judgment, doth not well: such a man even for a morsel of bread forsaketh the truth.

22 A man that maketh haste to be rich, and envieth others, is ignorant that poverty shall come upon him.

23 He that rebuketh a man, shall afterward find favour with him, more than he that by a flattering tongue deceiveth him.

24 He that stealeth any thing from his father, or from his mother: and saith, This is no sin, is the partner of a murderer.

25 He that boasteth and puffeth up himself, stirreth up quarrels: but he that trusteth in the Lord, shall be healed.

26 He that trusteth in his own heart, is a fool: but he that walketh wisely, he shall be saved.

27 He that giveth to the poor, shall not want: he that despiseth his entreaty, shall suffer indigence.

28 When the wicked rise up, men shall hide themselves: when they perish, the just shall be multiplied.

CHAP. XXIX.

THE man that with a stiff neck despiseth him that reproveth him, shall suddenly be destroyed: and health shall not follow him.

2 When just men increase, the people shall rejoice: when the wicked shall bear rule, the people shall mourn.

3 A man that loveth wisdom, rejoiceth his father: but he that maintaineth harlots, shall squander away his substance.

4 A just king setteth up the land: a covetous man shall destroy it.

5 A man that speaketh to his friend with flattering and dissembling words, spreadeth a net for his feet.

6 A snare shall entangle the wicked man when he sinneth: and the just shall praise and rejoice.

7 The just taketh notice of the cause of the poor: the wicked is void of knowledge.

8 Corrupt men bring a city to ruin: but wise men turn away wrath.

9 If a wise man contend with a fool, whether he be angry, or laugh, he shall find no rest.

10 Bloodthirsty men hate the upright: but just men seek his soul.

11 A fool uttereth all his mind: a wise man deferreth, and keepeth it till afterwards.

12 A prince that gladly heareth lying words, hath all his servants wicked.

VER. 9. Rest; or bring him to hear reason. C.

VER. 10. Soul. They wish to protect the upright. Psal. cxli. 5.

13 *The poor man and the creditor have met one another: the Lord is the enlightener of them both.

14 The king that judgeth the poor in truth, his throne shall be established for ever.

15 *The rod and reproof give wisdom: but the child that is left to his own will, bringeth his mother to shame.

16 When the wicked are multiplied, crimes shall be multiplied: but the just shall see their downfall.

17 Instruct thy son and he shall refresh thee, and shall give delight to thy soul.

18 When prophecy shall fail, the people shall be scattered abroad: but he that keepeth the law, is blessed.

19 A slave will not be corrected by words: because he understandeth what thou sayest, and will not answer.

20 Hast thou seen a man hasty to speak? folly is rather to be looked for, than his amendment.

21 He that nourisheth his servant delicately from his childhood, afterwards shall find him stubborn.

22 A passionate man provoketh quarrels: and he that is easily stirred up to wrath, shall be more prone to sin.

23 *Humiliation followeth the proud: and glory shall uphold the humble of spirit.

24 He that is partaker with a thief, hateth his own soul: he heareth one putting him to his oath, and discovereth not.

25 He that feareth man shall quickly fall: he that trusteth in the Lord, shall be set on high.

26 Many seek the face of the prince: but the judgment of every one cometh forth from the Lord.

27 The just abhor a wicked man: and the wicked loathe them that are in the right way.

The son that keepeth the word, shall be free from destruction.

CHAP. XXX.

The wise man thinketh humbly of himself. His prayer, and sentiments upon certain virtues and vices.

THE words of Gatherer, the son of Vomiter. The vision which the man spoke, with whom God is, and who being strengthened by God, abiding with him, said:

VER. 20. Amendment. S. Jerom (ad Evag.) says, after Thucydides: "Ignorance produces confidence, and learning fear."

VER. 24. Soul, and exposeth himself to death, though this was only inflicted for stealing a man. Exod. xxi. 16.

VER. 25 Fall. Human respects will not long preserve him from sin. C.—Sept. have a double version: "Those who fear and are ashamed of men, shall be thrown down. But he who confideth in the Lord shall rejoice. Impiety overturneth man, while he who trusteth in the Lord shall be saved." Grabe. H.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Gatherer, &c., or, as it is in the Latin, Congregans, the son of Vomens. The Latin interpreter has given us in this place the signification of the Hebrew names, instead of the names themselves, which are in the Hebrew, Agur, the son of Jakeh. But whether this Agur be the same person as Solomon, as many think, or a different person, whose doctrine was adopted by Solomon, and inserted among his parables or proverbs, is uncertain. Ch.—De Dieu translates, "The words of him who is recollected the son of obedience."—Vision. Heb. massa (H.) generally implies something disagreeable, but here it is put for a collection of moral sentences.—With, &c. Heb. also, "to Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal," (Prot. H.) friends of Agur, (C.) or his children, (M.) or rather Solomon speaks to all the faithful. W.

3 I have not learned wisdom, and have not known the science of saints.

4 Who hath ascended up into heaven, and descended? who hath held the wind in his hands? who hath bound up the waters together as in a garment? who hath raised up all the borders of the earth? what is his name, and what is the name of his son, if thou knowest?

5 *Every word of God is fire-tried: he is a buckler to them that hope in him.

6 *Add not any thing to his words, lest thou be reprov'd and found a liar:

7 Two things I have asked of thee, deny them not to me before I die.

8 Remove far from me vanity, and lying words. Give me neither beggary, nor riches: give me only the necessities of life:

9 Lest perhaps being filled, I should be tempted to deny, and say: Who is the Lord? or being compelled by poverty, I should steal, and forswear the name of my God.

10 Accuse not a servant to his master, lest he curse thee, and thou fall.

11 There is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 A generation, that are pure in their own eyes, and yet are not washed from their filthiness.

13 A generation, whose eyes are lofty, and their eyelids lifted up on high.

14 A generation that for teeth hath swords, and grindeth with their jaw teeth, to devour the needy from off the earth, and the poor from among men.

15 The horse-leech hath two daughters that say: Bring, bring.

There are three things that never are satisfied, and the fourth never saith: It is enough.

16 Hell and the mouth of the womb, and the earth which is not satisfied with water: and the fire never saith: It is enough.

17 The eye that mocketh at his father, and that despiseth the labour of his mother in bearing him, let the ravens of the brooks pick it out, and the young eagles eat it.

18 Three things are hard to me, and the fourth I am utterly ignorant of.

VER. 2. With me. He speaks of what he could claim of his own, abstracting from the prophetic light. C.—In his humility he supposeth that others are more perfect. The wisest know best their own defects. W.

VER. 4. Descended. How then could I acquire such a sublime science? Deut. xxx. 11. C.—Christ alone could impart it, (John iii. 13. H.) who is the perfect wisdom. W.—Hands. Sept. "breast." H.—It is no less difficult to fathom the designs of Providence. Some understand the "spirit" of prophecy to be here meant.—Son. Sept. "children." But many Greek copies, and all the interpreters, have Son, which the Fathers explain of the second person of the blessed Trinity, specified chap. viii. 22. C.

VER. 8. Words, which are so opposite to thine. Ver. 5.—Riches. The former often prompts men to deceive, the latter to grow proud and forget God.

VER. 10. Accuse. Sept. "deliver not" to an idolater. Deut. xxiii. 15. Rabbin.—Servant. Add not to his affliction. W.

VER. 15. The horse-leech: concupiscence, which hath two daughters that are never satisfied, viz. lust and avarice. Ch.

VER. 16. Womb. Sept. "the love of a woman," (H.) a harlot, or rather Heb. "a barren woman."—Enough. The more fuel, the brighter the flame. These four similitudes may denote cruelty, lust, avarice, and prodigality (C.); or the first and last may be understood (H.) of envy and ambition. W.

VER. 17. Labour. Sept., &c. "old age." Heb. "the obedience or admonition." Those who cursed their parents were sentenced to death. Lev. xx. 6.

VER. 19. Youth. Heb. "a virgin." The "conception of a mighty man"

19 The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock, the way of a ship in the midst of the sea, and the way of a man in youth.

20 Such also is the way of an adulterous woman, who eateth and wipeth her mouth, and saith: I have done no evil.

21 By three things the earth is disturbed, and the fourth it cannot bear.

22 By a slave when he reigneth: by a fool when he is filled with meat:

23 By an odious woman when she is married: and by a bond-woman when she is heir to her mistress.

24 There are four very little things of the earth, and they are wiser than the wise.

25 The ants, a feeble people, which provide themselves food in the harvest:—

26 The rabbit, a weak people, which maketh its bed in the rock:

27 The locust hath no king, yet they all go out by their bands:

28 The stellio supporteth itself on hands, and dwelleth in kings' houses.

29 There are three things, which go well, and the fourth that walketh happily:

30 A lion, the strongest of beasts, who hath no fear of any thing he meeteth:

31 A cock girded about the loins: and a ram: and a king, whom none can resist.

32 There is that hath appeared a fool after he was lifted up on high: for if he had understood, he would have laid his hand upon his mouth.

33 And he that strongly squeezeth the paps to bring out milk, straineth out butter: and he that violently bloweth his nose, bringeth out blood: and he that provoketh wrath, bringeth forth strife.

VER. 32. Mouth. Fools ought not to govern. W. C.—Heb. "If thou hast acted foolishly in raising thyself, and if thou hast entertained evil thoughts, put thy hand to thy mouth." H.—Chal. "put not thy," &c. Give not way to pride, or to insolent language. C.

VER. 33. And. Heb. "For he who presseth milk." C.—Prot. "Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter," &c. H.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 1. Lamuel. This name signifies God with him; and is supposed to be one of the names of Solomon. Ch.—Mother; Bethsabee, who it seems was inspired, unless she received these maxims from Nathan. Solomon always speaks of her with the utmost respect, as a prudent mother may have

2 What, O my beloved, what, O the beloved of my womb, what, O the beloved of my vows?

3 Give not thy substance to women, and thy riches to destroy kings.

4 Give not to kings, O Lamuel, give not wine to kings: because there is no secret where drunkenness reigneth:

5 And lest they drink and forget judgments, and prevent the cause of the children of the poor.

6 Give strong drink to them that are sad, and wine to them that are grieved in mind:

7 Let them drink, and forget their want, and remember their sorrows no more.

8 Open thy mouth for the dumb, and for the causes of all their children that pass.

9 Open thy mouth, decree that which is just, and do justice to the needy and poor.

10 Who shall find a valiant woman? far, and from the uttermost coasts is the price of her.

11 The heart of her husband trusteth in her, and he shall have no need of spoils.

12 She will render him good, and not evil all the days of her life.

13 She hath sought wool and flax, and hath wrought by the counsel of her hands.

14 She is like the merchant's ship, she bringeth her bread from afar.

15 And she hath risen in the night, and given a prey to her household, and victuals to her maidens.

16 She hath considered a field, and bought it: with the fruit of her hands she hath planted a vineyard.

17 She hath girded her loins with strength, and hath strengthened her arm.

18 She hath tasted, and seen that her traffic is good. her lamp shall not be put out in the night.

19 She hath put out her hand to strong things, and her fingers have taken hold of the spindle.

20 She hath opened her hand to the needy, and stretched out her hands to the poor.

21 She shall not fear for her house in the cold of snow: for all her domestics are clothed with double garments.

the greatest influence over the tender minds of her children. Chap. i. 8, and xxiii. 25.

VER. 3. Women. This would destroy thy health, and tend to impoverish the kingdom.—Kings, by injustice and ambition. C.

VER. 6. Drink. Heb. ssacor, particularly palm-wine.—Are sad. Heb. "perish," being sentenced to die (Mark xv. 23; Amos ii. 8); or, who grieve and mourn for one deceased. On such occasions no food was prepared in the house, but the friends supplied what was necessary, and went to eat and drink with the afflicted. Eccles. vii. 3.

VER. 7. More. Not that intoxication is permitted even to them.

VER. 8. Pass through life, or the country. C.—Sept. "Open thy mouth and judge righteously. Render justice to the poor and weak." H.—Doctrine is best received by those who are more ready to hear than to speak. W.

VER. 10. Who. The following verses are in alphabetical order. They contain a grand eulogy of Bethsabee, who repented, or of a perfect matron. C.—Valiant; industrious.—Price. Formerly people bought their wives. C.—Is. Heb. "is far above rubies (Prot. H.) or pearls." Lam. iv. 7.

VER. 11. Spoils, taken in war. His wife will supply all necessities. Var. 21.

VER. 13. Hands, with skill and industry, (C.) or "willingness." Heb. M.—Ladies of the highest quality formerly employed themselves in this manner, like Penelope.

VER. 14. Bread; all that is used for meat and drink. Sept. "riches." Grabe, "livelihood." šūv. H.

VER. 15. Night, or early in the morning, as soon as the night was over; as nocte. Heb. "while it is yet night." H.

VER. 16. Considered. This conduct is suggested by prudence. C.

VER. 17. Arm; working, and making others obey.

VER. 18. Night, during a great part of which she will work.

VER. 19. Strong things, "becoming" (Sept.) her station. C.

22 She hath made for herself clothing of tapestry : fine linen, and purple, is her covering.

23 Her husband is honourable in the gates, when he sitteth among the senators of the land.

24 She made fine linen, and sold it, and delivered a girdle to the Chanaanite.

25 Strength and beauty are her clothing, and she shall laugh in the latter day.

26 She hath opened her mouth to wisdom, and the law of clemency is on her tongue.

VER. 21. Domestics. Heb. "house is clothed in purple," which may be understood of the domestics, though it seems more probably to refer to her husband and children.

VER. 23. Gates. Chal. "provinces." The rich were chosen for judges. C.

VER. 24. The Chanaanite, the merchant; for Chanaanite, in Hebrew, signifies a merchant. Ch.—The Phœnicians travelled into all countries. Traffic was not then deemed a discredit even to kings.—Girdles were worn both by men and women, and were very costly.

VER. 25. Clothing: it is very beautiful, or wisdom and virtue surround her.

Day. She fears not death, (C.) or future distress of hunger, &c. Jans.

VER. 26. Tongue. She is ever bent on doing good. H.

27 She hath looked well on the paths of her house, and hath not eaten her bread idle.

28 Her children rose up, and called her blessed: her husband, and he praised her.

29 Many daughters have gathered together riches: thou hast surpassed them all.

30 Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: the woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.

31 Give her of the fruit of her hands: and let her works praise her in the gates.

VER. 28. Her. They were best able to judge of her merit.

VER. 30. Lord. Hitherto natural qualifications appear: but to these the Christian matron must add sincere piety: and thus Solomon completes the character of his mother, (C.) who had given him such excellent instructions, or of any accomplished woman. Outward beauty soon (H.) decays; but the fear of God is more deserving of praise. W.

VER. 31. Gates, before all the judges (H.) and people. M.—Good works shall be rewarded at God's tribunal, (W.) when the vain worldly beauty shall be covered with confusion. H.—The use of the alphabet herein denotes that we must begin with a moral good life, if we would penetrate the greater mysteries of the Scriptures. S. Jerom. Lam.

ECCLIESIASTES.

This Book is called Ecclesiastes, or the preacher, (in Hebrew, Cokeleth,) because in it Solomon, as an excellent preacher, setteth forth the vanity of the things of this world, to withdraw the hearts and affections of men from such empty toys. Ch.—It is generally supposed that Solomon wrote this after his repentance; but this is very uncertain. S. Jerom (in chap. xii. 12) informs us that the collectors of the sacred books had some scruple about admitting this; and Luther speaks of it with great disrespect (Coll. Conv.): but the Church has always maintained its authority. See Conc. v. Aet 4. Philast. 132. C.—It refutes the false notions of worldlings concerning felicity; and shows that it consists in the service and fruition of God. W.

CHAPTER I.

The vanity of all temporal things.

THE words of Ecclesiastes, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 Vanity of vanities, said Ecclesiastes: vanity of vanities, and all is vanity.

3 What hath a man more of all his labour, that he taketh under the sun?

4 One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth standeth for ever.

5 The sun riseth and goeth down, and returneth to his place: and there rising again,

6 Maketh his round by the South, and turneth again to the North: the spirit goeth forward, surveying all places round about, and returneth to his circuits.

7 All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea doth not overflow: unto the place from whence the rivers come, they return to flow again.

8 All things are hard: man cannot explain them by word. The eye is not filled with seeing, neither is the ear filled with hearing.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Jerusalem. This clearly designates Solomon. See ver. 12, and chap. xii. 8.

VER. 2. Vanities. Most vain and despicable, (C.) and frustrating the expectations of men. M.

VER. 3. Labour. People fight for a mere point; for such is the earth, compared with the universe. Matt. xvi. 26.

VER. 4. Ever. Its substance remains, though the form be changed. C.

VER. 5. Place daily. Its annual motion is then mentioned. C.

VER. 6. Spirit. The sun, (S. Jer.) which is like the soul of the world, and which some have falsely asserted to be animated; or rather (C.) the wind is meant, as one rises in different parts of the world when another falls. Pliny, ii. 27. M

9 What is it that hath been? the same thing that shall be. What is it that hath been done? the same that shall be done.

10 Nothing under the sun is new, neither is any man able to say: Behold, this is new: for it hath already gone before, in the ages that were before us.

11 There is no remembrance of former things: nor indeed of those things which hereafter are to come, shall there be any remembrance with them that shall be in the latter end.

12 I, Ecclesiastes, was king over Israel, in Jerusalem,

13 And I proposed in my mind to seek and search out wisely concerning all things that are done under the sun. This painful occupation hath God given to the children of men, to be exercised therein.

14 I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold all is vanity, and vexation of spirit.

15 The perverse are hard to be corrected, and the number of fools is infinite.

16 I have spoken in my heart, saying: Behold I am become great, and have gone beyond all in wisdom, that

VER. 10. New. Such vicissitudes have occurred before, though we must not infer that the world is eternal; or that there have been many others before this, as Origen would suppose. Prin. iii. 5, &c. C.—Men's souls, which are created daily, are nevertheless of the same sort as Adam's was; and creatures proceed from others of the same species, which have been from the beginning. S. Tho. p. 1, q. 73. W.

VER. 12. Israel. This was the case with none of Solomon's descendants. C.

VER. 14. Vexation. Heb. also, "food of wind" (Sym.); or "choice of the spirit." Sept. People are eager to become learned, and yet find no satisfaction. H.—All natural things are insufficient to procure felicity. W.

VER. 15. Perverse. Habitual and obstinate sinners. C.—Fools, who follow were before me in Jerusalem: and my mind hath contemplated many things wisely, and I have learned.

17 And I have given my heart to know prudence, and learning, and errors, and folly: and I have perceived that in these also there was labour, and vexation of spirit,

18 Because in much wisdom there is much indignation: and he that addeth knowledge, addeth also labour.

CHAP. II.

The vanity of pleasures, riches, and worldly labours.

I SAID in my heart: I will go, and abound with delights, and enjoy good things. And I saw that this also was vanity.

2 Laughter I counted error: and to mirth I said: Why art thou vainly deceived?

3 I thought in my heart, to withdraw my flesh from wine, that I might turn my mind to wisdom, and might avoid folly. till I might see what was profitable for the children of men: and what they ought to do under the sun, all the days of their life.

4 I made me great works, I built me houses, and planted vineyards.

5 I made gardens, and orchards, and set them with trees of all kinds.

6 And I made me ponds of water, to water therewith the wood of the young trees.

7 I got me men-servants, and maid-servants, and had a great family: and herds of oxen, and great flocks of sheep, above all that were before me in Jerusalem:

8 I heaped together for myself silver and gold, and the wealth of kings, and provinces: I made me singing men, and singing women, and the delights of the sons of men, cups and vessels to serve to pour out wine:

9 And I surpassed in riches all that were before me in Jerusalem: my wisdom also remained with me.

10 And whatsoever my eyes desired, I refused them not: and I withheld not my heart from enjoying every pleasure, and delighting itself in the things which I had prepared: and esteemed this my portion, to make use of in my own labour.

11 And when I turned myself to all the works which my hands had wrought, and to the labours wherein I had laboured in vain, I saw in all things vanity, and vexation of mind, and that nothing was lasting under the sun.

12 I passed further to behold wisdom, and errors, and folly, (What is man, said I, that he can follow the King, his Maker?)

13 And I saw that wisdom excelled folly, as much as light differeth from darkness

14 The eyes of a wise man are in his head: the fool walketh in darkness: and I learned that they were to die both alike.

15 And I said in my heart: If the death of the fool and mine shall be one, what doth it avail me, that I have applied myself more to the study of wisdom? And speaking with my own mind, I perceived that this also was vanity.

16 For there shall be no remembrance of the wise no more than of the fool for ever, and the times to come shall cover all things together with oblivion: the learned dieth in like manner as the unlearned.

17 And, therefore, I was weary of my life, when I saw that all things under the sun are evil, and all vanity, and vexation of spirit.

18 Again I hated all my application, wherewith I had earnestly laboured under the sun, being like to have an heir after me, 19 Whom I know not whether he will be a wise man or a fool, and he shall have rule over all my labours with which I have laboured and been solicitous: and is there any thing so vain?

20 Wherefore I left off, and my heart renounced labouring any more under the sun.

21 For when a man laboureth in wisdom, and knowledge, and carefulness, he leaveth what he hath gotten to an idle man: so this also is vanity, and a great evil.

22 For what profit shall a man have of all his labour, and vexation of spirit, with which he hath been tormented under the sun?

23 All his days are full of sorrows and miseries, even in the night he doth not rest in mind: and is not this vanity?

24 Is it not better to eat and drink, and to show his the broad road. H.—Heb. and Sept. “the defect cannot be numbered.” We know not to what a height the soul of man might have risen if he had continued faithful.

VER. 17. Errors. Sept. “parables and science.” But to discern the mistakes of men is a part of wisdom, (C.) and Grabe substitutes “wanderings,” instead of “parables,” after Theodot., as Heb. calluth (H.) means “errors,” (C.) or “follies.” Mont.

VER. 18. Labour. He is bound to do more for heaven, as he is convinced of his own defects, and of the strict judgments of God. W.—The more a person knows the more he is convinced of his own ignorance, (C.) and filled with grief, that wisdom should be so much concealed. S. Jer.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Delights. He speaks in the name of libertines, (S. Greg. Dial. iv. 4,) or after his conversion. C.

VER. 2. Why. Heb. “What doth that?” Sept. “Why dost thou so?” Immoderate laughter is a sign of folly. Eccli. xxi. 23. C.—“Even spiritual joy is a temptation.” S. Jer.

VER. 3. Wine, and to lead a temperate life. C.—Prot. “to give myself unto wine, (yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom,) and to lay hold on folly,” &c. H.—I wished to indulge myself in pleasure, yet so as not to lose the reputation of wisdom. C. Ver. 9. H.

VER. 4. Works; palaces, towns, and particularly the temple.

VER. 7. Family of slaves, “born in my house,” (Prot.), distinct from those whom I got for money. H.—They were generally procured from foreign nations, as the Hebrews obtained their liberty on the sabbatic year.—Sheep. David had the like; but Solomon had also horses. 3 Kings x. 21.

VER. 8. Silver, which became, in consequence, of little value.—Cups and vessels; (Aq. and Sym.), or, “men and women to,” &c. Sept. or “a field and fields” (C.); or Prot. “as musical instruments, and that of all sorts.” Heb. ssode ussuth. H.

VER. 9. Wisdom, not that which was supernatural, and could not be found amid such delights. Ver. 3; James iii. 17. I knew that all this was vanity. C.

VER. 10. Labour. Heb. “and this was my portion of all my labour.” I perceived that I could not thus obtain content. C.—“Thou (O God) hast made us for thyself, and our hearts are restless till they repose in thee.” S. Aug. Conf. i. 1. M.

VER. 12. What. Heb. “For what man shall come after the king?” Sept. “after counsel?”—Man’s wisdom compared with God’s is contemptible; though it be preferable to folly. M.

VER. 14. Darkness and ignorance. He knows not whither he is going. Prov. iv. 19, and xvii. 24. Wisdom is to be preferred before wealth, &c. C.—A. He. Thus worldlings speak, who reflect not on the life to come. W.—In many respects all resemble one another, though their sentence be very different. M.

VER. 15. Vanity. This inference was false, (ver. 16,) or my labouring for wisdom was to no purpose. C.—Sept. “I then spoke more in my heart, (for the fool speaks out of his abundance,) since this also is vanity.” H.

VER. 16. Unlearned. He answers, (Jans.), or rather continues the objections. Geier. C.

VER. 19. Solicitous. We naturally desire to have our plans perfected.

VER. 20. Off, in a sort of despair; suggested by worldly wisdom. Religion alone can impart steady principles. C.—Prot. “I went about, to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun;” in the transactions of the world. H.

VER. 21. Wisdom. Idle heirs dissipate the possessions, which had been accumulated with such industry. C.

soul good things of his labours? and this is from the hand of God.

25 Who shall so feast and abound with delights as I?

26 God hath given to a man that is good in his sight, wisdom and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he hath given vexation, and superfluous care, to heap up and to gather together, and to give it to him that hath pleased God: but this also is vanity, and a fruitless solicitude of the mind.

CHAP. III.

All human things are liable to perpetual changes. We are to rest on God's providence, and cast away fruitless cares.

ALL things have their season, and in their times all things pass under heaven.

2 A time to be born, and a time to die. A time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted.

3 A time to kill, and a time to heal. A time to destroy, and a time to build.

4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh. A time to mourn, and a time to dance.

5 A time to scatter stones, and a time to gather. A time to embrace, and a time to be far from embraces.

6 A time to get, and a time to lose. A time to keep, and a time to cast away.

7 A time to rend, and a time to sew. A time to keep silence, and a time to speak.

8 A time of love, and a time of hatred. A time of war, and a time of peace.

9 What hath man more of his labour?

10 I have seen the trouble, which God hath given the sons of men, to be exercised in it.

11 He hath made all things good in their time, and hath delivered the world to their consideration, so that man cannot find out the work which God hath made from the beginning to the end.

12 And I have known that there was no better thing than to rejoice, and to do well in this life.

13 For every man that eateth and drinketh, and seeth good of his labour, this is the gift of God.

14 I have learned that all the works which God hath made, continue for ever: we cannot add any thing, nor take away from those things which God hath made, that he may be feared.

15 That which hath been made, the same continueth:

VER. 24. Drink, using with moderation the things which we have acquired, rather than to be solicitous for more, (W.) which may fall into the hands of an idle heir, who is appointed by God. VER. 26. This may also be the plea of libertines, (C.) who would use freely what he has given. S. Aug. con. Jul. iv. 3.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Heaven, in this world, where alone things change. S. Jer.—The heart must not be attached to any thing created. C.

VER. 5. Stones, with a sling, or to render a field useless. 4 Kings iii. 25; Isa. v. 2.

VER. 11. Consideration. Lit. "dispute." Heb. and Sept. "heart." H.—"He has implanted the desire of immortality in their hearts."

VER. 12. Well; virtuously; or, perhaps, as literally, to enjoy himself. VER. 13. C.—Thus thinks the man of pleasure. Isa. xxii. 31. S. Jer.

VER. 13. God. He gives peace and plenty; and still more, the grace to use these things, so as to obtain heaven. C.

VER. 14. Feared. The order of the seasons, &c. teaches men to adore Providence. S. Jer.—He has arranged every thing, how mutable soever. S. Aug. Conf. i. 6.

VER. 15. Past. He causes plants to spring forth afresh. Heb., Sept., &c., "But will God seek after the oppressed?" Here commences another objection. C.

VER. 17. And then. Prot. "for there is a time there (ver. 1) for every purpose, and for every work." At the day of judgment all will receive their due. H.

VER. 18. Beasts. Another doubt; or suggestion of infidels. S. Greg. Dial. iv. 4.

VER. 19. Man hath nothing more, &c., viz. as to the life of the body. Ch.

the things that shall be, have already been: and God re storeth that which is past.

16 I saw under the sun in the place of judgment wickedness, and in the place of justice, iniquity.

17 And I said in my heart: God shall judge both the just and the wicked, and then shall be the time of every thing.

18 I said in my heart concerning the sons of men, that God would prove them, and show them to be like beasts.

19 Therefore the death of man, and of beasts is one, and the condition of them both is equal: as man dieth, so they also die: all things breathe alike, and man hath nothing more than beast: all things are subject to vanity,

20 And all things go to one place: of earth they were made, and into earth they return together.

21 Who knoweth if the spirit of the children of Adam ascend upward, and if the spirit of the beasts descend downward?

22 And I have found that nothing is better than for a man to rejoice in his work, and that this is his portion. For who shall bring him to know the things that shall be after him?

CHAP. IV.

Other instances of human miseries.

ITURNED myself to other things, and I saw the oppressions that are done under the sun, and the tears of the innocent, and they had no comforter: and they were not able to resist their violence, being destitute of help from any.

2 And I praised the dead rather than the living:

3 And I judged him happier than them both, that is not yet born, nor hath seen the evils that are done under the sun.

4 Again I considered all the labours of men, and I remarked that their industries are exposed to the envy of their neighbour: so in this also there is vanity, and fruitless care.

5 The fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh, saying:

6 Better is a handful with rest, than both hands full with labour, and vexation of mind.

7 Considering I found also another vanity under the sun:

8 There is but one, and he hath not a second, no child,

VER. 21. Who knoweth, &c., viz. experimentally; since no one in this life can see a spirit. But as to the spirit of the beasts, which is merely animal, and becomes extinct by the death of the beast, who can tell the manner it acts so as to give life and motion, and by death to descend downward, that is, to be no more? Ch.

VER. 22. After him. He knows not who shall be his heir, or how soon he may die. None returns from the other world to inform him of what is there transacted. Thus the libertine encourages himself. C.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Any. God suffereth the innocent to be oppressed for a time, that they may merit a greater reward. Psal. lxxii.

VER. 3. Born. It is better to have no existence than to be in eternal misery. Matt. xxvi. 24. But the affliction of the just procureth glory for them. W.—Religion has in view the danger of sin, and the desire of eternal happiness. Rom. vii. 24.

VER. 4. Industries, or Heb. "righteous actions." If one be poor, he is in distress; if rich, he is exposed to envy: so that all is vanity. C.

VER. 5. Flesh, which he will not labour to sustain (H.); or he repines at his own past misconduct, and at the affluence of others.

VER. 6. Mind. These are the words of the slothful, (C.) or of truth. H. Prov. xvii. 1.—The indolent will not observe moderation in the application of this sentence. M.

VER. 9. Therefore is not in Heb., &c. The miser had better have some so no brother, and yet he ceaseth not to labour, neither are his eyes satisfied with riches, neither doth he reflect, saying: For whom do I labour, and defraud my soul of good things? in this also is vanity, and a grievous vexation.

9 It is better, therefore, that two should be together, than one: for they have the advantage of their society:

10 If one fall, he shall be supported by the other: woe to him that is alone, for when he falleth, he hath none to lift him up.

11 And if two lie together, they shall warm one another: how shall one alone be warmed?

12 And if a man prevail against one, two shall withstand him: a threefold cord is not easily broken.

13 Better is a child that is poor and wise, than a king that is old and foolish, who knoweth not to foresee for hereafter.

14 Because out of prison and chains sometimes a man cometh forth to a kingdom: and another born king is consumed with poverty.

15 I saw all men living, that walk under the sun with the second young man, who shall rise up in his place.

16 The number of the people, of all that were before him, is infinite: and they that shall come afterwards, shall not rejoice in him: but this also is vanity, and vexation of spirit.

17 Keep thy foot, when thou goest into the house of God, and draw nigh to hear. *For much better is obedience, than the victims of fools, who know not what evil they do.

CHAP. V.

Caution in words. Vows are to be paid. Riches are often pernicious: the moderate use of them is the gift of God.

SPEAK not any thing rashly, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter a word before God. For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.

2 Dreams follow many cares: and in many words shall be found folly.

3 If thou hast vowed any thing to God, defer not to pay it: for an unfaithful and foolish promise displeaseth him: but whatsoever thou hast vowed, pay it:

4 And it is much better not to vow, than after a vow not to perform the things promised.

ciety. It is advantageous; though to refrain from its comforts, out of piety, is not blamed. The solitary must be "an angel or a devil." C.

VER. 10. Fall into sickness, poverty, or sin. The saints have withdrawn people from the dangers of the world into monasteries, where they may fight together against the devil.

VER. 12. Cord. True charity increaseth in strength as it does in number, (S. Jer. W.) though friendship may not admit of more than two persons. H.

VER. 14. Prison. The exaltation of Joseph, Mardochei, and Daniel, were remarkable. C.

VER. 15. Second heir. M.—They adore the rising (Papinius) more than the setting sun (Plut. Pomp.); and a person is no sooner on the throne than his successor begins to be courted (ver. 16): so inconstant are mortal! C.

VER. 16. In him. Many are perfectly unacquainted with the king, who finds so many admirers about his person, and even of these the greater part begin to be presently disgusted, and wish for another change.

VER. 17. Keep. Here many begin the fifth chap., as Solomon alters his style, and gives many important instructions. C.—For. Heb. "rather than that fools should offer sacrifice, since they know not that they are doing wrong." Mont.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Few. As none can arrive at the perfect knowledge of God, they should be reserved in speaking of Him. W.

VER. 2. Folly. Under anxiety a person is naturally disturbed with dreams, in which some true ideas may present themselves; in like manner, as a great talker will say some things respecting God which may not be reprehensible, though the greatest part of his discourse will be nothing to the purpose. C.

5 Give not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin: and say not before the angel: There is no providence: lest God be angry at thy words, and destroy all the works of thy hands.

6 Where there are many dreams, there are many vanities, and words without number: but do thou fear God.

7 If thou shalt see the oppressions of the poor, and the violent judgments, and justice perverted in the province, wonder not at this matter: for he that is high hath another higher, and there are others still higher than these.

8 Moreover, there is the king that reigneth over all the land subject to him.

9 A covetous man shall not be satisfied with money: and he that loveth riches, shall reap no fruit from them so this also is vanity.

10 Where there are great riches, there are also many to eat them. And what doth it profit the owner, but that he seeth the riches with his eyes?

11 Sleep is sweet to the labouring man, whether he eat little or much: but the fulness of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

12 ^bThere is also another grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: riches kept to the hurt of the owner.

13 For they are lost with very great affliction: he hath begotten a son, who shall be in extremity of want.

14 ^cAs he came forth naked from his mother's womb, so shall he return, and shall take nothing away with him of his labour.

15 A most deplorable evil: as he came, so shall he return. What then doth it profit him that he hath laboured for the wind?

16 All the days of his life he eateth in darkness, and in many cares, and in misery, and sorrow.

17 This, therefore, hath seemed good to me, that a man should eat and drink, and enjoy the fruit of his labour, wherewith he hath laboured under the sun, all the days of his life, which God hath given him: and this is his portion.

18 And every man to whom God hath given riches, and substance, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to enjoy his portion, and to rejoice of his labour: this is the gift of God.

^b Job xx. 20.—^c Job i. 21; 1 Tim. vi. 7.

VER. 3. Pay it. Deut. xxiii. Vows must be fulfilled. W.—God requires that we should keep the commandments (Luke x. 28); and if we engage ourselves to perform some work of supererogation, he expects that we should be faithful. To vow is of counsel; but to comply with it is of precept. C.

VER. 5. Sin, by making a vow above thy strength, (Chal. Pineda,) or by speaking what may excite the passions. Thaum. Boss.—Angel guardian assigned to each one, (W.) or the priest, who took cognizance of vows. C.—Providence, or "foresight" in me to avoid the evil. Heb. and Sept. "it is an error," (H.) or sin of ignorance, for which certain victims were specified. Lev. v. 4. C.

VER. 6. Number. Those who observe dreams are filled with apprehension. C.—As dreams are vain, so are many words or excuses to evade a vow. Jun. Grot.

VER. 8. Him. An appeal may be made to the king, or to God.—Heb. "the king serves, (Mont.), or is served by the field." Prot. H.—All have a mutual dependence on each other, and thus the vanity of men and the order of Providence appear. C.

VER. 10. Them. He shows the vanity of the great.

VER. 12. Owner. When they are taken away they bring greater sorrow, (C.) and even when present they fill the mind with anxiety. H.

VER. 13. Affliction. Heb. "by an evil affair," or accident. C.—Who. Heb. "and there is nothing in his hand." H.

VER. 14. Labour. All must die in this manner. But it is most afflicting that he was formerly rich, and must leave his son indigent. C.

VER. 16. Sorrow. The person whose riches have been taken away had made a bad use of them, (H.) living like a miser. C.

19 For he shall not much remember the days of his life, because God entertaineth his heart with delight.

CHAP. VI.

The misery of the covetous man.

THERE is also another evil, which I have seen under the sun, and that frequent among men :

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, and substance, and honour, and his soul wanteth nothing of all that he desireth : yet God doth not give him power to eat thereof, but a stranger shall eat it up. This is vanity, and a great misery.

3 If a man beget a hundred children, and live many years, and attain to a great age, and his soul make no use of the goods of his substance, and he be without burial : of this man I pronounce, that the untimely born is better than he.

4 For he came in vain, and goeth to darkness, and his name shall be wholly forgotten.

5 He hath not seen the sun, nor known the distance of good and evil :

6 Although he lived two thousand years, and hath not enjoyed good things : do not all make haste to one place ?

7 All the labour of man is for his mouth : but his soul shall not be filled.

8 What hath the wise man more than the fool ? and what the poor man, but to go thither, where there is life ?

9 Better it is to see what thou mayest desire, than to desire that which thou canst not know. But this also is vanity, and presumption of spirit.

10 He that shall be, his name is already called : and it is known that he is man, and cannot contend in judgment with him that is stronger than himself.

11 There are many words that have much vanity in disputing.

CHAP. VII.

Prescriptions against worldly vanities : mortification, patience, and seeking wisdom.

WHAT needeth a man to seek things that are above him, whereas he knoweth not, what is profitable

^a 1 Kings xiii. 14, and 3 Kings xiii. 2.

VER. 19. Delight, while he observes due moderation. His life passes away sweetly. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. Thereof. The proper use of riches is rare. C.—Misery. Riches do not make people happy. W.

VER. 3. Than he, since the latter has injured no one, nor experienced any evil in the world, (C.) by his own fault (M.); whereas the miser has both hurt himself and others, and has neglected to make himself friends of the mammon of iniquity.

VER. 4. He. The infant, though some explain it of the miser. C.

VER. 7. Mouth. We are always providing food. S. Jer.—The rich are wholly bent on pleasure : or the poor cannot get a sufficiency.

VER. 8. Life. The wise poor shall be blessed. Heb. “the poor knowing how to walk before the living,” (H.) in society, (C.) among the saints. H.

VER. 9. Know. Enjoyment has the advantage over hope. Heb. “better is the sight of the eyes than the going of the soul,” which denotes her desires. C.—Presumption. Heb. “vexation.” H.

VER. 11. Disputing. Are we better acquainted with nature than former ages ? This is another subject of confusion. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Above him. We are intent on things which regard us not, while we neglect the important concerns of heaven. Heb. may be joined with the preceding. C.—Prot. (11) “seeing there are many things which increase vanity, what is man the better ? (12) for who knoweth ?” &c. II.

VER. 2. Name. “It is necessary for the sake of others,” (S. Aug. de B. Vid. 22,) particularly for those who have to direct souls. S. Greg. in Ezec. C.—In this second part is shown that felicity is procured by a good life. W.—Death. Speaking of the just, for death is the beginning of sorrows to the wicked. C.

VER. 4. Anger. That is, correction, or just wrath and zeal against evil, (Ch.) is preferable to a misguided complaisance. Prov. xxvii. 6. C.

for him in his life, in all the days of his pilgrimage, and the time that passeth like a shadow ? Or who can tell him what shall be after him under the sun ?

2 A good name is better than precious ointments. and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

3 It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting : for in that we are put in mind of the end of all, and the living thinketh what is to come.

4 Anger is better than laughter : because by the sadness of the countenance the mind of the offender is corrected.

5 The heart of the wise is where there is mourning, and the heart of fools where there is mirth.

6 It is better to be rebuked by a wise man, than to be deceived with the flattery of fools.

7 For as the crackling of thorns burning under a pot, so is the laughter of a fool : now this also is vanity.

8 Oppression troubleth the wise, and shall destroy the strength of his heart.

9 Better is the end of a speech than the beginning. Better is the patient man than the presumptuous.

10 Be not quickly angry : for anger resteth in the bosom of a fool.

11 Say not : What thinkest thou is the cause that former times were better than they are now ? for this manner of question is foolish.

12 Wisdom with riches is more profitable, and bringeth more advantage to them that see the sun.

13 For as wisdom is a defence, so money is a defence : but learning and wisdom excel in this, that they give life to him that possesseth them.

14 Consider the works of God, that no man can correct whom he hath despised.

15 In the good day enjoy good things, and beware beforehand of the evil day : for God hath made both the one and the other, that man may not find against him any just complaint.

16 These things also I saw in the days of my vanity : A just man perisheth in his justice, and a wicked man liveth a long time in his wickedness.

^b Prov. xxii. 1.

VER. 5. Mourning. They submit willingly to correction, (S. Jer.,) or think seriously on the dangers of sin and God's judgments.

VER. 6. Wise man. Much prudence is requisite to correct with fruit, and to persuade the sinner that he is under a mistake. C.

VER. 8. Oppression. Lit. “calumny.” The most perfect can hardly bear it. Heb. “oppression (or calumny of others. C.) will make the wise insane, and a present will ruin the heart.” Mont.—Avarice blinds us. H.—Deut. xvi. 19, “A corrupt judge examines ill the truth.”

VER. 9. Speech. Heb. “thing.” The best projects often are seen to fail.—Beginning, as the auditor is no longer kept in suspense.—Presumptuous. Rashness must not be confounded with courage. C.

VER. 10. Bosom, as in its proper place. The wise may feel its impressions, but he immediately makes resistance.

VER. 11. Foolish. Men endeavour to excuse themselves by the manners of the age. But there have always been both good and evil. Chap. i. 10. C.

VER. 12. With. Heb. also, “above, or much as riches.” C.—“These are impediments in the hands of the reprobate, while they promote virtue in the good.” S. Amb. Lu. viii. n. 85.—The man who has only wisdom, cannot do as much good as those who are also rich. C.

VER. 13. Them. Money may procure necessities for the body (H.); but wisdom gives a long and happy life. Prov. iv. 10 ; Bar. iii. 28. C.

VER. 14. Despised. God never neglects first. Trid. Ses. vi. 11.—He detests sin, and at last abandons the obstinate, though he never fails to offer sufficient graces.

VER. 15. Complaint. Prosperity and adversity succeed each other, that we may be neither elated nor dejected too much. S. Bern. Ep. 36.

VER. 16. Vanity, during this miserable life.—Wickedness. This seemed more incongruous under the old law, when long life was promised to the just, (C. Psal. lxxii. 3 ; Exod. xx. 12,) though it chiefly regarded heaven. H.

17 Be not over just: and be not more wise than is necessary, lest thou become stupid.

18 Be not overmuch wicked: and be not foolish, lest thou die before thy time.

19 It is good that thou shouldst hold up the just, yea, and from him withdraw not thy hand: for he that feareth God, neglecteth nothing.

20 Wisdom hath strengthened the wise more than ten princes of the city.

21 *For there is no just man upon earth, that doth good, and sinneth not.

22 But do not apply thy heart to all words that are spoken: lest, perhaps, thou hear thy servant reviling thee.

23 For thy conscience knoweth, that thou also hast often spoken evil of others.

24 I have tried all things in wisdom. I have said: I will be wise: and it departed farther from me.

25 Much more than it was: it is a great depth; who shall find it out?

26 I have surveyed all things with my mind, to know, and consider, and seek out wisdom, and reason: and to know the wickedness of the fool, and the error of the imprudent:

27 And I have found a woman more bitter than death, who is the hunter's snare, and her heart is a net, and her hands are bands. He that pleaseth God shall escape from her; but he that is a sinner, shall be caught by her.

28 Lo, this have I found, said Ecclesiastes, weighing one thing after another, that I might find out the account, 29 Which yet my soul seeketh, and I have not found it. One man among a thousand I have found, a woman among them all I have not found.

30 Only this I have found, that God made man right, and he hath entangled himself with an infinity of questions. Who is as the wise man? and who hath known the resolution of the word?

CHAP. VIII.

True wisdom is to observe God's commandments. The ways of God are unsearchable.

* 3 Kings viii. 46; 2 Par. vi. 26; Prov. xx. 9; 1 John i. 8.

VER. 17. Over just, viz. by an excessive rigour in censuring the ways of God in bearing with the wicked. Ch.—Give not way to scruples, (S. Bern.,) nor to self-conceit. Alcuin.—Become. Heb. "perish," being oppressed with majesty. Lorin. T. C.

VER. 18. Overmuch. Nosin can be tolerated. C.—But as all offend in many things, (ver. 21. H.) they are encouraged to rise again with diligence and sorrow.

VER. 19. From him. Who is otherwise withdrawn, &c. Heb. "take hold of this, and not neglect that: for he who feareth God, will walk with all them." Ho will avoid all extremes both of virtue and vice. C.—Prot. and Mont. "he shall come forth of them all," and advance towards heaven. H.

VER. 23. Thy. We must be satisfied with a good conscience, as we cannot control the thoughts and words of all. S. Amb. Of. i. 1.

VER. 24. Me. This is a proof of having made great progress in wisdom, since the half-learned are the most presumptuous. C.

VER. 26. Reason. Of all things. In this natural wisdom consists. Sept. "and number."

VER. 27. Her. He speaks by experience, (S. Jer.,) as none perhaps ever fell more terribly victims of impure love. C.—Though a plurality of wives was then permitted, Solomon did wrong in marrying strangers; and in suffering himself to be deluded by them, so as to erect temples to their respective idols. H.—All the attractions of women are replete with danger, and can only be overcome by God's grace, and by flight. 1 Cor. iv. 8; Prov. vii. 22, and xxii. 14. C.

VER. 29. Man. The superior part of the soul rarely thinks of good; but the sensual part always inclines to evil. W.—Solomon found danger from all women, (S. Jer.,) and there is none who may not prove fatal to those who are off their guard. C.

VER. 30. Right. He fell by his own free-will. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xiv. 11.

THE wisdom of a man shineth in his countenance, and the most mighty will change his face.

2 I observe the mouth of the king, and the commandments of the oath of God.

3 Be not hasty to depart from his face, and do not continue in an evil work: for he will do all that pleaseth him:

4 And his word is full of power: neither can any man say to him: Why dost thou so?

5 He that keepeth the commandment, shall find no evil. The heart of a wise man understandeth time and answer.

6 There is a time and opportunity for every business, and great affliction for man:

7 Because he is ignorant of things past, and things to come he cannot know by any messenger.

8 It is not in man's power to stop the spirit, neither hath he power in the day of death, neither is he suffered to rest when war is at hand, neither shall wickedness save the wicked.

9 All these things I have considered, and applied my heart to all the works that are done under the sun. Sometimes one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

10 I saw the wicked buried: who also, when they were yet living, were in the holy place, and were praised in the city as men of just works: but this also is vanity.

11 For, because sentence is not speedily pronounced against the evil, the children of men commit evils without any fear.

12 But though a sinner do evil a hundred times, and by patience be borne withal, I know from thence that it shall be well with them that fear God, who dread his face.

13 But let it not be well with the wicked, neither let his days be prolonged, but as a shadow let them pass away that fear not the face of the Lord.

14 There is also another vanity, which is done upon the earth. There are just men to whom evils happen, as though they had done the works of the wicked: and there are wicked men, who are as secure, as though they had the deeds of the just: but this also I judge most vain.

15 Therefore I commended mirth, because there was b Supra, ii. 14.

W.—The great corruption of the world is not, therefore, to be attributed to God. Eph. iv. 23. Our first parents were led by curiosity to examine whether the fruit was good, &c., (S. Cyr. Cat. 2, Chal. Boss.,) or mankind in general make useless inquiries.—And he. Heb. and Sept. "they," &c. C.—Of the word. That is, of this obscure and difficult matter, (Ch.) if this sentence have any connexion with the preceding. It is placed at the head of the next chap. in Heb. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Most. Sept. "he whose face is impudent, shall be hated." The truly wise and virtuous man is always polite and affable. C.

VER. 2. I. Prot. add, counsel thee, to keep, &c. "Obey the king and God." H. 1 Pet. ii. 17.—Solomon proposes his own example, or speaks in the name of the just.—God. The law of Moses, confirmed with an oath, or the engagement to be faithful to the king. 2 Kings v. 3; 1 Par. xxix. 24.

VER. 3. Face. This courtiers observe, while many Christians neglect God.—Work. Defend not what has been said or done amiss.

VER. 6. Man. Solomon often reminds him of his misery. Sept. and Theod. "man is possessed of much knowledge," as they read dāth for rāth. C.

VER. 8. Spirit from leaving the body, or the wind from blowing. There is no quarter given by death; so the wicked cannot escape vengeance.

VER. 11. Fear. Thus they abuse the patience of God, and grow worse, because he is good. His time will come. Apoc. xvi. 15; Eccl. v. 4; 2 Pet. iii. 10.

VER. 12. Face. If God show such clemency to the wicked, will he disregard his servants? Greek interpreters have read in a different meaning. C.—Sept. "the sinner has done evil from that time, and for a long while," (T.) &c. See S. Jer. H.

VER. 13. Let. Or, Heb. "it shall not," &c. Prot. H.—Faith evinces that the wicked will be punished.—But. Heb. "like a shadow." Sept. "under the shade," in prosperity.

no good for a man under the sun, but to eat, and drink, and be merry: and that he should take nothing else with him of his labour in the days of his life, which God hath given him under the sun.

16 And I applied my heart to know wisdom, and to understand the distraction that is upon earth: for there are some that day and night take no sleep with their eyes.

17 And I understood that man can find no reason of all those works of God that are done under the sun: and the more he shall labour to seek, so much the less shall he find: yea, though the wise man shall say, that he knoweth it, he shall not be able to find it.

CHAP. IX.

Man knows not certainly that he is in God's grace. After death, no more work or merit.

ALl these things have I considered in my heart, that I might carefully understand them: There are just men and wise men, and their works are in the hand of God: and yet man knoweth not whether he be worthy of love, or hatred:

2 But all things are kept uncertain for the time to come, because all things equally happen to the just and to the wicked, to the good and to the evil, to the clean and to the unclean, to him that offereth victims, and to him that despiseth sacrifices. As the good is, so also is the sinner: as the perjured, so he also that sweareth truth.

3 This is a very great evil among all things that are done under the sun, that the same things happen to all men: whereby also the hearts of the children of men are filled with evil, and with contempt while they live, and afterwards they shall be brought down to hell.

4 There is no man that liveth always, or that hopeth for this: a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know nothing more, neither have they a reward any more: for the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Their love also, and their hatred, and their envy, are all perished, neither have they any part in this world, and in the work that is done under the sun.

VER. 15. No good for a man, &c. Some commentators think the wise man here speaks in the person of the libertine, representing the objections of these men against Divine Providence, and the inferences they draw from thence, which he takes care afterwards to refute. But it may also be said, that his meaning is to commend the moderate use of the goods of this world, preferably to the cares and solicitudes of worldlings, their attachment to vanity and curiosity, and presumptuously diving into the unsearchable ways of Divine Providence. Ch. Chap. ii. 24, and iii. 12; Eccl. xv. C.

VER. 17. Reason. We know in general that God does all for his own glory, and for the welfare of his elect. But we cannot account for his treatment of mankind in particular cases. Rom. xi. 33. S. Jer. C.—Say. Sept. “speak what thing soever, that he may know he,” &c. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Of God. He seems to treat both alike, so that the just themselves cannot say whether their sufferings be a punishment or a trial. S. Jer. C.—Knoweth not certainly, and in an ordinary manner. W.—Hatred. Heb. and Sept. “yet love and hatred man knoweth not.” H.—Prosperity or adversity proves nothing. C.

VER. 2. But. Heb. joins this with the preceding not, “by all that is before them. All things come alike to all, there is one event to,” &c. Prot. H.—Perjured. Heb. and Sept. “swearer, so he that fears an oath.” H.

VER. 3. Evil. People hence take occasion to indulge in vice, (chap. viii. 14,) though the conduct of God be irreproachable C.—Shall. Heb. “they go to the dead.” H.—Many think that these are the scintillations of the impious.

VER. 4. There. Even those who have had the vanity to claim Divine honours, never could persuade themselves that they would escape death. But the just forms a different conclusion from the wicked. He looks upon this life only as a preparation for the other, (Heb. xi. 13; Eph. ii. 19,) while libertines make haste to enjoy the fleeting pleasure. Isa. xxii. 13. To the former death seems desirable,

7 Go then, and eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with gladness: because thy works please God.

8 At all times let thy garments be white, and let not oil depart from thy head.

9 Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest, all the days of thy unsteady life, which are given to thee under the sun, all the time of thy vanity: for this is thy portion in life, and in thy labour wherewith thou labourest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand is able to do, do it earnestly: for neither work, nor reason, nor wisdom, nor knowledge, shall be in hell, whither thou art hastening.

11 I turned me to another thing, and I saw that under the sun, the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, nor bread to the wise, nor riches to the learned, nor favour to the skilful: but time and chance in all.

12 Man knoweth not his own end: but as fishes are taken with the hook, and as birds are caught with the snare, so men are taken in the evil time, when it shall suddenly come upon them.

13 This wisdom also I have seen under the sun, and it seemed to me to be very great:

14 A little city, and few men in it: there came against it a great king, and invested it, and built bulwarks round about it, and the siege was perfect.

15 Now there was found in it a man poor and wise, and he delivered the city by his wisdom, and no man afterward remembered that poor man.

16 And I said that wisdom is better than strength: how then is the wisdom of the poor man slighted, and his words not heard?

17 The words of the wise are heard in silence, more than the cry of a prince among fools.

18 ^a Better is wisdom than weapons of war: and he that shall offend in one, shall lose many good things.

CHAP. X.

Observations on wisdom and folly; ambition and detraction.

DYING flies spoil the sweetness of the ointment. Wisdom and glory is more precious than a small and short-lived folly.

^a Supra, vii. 20.

(chap. iv. 2, and vi. 3.) to the latter it is a subject of consternation; and he prefers the vilest creature living to the most noble when dead. C.

VER. 5. Know nothing more, viz. as to the transactions of this world, in which they have now no part, unless it be revealed to them; neither have they any knowledge or power now of doing any thing to secure their eternal state, (if they have not taken care of it in their lifetime,) nor can they now procure themselves any good, as the living always may do, by the grace of God. Ch.

VER. 7. God. Be grateful to him, and make a good use of his benefits, (S. Jer. exp. 2,) or these are the words of libertines. Boss. S. Jer. 1, explicat. C.

VER. 8. White. As in times of joy, and among people of quality. Chap. x. 17; Prov. xxxi. 23.

VER. 10. Earnestly. Live in delights, or perform many good works. Chap. ii. 5.

VER. 11. All. Thus it appears to the inattentive, and to the wicked. For Solomon frequently inculcates that Providence directs all wisely. This is a fresh proof of the vanity of all things. C.

VER. 12. With. Heb. adds, “evil.” Net, (Mont,) or hook. H.—Them. They may use precautions; but, without God's aid, they will not succeed. 1st sal exxvi. l. C.

VER. 14. And the siege, &c. Heb. has only “great bulwarks over or against it.” H.

VER. 15. Afterward, is not in Heb. The poor man was unnoticed before. C.—Vulg. insinuates that he met with no return of gratitude, which is but too common (H.); and this shows the vanity of the world.

VER. 16. Heard? Eccl. xiii. 28. Men are so unjust as to despise wisdom, if it be in a poor man.

VER. 18. Things. A woman saved Abela; and Achan almost ruined Israel. CHAP. X. VER. 1. Ointment. A ny cannot live in it. Pliny, xi. 13.

2 The heart of a wise man is in his right hand, and the heart of a fool is in his left hand.

3 Yea, and the fool, when he walketh in the way, whereas he himself is a fool, esteemeth all men fools.

4 If the spirit of him that hath power, ascend upon thee, leave not thy place: because care will make the greatest sins to cease.

5 There is an evil that I have seen under the sun, as it were by an error proceeding from the face of the prince:

6 A fool set in high dignity, and the rich sitting beneath.

7 I have seen servants upon horses: and princes walking on the ground as servants.

8 *He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that breaketh a hedge, a serpent shall bite him.

9 He that removeth stones, shall be hurt by them: and he that cutteth trees, shall be wounded by them.

10 If the iron be blunt, and be not as before, but be made blunt, with much labour it shall be sharpened: and after industry shall follow wisdom.

11 If a serpent bite in silence: he is nothing better that backbiteth secretly.

12 The words of the mouth of a wise man are grace: but the lips of a fool shall throw him down headlong.

13 The beginning of his words is folly, and the end of his talk is a mischievous error.

14 A fool multiplieth words. A man cannot tell what hath been before him: and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of fools shall afflict them that know not how to go to the city.

16 Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and when thy princes eat in the morning.

VER. 12. Grace. Pleasing and instructive. C.

VER. 15. City. Being so stupid, that they know not, or will not take the pains to find what is most obvious. C.

VER. 16. When thy. Heb. lit. “whose,” cujus, as ver. 17. H.—S. Jerom gives two senses to this passage, the literal and the mystical, according to his usual custom. The dominion of young men and of luxurious judges is reprov'd, as well as innovations in matters of religion. Isa. iii. 4.

VER. 17. Noble. Royal extraction, and education, afford many advantages, which others who raise themselves to the throne do not enjoy. Heb. “the son of those in white,” (C.) or “of heroes.” Mont.—Eurim, (H.) or Chorim, seems to have given rise to the word hero. The advantages of birth only make the defects of degenerate children more observable. C.—Season. The time was not fixed; but it was deemed a mark of intemperance to eat before noon, when judges ought to have decided causes. Dan. xiii. 7; Acts ii. 15.

17 Blessed is the land, whose king is noble, and whose princes eat in due season for refreshment, and not for riotousness.

18 By slothfulness a building shall be brought down, and through the weakness of hands, the house shall drop through.

19 For laughter they make bread, and wine that the living may feast: and all things obey money.

20 Detract not the king, no not in thy thought: and speak not evil of the rich man in thy private chamber: because even the birds of the air will carry thy voice, and he that hath wings will tell what thou hast said.

CHAP. XI.

Exhortation to works of mercy, while we have time, to diligence in good, and to the remembrance of death and judgment.

CAST thy bread upon the running waters: for after a long time thou shalt find it again.

2 Give a portion to seven, and also to eight: for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth.

3 If the clouds be full, they will pour out rain upon the earth. If the tree fall to the south, or to the north, in what place soever it shall fall, there shall it be.

4 He that observeth the wind, shall not sow: and he that considereth the clouds, shall never reap.

5 As thou knowest not what is the way of the spirit, nor how the bones are joined together in the womb of her that is with child: so thou knowest not the works of God, who is the Maker of all.

6 In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening let not thy hand cease: for thou knowest not which may rather spring up, this or that: and if both together, it shall be the better.

7 The light is sweet, and it is delightful for the eyes to see the sun.

VER. 18. Through. If we neglect our own, or others' souls, (H.) in the administration of Church (S. Jer.) or state, all will go to ruin.

VER. 19. Feast. As if they were born for this purpose. Phil. iii. 19. C.

VER. 20. Said. Pigeons are taught to carry letters in the East, and Solomon alludes to this custom, or he makes use of this hyperbole to show that kings will discover the most secret inclinations by means of spies. We must not speak ill even of those who are worthy of blame. Ver. 16. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Waters. Sow thy seed where it may produce a good crop. C.—Be charitable to all. Luke vi. 30.—Assist those in distress, (C.) even though they may be ungrateful, or unable to make a return. Luke xiv. 12. T.—In this third part we are exhorted to serve God with perseverance. Of all virtues, the works of mercy avail most. Matt. xxv. W.

VER. 2. Eight. To as many as thou art able, (C.) especially to those who are of the household of faith, (Gal. vi. 10. H.) whether under the Old or the New Testament, signified by the numbers seven and eight. W. S. Jer.—Mandatum accipis octo illis partem dare, fortasse benedictionibus, (S. Amb. in Luke vi. n. 49,) which intimates that we must apply ourselves to the pursuit of all virtues, as the number eight denotes perfection. C.

VER. 3. If the tree fall, &c. The state of the soul is unchangeable, when once she comes to heaven or hell: and the soul that departs this life in the state of grace, shall never fall from grace; as on the other side, a soul that dies out of the state of grace, shall never come to it. But this does not exclude a place of temporal punishments for such souls as die in the state of grace: yet not so as to be entirely pure; and therefore they shall be saved, indeed, yet so as by fire. 1 Cor. iii. 13.—15. Ch.—After death, none can merit. W.—“He who shall not have cultivated his field, (the soul,) shall after this life experience the fire of purgation, or eternal punishment.” S. Aug. de Gen. con. Man. ii. 20. H.—The souls in purgatory have their names inscribed in heaven, like the ancient saints, who were detained in the bosom of Abraham. C.—They fall, therefore, to the south. Let people dispense their alms to all, as the clouds rain upon the just and unjust, (H.) upon the cultivated and the barren land, and let them do it before death. They know not how soon it may lay them low. C.

VER. 4. Reap. Those who are too circumspect in their alms-deeds, will often pass over such as stand in need, (S. Jer.,) and people who reflect on the difficulties of a virtuous life, will never begin. S. Greg. 3, Past. xvi., and Mor. xxvii. 5.

VER. 5. Spirit. In man, or of the wind. Why then wouldst thou judge of the merit of thy petitioner? or pretend to determine why God has made thee rich, and him poor?

8 If a man live many years, and have rejoiced in them all, he must remember the darksome time, and the many days: which when they shall come, the things past shall be accused of vanity.

9 Rejoice, therefore, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart be in that which is good in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thy eyes: and know that for all these God will bring thee into judgment.

10 Remove anger from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh. For youth and pleasure are vain.

CHAP. XII.

The Creator is to be remembered in the days of our youth: all worldly things are vain: we should fear God, and keep his commandments.

REMEMBER thy Creator in the days of thy youth, before the time of affliction come, and the years draw nigh, of which thou shalt say: They please me not:

2 Before the sun, and the light, and the moon, and the stars be darkened, and the clouds return after the rain:

3 When the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall stagger, and the grinders shall be idle in a small number, and they that look through the holes shall be darkened:

4 And they shall shut the doors in the street, when the grinder's voice shall be low, and they shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall grow deaf.

VER. 6. Better. Be kind to all during life. Gal. vi. 10. C.—Do good, both in youth and in old age, (W.) lest, if thou shouldst grow remiss, all would be lost. S. Jer.

VER. 8. And the. Heb. "for they are many. What comes to pass is vanity." Mont.—Nothing can more effectually repress the love of this world. Eccli. vii. 40.

VER. 9. Eyes. He speaks ironically, (C.) or exhorts to spiritual joy and moderation. S. Greg. Mor. 24.

VER. 10. Anger. All turbulent passions, and evil or carnal pleasures. S. Jer. CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Not. Prevent old age, to procure a stock of virtues. H.

VER. 2. Before the sun, &c. That is, before old age: the effects of which upon all the senses and faculties are described in the following verses under a variety of figures. Ch.—Rain. One misery succeeds another, the understanding is darkened, and the senses become dull. C.

VER. 3. House. The sides, (S. Jer.,) or rather the arms. C.—Some understand prelates, or angels. Thaumaturgus.—And the powers that are in heaven shall be moved. Mark xiii. 25. H.—Men. The arms, (Chal.,) or thighs, (Smith,) or those who were formerly the most robust.—Number. The rest have been lost, and what remain, are of little service for chewing meat. C.

VER. 4. Doors. The lips, (C.) feet, (Chal.,) nostrils, (Vat.,) or the trachea and pulmonary arteries.—Bird. The cock-crowing; or at the least sound their slumbers are broken.—Deaf. Heb. "be low." The ears cannot enjoy music, nor can the voice of old people please. 2 Kings xix. 25.

VER. 5. Way. They shall walk bent down, and afraid of rough ground.—Flourish. Their head shall become white, like the almond-flower. Jer. i. 11.—

5 And they shall fear high things, and they shall be afraid in the way, the almond-tree shall flourish, the locust shall be made fat, and the caper-tree shall be destroyed: because man shall go into the house of his eternity, and the mourners shall go round about in the street.

6 Before the silver cord be broken, and the golden fillet shrink back, and the pitcher be crushed at the fountain, and the wheel be broken upon the cistern,

7 And the dust return into its earth, from whence it was, and the spirit return to God, who gave it.

8 Vanity of vanities, said Ecclesiastes, and all things are vanity.

9 And whereas Ecclesiastes was very wise, he taught the people, and declared the things that he had done: and seeking out, he set forth many parables.

10 He sought profitable words, and wrote words most right, and full of truth.

11 The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails deeply fastened in, which by the counsel of masters are given from one shepherd.

12 More than these, my son, require not. Of making many books there is no end: and much study is an affliction of the flesh.

13 Let us all hear together the conclusion of the discourse. Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is all man:

14 And all things that are done, God will bring into judgment every error, whether it be good or evil.

Fat. Sept. "heavy."—Destroyed. The hair shall fall off. C.—Eternity. The body being consigned to the grave, and the soul to the region of spirits, to have no further concern with the transactions of the world. H. Job vii. 9.—Street. This custom is often mentioned. Herod. ii. 85. Luke vii. 32.

VER. 7. It. Man is composed of two distinct parts; the destination of which we ought never to forget. Thus the objection of infidels (chap. iii. 19) is refuted. C.

VER. 8. Ecclesiastes. "The preacher." W.—He returns to his first proposition, and having pushed the objections of free-thinkers as far as possible, shows us what we ought to believe and practise. He establishes the distinction of soul and body, the advantage of instruction, (ver. 11,) without meddling with things too high, (ver. 12,) the obligation of fearing God, (ver. 13,) and future retribution, ver. 14. This is the sum of all sound morality. C.

VER. 10. Profitable. Heb. "pleasing." H.

VER. 11. In the ground, (H.) to keep a tent in its proper place. He seemed before to have placed the wise on the same level with fools. Chap. vi. 8, 11, and vii. 1. C.

VER. 12. Not. I have had experience of all.—End. They can teach nothing further. C.—Impious productions abound, while those which promote piety are too scarce.—Flesh. It ruins the health.

VER. 13. All man. The whole business and duty of man. Ch.—He who does not fear God, deserves not the title of man. He is nothing but vanity. C.

VER. 14. Error. Or hidden and secret thing. Ch.—Heb. "with every secret thing," (Prot. H.) "every inadvertency." Sept. Sym. C.

SOLOMON'S CANTICLE OF CANTICLES.

This Book is called the Canticle of Canticles, that is to say, the most excellent of all canticles: because it is full of high mysteries, relating to the happy union of Christ and his spouse; which is here begun by love; and is to be eternal in heaven. The spouse of Christ is the Church: more especially as to the happiest part of it, viz. perfect souls, every one of which is his beloved; but above all others, the immaculate and ever blessed Virgin mother. Ch.—The bridegroom is Christ, as God and man. His praises and those of his spouse are recorded by various speakers. All the Holy Scriptures contain spiritual food, but they are not all fit for every person. Heb. v. 13. W.—None, therefore, should dare to peruse this work who has not mastered his passions, having his conversation in heaven. H.—The Jews would not allow any to read it before the age of thirty. Orig. and S. Jer.—Some of the Fathers and commentators have even asserted that the mystical sense is the only one which pertains to this book, (Theod. Durham. T.) and it is certainly the true and principal one.—Grotius shows the corruption of his own heart in his impure comments, as Theodorus, of Mopsuesta, is blamed by the second Council of Const. 4. a. 68. The name of God never, indeed, occurs; as he is represented under the idea of the bridegroom, &c., and the piece is allegorical. When we meditate on this canticle, we ought to remember the admonition given by the Church in the Mass: "Let hearts be on high:" and oh! that all might answer with truth: "We have them to the Lord!"

CHAPTER I.

The spouse aspires to an union with Christ: their mutual love for one another.

LET him kiss me with the kiss of his mouth: for thy breasts are better than wine,

2 Smelling sweet of the best ointments. Thy name is as oil poured out; therefore young maidens have loved thee.

3 Draw me: we will run after thee to the odour of thy ointments. The king hath brought me into his store-rooms: we will be glad and rejoice in thee, remembering thy breasts more than wine: the righteous love thee.

4 I am black, but beautiful, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Cedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

5 Do not consider me that I am brown, because the sun hath altered my colour: the sons of my mother have fought against me, they have made me the keeper in the vineyards: my vineyard I have not kept.

6 Show me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou liest in the mid-day, lest I begin to wander after the flocks of thy companions.

7 If thou know not thyself, O fairest among women, go forth, and follow after the steps of the flocks, and feed thy kids beside the tents of the shepherds.

8 To my company of horsemen, in Pharaoh's chariots, have I likened thee, O my love.

9 Thy cheeks are beautiful as the turtle dove's, thy neck as jewels.

10 We will make thee chains of gold, inlaid with silver.

11 While the king was at his repose, my spikenard sent forth the odour thereof.

CHAP. I. Canticles. Heb. asir essirim assor Lossolme, "the Cantic of Canticles, which is for (H.) or according to Solomon," (M.) dictated to him by the Holy Ghost.

VER. 1. Let. Heb. issokni, (H.) "kiss or instruct me," as if to insinuate that we must raise our thoughts from carnal to spiritual things.—The. Heb. "kisses."—His mouth. Others I reject. M.—Breasts. Heb. also "loves." But the former is the primary signification of (M.) dolic. Christ, in his Divine and human nature, is the source of all our good. His graces are manifested. He instructs and feeds us with the truths contained in Scripture, and in tradition, (H.) or in the Old and New Testament. Ven. Bede, &c.—Spiritual delights are to be preferred before all terrestrial ones. T.—Wine. All seem to agree that these words are addressed to the bridegroom: which shows that they must be understood in a mystical sense. H.

VER. 2. Ointments. The bosom used to be perfumed. Athen. xv. 5, and xv. 14.—Thy name. Thou thyself. The preaching of the gospel produced a wonderful change in the world. 2 Cor. ii. 15. C.

VER. 3, 4. Righteous. The apostles, and faithful souls, (H.) and all who form a right judgment of things, (M.) having their thoughts, words, and actions composed. T.—Black. Or brown. Ver. 5. H.—The Egyptians were of a less fair complexion, and she had been exposed to the sun. Ver. 5. C.—Though outwardly afflicted, the Church is inwardly fair. W.—Cedar. Or of the Arabs, who dwelt in tents made of black goats' hair. C.

VER. 5. Altered. Heb. "looked upon me," (Prot.,) or "darted his rays at me." Mont. H.—The Church of the Gentiles was quite disfigured before Christ chose it. Persecutors afterwards strove to tarnish its beauty, but in vain.—Vineyard. My face (C.) and person I have not regarded, while I was attentive to serve others. H.

VER. 6. First. Heb. "makest thy flock to rest." Prot. II.—Mid-day. She represents herself and her beloved as guarding flocks, which were usually driven into some shady place during the heat of the day, when the shepherds took their innocent recreations.—Wander. We ought to imitate the solicitude of the spouse, and hide ourselves under the shadow of the cross when we are tempted. Isa. xxv. 4. C.

VER. 7. If. Christ comforts his Church. W.—He doubts not of her fidelity. M.—But the very insinuation, which she had made, causes him to give her this sort of rebuke.—Thyself. He who is ignorant of himself, must be so likewise of God, (C.) and will be sentenced to feed goats. S. Jer. Ep. 22. ad Eustoc.—Kids. Which had been detained at home. They will naturally seek their mothers. All creatures will raise the soul to God. Job xii.—Shepherds. Though in the midst of a perverse generation of idolaters and philosophers, the Church will continue steadfast. M.

VER. 8. Company. Heb. "mare." Such were preferred, as more gentle and 12 A bundle of myrrh is my beloved to me, he shall abide between my breasts.

13 A cluster of cypress my love is to me, in the vineyards of Engaddi.

14 Behold, thou art fair, O my love, behold thou art fair, thy eyes are as those of doves.

15 Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, and comely. Our bed is flourishing.

16 The beams of our houses are of cedar, our rafters of cypress-trees.

CHAP. II.

Christ caresses his spouse: he invites her to him.

I AM the flower of the field, and the lily of the valleys.

2 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

3 As the apple-tree among the trees of the woods, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow, whom I desired: and his fruit was sweet to my palate.

4 He brought me into the cellar of wine, he set in order charity in me.

5 Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples: because I languish with love.

6 His left hand is under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me.

7 I adjure you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and the harts of the fields, that you stir not up, nor make the beloved to awake, till she please.

8 The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping over the hills.

swift. C.—Horsemen. Prot. "horses." H.—Heb. susc. Sept. ἡ ἵππος means also "cavalry," as well as a mare. M.

VER. 9. As, &c. Heb. "with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold." Prot.—Sept. here read like the Vulg. c instead of b before thurim, which signifies chains, (ver. 10. H.) as well as turtles. We cannot say that this bird has cheeks. C.—It is an emblem of the Church mourning, and ever true to her beloved, (Orig., &c.) who bestows a variety of graces on different people. 1 Cor. xii. 4. C.

VER. 11. While. The Church meditates on his passion and resurrection. W.—Repose. Or bed. Thus our Saviour was treated. Matt. xxvi. 7; Luke vii 37. C.—Odour. The virtues of the Church please him. M.

VER. 12. Abide. Heb. adds, "all night." Myrrh is a bitter but odoriferous liquor.

VER. 14. Behold. Christ praiseth his spouse. W.—Doves. Sharp-sighted, and reddish. Gen. xlix. 12. The Holy Ghost came upon Christ in the form of a dove. Matt. iii. 16. We must imitate its simplicity, (Matt. x. 16,) and have a pure and single eye, or intention, (Matt. vi. 22. C.) inviolably to please God. Orig.

VER. 15. Behold. The spouse makes a return of praise and thanksgiving for her repose, to Christ. W.—Flourishing. Heb. "green." Sept. "shaded." Esth. i. 5.

VER. 16. Beams. Prelates.—Rafters. Virtuous subjects. M.—Cypress. These are both odoriferous and incorruptible.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. I am. The spouse compares herself to a lily, as she is the fairest flower on the bed, (C.) or Christ may here speak. W. Isa. xi. 1. Orig.

VER. 2. Thorns. The bridegroom enhances the praise of his spouse. The Church, surrounded by infidels and persecutors, maintains her beauty and station. Heretics, &c., are no better than thorns. Orig. C.—The Church excels all other societies. In her communion the innocent are preferred before sinners, and among the former, the blessed Virgin surpasses all.

VER. 3. As. The Church praises Christ, resting secure under his protection. W.

VER. 4. Cellar. This was not under-ground. C.—In me. Heb. "he brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me was love." Prot. H.—He has shown me the greatest tenderness. Only the religion of Christ lays before us our duties to God, to ourselves, and neighbours. C. S. Tho. ii. 2, q. 26. H.

VER. 5. Flowers. Heb. "bottles."—Languish. Sept. "am wounded." H.—Those who enter upon the paths of virtue are often deprived of consolations. C.—They must support themselves by reflecting on the words and sufferings of Christ. S. Amb. Psal. cxviii. Ser. 5. Boss.

VER. 7. I. Christ permits not his Church to be persecuted till she be able to bear it. W.—Roes. Sept. "armies and powers;" the angels and apostles, who have spread the gospel through the world.

VER. 8. The. Feeling the protection of Christ, the Church preacheth boldly

9 My beloved is like a roe, or a young hart. Behold he standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, looking through the lattices.

10 Behold my beloved speaketh to me: Arise, make haste, my love, my dove, my beautiful one, and come.

11 For winter is now past, the rain is over and gone.

12 The flowers have appeared in our land, the time of pruning is come: the voice of the turtle is heard in our land:

13 The fig-tree hath put forth her green figs: the vines in flower yield their sweet smell. Arise, my love, my beautiful one, and come:

14 My dove in the cliffs of the rock, in the hollow places of the wall, show me thy face, let thy voice sound in my ears: for thy voice is sweet, and thy face comely.

15 Catch us the little foxes that destroy the vines: for our vineyard hath flourished.

16 My beloved to me, and I to him who feedeth among the lilies,

17 Till the day break, and the shadows retire. Return: be like, my beloved, to a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountains of Bether.

CHAP. III.

The spouse seeks Christ. The glory of his humanity.

IN my bed by night I sought him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, and found him not.

2 I will rise, and will go about the city: in the streets and the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, and I found him not.

3 The watchmen who keep the city, found me: Have you seen him, whom my soul loveth?

4 When I had a little passed by them, I found him whom my soul loveth: I held him: and I will not let him the truth against pagans and heretics. W.—She knows the voice of the Shepherd, (John viii. 47, and x. 2,) and keeps at a distance the wolves in sheep's clothing, or pretended reformers, who would scatter the flock.—Hills. She sees him returning in the evening with the utmost speed of a stag, as the Heb. implies. Chap. ii. 9, and viii. 14. C.

VER. 9. Hart, (Prov. v. 18,) which is swifter than the dogs. Xenop. Cuneg.—Wall. Under the old law Christ was only seen in figure. He manifested himself in the new. Yet our sins separate him from us. Isa. lix. 2. He is concealed in the sacred mysteries, (C.) and his humanity keeps from our sight the glory of his Divinity, which alone can impart full content. S. Amb. S. Bern.—He showed a glimpse of it at his transfiguration, and by his miracles. M.

VER. 10. Arise. He sings under the window, to ver. 16.—My dove, is taken from the Sept. C.

VER. 11. Winter. The rigour and darkness of the old law give place to that of light and love. Orig.—After persecution had ceased, pruning became more necessary. C.

VER. 12. Pruning. Prot. “singing of birds.” H.—But the former version is better. Sept., Sym., &c.—Turtle. Which returns in spring. Isa. viii. 9. C.—It denotes the preaching of the gospel, (S. Cyr. Ador. 15,) or rather the sighs of a holy soul in exile.

VER. 14. Rock. Wild pigeons retire thither. Varro, iii. 7. C.—Holy souls seek protection in the wounds of their Saviour. S. Greg. S. Bern. Ser. 61.—Wall. In the Holy Scriptures, which defend the Church. She is brought to light for the edification of all. M.

VER. 15. Foxes. They hurt vines, (Theoc. 5,) and denote false prophets. Ezec. xlii. 4. S. Aug. Psal. lxxx.—For. Heb. “and our vines of Semadar.”

VER. 13. C.

VER. 16. Feedeth “his flock.” Sept. He still retains the fragrantcy of lilies. As married people are two in one flesh, (Eph. v. 31,) Christ and his Church are irrevocably united. C.

VER. 17. Break. Or “yield a refreshing air.”—Bether. Or the lower Bethoron, near Jerusalem.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Bed. The Church, finding Christ by his own revelation, and not by philosophy, holds him fast. W.—He had delayed coming at the usual hour, to give us to understand that he is not found amid delights, nor in a crowd, but that we must seek him diligently, like Magdalene. John xx. S. Amb. de Isaac.

VER. 3. City. To prevent fires, &c. God will require the souls of the flock at the bar of his pastors.

go, till I bring him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that bore me.

5 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes and the harts of the fields, that you stir not up, nor awake my beloved, till she please.

6 Who is she that goeth up by the desert, as a pillar of smoke of aromatic spices, of myrrh, and frankincense, and of all the powders of the perfumer?

7 Behold threescore valiant ones of the most valiant of Israel, surround the bed of Solomon:

8 All holding swords, and most expert in war: every man's sword upon his thigh, because of fears in the night.

9 King Solomon hath made him a litter of the wood of Libanus:

10 The pillars thereof he made of silver, the seat of gold, the going up of purple: the midst he covered with charity for the daughters of Jerusalem.

11 Go forth, ye daughters of Sion, and see king Solomon in the diadem, wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the joy of his heart.

CHAP. IV.

Christ sets forth the graces of his spouse: and declares his love for her.

HOW beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou! thy eyes are doves' eyes, besides what is hid within. Thy hair is as flocks of goats, which come up from Mount Galaad.

2 Thy teeth as flocks of sheep, that are shorn, which come up from the washing, all with twins, and there is none barren among them.

3 Thy lips are as a scarlet lace: and thy speech sweet. Thy cheeks are as a piece of a pomegranate, besides that which lieth hid within.

VER. 5. I. The bridegroom (C.) speaks, as chap. ii. 7, (W.) and chap. viii. 4.

VER. 6. Who. The female companions of the spouse, (C.) or the bridegroom's friends, (M.) admire her at a distance. Chap. vi. 9, and viii. 5. C.—The converted Gentiles change the desert of the world into a paradise by their good works, which ascend like a perfume. S. Greg.—They admire their own conversion, and proclaim that we must fight for heaven, (W.) and adore Christ, the God-man; imitating all his virtues, (H.) and preaching his gospel. M.

VER. 9. Litter. Sept., to conduct his spouse with solemnity; or a throne; though it most probably denotes the bridal bed. C.—Heb. apriun. Greek, φάρετρον.

VER. 10. Going. Prot. “covering of it of purple.” H.—Death must be endured, if necessary, for the sake of the faith, as this is the highest degree of charity. W.—He, &c. Heb. “is prepared for the beloved above thee,” &c. C.—Prot. and Pagn. “the midst thereof being paved (Mont. set on fire) with love for (Mont. by) the daughters.” H.—The most desirable things adorn the litter, or the Church, that all may come to her, who has God to guide her decisions. M.

VER. 11. Go. All are invited to come to Christ, who, in his sacred humanity, which he took of his mother, was crowned in heaven, after his passion. W. S. Greg. Alcuin.—The synagogue crowned him with thorns, and gave him the hard bed of the cross. S. Bern., S. Anselm, &c.—Bethsabee might live to see the marriage of her son, who owed the crown to her. 3 Kings i. 18; Prov. iv. 3.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. How. Christ again praises the beauty of his Church. W.—The dialogue takes place in the country. H.—From corporal beauty, which is often dangerous, and the portion of the most dissolute, we must raise our minds to spiritual advantages, which the Holy Ghost has here in view.—Within. S. Amb. “besides thy taciturnity.” Sept. “silence.” Rabbins, &c., “hair.” Prot. “within thy locks.” Modesty and silence are the best encomium. C.—Up. Heb. and Sept. “appear.” Jerusalem was the highest part of the country (H.); and coming up and down often means no more than coming or going. Judg. xi. 3, and xv. 11. C.—The hair of goats in Lycia was beautifully curled. Ælian, xvi. 30.—Women used such false hair. Mart. xii. 45. C.

VER. 2. Them. Those who lay aside the old man, and receive baptism, are filled with grace, to bring forth the fruits of virtue. S. Aug. Doct. ii. 6.—Pastors in particular must lay aside worldly cares, and attend to their flocks. M.

VER. 3. Scarlet. Preachers of the gospel (S. Greg.) must speak with elegance, and have their lips dyed with the blood of Christ, and purified with coals from the altar. C.—So, if we may use the words of a living critic, who is sometimes accurate, “a commentator ought to study at the foot of his crucifix, and write with ink drawn from the heart of Jesus.” H.—Pomegranate Plump and 4 Thy neck is as the tower of David, which is built with bulwarks: a thousand bucklers hang upon it, all the armour of valiant men.

5 Thy two breasts like two young roes that are twins, when feed among the lilies.

6 Till the day break, and the shadows retire, I will go to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense.

7 Thou art all fair, O my love, and there is not a spot in thee.

8 Come from Libanus, my spouse, come from Libanus, come: thou shalt be crowned from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the dens of the lions, from the mountains of the leopards.

9 Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes, and with one hair of thy neck.

10 How beautiful are thy breasts, my sister, my spouse! thy breasts are more beautiful than wine, and the sweet smell of thy ointments above all aromatical spices.

11 Thy lips, my spouse, are as a dropping honeycomb, honey and milk are under thy tongue: and the smell of thy garments, as the smell of frankincense.

12 My sister, my spouse is a garden enclosed, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed up.

13 Thy plants are a paradise of pomegranates with the fruits of the orchard. Cypress with spikenard, 14 Spikenard and saffron, sweet cane and cinnamon, with all the trees of Libanus, myrrh and aloes, with all the chief perfumes.

15 The fountain of gardens: the well of living waters, which run with a strong stream from Libanus.

16 Arise, O north wind, and come, O south wind, blow through my garden, and let the aromatical spices thereof flow.

ruddy, representing the purity of the Church, and of virgins, who are its "flower," (S. Cyp.) and bring forth the fruits of good works. S. Aug. de Virg.

VER. 4. Bulwarks. Heb. Tholpiuth, "at the height of the defiles," probably in Libanus, when David conquered Syria. Thalassar, Thelmela, &c., were such "heights."—Bucklers, to be used in case of need, or for ornament. Thus the neck of the spouse was adorned with chains and pearls. The Church is this tower, the pillar of truth. 1 Tim. iii.; Matt. xvi. 18. Apostles and prelates are her bucklers.

VER. 6. Myrrh. To Calvary, where the fervent will pour forth their prayers, and learn mortification. C.—Christ dwells in mortified and devout minds.

VER. 7. Thee. All must be pure before they enter heaven, as the blessed Virgin was on earth, (W.) and the Church is still. Eph. v. 27. C.—Before his departure Christ heaps praises on her.

VER. 8. Thou. Heb. "look from."—Libanus. So Jerusalem is called. Zac. xi. 3. Ribera. M.—Amana. Sept. "faith." By it and charity we must do good. S. Aug. Psal. lxxvii. Amanus separates Cilicia from Syria.—Sanir is the name given by the Phœnicians to Hermon, (Eus.) beyond the Jordan. 1 Par. v. 23.

VER. 9. Wounded. Sym. "given." Sept. Prot. "ravished." Mystic writers suppose that the spouse had been guilty of some negligence; or, on the contrary, that her deportment was most enchanting, bent on God, and on good works. C.—Sister. So Assuerus styles himself brother of Esther, xv. 12. Christ died for the unity of his Church. M.

VER. 11. Lips. Teachers who accommodate their instructions to the capacity of their audience, (C.) giving milk to children. Heb. v. 13. H. 1 Cor. iii. 2. In allusion, perhaps, to this passage, (C.) it was customary to give milk and honey to the new baptized. Tert. (oron.—Garments. Which were perfumed, (Gen. xxvii. 17; Psal. xlv. 9.) and imply good works, (2 Cor. v. 3; Rom. xiii. 14. C.) and the external service and prayers of the Church, which ascend like incense. Psal. xli. 2. M.

VER. 12. Up. She is perfectly chaste. Prov. v. 14. The Church excludes from her society all unbelievers and schismatics. The wicked serve to exercise the virtuous. Her pastors explain the Scriptures, the fountains of saving knowledge. C.—Christ is also a fountain. Zac. xiii. 1, and John vii. 37. M.

VER. 14. Cinnamon. Very rare. Exod. xxx. 23.—Libanus, or "incense." (Heb.

CHAP. V.

Christ calls his spouse; she languishes with love: and describes him by his graces.

LET my beloved come into his garden, and eat the fruit of his apple-trees. I am come into my garden, O my sister, my spouse, I have gathered my myrrh, with my aromatical spices: I have eaten the honeycomb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk: eat, O friends, and drink, and be inebriated, my dearly beloved.

2 I sleep, and my heart watcheth: the voice of my beloved knocking: Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is full of dew, and my locks of the drops of the nights.

3 I have put off my garment, how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet, how shall I defile them?

4 My beloved put his hand through the key-hole, and my bowels were moved at his touch.

5 I arose up to open to my beloved: my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers were full of the choicest myrrh.

6 I opened the bolt of my door to my beloved: but he had turned aside, and was gone. My soul melted, when he spoke: I sought him, and found him not: I called, and he did not answer me.

7 The keepers that go about the city found me: they struck me, and wounded me: the keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.

8 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if you find my beloved, that you tell him that I languish with love.

9 What manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, O thou most beautiful among women? what manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, that thou hast so adjured us?

10 My beloved is white and ruddy, chosen out of thousands.

VER. 16. Wind. At different times. Let all nations be convinced of thy beauty. C.—The Holy Spirit enabled the apostles to convert the world. Nys. Rupert.—All temptations, whether proceeding from cruelty or deceit, "make constant souls more grateful to God." W.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Apple-trees. The spouse, submitting to God's will, is content to suffer. W.—She addresses her beloved, and as he had praised her, under the similitude of a delightful garden, she invites him into it. C.—I, &c. Christ again approves of her patience, and invites the saints to congratulate with her. W.—He always hears his Church. Matt. xxviii. 20; Mark xi. 24. C.—The saints had prayed for Christ's coming; and accordingly (Isa. lviii. 9) he takes flesh of the most pure virgin. S. Athan. Synop.—Comb. Sept. "bread."—Milk. Chal. "white wine." But (C.) milk and wine may be taken together. Clem. Pæd. i. 6. —The chaste delights of retired and penitent souls are thus described (C.): Dulciores sunt lacrymæ orantium quam gaudia theatrorum S. Aug. Psal. cxxviii. "The tears of penitents are the wine of angels, because in them is the odour of life." S. Bern. Ser. 30.

VER. 2. Dew. This denotes imperfect Christians, who remain, indeed, attached to the head, but are a disgrace to it, by their scandalous lives. S. Aug. tr. 57 in John. S. Greg. C.—Such was the state of many in the days of Luther, who accordingly joined the first reformers. See Philips' Life of Card. Pole, p. 364. H. —Nights. Christ knocks by his inspirations and chastisements, and he is better heard in the night of tribulation. Apoc. iii. 20. C.

VER. 3. Garment. By this is designated the tunic, which was undermost. H.—Feet. People in that climate had their feet bare in the house, and even on journeys only wore sandals: so that frequent washing was requisite. Gen. xlviii. 4, and 1 Tim. v. 10. These excuses were vain, and Christ would not regard them. Matt. xxv. 1; Luke xii. 35. Theod. C.—The care of souls brings on many external occupations, which contemplative men would decline. S. Greg. M.

VER. 4. Touch. Heb. "were moved for him."—Grace moves us to begin and prosecute good works. S. Greg. Nyssen. Theod.—Christ gives it more abundantly, to make the champions of the Church contend with adversity. M.

VER. 8. Love. She seems insensible to the insults received. C.—The Church prays to the saints on earth, and in heaven. M.

VER. 10. Ruddy. Or shining. The Divine and human nature, or the conception and sufferings of Christ, are thus described. C.—The spouse gives this admirable description of her beloved. H.

11 His head is as the finest gold : his locks as branches of palm-trees, black as a raven.

12 His eyes as doves upon brooks of waters, which are washed with milk, and sit beside the plentiful streams.

13 His cheeks are as beds of aromatical spices set by the perfumers. His lips are as lilies dropping choice myrrh.

14 His hands are turned, and as of gold, full of hyacinths. His belly as of ivory, set with sapphires.

15 His legs as pillars of marble, that are set upon bases of gold. His form as of Libanus, excellent as the cedars.

16 His throat most sweet, and he is all lovely : such is my beloved, and he is my friend, O ye daughters of Jerusalem.

17 Whither is thy beloved gone, O thou most beautiful among women ? whither is thy beloved turned aside, and we will seek him with thee ?

CHAP. VI.

The spouse of Christ is but one : she is fair and terrible.

MY beloved is gone down into his garden, to the bed of aromatical spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies.

2 I to my beloved, and my beloved to me, who feedeth among the lilies.

3 Thou art beautiful, O my love, sweet and comely as Jerusalem : terrible as an army set in array.

4 Turn away thy eyes from me, for they have made me flee away. Thy hair is as a flock of goats, that appear from Galaad.

5 Thy teeth as a flock of sheep, which come up from the washing, all with twins, and there is none barren among them.

6 Thy cheeks are as the bark of a pomegranate, beside what is hidden within thee.

7 There are threescore queens, and fourscore concubines, and young maidens without number.

8 One is my dove, my perfect one is but one, she is the only one of her mother, the chosen of her that bore her. The daughters saw her, and declared her most blessed : the queens and concubines, and they praised her.

VER. 11. Gold. God is the head of Christ, (1 Cor. xi. 3,) and is most pure. M.—Branches. Elata, or fruits of the male palm-tree. Theod. Plin. xiii. 4.

VER. 13. Set by. Prot. “as sweet flowers.”—Choice. Lit. “the first.” Ver. b. H.—The modesty and words of Christ excited admiration. 1 Pet. ii. 21 ; John vii. 46. C.—He exhorted sinners to repent, and rebuked the obstinate. M.

VER. 14. Hyacinths. Or purple veins. C.—Prot. “hands are as gold rings set with the beryl.” Heb. “full of Tharsis,” (H.) or precious stones, (M.) from that country, (Exod. xxviii.) with which his rings were ornamented. C.—Sapphires. His belt or garment is thus ornamented. Sanchez.—The works of Christ proceeded from his infinite charity for mankind, whose salvation he greatly desired, (Mark vii. 37, and 1 Cor. xv. 22, and 1 Tim. ii. 4,) so that none can perish but by their own fault. C.

VER. 16. Lovely. Heb. and Sept. “desires.” M.—The beauty of Christ is chiefly interior ; and all must aim at this perfection who would be his spouses. Psal. xlv. 3. C.

VER. 17. Seek. The fervent resolve to seek Christ, wherever he may be. W.—His praises excite many to love him. M.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Lilies. The Church teaches that God is delighted with the pious desires and works of the faithful. W.—She answers the question which had been put to her. C.

VER. 3. Thou. Christ again commends his Church, which is well composed of distinct orders, some governing, others retired from the world, and the rest exercising works of mercy, amid its troubles, who altogether form a complete army, terrible to all her enemies. W.—Jerusalem. Which was then one of the finest cities in the East. C.—The Catholic Church resembles the heavenly Jerusalem. Theod.

VER. 4. Turn. The more one contemplates God’s majesty, the more he will be convinced that it is incomprehensible. W.—To pry into mysteries may cause Christ to retire. Theod., &c.

9 Who is she that cometh forth as the morning rising, fair as the moon, bright as the sun, terrible as an army set in array ?

10 I went down into the garden of nuts, to see the fruits of the valleys, and to look if the vineyard had flourished, and the pomegranates budded.

11 I knew not : my soul troubled me for the chariots of Aminadab.

12 Return, return, O Sulamitess : return, return, that we may behold thee.

CHAP. VII.

A further description of the graces of the Church, the spouse of Christ.

WHAT shalt thou see in the Sulamitess but the companies of camps ? How beautiful are thy steps in shoes, O prince’s daughter ! The joints of thy thighs are like jewels, that are made by the hand of a skilful workman.

2 Thy navel is like a round bowl, never wanting cups. Thy belly is like a heap of wheat, set about with lilies.

3 Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins.

4 Thy neck is a tower of ivory. Thy eyes like the fish-pools in Hesebon, which are in the gate of the daughter of the multitude. Thy nose is as the tower of Libanus, that looketh towards Damascus.

5 Thy head is like Carmel : and the hairs of thy head as the purple of the king bound in the channels.

6 How beautiful art thou, and how comely, my dearest in delights !

7 Thy stature is like to a palm-tree, and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.

8 I said : I will go up into the palm-tree, and will take hold of the fruit thereof : and thy breasts shall be as the clusters of the vine : and the odour of thy mouth like apples.

9 Thy throat like the best wine, worthy for my beloved to drink, and for his lips and his teeth to ruminate.

10 I to my beloved, and his turning is towards me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field, let us abide in the villages.

VER. 7. Number. The true pastors are numerous, but hirelings more so. W.

VER. 9. Who. The companions of the spouse, (C.) or the synagogue, admire the Christian Church. W.—Morning, Aurora. The Church dissipated the darkness of paganism ; she appeared as the moon, under persecution, and as the sun, after the conversion of Constantine. C.—The like will happen in the days of anti-christ. Ven. Bede.

VER. 11. Aminadab. The devil, (Theod.) or probably some renowned general. Aquila explains it “of the people’s leader,” (C.) or “munificent one.” Mont.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. What ? Christ commends the Jews, who shall at last embrace the faith with great fervour. W.—Thou. Heb. and Sept. “ye.” They join this sentence with the preceding chapter. H.—Companies. Heb. “as it were the choir (or dance) of Mahanaim,” (C.) where Jacob saw the camps of angels, near the Jaboc. Il. Gen. xxxii.

VER. 5. Carmel. Shaded with trees. C.—Heb. “purple,” which colour was sometimes given to the hair. Propert. ii. 18.—Channels of the dyers. Heb. “to beams.” C.—Prot. “the king is held in the galleries” to view thee. H.

VER. 7. Grapes. The Church triumphs over her adversaries, and feeds her children. C.

VER. 8. Up. Christ shed his blood on the cross, and enabled his Church, composed of Jews and Gentiles, who were before barren, to produce a numerous progeny. C.—Mouth. Heb. and Sept. “nose.”

VER. 9. Lips. Sept. “sufficient for my lips and teeth.” H.—The wine in that country was very thick, when kept a long time. It here denotes charity, or the gospel truths. Luke v. 37 ; Acts ii. 13.

VER. 10. Turning. The Church is submissive to Jesus Christ, and is entirely actuated by his Spirit. C.—She takes the words, as it were, out of his mouth, (ver. 9,) and answers, worthy, &c., acknowledging that all the praise belongs to him.

VER. 11. Villages. There Christ affords the purest delights, (ver. 12. C.)

12 Let us get up early to the vineyards, let us see if the vineyard flourish, if the flowers be ready to bring forth fruits, if the pomegranates flourish: there will I give thee my breasts.

13 The mandrakes give a smell. In our gates are all fruits: the new and the old, my beloved, I have kept for thee.

CHAP. VIII.

The love of the Church to Christ: his love to her.

WHO shall give thee to me for my brother, sucking the breasts of my mother, that I may find thee without, and kiss thee, and now no man may despise me?

2 I will take hold of thee, and bring thee into my mother's house: there thou shalt teach me, and I will give thee a cup of spiced wine, and new wine of my pomegranates.

3 His left hand under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me.

4 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, that you stir not up, nor awake my love till she please.

5 Who is this that cometh up from the desert, flowing with delights, leaning upon her beloved? Under the apple-tree I raised thee up: there thy mother was corrupted, there she was deflowered that bore thee.

and the Church (M.) becomes his mother, while she instructs and feeds others. S. Greg. Hom. H.

VER. 13. Mandrakes. Heb. dudaim comes from the same root as dadi, "my breasts or loves." Ver. 12. H.—It may denote oranges, as mandrakes are not spring-fruits. Gen. xxx. 14. C.—And the old. Or great abundance. Lev. xxvi. 10; Matt. xiii. 52. C.—She acknowledges Christ to be the Saviour of all, under the Old and the New Testament. W.—A doctor of the Church shows Christ in the prophets, and figures of the law, as well as manifested in the gospel. Aponius, &c. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Mother. The synagogue continues to pray for Christ's coming. W.—Her request has been heard, and He has assumed our nature; so that we may receive from him all the marks of tenderness, and none but the carnal will show any signs of contempt. The spouse wishes to manifest her love without restraint, and to be delivered from the shame of sterility, (C.) or the Church desires to see Christ in heaven, and to praise him. M.

VER. 2. Teach me economy, on which subject Xenophon represents the new-married entertaining themselves.—Wine. Mark xv. 23; Osee xiv. 8. Nectar was of this description, (C.) being composed of wine, honey, and odoriferous flowers. The best was made at Babylon. Athen. i. 25, and ii. 2.—These liquors intimate all the virtues which Christ has taught; the practice of which affords him the greatest satisfaction. John xiv. 23. They are best learnt in retirement, (C.) and from our great teacher. Mic. iv. 2. M.

VER. 4. Jerusalem. Sept. add, "by the armies and powers of the field," as chap. ii. 7, and iii. 5. H.

VER. 5. Flowing. Thus speak the companions of the spouse; and the bridegroom, turning to her alone, reminds her of an adventure. The Jews would put this in the mouth of the spouse. C.—Corrupted. Christ redeemed Eve, who had been seduced to eat the forbidden fruit, and by his sacred blood on the cross awoke and healed our fallen nature. C.

VER. 6. Arm. Working by charity. Gal. v. 6. H.—Women in the East imprint what they like most on their bosom and arms, or carry bracelets and gems on those parts, with similar inscriptions. Osee ii. 2; Isa. iii. 20. S. Clem. Pæd. i. . . . Christ must live in us. C.—Tota ejus species exprimitur in nobis. S.

6 Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thy arm: for love is strong as death: jealousy is hard as hell, the lamps thereof are fire and flames.

7 Many waters cannot quench charity, neither can the floods drown it: if a man should give all the substance of his house for love, he shall despise it as nothing.

8 Our sister is little, and hath no breasts. What shall we do to our sister in the day when she is to be spoken to?

9 If she be a wall, let us build upon it bulwarks of silver: if she be a door, let us join it together with boards of cedar.

10 I am a wall: and my breasts are as a tower, since I am become in his presence as one finding peace.

11 The peaceable had a vineyard, in that which hath people: he let out the same to keepers, every man bringeth for the fruit thereof a thousand pieces of silver.

12 My vineyard is before me. A thousand are for thee, the peaceable, and two hundred for them that keep the fruit thereof.

13 Thou that dwellest in the gardens, the friends hearken: make me hear thy voice.

14 Flee away, O my beloved, and be like to the roe, and to the young hart upon the mountains of aromatical spices.

Amb. Isaac, 8.—Jealousy. That is, zealous and burning love. Ch.—Hell. Or the grave, which subdues all. C.—Christ gave his life to redeem mankind, and the martyrs have joyfully endured torments and death, to evince their love. C.—Flames. Heb. "a flame of God," or most vehement. H.

VER. 7. Drown it. As other fires may be extinguished. He who sinks under persecution has not real charity. Temptation does not weaken a person, but shows what he is. Eccli. xxxiv. 9. C.

VER. 8. Our sister. Christ styles the Church his own and the synagogue's sister, promising her many benefits. W.—Spoken to. The synagogue had but few to give her proper instructions. M.—But Christ would provide for her, if she were not wanting to herself. H.

VER. 9. Cedar. Procuring for her a rich and steady husband to protect her. These are the words of the bridegroom. The Christian Church seemed weak at first. But her pastors and martyrs caused her to triumph over all the powers of hell. C.—Those who correspond with the first grace, are furnished with others. M.

VER. 12. Before me. I am satisfied with my spouse.—The peaceable. Heb. and Sept. "Solomon." H.—Retain them, and also pay the keepers their wages. I envy not all the treasures of the world; nor would put them in competition with my vineyard, or spouse. The synagogue of Moses and Solomon degenerated, while the Church of Christ has continued faithful, and has always some good workmen. S. Greg. Ven. Bede, &c. C.

VER. 13. Hearken. Christ, before his ascension, exhorts his Church to present her petitions. He is always ready to hear her, and to grant her aid in every emergency. See S. Amb. de Virg. xvi. 99.—The virtuous pray that her requests may be granted, (H.) and are eager to know what they are. M.

VER. 14. Flee. The Church consents that her beloved should ascend to heaven, as he still remains with her. Ven. Bede. S. Bern. Ser. 9. Qui habitat. C.—The whole Church militant requests that he would ascend thither, for the good of all his servants, begging for an abundant supply of grace, that we may ascend the high mountains of perfect charity, and zeal for God's honour: and that he would make our souls such hills and gardens, adorned with all the flowers and fruits of virtue, in which he may vouchsafe to dwell. Amen. W.—Flee to heaven. and draw me with thee. Chap. i. 4. M.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM.

This Book is so called because it treats of the excellence of WISDOM, the means to obtain it, and the happy fruits it produces. It is written in the person of Solomon, and contains his sentiments. But it is uncertain who was the writer. It abounds with instructions and exhortations to kings and magistrates to administer justice in the commonwealth, teaching all kinds of virtues under the general names of justice and wisdom. It contains also many prophecies of Christ's coming, passion, resurrection, and other Christian mysteries. The whole may be divided into three parts: In the first six chapters the author admonishes all superiors to love and exercise justice and wisdom. In the next three he teacheth that wisdom proceedeth only from God, and is procured by prayer, and a good life. In the other ten chapters he sheweth the excellent effects and utility of wisdom and justice. Ch.—S. Iræn., S. Clem. Alex., Origen, S. Athan., &c. attribute this book to Solomon and though S. Jerom and S. Aug. call this in question, they maintain its Divine authority. The Councils of Carthage, 419, Florence, Trent, &c., declare this book canonical, (W.) agreeably to the ancient Fathers. S. Aug. Præd. 14, and de Civ. Dei, xvii. 20, &c.—Philo (S. Jer.) the elder, (W. M.) one of the Sept., (Geneb.,) might compile this work from the sentences of Solomon, preserved by tradition, as Sirach's son did that of Ecclesiasticus (W.); or it is styled "Solomon's Wisdom," (Sept. II.) on account of its resembling his works, in like manner as the Second of Kings is called Samuel's, though he wrote none of that book. W.—Sixtus (Bib. 8, Hæc. 9) and others maintain that this was written originally in Heb., and some think by Solomon; being translated by the Sept. But these go too far. C.—The first nine chapters seem, however, to be the production of Solomon, though the latter may have been added by the Greek translator, (Houbigant,) who must, therefore, have been Divinely inspired. H.—The sentiments are very grand, (C.) and contain a prediction of the sufferings of the just one, whence we may infer that the name of the author was originally in the title, like that of all other prophets. The arguments which Calnet adduces to prove that Solomon was not the author of the first part of this work, may easily be refuted. In the New Testament that part is frequently quoted, whence we may gather that it was allowed to be the work of Solomon. Houbig. præf. p. 176.—Some style this work Panaretos, as being an exhortation to all virtues. C.—All the five sapiential books (Prov., &c.) are cited under the title of Wisdom in the Missal. Superiors are here admonished to act with justice, and taught that wisdom is to be obtained by prayer, and by a good life. Chap. ix. Its effects and utility (W.) form the subject of the latter part. See Apocrypha, p. 667. H.

CHAPTER I.

An exhortation to seek God sincerely, who cannot be deceived, and desireth not our death.

LOVE justice, *you that are the judges of the earth. Think of the Lord in goodness, and seek him in simplicity of heart:

2 ^bFor he is found by them that tempt him not: and he sheweth himself to them that have faith in him.

3 For perverse thoughts separate from God: and his power, when it is tried, reproveth the unwise:

4 For wisdom will not enter into a malicious soul, nor dwell in a body subject to sins.

5 For the Holy Spirit of discipline will flee from the deceitful, and will withdraw himself from thoughts that are without understanding, and he shall not abide when iniquity cometh in.

6 ^cFor the spirit of wisdom is benevolent, and will not acquit the evil speaker from his lips: ^dfor God is witness of his reins, and he is a true searcher of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue.

7 ^eFor the Spirit of the Lord hath filled the whole world: and that, which containeth all things, hath knowledge of the voice.

8 Therefore he that speaketh unjust things, cannot be hid, neither shall the chastising judgment pass him by.

9 For inquisition shall be made into the thoughts of the ungodly, and the hearing of his words shall come to God, to the chastising of his iniquities.

10 For the ear of jealousy heareth all things, and the tumult of murmuring shall not be hid.

11 Keep yourselves, therefore, from murmuring, which profiteth nothing, and refrain your tongue from detraction, for an obscure speech shall not go for nought: and the mouth that believeth, killeth the soul.

12 Seek not death in the error of your life, neither procure ye destruction by the works of your hands.

^a 3 Kings iii. 9: Isa. lvi. 1.—^b 2 Par. xv. 2.—^c Gal. v. 22.—^d Jer. xvii. 10.—^e Isa. vi. 3.
^f Eccl. xviii. 32, and xxxiii. 11.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Goodness. Entertain just sentiments of the Deity, and avoid all duplicity. This truth is placed in the strongest light in the first five chapters, or preface.

VER. 4. Subject. Or, "enslaved to sin." H.—Soul and body are intimately connected, so that the actions of one defile the other, and banish wisdom.

VER. 5. Discipline. The instructive light of the Holy Ghost.—Understanding. Those who deny God or Providence, (C.) and lead a wicked life, are abandoned. H.

VER. 7. That. S. Aug. reads hic, "this who," more correctly than hoc, as it refers to the Spirit, (C.) which having made and filled all things, must be perfectly acquainted with every transaction. H.

VER. 10. Jealousy. God is strong and jealous. Exod. xx. C.

VER. 12. Seek not with such eagerness (zelare) your own ruin, (C.) by an evil life, (W.) or rather throw not the blame on death, as if you were necessitated to sin. God created man to be immortal.

VER. 14. Health. Good. Gen. i. 31. C.—Poison, or medicine, (W.) medicamentum. W.

13 ^fFor God made not death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the living.

14 For he created all things, that they might be: and he made the nations of the earth for health: and there is no poison of destruction in them, nor kingdom of hell upon the earth.

15 For justice is perpetual and immortal.

16 But the wicked, with works and words have called it ^gto them: and esteeming it a friend, have fallen away, and have made a covenant with it: because they are worthy to be of the part thereof.

CHAP. II.

The vain reasonings of the wicked: their persecuting the just, especially the Son of God.

FOR they have said, reasoning with themselves, but not right: ^h"The time of our life is short and tedious, and in the end of a man there is no remedy, and no man hath been known to have returned from hell:

2 For we are born of nothing, and after this we shall be as if we had not been: for the breath in our nostrils is smoke: and speech a spark to move our heart,

3 Which being put out, our body shall be ashes, and our spirit shall be poured abroad as soft air, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dispersed as a mist, which is driven away by the beams of the sun, and overpowered with the heat thereof:

4 And our name in time shall be forgotten, and no man shall have any remembrance of our works.

5 ⁱFor our time is as the passing of a shadow, and there is no going back of our end: for it is fast sealed, and no man returneth:

6 ^kCome, therefore, and let us enjoy the good things that are present, and let us speedily use the creatures as in youth.

7 Let us fill ourselves with costly wine, and ointments: and let not the flower of the time pass by us.

8 Let us crown ourselves with roses, before they be withered: let no meadow escape our riot.

^g Isa. xxviii. 15.—^h Job vii. 1, and xiv. 1.—ⁱ 1 Par. xxix. 15.—^k Isa. xxii. 13, and lvi. 12;
^l 1 Cor. xv. 32.

VER. 16. It. Sept. avrov.—Death. The wicked strive (M.) to draw upon themselves the second death, (C.) as they will not repent. W. Isa. xxviii. 15. H.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Right. He shows how the wicked brought death into the world, and expresses the sentiments of the Epicureans, as in Ecclesiastes. C.—Remedy. Lit. "refreshment." Sept. "healing."—Hell, or the grave. H.—They reject as fabulous the accounts of people being raised to life by miracle. C.

VER. 2. Nothing. Sept. "by chance." C.—Smoke, or vanishes like it.—Speech may be used for "thing." Speech is an effect of the rational soul, as a spark comes from fire. C.

VER. 5. Sealed, like one in the tomb. Matt. xxvii. 66. The Epicureans were well convinced of the fragility of our nature: but they drew false inferences from it, pretending that we should enjoy ourselves now, as there will be no future life. C.

VER. 6. Come. From the disbelief of future rewards and punishments proceeds the epicure's life. W.

VER. 7. Time. Sept. Alex. "of spring." H.—Youth is the spring of life. The voluptuous conclude, from the transitory nature of things, that we should make use of them. Would it not be more rational to despise them? C.

9 Let none of us go without his part in luxury: let us every where leave tokens of joy: for this is our portion, and this our lot.

10 Let us oppress the poor just man, and not spare the widow, nor honour the ancient grey hairs of the aged.

11 But let our strength be the law of justice: for that which is feeble, is found to be nothing worth.

12 Let us, therefore, lie in wait for the just, because he is not for our turn, and he is contrary to our doings, and upbraideth us with transgressions of the law, and divulgeth against us the sins of our way of life.

13 ^aHe boasteth that he hath the knowledge of God, and calleth himself the son of God.

14 ^bHe is become a censurer of our thoughts.

15 He is grievous unto us, even to behold: for his life is not like other men's, and his ways are very different.

16 We are esteemed by him as triflers, and he abstaineth from our ways as from filthiness, and he preferreth the latter end of the just, and glorieth that he hath God for his Father.

17 Let us see then if his words be true, and let us prove what shall happen to him, and we shall know what his end shall be.

18 ^cFor if he be the true son of God, he will defend him, and will deliver him from the hands of his enemies.

19 Let us examine him by outrages and tortures, that we may know his meekness, and try his patience.

20 ^dLet us condemn him to a most shameful death: for there shall be respect had unto him by his words.

21 These things they thought, and were deceived: for their own malice blinded them.

22 And they knew not the secrets of God, nor hoped for the wages of justice, nor esteemed the honour of holy souls.

23 ^eFor God created man incorruptible, and to the image of his own likeness he made him.

24 But by the envy of the devil, death came into the world:

25 And they follow him that are of his side.

CHAP. III.

The happiness of the just: and the unhappiness of the wicked.

BUT ^fthe souls of the just are in the hand of God, and the torment of death shall not touch them.

2 In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die: and their departure was taken for misery:

^a Matt. xxvii. 42.—^b Psal. xxi. 9.—^c Jer. xi. 19.—^d Jer. xi. 19.—^e Gen. i. 27, and ii. 7, and v. 1; Eccl. xvii. 1.

VER. 12. Just. Infidels are not content to live in riot: they also persecute the just. W.—This passage points out the conduct of the Jews towards our Saviour in so striking a manner, that Grotius would assert it has been altered by some Christian. But the Fathers adduce it as a clear prediction (C.) of the Jewish malice. Matt. xxvii. 41; Mark xiv. 53. W.

VER. 13. Knowledge. The prophets spoke to sinners in the name of God, and many of them lost their lives in the cause.

VER. 20. Words. Or he shall be punished for what he has said. Syr., Vat., &c. Matt. xxvi. 61. C.—We shall hence form a judgment of his real merits, (M.) unless this be spoken ironically; as if the just had foolishly flattered himself with the Divine protection. Matt. xxvii. 43. H.

VER. 22. Secrets. The disbelief of mysteries leads to a dissolute life, and to the persecution of the just. W.—The pagans knew not the advantages of suffering, and even the apostles were ignorant of the mystery of the cross till after the resurrection. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Of death, is not in Sept. During life the just are protected by God, (Luke xii. 7,) and still more in death. This passage is very applicable to martyrs. C.

VER. 2. Die. In this the wicked are not under a mistake; but they err

3 And their going away from us, for utter destruction but they are in peace.

4 And though in the sight of men they suffered torments, their hope is full of immortality.

5 Afflicted in few things, in many they shall be well rewarded: because God hath tried them, and found them worthy of himself.

6 As gold in the furnace, he hath proved them, and as a victim of a holocaust, he hath received them, and in time there shall be respect had to them.

7 ^hThe just shall shine, and shall run to and fro like sparks among the reeds.

8 ⁱThey shall judge nations, and rule over people, and their Lord shall reign for ever.

9 They that trust in him shall understand the truth: and they that are faithful in love, shall rest in him: for grace and peace are to his elect.

10 But the wicked shall be punished according to their own devices: who have neglected the just, and have revolted from the Lord.

11 For he that rejecteth wisdom, and discipline, is unhappy: and their hope is vain, and their labours without fruit, and their works unprofitable.

12 Their wives are foolish, and their children wicked.

13 Their offspring is cursed, for happy is the barren: and the undefiled, that hath not known bed in sin: she shall have fruit in the visitation of holy souls.

14 ^kAnd the eunuch, that hath not wrought iniquity with his hands, nor thought wicked things against God: for the precious gift of faith shall be given to him, and a most acceptable lot in the temple of God.

15 For the fruit of good labours is glorious, and the root of wisdom never faileth.

16 But the children of adulterers shall not come to perfection, and the seed of the unlawful bed shall be rooted out.

17 And if they live long, they shall be nothing regarded, and their last old age shall be without honour.

18 And if they die quickly, they shall have no hope, nor speech of comfort in the day of trial.

19 For dreadful are the ends of a wicked race.

CHAP. IV.

The difference between the chaste and the adulterous generations: and between the death of the just and the wicked.

^f Gen. iii. 1.—^g Deut. xxxiii. 3; Infra, v. 4.—^h Matt. xiii. 41.
ⁱ 1 Cor. vi. 2.—^k Isa. lvi. 3.

when they suppose that the just shall be no more. If the hopes of the pious were confined to this world, they would be the most miserable of all. 1 Cor. xv. 19. C.

VER. 6. Holocaust. The sufferings (M.) which they have voluntarily endured cause them to be pleasing to God. H. Zac. xiii. 9.—Time of judgment, of death. C.—Sept. "at the time of their visitation, they shall shine, and," &c., ver. 7. Matt. xiii. 43. H. Zac. xii. 6.

VER. 8. Judge. All the just shall approve of God's condemning the wicked. W.—They shall be invested with power, (Apoc. ii. 26; Matt. xix. 28,) which, like that of Christ, will be of a spiritual nature, (H.) and will appear most terrible at the last day. Matt. xxviii. 18; Apoc. xix. 6. C.

VER. 9. Elect. Sept. add, "and a visitation for his saints." Charity secures both faith and hope; which, without it, are unavailing to happiness. H.

VER. 12. Foolish. Dissolute, as the sequel shows. Prov. ix. 13; Rom. i. 26. The family of the wicked imitate his conduct, and become his torment. C.

VER. 13. Barren. The Jews deemed this a reproach.—Fruit. Her good works shall serve instead of children for her glory at the hour of death.

VER. 16. Perfection. Lit. "shall be in consummation," or wholly destroyed. H.—They shall not come to age, or Sept. "initiated."

O HOW beautiful is the chaste generation with glory : for the memory thereof is immortal : because it is known both with God and with men.

2 When it is present, they imitate it : and they desire it, when it hath withdrawn itself, and it triumpheth crowned for ever, winning the reward of undefiled conflicts.

3 But the multiplied brood of the wicked shall not thrive, and bastard slips shall not take deep root, nor any fast foundation.

4 *And if they flourish in branches for a time, yet standing not fast, they shall be shaken with the wind, and through the force of winds they shall be rooted out.

5 For the branches not being perfect, shall be broken, and their fruits shall be unprofitable, and sour to eat, and fit for nothing.

6 For the children that are born of unlawful beds, are witnesses of wickedness against their parents in their trial.

7 But the just man, if he be prevented with death, shall be in rest.

8 For venerable old age is not that of long time, nor counted by the number of years : but the understanding of a man is grey hairs.

9 And a spotless life is old age.

10 ^bHe pleased God, and was beloved, and living among sinners, he was translated.

11 He was taken away, lest wickedness should alter his understanding, or deceit beguile his soul.

12 For the bewitching of vanity obscureth good things, and the wandering of concupiscence overturneth the innocent mind.

13 Being made perfect in a short space, he fulfilled a long time.

14 For his soul pleased God : therefore he hastened to bring him out of the midst of iniquities : but the people see this, and understand not, nor lay up such things in their hearts :

15 That the grace of God, and his mercy is with his saints, and that he hath respect to his chosen.

16 But the just that is dead, condemneth the wicked that are living, and youth soon ended, the long life of the unjust.

17 For they shall see the end of the wise man, and shall not understand what God hath designed for him, and why the Lord hath set him in safety.

^a Jer. xvii. 6 ; Matt. vii. 27.—^b Heb. xi. 5.—^c Supra, iii. 2.

18 They shall see him, and shall despise him : but the Lord shall laugh them to scorn.

19 And they shall fall after this without honour, and be a reproach among the dead for ever : for he shall burst them puffed up and speechless, and shall shake them from the foundations, and they shall be utterly laid waste : they shall be in sorrow, and their memory shall perish.

20 They shall come with fear at the thought of their sins, and their iniquities shall stand against them to convict them.

CHAP. V.

The fruitless repentance of the wicked in another world : the reward of the just.

THEN shall the just stand with great constancy against those that have afflicted them, and taken away their labours.

2 These seeing it, shall be troubled with terrible fear, and shall be amazed at the suddenness of their unexpected salvation,

3 Saying within themselves, repenting, and groaning for anguish of spirit : These are they, whom we had sometime in derision, and for a parable of reproach.

4 *We fools esteemed their life madness, and their end without honour.

5 Behold, how they are numbered among the children of God, and their lot is among the saints.

6 Therefore we have erred from the way of truth, and the light of justice hath not shined unto us, and the sun of understanding hath not risen upon us.

7 We wearied ourselves in the way of iniquity and destruction, and have walked through hard ways, but the way of the Lord we have not known.

8 What hath pride profited us ? or what advantage hath the boasting of riches brought us ?

9 ^aAll those things are passed away like a shadow, and like a post that runneth on,

10 ^cAnd as a ship, that passeth through the waves . whereof when it is gone by, the trace cannot be found, nor the path of its keel in the waters :

11 Or as when a bird flieth through the air, of the passage of which no mark can be found, but only the sound of the wings beating the light air, and parting it by the force of her flight : she moved her wings, and hath flown through, and there is no mark found afterwards of her way :

^d 1 Par. xxix. 15 ; Supra, ii. 5.—^e Prov. xxx. 19.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Glory. The offspring of the chaste is happy, (C.) and honourable (H.) ; very different from that of adulterers. C.—Bodily chastity is a great virtue ; but purity of faith is more requisite to please God, being the foundation of all virtues. W.

VER. 3. Slips. Vitulanina, a word to which the people were so habituated, that it could not be altered. S. Aug. de Doct. 12.—Yet some read better (C.) plantations. S. Bonav. Lyran.

VER. 7. Death. He is always ready ; but dies in his youth. C.—Whenever death comes, it is for his advantage, and if he depart in his youth, his immaculate life is to be preferred before the old age of the wicked. Ver. 16. W.

VER. 11. Away. Like Enoch. Gen. v. 24 ; Heb. xi. 5. C.—“Bad conversations corrupt the best manners.” 1 Cor. xv. 33 ; Isa. lvii. 1. But could not God have supported the just under temptation ? Undoubtedly. His judgments are unsearchable. S. Aug. de Præd. 14. C.—The holy doctor thence proves that those who die in a just state might have forfeited it, if they had lived longer.

VER. 12. Bewitching. Thus the pleasures and goods of the world are well described. For as fascination consists in a delusion of the people, who suppose that their senses are deceived by vain appearances ; so it is the mistake of worldlings to believe that the objects of their desires are real goods, and contain no danger.

VER. 19. Speechless. The damned shall have no excuse, being condemned by their own conscience, (W.) which shall be instead of a thousand witnesses. M.—In three words three different punishments are specified.

VER. 20. Against. Conscience will condemn or acquit those who have no other law. Rom. ii. 15. C.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Then. At the day of judgment. The just and the reprobate know each other's condition. Luke xvi. 20.—Labours. Defrauding them of their wages, (Lev. xix. 13,) or plundering them. Sept. “despised, (C.) or frustrated his labours.” H.

VER. 3. Within. Or among themselves.—Repenting. In despair.—Reproach. We diverted ourselves with turning them to ridicule. C.

VER. 5. God. As they styled themselves truly, through the merits of Christ Chap. ii. 18.

VER. 6. Understanding is not in the Rom. (C.) or Alex. copy. H.—Some read “of justice.” Eph. v. 11. C.

VER. 9. Post. Sept. “fame.”

12 Or as when an arrow is shot at a mark, the divided air quickly cometh together again, so that the passage thereof is not known :

13 So we also being born, forthwith ceased to be : and have been able to show no mark of virtue : but ^a consumed in our wickedness.

14 Such things as these the sinners said in hell :

15 ^aFor the hope of the wicked is as dust, which is blown away with the wind, and as a thin froth which is dispersed by the storm : and a smoke that is scattered abroad by the wind : and as the remembrance of a guest of one day that passeth by.

16 But the just shall live for evermore : and their reward is with the Lord, and the care of them with the Most High.

17 Therefore shall they receive a kingdom of glory, and a crown of beauty at the hand of the Lord : for with his right hand he will cover them, and with his holy arm he will defend them.

18 ^bAnd his zeal will take armour, and he will arm the creature for the revenge of his enemies.

19 He will put on justice as a breastplate, and will take true judgment instead of a helmet :

20 He will take equity for an invincible shield :

21 And he will sharpen his severe wrath for a spear, and the whole world shall fight with him against the unwise.

22 Then shafts of lightning shall go directly from the clouds, as from a bow well bent, they shall be shot out, and shall fly to the mark.

23 And thick hail shall be cast upon them from the stone-casting wrath : the water of the sea shall rage against them, and the rivers shall run together in a terrible manner.

24 A mighty wind shall stand up against them, and as a whirlwind shall divide them : and their iniquity shall bring all the earth to a desert, and wickedness shall overthrow the thrones of the mighty.

CHAP. VI.

An address to the princes to seek after wisdom : she is easily found by those that seek her.

WISDOM ^cis better than strength : and a wise man is better than a strong man.

2 Hear, therefore, ye kings, and understand, learn ye that are judges of the ends of the earth.

^a Psal. i. 4 ; Prov. x. 28, and xl. 7.—^b Psal. xvii. 40 ; Eph. vi. 13.—^c Eccli. ix. 18.
^d Rom. xiii. 1.

VER. 14. Such, &c. This is not in the original ; but supplied to complete the sense, (C.) as otherwise the following remarks would seem to be the confession of the damned in hell, (H.) or before the judgment-seat. Castro.

VER. 15. Dust. Sept., Psal. i. 4, Lit. "like the tender beard, (H) or wool." Lamugo. C.

VER. 17. Crown. The Scripture thus represents the glory of the blessed, because there is nothing more desirable than independence. But the happiness of the elect will be to throw their crowns at the foot of God's throne, (Apoc. vii. 10. C.) in whom they find every advantage. S. Aug. Ser. 1, de Vit. Apost.

VER. 18. Armour. Sept. "he will take zeal, his complete armour." H.—See Isa. lix. 17 ; Eph. vi. 16. C.—The misery of the damned is unchangeable. W.

VER. 21. Unwise. "As we have sinned in all, we are wounded by every thing." S. Greg. Hom. 25. Ev.

VER. 23. Casting. He alludes to the ballista, used to throw stones. Jos. x. 11.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Wisdom, &c. This is not in Greek, and seems out of its place, being taken from Prov. xvi. 32, or Eccles. ix. 16. C.—The connexion with the preceding is observable in the next verse. H.

VER. 2. Kings. The author puts these words in the mouth of Solomon to give them greater weight.

VER. 4. Power. All power is from God, and to be respected, even though the

3 Give ear, you that rule the people, and that please yourselves in multitudes of nations :

4 ^aFor power is given you by the Lord, and strength by the Most High, who will examine your works : and search out your thoughts :

5 Because being ministers of his kingdom, you have not judged rightly, nor kept the law of justice, nor walked according to the will of God.

6 Horribly and speedily will he appear to you : for a most severe judgment shall be for them that bear rule.

7 For to him that is little, mercy is granted : but the mighty shall be mightily tormented.

8 ^aFor God will not except any man's person, neither will he stand in awe of any man's greatness : for he made the little and the great, and he hath equally care of all.

9 But a greater punishment is ready for the more mighty.

10 To you, therefore, O kings, are these my words, that you may learn wisdom, and not fall from it.

11 For they that have kept just things justly, shall be justified : and they that have learned these things, shall find what to answer.

12 Covet ye, therefore, my words, and love them, and you shall have instruction.

13 Wisdom is glorious, and never fadeth away, and is easily seen by them that love her, and is found by them that seek her.

14 She preventeth them that covet her, so that she first showeth herself unto them.

15 He that awaketh early to seek her, shall not labour : for he shall find her sitting at his door.

16 To think, therefore, upon her, is perfect understanding : and he that watcheth for her, shall quickly be secure.

17 For she goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her, and she showeth herself to them cheerfully in the ways, and meeteth them with all providence.

18 For the beginning of her is the most true desire or discipline.

19 And the care of discipline is love : and love is the keeping of her laws : and the keeping of her laws is the firm foundation of incorruption :

20 And incorruption bringeth near to God.

^e Deut. x. 17 ; 2 Par. xix. 7 ; Eccli. xxxv. 15 ; Acts x. 34 ; Rom. ii. 11 ; Gal. ii. 6 ; Eph. vi. 9 ; Col. iii. 25 ; 1 Pet. i. 17.

magistrate should sometimes abuse his authority. W. Rom. xiii. 1.—They must render an account to the common master. 2 Par. xix. 6.

VER. 6. Rule. How severely did God chastise Moses, David, and Ezechias.

VER. 7. Little, and ignorant. Those in power ought to know, and to perform their duty.

VER. 8. Equally. In proportion to their exigencies, or he punishes all as they deserve. It is not clear that he speaks of grace, as the Pelagians would assert, (C.) abusing this passage. See S. Aug. Ep. 106 or 187.

VER. 9. Mighty. This cannot be too often inculcated, (ver. 6,) lest the great should forget God and themselves. C.

VER. 11. Just. Sept. "holy." The Jewish judges were generally priests. Answer. The sovereign Judge, to whom Job and David confidently appeal.

VER. 13. Seek her. With the assistance of Divine grace. Deut. xxx. 11, Rom. x. 6. The advantages of wisdom invite us to seek her. C.

VER. 15. Door. Ready to introduce herself. H. Prov. i. 20, and viii. 34, and ix. 1.

VER. 17. Providence. To facilitate our just designs. Prov. ix. M.—She is as the watch to save us. H.

VER. 18. Discipline. We must begin with a sincere desire of instruction, and submit to correction, (C.) if we would come near to God. Ver. 20. H.

21 Therefore the desire of wisdom bringeth to the everlasting kingdom.

22 If then your delight be in thrones, and sceptres, O ye kings of the people, love wisdom, that you may reign for ever

23 Love the light of wisdom, all ye that bear rule over peoples.

24 Now what wisdom is, and what was her origin, I will declare: and I will not hide from you the mysteries of God, but will seek her out from the beginning of her birth, and bring the knowledge of her to light, and will not pass over the truth:

25 Neither will I go with consuming envy: for such a man shall not be partaker of wisdom.

26 Now the multitude of the wise is the welfare of the whole world: and a wise king is the upholding of the people.

27 Receive, therefore, instruction by my words, and it shall be profitable to you.

CHAP. VII.

The excellence of wisdom: how she is to be found.

I MYSELF also am a mortal man, like all others, and of the race of him, that was first made of the earth, and in the womb of my mother I was fashioned to be flesh.

2 In the time of ten months I was compacted in blood, of the seed of man, *and the pleasure of sleep concurring.

3 And being born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, that is made alike, and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do.

4 I was nursed in swaddling cloths, and with great cares.

5 For none of the kings had any other beginning of birth.

6 'For all men have one entrance into life, and the like going out.

7 Wherefore I wished, and understanding was given me: and I called upon God, and the spirit of wisdom came upon me:

8 And I preferred her before kingdoms and thrones, and esteemed riches nothing in comparison of her.

9 *Neither did I compare unto her any precious stone: for all gold, in comparison of her, is as a little sand; and silver, in respect to her, shall be counted as clay.

10 I loved her above health and beauty, and chose to have her instead of light: for her light cannot be put out.

11 'Now all good things came to me together with her, and innumerable riches through her hands,

12 And I rejoiced in all these: for this wisdom went

VER. 26. World. The wicked is ransomed and healed by the wise. Philo.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Myself. Solomon acquired wisdom, and all others may do it.

VER. 7. Wherefore, as I had no advantage over others naturally, I asked for the wisdom requisite to fill so important an office. 3 Kings ix. 10. C.—Solomon, whose sayings are here recorded, prayed for wisdom. W.

VER. 8. Preferred. I did not ask for extensive dominions, &c. C.—In Prov. viii. 10, &c., as well as here, some things refer to the uncreated, and others to created wisdom. M.

VER. 13. Not. Eccli. xx. 32; Matt. xxv. 25. Such disinterestedness deserves to be imitated by all the learned. Chap. vi. 25.

before me, and I knew not that she was the mother of them all.

13 Which I have learned without guile, and communicate without envy, and her riches I hide not.

14 For she is an infinite treasure to men: which they that use, become the friends of God, being commended for the gift of discipline.

15 And God hath given to me to speak as I would, and to conceive thoughts worthy of those things that are given me: because he is the guide of wisdom, and the director of the wise:

16 For in his hand are both we, and our words, and all wisdom, and the knowledge and skill of works.

17 For he hath given me the true knowledge of the things that are: to know the disposition of the whole world, and the virtues of the elements,

18 The beginning, and ending, and midst of the times, the alterations of their courses, and the changes of seasons,

19 The revolutions of the year, and the dispositions of the stars,

20 The natures of living creatures, and rage of wild beasts, the force of winds, and reasonings of men, the diversities of plants, and the virtues of roots,

21 And all such things as are hid, and not foreseen, I have learned: for wisdom, which is the worker of all things, taught me.

22 For in her is the spirit of understanding: holy, one, manifold, subtile, eloquent, active, undefiled, sure, sweet, loving that which is good, quick, which nothing hindereth, beneficent,

23 Gentle, kind, stedfast, assured, secure, having all power, overseeing all things, and containing all spirits: intelligible, pure, subtile:

24 For wisdom is more active than all active things: and reacheth every where, by reason of her purity.

25 For she is a vapour of the power of God, and a certain pure emanation of the glory of the Almighty God: and therefore no defiled thing cometh into her.

26 *For she is the brightness of eternal light, and the unspotted mirror of God's Majesty, and the image of his goodness.

27 And being but one, she can do all things: and remaining in herself the same, she reneweth all things, and through nations conveyeth herself into holy souls, she maketh the friends of God and prophets.

28 For God loveth none but him that dwelleth with wisdom.

VER. 18. Times. Or "things," S. Amb. Abr. ii. 7.—Times past, present, and future, (Orig. hom. 21,) or the three seasons; autumn, the beginning of the civil year, summer, the end, and spring or winter, the middle. Grot.—Their. The "seasons," as the Greek implies, (C.) and the vicissitudes of heat and cold. M.

VER. 22. Holy. These are the proper epithets of the spirit of wisdom, (W.) or of the Holy Ghost. Corn. a Lap. Lorin.

VER. 24. For wisdom, which is the same with the Spirit, and the Son of God. ver. 25.

VER. 25. Glory. As S. Paul testifies of Jesus Christ. 1 Heb. i. 3. Euseb. Demon. Evang. iv. 5.—It may also be understood of the wisdom given to the prophets and saints. Ver. 27.

VER. 26. Goodness. This is particularly noticed, as he speaks of the favours received.

VER. 27. Prophets. No age or nation has been left destitute by God. Among the Gentiles Job was a saint. H.—The philosophers also knew God, (Rom. i. 2:) and taught many important truths, (C.) though they erred in other respects, and dishonoured their profession.

29 For she is more beautiful than the sun, and above all the order of the stars: being compared with the light, she is found before it.

30 For after this cometh night, but no evil can overcome wisdom.

CHAP. VIII.

Further praises of wisdom: and her fruits.

SHE reacheth, therefore, from end to end mightily, and ordereth all things sweetly.

2 Her have I loved, and have sought her out from my youth, and have desired to take for my spouse, and I became a lover of her beauty.

3 She glorifieth her nobility by being conversant with God: yea, and the Lord of all things hath loved her.

4 For it is she that teacheth the knowledge of God, and is the chooser of his works.

5 And if riches be desired in life, what is richer than wisdom, which maketh all things?

6 And if sense do work: who is a more artful worker than she of those things that are?

7 And if a man love justice: her labours have great virtues: for she teacheth temperance, and prudence, and justice, and fortitude, which are such things as men can have nothing more profitable in life.

8 And if a man desire much knowledge: she knoweth things past, and judgeth of things to come: she knoweth the subtilties of speeches, and the solutions of arguments: she knoweth signs and wonders before they be done, and the events of times and ages.

9 I purposed, therefore, to take her to me to live with me: knowing that she will communicate to me of her good things, and will be a comfort in my cares and grief.

10 For her sake I shall have glory among the multitude, and honour with the ancients, though I be young:

11 And I shall be found of a quick conceit in judgment, and shall be admired in the sight of the mighty, and the faces of princes shall wonder at me.

12 They shall wait for me when I hold my peace, and they shall look upon me when I speak; and if I talk much, they shall lay their hands on their mouth.

13 Moreover, by the means of her I shall have immortality: and shall leave behind me an everlasting memory to them that come after me.

14 I shall set the people in order: and nations shall be subject to me.

15 Terrible kings' hearing, shall be afraid of me:

^a 1 Kings iii. 9.—^b Psal. cxv. 16.

VER. 30. Evil. Or disgrace. Grot.—The brightest days are succeeded by night. The Divine wisdom never fails, though that of man is subject to change, as Solomon has taught us by his own woeful example. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. She. The uncreated wisdom is infinite; and the created is the most excellent of God's gifts. W.—Sweetly. God is every where present, (S. Bern.,) and directeth all with ease. S. Aug. Ep. ad Dard. q. 1.

VER. 4. Works. Directing us to imitate them as much as possible. H.—She teaches us how to refer all to God, (M.) while mere philosophers stop at vain speculations, and barren admiration of the Deity.

VER. 6. Are. Wisdom is an universal teacher. But she particularly inculcates virtue. All science which has not this tendency is vain. C.

VER. 8. Speeches. Rhetoric, (Grot.,) or doubtful matters, as Solomon discovered the real mother. 3 Kings iii. 27.—Arguments. Greek, "riddles," which was much in fashion. 3 Kings x. 1. C.—Wonders. Such as comets and eclipses. M.—Ages. Forming a judgment of futurity from past occurrences.

VER. 13. After me. He speaks to the great, who are more sensible of glory. Solomon's fame would have continued untarnished, if he had not fallen, (C.) and we may hope that he repented, and verified this prediction. H among the multitude I shall be found good, and valiant in war.

16 When I go into my house, I shall repose myself with her: for her conversation hath no bitterness, nor her company any tediousness, but joy and gladness.

17 'Thinking these things with myself, and pondering them in my heart, that to be allied to wisdom is immortality,

18 And that there is great delight in her friendship, and inexhaustible riches in the works of her hands, and in the exercise of conference with her, wisdom, and glory in the communication of her words: I went about seeking, that I might take her to myself.

19 And I was a witty child, and had received a good soul.

20 And whereas I was more good, I came to a body undefiled.

21 And as I knew that I could not otherwise be content, except God gave it, and this also was a point of wisdom, to know whose gift it was: I went to the Lord, and besought him, and said with my whole heart:

Solomon's prayer for wisdom.

GOD of my fathers, "and Lord of mercy, who hast made all things with thy word,

2 And by thy wisdom hast appointed man, that he should have dominion over the creature that was made by thee,

3 That he should order the world according to equity and justice, and execute justice with an upright heart:

4 Give me wisdom, that sitteth by thy throne, and cast me not off from among thy children:

5 "For I am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid, a weak man, and of short time, and falling short of the understanding of judgment and laws.

6 For if one be perfect among the children of men, yet if thy wisdom be not with him, he shall be nothing regarded.

7 'Thou hast chosen me to be king of thy people, and a judge of thy sons and daughters:

8 And hast commanded me to build a temple on thy holy mount, and an altar in the city of thy dwelling-place, a resemblance of thy holy tabernacle, which thou hast prepared from the beginning:

9 "And thy wisdom with thee, which knoweth thy works, which then also was present when thou madest the world, and knew what was agreeable to thy eyes, and what was right in thy commandments.

VER. 15. Of me. Wisdom is the best protection.—Good and valiant. These are the two most essential qualifications of kings.

VER. 19. Received. "By lot," sortitus, (H.) to exclude all preceding merit. S. Aug. de Gen. lit. x. 18.—Good soul. Natural dispositions (Pineda) are perfected by grace and labour. C.

VER. 21. Content. All good must come from God. H.—Chastity cannot be preserved without his aid. S. Aug. Conf. vi. 11.—Yet this seems not to be the literal sense. CHAP. IX. VER. 1. God. This prayer, which continues to the end of the book, is a paraphrase of 3 Kings iii. 6, &c., with several additional instructions, to remind people in authority of the love of justice. C.

10 Send her out of thy holy heaven, and from the throne of thy majesty, that she may be with me, and may labour with me, that I may know what is acceptable with thee:

11 For she knoweth and understandeth all things, and shall lead me soberly in my works, and shall preserve me by her power.

12 So shall my works be acceptable, and I shall govern thy people justly, and shall be worthy of the throne of my father.

13 *For who among men is he that can know the counsel of God? or who can think what the will of God is?

14 For the thoughts of mortal men are fearful, and our counsels uncertain.

15 For the corruptible body is a load upon the soul, and the earthly habitation presseth down the mind that museth upon many things.

16 And hardly do we guess aright at things that are upon earth: and with labour do we find the things that are before us. But the things that are in heaven, who shall search out?

17 And who shall know thy thought, except thou give wisdom, and send thy Holy Spirit from above:

18 And so the ways of them that are upon earth may be corrected, and men may learn the things that please thee?

19 For by wisdom they were healed, whosoever have pleased thee, O Lord, from the beginning.

CHAP. X.

What wisdom did for Adam, Noe, Abraham, Lot, Jacob, Joseph, and the people of Israel.

SHE preserved him, ^bthat was first formed by God, the father of the world, when he was created alone,

2 *And she brought him out of his sin, and gave him power to govern all things.

3 *But when the unjust went away from her in his anger, he perished by the fury wherewith he murdered his brother.

4 *For whose cause, when water destroyed the earth, wisdom healed it again, directing the course of the just by contemptible wood.

5 *Moreover, when the nations had conspired together to consent to wickedness, she knew the just, and preserved him without blame to God, and kept him strong against the compassion for his son.

6 *She delivered the just man, who fled from the wicked that were perishing, when the fire came down upon Pentapolis:

7 Whose land, for a testimony of their wickedness, is desolate, and smoketh to this day, and the trees bear fruits that ripen not, and a standing pillar of salt is a monument of an incredulous soul.

8 For regarding not wisdom, they did not only slip in this, that they were ignorant of good things, but they left also unto men a memorial of their folly, so that in the things in which they sinned, they could not so much as lie hid.

9 But wisdom hath delivered from sorrow them that attend upon her.

10 *She conducted the just, when he fled from his brother's wrath, through the right ways, and showed him the kingdom of God, and gave him the knowledge of the holy things, made him honourable in his labours, and accomplished his labours.

11 In the deceit of them that overreached him, she stood by him, and made him honourable.

12 She kept him safe from his enemies, and she defended him from seducers, and gave him a strong conflict, that he might overcome, and know that wisdom is mightier than all.

13 *She forsook not the just when he was sold, but delivered him from sinners: she went down with him into the pit.

14 *And in bands she left him not, till she brought him the sceptre of the kingdom, and power against those that oppressed him: and showed them to be liars that had accused him, and gave him everlasting glory.

15 *She delivered the just people, and blameless seed, from the nations that oppressed them.

16 She entered into the soul of the servant of God, and stood against dreadful kings in wonders and signs.

17 And she rendered to the just the wages of their labours, and conducted them in a wonderful way: and she was to them for a covert by day, and for the light of stars by night:

18 *And she brought them through the Red Sea, and carried them over through a great water.

19 But their enemies she drowned in the sea, and from the depth of hell she brought them out. *Therefore the just took the spoils of the wicked.

CHAP. XI.

Other benefits of wisdom to the people of God.

SHE^a prospered their works in the hands of the holy prophet.

2 They went through wildernesses that were not inhabited, and in desert places they pitched their tents.

3 ^bThey stood against their enemies, and revenged themselves of their adversaries.

4 ^cThey were thirsty, and they called upon thee, and water was given them out of the high rock, and a refreshment of their thirst out of the hard stone.

5 For by what things their enemies were punished, when their drink failed them, while the children of Israel abounded therewith, and rejoiced :

6 By the same things they in their need were benefited.

7 For instead of a fountain of an ever-running river, thou gavest human blood to the unjust.

8 And whilst they were diminished for a manifest reproof of their murdering the infants, thou gavest to thine abundant water unlooked for :

9 Showing by the thirst that was then, how thou didst exalt thine, and didst kill their adversaries.

10 For when they were tried, and chastised with mercy, they knew how the wicked were judged with wrath, and tormented.

11 For thou didst admonish and try them as a father : but the others, as a severe king, thou didst examine and condemn.

12 For whether absent or present, they were tormented alike.

13 For a double affliction came upon them, and a groaning for the remembrance of things past.

14 For when they heard that by their punishments the others were benefited, they remembered the Lord, wondering at the end of what was come to pass.

15 For whom they scorned before, when he was thrown out at the time of his being wickedly exposed to perish, him they admired in the end, when they saw the event : their thirsting being unlike to that of the just.

16 But for the foolish devices of their iniquity, ^dbecause some being deceived worshipped dumb serpents, and worthless beasts, thou didst send upon them a multitude of dumb beasts for vengeance :

17 That they might know that by what things a man sinneth, by the same also he is tormented.

18 For thy almighty hand, which made the world of matter without form, was not unable to send upon them a multitude of bears, or fierce lions,

19 Or unknown beasts of a new kind, full of rage : either breathing out a fiery vapour, ^eor sending forth a stinking smoke, or shooting horrible sparks out of their eyes :

20 Whereof not only the hurt might be able to destroy them, but also the very sight might kill them through fear.

21 Yea, and without these, they might have been slain with one blast, persecuted by their own deeds, and scattered by the breath of thy power : but thou hast ordered all things in measure, and number, and weight.

22 For great power always belonged to thee alone. and who shall resist the strength of thy arm ?

23 For the whole world before thee is as the least grain of the balance, and as a drop of the morning dew, that falleth down upon the earth.

24 But thou hast mercy upon all, because thou canst do all things, and overlookest the sins of men for the sake of repentance.

25 For thou lovest all things that are, and hatest none of the things which thou hast made : for thou didst not appoint, or make any thing hating it.

26 And how could any thing endure, if thou wouldst not ? or be preserved, if not called by thee ?

27 But thou sparest all : because they are thine, O Lord, who lovest souls.

CHAP. XII.

God's wisdom and mercy in his proceedings with the Chanaanites.

O HOW good and sweet is thy Spirit, O Lord, in all things !

2 And therefore thou chastisest them that err, by little and little : and admonishest them, and speakest to them, concerning the things wherein they offend : that leaving their wickedness, they may believe in thee, O Lord.

3 ^fFor, those ancient inhabitants of thy holy land whom thou didst abhor,

4 Because they did works hateful to thee by their sorceries, and wicked sacrifices,

5 And those merciless murderers of their own children and eaters of men's bowels, and devourers of blood from the midst of thy consecration,

6 And those parents sacrificing with their own hands helpless souls, it was thy will to destroy by the hands of our parents,

7 That the land which of all is most dear to thee, might receive a worthy colony of the children of God.

8 Yet even those thou sparedst as men, and didst send wasps forerunners of thy host, to destroy them by little and little.

9 Not that thou wast unable to bring the wicked under the just by war, or by cruel beasts, or with one rough word to destroy them at once :

10 *But executing thy judgments by degrees, thou gavest them place of repentance, not being ignorant that they were a wicked generation, and their malice natural, and that their thought could never be changed.

11 For it was a cursed seed from the beginning : neither didst thou for fear of any one give pardon to their sins.

12 For who shall say to thee : What hast thou done ? or who shall withstand thy judgment ? or who shall come before thee to be a revenger of wicked men ? or who shall accuse thee, if the nations perish, which thou hast made ?

13 For there is no other God but thou, ^bwho hast care of all, that thou shouldst show that thou dost not give judgment unjustly.

14 Neither shall king, nor tyrant, in thy sight inquire about them whom thou hast destroyed.

15 For so much then, as thou art just, thou orderest all things justly : thinking it not agreeable to thy power, to condemn him who deserveth not to be punished.

16 For thy power is the beginning of justice : and because thou art Lord of all, thou makest thyself gracious to all.

17 For thou showest thy power, when men will not believe thee to be absolute in power, and thou convincest the boldness of them that know thee not.

18 But thou being master of power, judgest with tranquillity, and with great favour disposest of us : for thy power is at hand when thou wilt.

19 But thou hast taught thy people by such works, that they may be just and humane, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope : because in judging, thou givest place for repentance for sins.

20 For if thou didst punish the enemies of thy servants, and that deserved to die, with so great deliberation, giving them time and place whereby they might be changed from their wickedness :

21 With what circumspection hast thou judged thy own children, to whose parents thou hast sworn, and made covenants of good promises ?

22 Therefore whereas thou chastisest us, thou scourgest our enemies very many ways, to the end that when we judge we may think on thy goodness : and when we are judged, we may hope for thy mercy.

^a Exod. xxv. 30 ; Deut. vii. 22.—^b 1 Pet. v. 7.—^c Supra, xi. 16 ; Rom. i. 23.

23 Wherefore thou hast also greatly tormented them, who, in their life, have lived foolishly and unjustly, by the same things which they worshipped.

24 *For they went astray for a long time in the ways of error, holding those things for gods which are the most worthless among beasts, living after the manner of children without understanding.

25 Therefore thou hast sent a judgment upon them, as senseless children, to mock them.

26 But they that were not amended by mockeries and reprehensions, experienced the worthy judgment of God.

27 For seeing, with indignation, that they suffered by those very things which they took for gods, when they were destroyed by the same, they acknowledged him the true God, whom in time past they denied that they knew : for which cause the end also of their condemnation came upon them.

CHAP. XIII.

Idolaters are inexcusable : and those most of all that worship for gods the works of the hands of men.

BUT *all men are vain, in whom there is not the knowledge of God : and who by these good things that are seen, could not understand him that is, neither by attending to the works have acknowledged who was the workman :

2 *But have imagined either the fire, or the wind, or the swift air, or the circle of the stars, or the great water, or the sun and moon, to be the gods that rule the world.

3 With whose beauty, if they, being delighted, took them to be gods : let them know how much the Lord of them is more beautiful than they : for the first author of beauty made all those things.

4 Or if they admired their power, and their effects let them understand by them, that he that made them, is mightier than they :

5 For by the greatness of the beauty, and of the creature, the Creator of them may be seen, so as to be known thereby.

6 But yet as to these they are less to be blamed. For they perhaps err, seeking God, and desirous to find him.

7 *For being conversant among his works, they search : and they are persuaded that the things are good which are seen.

8 But then again they are not to be pardoned.

9 For if they were able to know so much, as to make a judgment of the world : how did they not more easily find out the Lord thereof ?

CHAP. XIV.

The beginning of worshipping idols: and the effects thereof.

A GAIN, another designing to sail, and beginning to make his voyage through the raging waves, calleth upon a piece of wood more frail than the wood that carrieth him.

2 For this the desire of gain devised, and the workman built it by his skill.

3 But thy providence, O Father, governeth it: *for thou hast made a way even in the sea, and a most sure path among the waves,

4 Showing that thou art able to save out of all things, yea, though a man went to sea without art.

residence of a god. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, vii. 6, and viii. 13.—The more learned regarded the figures of the sun, &c., as his representations, while others supposed that Jupiter meant the heavens, Juno the air, Vulcan fire, &c.—Hand. This is to abuse antiquity. The idol of the Arabs was a rough stone.

VER. 14. Vermilion. The ancients greatly esteemed this colour, (C.) and painted with it the statues of their gods on festival days, and the bodies of those who had the honour of a triumph. Pliny, xxxiii. 6.

VER. 15. Iron. Baruch (vi. 26) ridicules the same custom, and the other prophets intimate that the pagans took these statues to be really gods, otherwise their practice was no more blameable than that of the Jews, who fastened the cherubim to the ark with gold, and carried them. But the latter did not believe that the Deity resided personally in those images; no more than we do, that Christ is attached to his image on the cross. This distinguishes the behaviour of the faithful from that of pagans. C.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Him. The folly of exposing one's life, without necessity, to such imminent danger at sea, is great; though much less than to confide in idols.

VER. 7. Cometh. By which Noe was preserved, (Corn. a Lap.,) or criminals are executed. Jans.—The author foretells the redemption of mankind on the 5 But that the works of thy wisdom might not be idle: therefore men also trust their lives even to a little wood, and passing over the sea by ship, are saved.

6 *And from the beginning also, when the proud giants perished, the hope of the world fleeing to a vessel which was governed by thy hand, left to the world seed of generation.

7 For blessed is the wood, by which justice cometh.

8 *But the idol that is made by hands, is cursed, as well it, as he that made it: he because he made it: and it because being frail it is called a god.

9 But to God the wicked and his wickedness are hateful alike.

10 For that which is made, together with him that made it, shall suffer torments.

11 Therefore there shall be no respect had even to the idols of the Gentiles: because the creatures of God are turned to an abomination, and a temptation to the souls of men, and a snare to the feet of the unwise.

12 For the beginning of fornication is the devising of idols: and the invention of them is the corruption of life.

13 For neither were they from the beginning, neither shall they be for ever.

14 For by the vanity of men they came into the world: and therefore they shall be found to come shortly to an end.

15 For a father being afflicted with bitter grief, made to himself the image of his son, who was quickly taken away: and him who then had died as a man, he began now to worship as a god, and appointed him rites and sacrifices among his servants.

16 Then, in process of time, wicked custom prevailing, this error was kept as a law, and statues were worshipped by the commandment of tyrants.

17 And those whom men could not honour in presence, because they dwelt far off, they brought their resemblance from afar, and made an express image of the king, whom they had a mind to honour: that by this their diligence, they might honour as present, him that was absent.

18 And to the worshipping of these, the singular diligence also of the artificer helped to set forward the ignorant.

19 For he being willing to please him that employed him, laboured with all his art to make the resemblance in the best manner.

20 And the multitude of men, carried away by the cross. W. Gal. iii. 13. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xv. 26. S. Amb. Psal. cxviii., Ser. 8.

VER. 12. Fornication. Invention of idols brought people to give way to spiritual fornication, and corruption of manners. W.—They freely practised what was sanctioned by the example of their gods. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, ii. 7, and 3 Kings xiv. 24, and 4 Kings xxiii. 7, 8. C.

VER. 13. Beginning. Truth is always prior to falsehood. H.

VER. 15. Servants. This was at first done privately, and made the way for public idolatry. Calvin attempts to refute this assertion, maintaining that Laban's idols were more ancient, and not images. But this argument is nugatory, as theraphim may be rendered either images, (Prot. 1552,) or idols. Prot. 1603. The latter version is preferable, as Laban called them his gods, and the Greek and Latin have idols. It is also certain that Ninus set up the image of his father, Jupiter Belus, to be honoured by the people, before Abraham's time; and the Fathers agree that the making of images in memory of the dead was the first occasion of idolatry. S. Chrys. hom. 87, in Matt. S. Jer. in Osee ii., &c. W.

VER. 18. Ignorant. The arts of sculpture and painting may be prejudicial (C.) and were therefore banished by Moses from his republic, (Philo,) as the Jews were so prone to idolatry. Chap. xv. 4. The case is different with us. H.

beauty of the work, took him now for a god, that a little before was but honoured as a man.

21 And this was the occasion of deceiving human life: for men serving either their affection, or their kings, gave the incommunicable name to stones and wood.

22 And it was not enough for them to err about the knowledge of God, but whereas they lived in a great war of ignorance, they call so many and so great evils peace.

23 *For either they sacrifice their own children, or use hidden sacrifices, or keep watches full of madness,

24 So that now they neither keep life, nor marriage undefiled, but one killeth another through envy, or grieveth him by adultery:

25 And all things are mingled together, blood, murder, theft, and dissimulation, corruption and unfaithfulness, tumults and perjury, disquieting of the good,

26 Forgetfulness of God, defiling of souls, changing of nature, disorder in marriage, and the irregularity of adultery and uncleanness.

27 For the worship of abominable idols is the cause, and the beginning and end of all evil.

28 For either they are mad when they are merry: or they prophesy lies, or they live unjustly, or easily forswear themselves.

29 For whilst they trust in idols, which are without life, though they swear amiss, they look not to be hurt.

30 But for two things they shall be justly punished, because they have thought not well of God, giving heed to idols, and have sworn unjustly, in guile despising justice.

31 For it is not the power of them, by whom they swear, but the just vengeance of sinners always punisheth the transgression of the unjust.

CHAP. XV.

The servants of God praise him who hath delivered them from idolatry; condemning both the makers and the worshippers of idols.

BUT thou, our God, art gracious and true, patient, and ordering all things in mercy.

2 For if we sin, we are thine, knowing thy greatness: and if we sin not, we know that we are counted with thee.

3 For to know thee is perfect justice: and to know thy justice, and thy power, is the root of immortality.

4 For the invention of mischievous men hath not deceived us, nor the shadow of a picture, a fruitless labour, a graven figure with divers colours,

VER. 4. Us. He wrote after the captivity, when the Jews abhorred idolatry, things to trust in, both they that make them, and they that love them, and they that worship them.

7 ^bThe potter also tempering soft earth, with labour fashioneth every vessel for our service, and of the same clay he maketh both vessels that are for clean uses, and likewise such as serve to the contrary: but what is the use of these vessels, the potter is the judge.

8 And of the same clay by a vain labour he maketh a god: he who a little before was made of earth himself, and a little after returneth to the same out of which he was taken, when his life, which was lent him, shall be called for again.

9 But his care is, not that he shall labour, nor that his life is short, but he striveth with the goldsmiths and silver-smiths: and he endeavoureth to do like the workers in brass, and counteth it a glory to make vain things.

10 For his heart is ashes, and his hope vain earth, and his life more base than clay:

11 Forasmuch as he knew not his Maker, and him that inspired into him the soul that worketh, and that breathed into him a living spirit.

12 Yea, and they have counted our life a pastime, and the business of life to be gain, and that we must be getting every way, even out of evil.

13 For that man knoweth that he offendeth above all others, who of earthly matter maketh brittle vessels, and graven gods.

14 But all the enemies of thy people that hold them in subjection, are foolish, and unhappy, and proud beyond measure:

15 *For they have esteemed all the idols of the heathens for gods, which neither have the use of eyes to see, nor noses to draw breath, nor ears to hear, nor fingers of hands to handle, and as for their feet, they are slow to walk.

16 For man made them; and he that borroweth his own breath, fashioned them. For no man can make a god like to himself.

17 For being mortal himself, he formeth a dead thing with his wicked hands. For he is better than they whom he worshippeth, because he indeed hath lived, though he were mortal, but they never.

18 Moreover, they worship also the vilest creatures. but things without sense, compared to these, are worse than they.

19 Yea, neither by sight can any man see good of these beasts. But they have fled from the praise of God, and from his blessing.

CHAP. XVI.

God's different dealings with the Egyptians, and with his own people.

FOR these things, and by the like things to these, they were worthily punished, and were destroyed by a multitude of beasts.

2 Instead of which punishment, dealing well with thy people, ^athou gavest them their desire of delicious food, of a new taste, preparing for them quails for their meat :

3 To the end, that they indeed desiring food, by means of those things that were shown and sent among them, might loathe even that which was necessary to satisfy their desire. But these, after suffering want for a short time, tasted a new meat.

4 For it was requisite that inevitable destruction should come upon them that exercised tyranny : but to these it should only be shown how their enemies were destroyed.

5 ^bFor when the fierce rage of beasts came upon these, they were destroyed with the bitings of crooked serpents.

6 But thy wrath endured not for ever, but they were troubled for a short time for their correction, having a sign of salvation, to put them in remembrance of the commandment of thy law.

7 For he that turned to it, was not healed by that which he saw, but by thee, the Saviour of all.

8 And in this thou didst show to our enemies, that thou art he who deliverest from all evil.

9 ^cFor the bitings of locusts, and of flies, killed them, and there was found no remedy for their life : because they were worthy to be destroyed by such things.

10 But not even the teeth of venomous serpents overcame thy children : for thy mercy came and healed them.

11 For they were examined for the remembrance of thy words, and were quickly healed, lest falling into deep forgetfulness, they might not be able to use thy help.

12 For it was neither herb, nor mollifying plaster, that healed them, but thy word, O Lord, which healeth all things.

13 ^dFor it is thou, O Lord, that hast power of life and death, and leadest down to the gates of death, and bringest back again :

14 A man indeed killeth through malice, and when the spirit is gone forth, it shall not return, neither shall he call back the soul that is received :

15 But it is impossible to escape thy hand.

"therefore by similar things they," &c. 11.—The Egyptians were punished for their idolatry by beasts, though they worshipped them, (H.) being infested with insects, frogs, locusts, &c., (chap. xii. 23; Exod. viii., and x. VER. 18. Mitigated. The Egyptians could not banish the insects with fire and smoke, (Jans.,) or the storm sent by God did not exterminate the sciniphs, 16 ^eFor the wicked that denied to know thee, were scourged by the strength of thy arm, being persecuted by strange waters, and hail, and rain, and consumed by fire.

17 And which was wonderful, in water, which extinguisheth all things, the fire had more force : for the world fighteth for the just.

18 For at one time the fire was mitigated, that the beasts which were sent against the wicked might not be burnt, but that they might see, and perceive that they were persecuted by the judgment of God.

19 And at another time the fire, above its own power, burnt in the midst of water, to destroy the fruits of a wicked land.

20 Instead of which things, thou didst feed thy people with the food of angels, and gavest them bread from heaven, prepared without labour; having in it all that is delicious, and the sweetness of every taste.

21 For thy sustenance showed thy sweetness to thy children, and serving every man's will, it was turned to what every man liked.

22 ^fBut snow and ice endured the force of fire, and melted not : that they might know that the fire, burning in the hail, and flashing in the rain, destroyed the fruits of the enemies.

23 But this same again, that the just might be nourished, did even forget its own strength.

24 For the creature serving thee, the Creator, is made fierce against the unjust for their punishment : and abated its strength for the benefit of them that trust in thee.

25 Therefore even then it was transformed into all things, and was obedient to thy grace, that nourisheth all, according to the will of them that desired it of thee :

26 That thy children, O Lord, ^hwhom thou lovedst, might know that it is not the growing of fruits that nourisheth men, but thy word preserveth them that believe in thee.

27 For that which could not be destroyed by fire, being warmed with a little sun-beam, presently melted away :

28 That it might be known to all, that we ought to prevent the sun to bless thee, and adore thee at the dawning of the light.

29 For the hope of the unthankful shall melt away as the winter's ice, and shall run off as unprofitable water.

FOR thy judgments, O Lord, are great, and thy words cannot be expressed : therefore undisciplined souls have erred.

2 *For while the wicked thought to be able to have dominion over the holy nation, they themselves being fettered with the bonds of darkness, and a long night, shut up in their houses, lay there exiled from the eternal providence.

3 And while they thought to lie hid in their obscure sins they were scattered under a dark veil of forgetfulness, being horribly afraid, and troubled with exceeding great astonishment.

4 For neither did the den that held them, keep them from fear : for noises coming down troubled them, and sad visions appearing to them, affrighted them.

5 And no power of fire could give them light, neither could the bright flames of the stars enlighten that horrible night.

6 But there appeared to them a sudden fire, very dreadful : and being struck with the fear of that face, which was not seen, they thought the things which they saw to be worse :

7 ^bAnd the delusions of their magic art were put down, and their boasting of wisdom was reproachfully rebuked.

8 For they who promised to drive away fears and troubles from a sick soul, were sick themselves of a fear worthy to be laughed at.

9 For though no terrible thing disturbed them : yet being scared with the passing by of beasts, and hissing of serpents, they died for fear : and denying that they saw the air, which could by no means be avoided.

10 For whereas wickedness is fearful, it beareth witness of its condemnation : for a troubled conscience always forecasteth grievous things.

11 For fear is nothing else but a yielding up of the succours from thought.

12 And while there is less expectation from within the greater doth it count the ignorance of that cause which bringeth the torment.

13 But they that during that night, in which nothing could be done, and which came upon them from the lowest and deepest hell, slept the same sleep,

14 Were sometimes molested with the fear of monsters, sometimes fainted away, their soul failing them : for a sudden and unlooked for fear was come upon them.

15 Moreover, if any of them had fallen down, he was kept shut up in prison without irons.

16 For if any one were a husbandman, or a shepherd, or a labourer in the field, and was suddenly overtaken, he endured a necessity from which he could not fly.

17 For they were all bound together with one chain of darkness. Whether it were a whistling wind, or the melodious voice of birds, among the spreading branches of trees, or a fall of water running down with violence,

18 Or the mighty noise of stones tumbling down, or the running that could not be seen of beasts playing together, or the roaring voice of wild beasts, or a rebounding echo from the highest mountains : these things made them to swoon for fear.

19 For the whole world was enlightened, with a clear light, and none were hindered in their labours.

20 But over them only was spread a heavy night, an image of that darkness which was to come upon them. But they were to themselves more grievous than the darkness.

CHAP. XVIII.

The slaughter of the first-born in Egypt: the efficacy of Aaron's intercession, in the sedition on occasion of Core.

BUT^c thy saints had a very great light, and they heard their voice indeed, but did not see their shape. And because they also did not suffer the same things, they glorified thee :

2 And they that before had been wronged, gave thanks, because they were not hurt now : and asked this gift, that there might be a difference.

3 ^dTherefore they received a burning pillar of fire for a guide of the way which they knew not, and thou gavest them a harmless sun of a good entertainment.

4 The others indeed were worthy to be deprived of light, and imprisoned in darkness, who kept thy children shut up, by whom the pure light of the law was to be given to the world.

5 ^eAnd whereas they thought to kill the babes of the just : one child being cast forth, and saved to reprove them, thou tookest away a multitude of their children, and destroyedst them all together in a mighty water.

6 For that night was known before by our fathers, that assuredly knowing what oaths they had trusted to, they might be of better courage.

7 So thy people received the salvation of the just, and destruction of the unjust.

VER. 6. Fathers. God had assured the patriarchs that he would visit his people, and Moses had told them what would take place during the night of their deliverance. Exod. iv. 22, and xi. 4. C.

8 For as thou didst punish the adversaries: so thou didst also encourage and glorify us.

9 For the just children of good men were offering sacrifice secretly, and they unanimously ordered a law of justice: that the just should receive both good and evil alike, singing now the praises of the fathers.

10 But on the other side there sounded an ill-according cry of the enemies, and a lamentable mourning was heard for the children that were bewailed.

11 ^aAnd the servant suffered the same punishment as the master, and a common man suffered in like manner as the king.

12 So all alike had innumerable dead, with one kind of death. Neither were the living sufficient to bury them: for in one moment the noblest offspring of them was destroyed.

13 For whereas they would not believe any thing before by reason of the enchantments, then first upon the destruction of the first-born, they acknowledged the people to be of God.

14 For while all things were in quiet silence, and the night was in the midst of her course,

15 Thy Almighty word leaped down from heaven from thy royal throne, as a fierce conqueror into the midst of the land of destruction,

16 With a sharp sword carrying thy unfeigned commandment, and he stood and filled all things with death, and standing on the earth, reached even to heaven.

17 Then suddenly visions of evil dreams troubled them, and fears unlooked for came upon them.

18 And one thrown here, another there, half dead, showed the cause of his death.

19 For the visions that troubled them foreshowed these things, lest they should perish, and not know why they suffered these evils.

20 But the just also were afterwards touched by an assault of death, and there was a disturbance of the multitude in the wilderness: but thy wrath did not long continue.

21 ^bFor a blameless man made haste to pray for the people, bringing forth the shield of his ministry, prayer, and by incense making supplication, withstood the wrath, and put an end to the calamity, showing that he was thy servant.

22 And he overcame the disturbance, not by strength of body nor with force of arms, but with a word he subdued him that punished them, alleging the caths and covenant made with the fathers.

23 For when they were now fallen down dead by heaps one upon another, he stood between and stayed the assault, and cut off the way to the living.

24 ^cFor in the priestly robe which he wore, was the whole world: and in the four rows of the stones, the glory of the fathers was graven, and thy Majesty was written upon the diadem of his head.

25 And to these the destroyer gave place, and was afraid of them: for the proof only of wrath was enough.

CHAP. XIX.

Why God showed no mercy to the Egyptians. His favour to the Israelites. All creatures obey God's orders for the service of the good, and the punishment of the wicked.

BUT as to the wicked, even to the end there came upon them wrath without mercy. For he knew before also what they would do:

2 For when they had given them leave to depart, and had sent them away with great care, they repented, and pursued after them.

3 ^dFor whilst they were yet mourning, and lamenting at the graves of the dead, they took up another foolish device: and pursued them as fugitives whom they had pressed to be gone:

4 For a necessity, of which they were worthy, brought them to this end: and they lost the remembrance of those things which had happened, that their punishment might fill up what was wanting to their torments:

5 And that thy people might wonderfully pass through, but they might find a new death.

6 For every creature, according to its kind, was fashioned again as from the beginning, obeying thy commandments, that thy children might be kept without hurt.

7 For a cloud overshadowed their camp, and where water was before, dry land appeared, and in the Red Sea a way without hinderance, and out of the great deep a springing field:

8 Through which all the nation passed which was protected with thy hand, seeing thy miracles and wonders.

9 For they fed on their food like horses, and they skipped like lambs, praising thee, O Lord, who hadst delivered them.

10 For they were yet mindful of those things which had been done in the time of their sojourning, how the 11 And at length they saw a new generation of birds, when, being led by their appetite, they asked for delicate meats.

12 For to satisfy their desire, the quail came up to them from the sea: and punishments came upon the sinners, not without foregoing signs by the force of thunders: for they suffered justly according to their own wickedness.

13 For they exercised a more detestable inhospitality than any: others indeed received not strangers unknown to them, but these brought their guests into bondage that had deserved well of them.

14 And not only so, but in another respect also they were worse: for the others, against their will, received the strangers.

15 But these grievously afflicted them whom they had received with joy, and who lived under the same laws.

ECCLESIASTICUS.

This Book is so called from a Greek word that signifies a preacher; because, like an excellent preacher, it gives admirable lessons of all virtues. The author was Jesus, the son of Sirach, of Jerusalem, who flourished about two hundred years before Christ. As it was written after the time of Esdras, it is not in the Jewish canon; but is received as canonical and Divine by the Catholic Church, instructed by apostolical tradition, and directed by the Spirit of God. It was first wrote in the Hebrew, but afterwards translated into Greek by another Jesus, the grandson of the author; whose prologue to this book is the following (Ch.):

THE PROLOGUE.

The knowledge of many and great things hath been shown us by the law, and the prophets, and others that have followed them: for which things Israel is to be commended for doctrine and wisdom: because not only they that speak must needs be skilful, but strangers also both speaking and writing, may by their means become most learned. My grandfather, Jesus, after he had much given himself to a diligent reading of the law, and the prophets, and other books, that were delivered to us from our fathers, had a mind also to write something himself pertaining to doctrine and wisdom; that such as are desirous to learn, and are made knowing in these things, may be more and more attentive in mind, and be strengthened to live according to the law. I entreat you, therefore, to come with benevolence, and to read with attention, and to pardon us for those things wherein we may seem, while we follow the image of wisdom, to come short in the composition of words: for the Hebrew words have not the same force in them when translated into another tongue. And not only these, but the law also itself, and the prophets, and the rest of the books, have no small difference, when they are spoken in their own language. For in the eighth and thirtieth year coming into Egypt, when Ptolemy Evergetes was king, and continuing there a long time, I found there books left, of no small nor contemptible learning. Therefore I thought it good and necessary for me to bestow some diligence and labour to interpret this book: and with much watching and study, in some space of time, I brought the book to an end, and set it forth for the service of them that are willing to apply their mind, and to learn how they ought to conduct themselves, who purpose to lead their life according to the law of the Lord.

—If some forbear to urge the authority of this book, in disputes with the Jews, we need not be surprised, as there were other proofs against them. H.—It was alleged in the controversies about baptism and grace, and no one thought of rejecting its testimony. Chap. xxxiv. 30. S. Cyp. Ep. 65. S. Aug. Bap. vi. 34. Grat. ii. 11, &c. —The Councils of Ephesus, 3rd Carthage, (chap. xlvii.,) Francfort, 8th Toledo, and Trent, ought to settle all doubts on this head. The Jews themselves have a great regard for the book, (though the Talmud condemns it for admitting more persons than one in God,) and seem to have copied many sentences from it into the two Syriac alphabets of Ben Sira. This may be the work which S. Jerom (Pref. in Sal.) testifies he saw in Heb., as that text cannot at present be found. C. See Ep. 115. D.—But this is no proof that it was not extant in S. Jerom's time, and the many variations between the Greek copies themselves and the Alg. may owe their rise to the different translators omitting some parts of it. H.—The same person seems to have translated this and the former book into Latin in the earliest ages, though the present work is more obscure, because the Greek is less beautiful, of which the Rom. edit. is deemed the most correct; though the Compl. agrees better with the Vulg. He appears to have given frequently a double version, for fear of not having expressed the full sense in the first, unless the additions be his or some other person's glosses which have crept into the text. C.—Many of the Fathers quote this book as the production of Solomon, because it contains many of his sentences preserved by tradition, (M.) and resembles his works. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xvii. 20.—The Greek styles it "The Wisdom of Jesus, the son of Sirach." He has imitated (H.) the Proverbs to chap. xxiv., Ecclesiastes to chap. xlii. 15, where wisdom ends her exhortation, and the Canticle in the remainder of the work, praising God and the great men of the nation, down to Simon II. Vales in Euseb. iv. 22. C.—The last chapter contains a prayer, which may be in imitation of the book of Wisdom. This work is often styled Panaretos, a collection of pious maxims, (H.) or a "receptacle of all virtues." W.—Many think it was composed between A. M. 3711 and 3783 (Torniel); but it seems rather to have appeared in times of persecution, (chap. xxxvi.,) after Philopator had been incensed against Simon II. for opposing his entrance into the sanctuary, (chap. l. 4, &c.,) for which he ordered the Jews in Egypt to be cruelly butchered, (2 Mac.,) and after Epiphanes, the Syrian monarch, had commenced his most cruel persecution of that people, and of Onias II., twenty-two years after the death of Simon II., (chap. xxxv. and l.,) A. M. 3828. B. C. 176. Euseb. Grot. Usher C.

CHAPTER I.

All wisdom is from God, and is given to them that fear and love God.

ALL^a wisdom is from the Lord God, and hath been always with him, and is before all time.

2 Who hath numbered the sand of the sea, and the drops of rain, and the days of the world? Who hath measured the height of heaven, and the breadth of the earth, and the depth of the abyss?

3 Who hath searched out the wisdom of God, that goeth before all things?

4 Wisdom hath been created before all things. and the understanding of prudence from everlasting.

5 The word of God on high is the fountain of wisdom, and her ways are everlasting commandments.

6 To whom hath the root of wisdom been revealed, and who hath known her wise counsels?

7 To whom hath the discipline of wisdom been revealed and made manifest? and who hath understood the multiplicity of her steps?

8 There is one most high Creator Almighty, and a powerful King, and greatly to be feared, who sitteth upon his throne, and is the God of dominion.

9 He created her in the Holy Ghost, and saw her, and numbered her, and measured her.

10 And he poured her out upon all his works, and upon all flesh, according to his gift, and hath given her to them that love him.

11 The fear of the Lord is honour, and glory, and gladness, and a crown of joy.

12 The fear of the Lord shall delight the heart, and shall give joy, and gladness, and length of days.

13 With him that feareth the Lord, it shall go well in the latter end, and in the day of his death he shall be blessed.

14 The love of God is honourable wisdom.

15 And they to whom she shall show herself, love her by the sight, and by the knowledge of her great works.

16^b The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and was created with the faithful in the womb, it walketh with chosen women, and is known with the just and faithful.

17 The fear of the Lord is the religiousness of knowledge.

18 Religiousness shall keep and justify the heart, it shall give joy and gladness.

19 It shall go well with him that feareth the Lord, and in the days of his end he shall be blessed.

20 To fear God is the fulness of wisdom, and fulness is from the fruits thereof.

^a 3 Kings iii. 9, and iv. 29.—^b Psal. cx. 10; Prov. i. 7, and ix. 10.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Wisdom. In this book Wisdom is taken for the Deity, the Son, or the gift communicated to men. Prov. iii. 19; Wisd. vii. 25. C.

VER. 4. Created. Or "generated," if it be understood of the Son. S. Athan. Bos.—The decree respecting the incarnation was from eternity. M.

VER. 5. Commandments. The wise will observe the law (Deut. iv. 6. H.) and the Scriptures. This verse is not in the Gr. of Rome, &c., but it is in the edit. of Complut. and Camerarius.

VER. 9. In the Holy Ghost, or from himself. See Wisd. i. 5, and vii. 22.

VER. 11. Joy. Eternal glory is the fruit of the fear of the Lord; not that this virtue sufficeth, but it is the beginning, grounded on true faith, and bringeth forth other virtues and fruits of the Holy Ghost, and a joyful crown in the end. W.

21 She shall fill all her house with her increase, and the storehouses with her treasures.

22 The fear of the Lord is a crown of wisdom, filling up peace and the fruit of salvation:

23 And it hath seen, and numbered her: but both are the gifts of God.

24 Wisdom shall distribute knowledge, and understanding of prudence: and exalteth the glory of them that hold her.

25 The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord: and the branches thereof are long-lived.

26 In the treasures of wisdom is understanding, and religiousness of knowledge: but to sinners wisdom is an abomination.

27 The fear of the Lord driveth out sin:

28 For he that is without fear, cannot be justified: for the wrath of his high spirits is his ruin.

29 A patient man shall bear for a time, and afterwards joy shall be restored to him.

30 A good understanding will hide his words for a time, and the lips of many shall declare his wisdom.

31 In the treasures of wisdom is the signification of discipline:

32 But the worship of God is an abomination to a sinner.

33 Son, if thou desire wisdom, keep justice, and God will give her to thee.

34 For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and discipline: and that which is agreeable to him, 35 Is faith, and meekness: and he will fill up his treasures.

36 Be not incredulous to the fear of the Lord: and come not to him with a double heart.

37 Be not a hypocrite in the sight of men, and let not thy lips be a stumblingblock to thee.

38 Watch over them, lest thou fall, and bring dishonour upon thy soul,

39 And God discover thy secrets, and cast thee down in the midst of the congregation:

40 Because thou camest to the Lord wickedly, and thy heart is full of guile and deceit.

CHAP. II.

God's servants must look for temptations: and must arm themselves with patience and confidence in God.

SON, when thou comest to the service of God, stand in justice and in fear, and prepare thy soul for temptation.

2 Humble thy heart, and endure: incline thy ear, and receive the words of understanding: and make not haste in the time of clouds.

^c Matt. iv. 1; 2 Tim. iii. 12.

VER. 17. Religiousness, or proper application of knowledge. H.—A learned impious man is most dangerous.

VER. 27. Sin, by vigilance or by repentance.

VER. 32. Sinner. Such imagine that God's service is insupportable. W.

VER. 35. Faith, or fidelity. M.—The meek shall possess the land. Matt. v. 4. C.

VER. 39. Down. Pride is usually thus treated. Matt. xxiii. 12. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. God. All must be tried. Tob. xii. 13; Heb. xii. 6; Luke xxiv. 46. But God will grant sufficient grace. 1 Cor. x. 13. C.

VER. 2. Humble. Gr. "regulate thy heart, and endure, and make not haste in the time of trouble," (H.) inflicted by God. Grot.—Be not impatient. Isa xxviii. 16

3 Wait on God with patience: join thyself to God, and endure, that thy life may be increased in the latter end.

4 Take all that shall be brought upon thee: and in thy sorrow endure, and in thy humiliation keep patience:

5 *For gold and silver are tried in the fire, but acceptable men in the furnace of humiliation.

6 Believe God, and he will recover thee: and direct thy way, and trust in him. Keep his fear, and grow old therein.

7 Ye that fear the Lord, wait for his mercy: and go not aside from him, lest ye fall.

8 Ye that fear the Lord, believe him: and your reward shall not be made void.

9 Ye that fear the Lord, hope in him: and mercy shall come to you for your delight.

10 Ye that fear the Lord, love him, and your hearts shall be enlightened.

11 My children, behold the generations of men: and know ye that no one hath hoped in the Lord, and hath been confounded.

12 *For who hath continued in his commandment, and hath been forsaken? or who hath called upon him, and he despised him?

13 For God is compassionate and merciful, and will forgive sins in the day of tribulation: and he is a protector to all that seek him in truth.

14 Woe to them that are of a double heart, and to wicked lips, and to the hands that do evil, and to the sinner that goeth on the earth two ways.

15 Woe to them that are faint-hearted, who believe not God: and therefore they shall not be protected by him.

16 Woe to them that have lost patience, and that have forsaken the right ways, and have gone aside into crooked ways.

17 And what will they do, when the Lord shall begin to examine?

18 They that fear the Lord, will not be incredulous to his word: and they that love him, will keep his way.

19 They that fear the Lord, will seek after the things that are well pleasing to him: and they that love him, shall be filled with his law.

20 They that fear the Lord, will prepare their hearts, and in his sight will sanctify their souls.

21 They that fear the Lord, keep his commandments, and will have patience even until his visitation,

22 Saying: If we do not penance, we shall fall into the hands of the Lord, and not into the hands of men.

23 For according to his greatness, so also is his mercy with him.

VER. 3. Patience. Or expectation of being relieved. M.

VER. 5. Humiliation. It shows what they really are. C.

VER. 10. Enlightened. With joy. Isa. lviii. M.

VER. 14. Ways. Attempting to reconcile the service of the world with that of God, who rejects hypocrites, (H.) the inconstant, and faint-hearted. Ver. 15, and 3 Kings xviii. 21. C.—Virtues and sins will receive their due. W.

VER. 20. Hearts. With God's grace (H.) to fight manfully. C.—Sanctify. Greek, "humble their souls, saying, We shall," &c. Ver. 22. H.—Prayer, vigilance, and humility are the best dispositions to resist the devil.

VER. 22. Men. He alludes to 2 Kings xxiv. 14. In this world God punishes with mercy; in the next, with severity. Dan. xiii. 23. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Love. The progeny of God's children brings forth the fruits of obedience and love. W.

VER. 3. Seeking. Greek, "and hath confirmed the judgment," &c. II.—God will revenge any disrespect shown to parents. M.

CHAP. III.

Lessons concerning the honour of parents, and humility, and avoiding curiosity.

THE sons of wisdom are the church of the just: and their generation, obedience and love.

2 Children, hear the judgment of your father, and so do that you may be saved.

3 For God hath made the father honourable to the children: and seeking the judgment of the mothers, hath confirmed it upon the children.

4 He that loveth God, shall obtain pardon for his sins by prayer, and shall refrain himself from them, and shall be heard in the prayer of days.

5 And he that honoureth his mother, is as one that layeth up a treasure.

6 He that honoureth his father, shall have joy in his own children, and in the day of his prayer he shall be heard.

7 He that honoureth his father, shall enjoy a long life: and he that obeyeth the father, shall be a comfort to his mother.

8 He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his parents, and will serve them as his masters that brought him into the world.

9 *Honour thy father in work and word, and all patience,

10 That a blessing may come upon thee from him, and his blessing may remain in the latter end.

11 *The father's blessing establisheth the houses of the children: but the mother's curse rooteth up the foundations.

12 Glory not in the dishonour of thy father: for his shame is no glory to thee.

13 For the glory of a man is from the honour of his father, and a father without honour is the disgrace of the son.

14 Son, support the old age of thy father, and grieve him not in his life:

15 And if his understanding fail, have patience with him, and despise him not when thou art in thy strength: for the relieving of the father shall not be forgotten.

16 For good shall be repaid to thee for the sin of thy mother.

17 And in justice thou shalt be built up, and in the day of affliction thou shalt be remembered: and thy sins shall melt away as the ice in the fair warm weather.

18 Of what an evil fame is he that forsaketh his father, and he is cursed of God that angereth his mother.

19 My son, do thy works in meekness, and thou shalt be beloved above the glory of men.

VER. 7. Father. Greek, "Lord . . . mother, (8) and will serve them," &c. H. VER. 9. Father. Greek adds, "and thy mother." C.—And his, &c., is wholly omitted. H.

VER. 11. Foundations. S. Aug. (de Civ. Dei, xxii. 8) gives a memorable instance.

VER. 13. A father. Greek, "mother."

VER. 15. Fail. Bis pueri senes. They do not lose the character of fathers, how infirm soever, (C.) and those can never truly serve the invisible Deity who despise their fathers, his visible images on the earth. Philo. Deaal.

VER. 16. Sin. Or ill-nature. Greek, "instead of sins, (17) a house shall be built up for thee." H.—Thy family shall increase. Exod. i. 21. C.—Alms, prayer, and sacrifice for parents merit reward. W.

VER. 18. Of. Greek, "Like a blasphemer is," &c. C.

VER. 20. Greater. The dignity of a person should be the measure of his humility, (S. Amb. de Virg. 31,) as the most elevated are the most exposed to 20 ^aThe greater thou art, the more humble thyself in all things, and thou shalt find grace before God:

21 For great is the power of God alone, and he is honoured by the humble.

22 ^bSeek not the things that are too high for thee, and search not into things above thy ability: but the things that God hath commanded thee, think on them always, and in many of his works be not curious.

23 For it is not necessary for thee to see with thy eyes those things that are hid.

24 In unnecessary matters be not over-curious, and in many of his works thou shalt not be inquisitive.

25 For many things are shown to thee above the understanding of men.

26 And the suspicion of them hath deceived many, and hath detained their minds in vanity.

27 A hard heart shall fare evil at the last: and he that loveth danger, shall perish in it.

28 A heart that goeth two ways shall not have success, and the perverse of heart shall be scandalized therein.

29 A wicked heart shall be laden with sorrows, and the sinner will add sin to sin.

30 The congregation of the proud shall not be healed: for the plant of wickedness shall take root in them, and it shall not be perceived.

31 The heart of the wise is understood in wisdom, and a good ear will hear wisdom with all desire.

32 A wise heart, and which hath understanding, will abstain from sins, and in the works of justice shall have success.

33 ^cWater quencheth a flaming fire, and alms resisteth sins:

34 And God provideth for him that sheweth favour: he remembereth him afterwards, and in the time of his fall he shall find a sure stay.

CHAP. IV.

An exhortation to works of mercy, and to the love of wisdom.

SON, ^ddefraud not the poor of alms, and turn not away thy eyes from the poor.

2 Despise not the hungry soul: and provoke not the poor in his want.

3 Afflict not the heart of the needy, and defer not to give to him that is in distress.

pride. Humility is taught only by true wisdom and the gospel. Matt. xi. 29. Philosophy may inspire us with the contempt of riches, &c. C.—Yet humility is the most indispensable duty, and no less essential than delivery to an orator. S. Aug. Ep. 118, ad Diosc.

VER. 22. In, &c. The mysterious nature of God and providence cannot be comprehended: and in many things we must confess our ignorance.

VER. 26. Suspicion. Gr. Coimp. "their vain suspicion hath deceived many, and their wicked thought has ruined their judgment. Not having the apples of the eye, thou wilt be deprived of light; and being ignorant, do not speak."

VER. 27. Heart. Which fears neither God nor man. S. Bern. Cons. 1.—Those who have not shown mercy can expect none. H.—The impenitent see their folly, like Antiochus, when it is too late. C.—They have loved the danger, which shall overtake them. Prov. i. 26. He seems to refute those who believed in fate, and would take no precautions. C.—Those who live in sin, tempting God to the last hour, generally perish. W.

VER. 29. Wicked. Greek, "hard," obdurate in sin, like Pharaoh. Rom. ii. 5. H.—Sorrows. Or crimes, as the word often implies, and the punishment thereof. C.—"Sin, by its own weight, leads to another, (S. Greg. Mor. xxv. 12,) and while custom is not resisted, a necessity arises." S. Aug. Conf. viii. 5.

VER. 30. Congregation. The proud or obstinate sinner will take no advice. Prov. xviii. 3. C.

4 Reject not the petition of the afflicted: and turn not away thy face from the needy.

5 Turn not away thy eyes from the poor, for fear of anger: and leave not to them that ask of thee to curse thee behind thy back.

6 For the prayer of him that curseth thee in the bitterness of his soul, shall be heard: for he that made him, will hear him.

7 Make thyself affable to the congregation of the poor, and humble thy soul to the ancient, and bow thy head to a great man.

8 Bow down thy ear cheerfully to the poor, and pay what thou owest, and answer him peaceable words with mildness.

9 Deliver him that suffereth wrong out of the hand of the proud: and be not faint-hearted in thy soul.

10 In judging, be merciful to the fatherless, as a father, and as a husband to their mother:

11 And thou shalt be as the obedient son of the Most High, and he will have mercy on thee more than a mother.

12 Wisdom inspireth life into her children, and protecteth them that seek after her, and will go before them in the way of justice.

13 And he that loveth her, loveth life: and they that watch for her, shall embrace her sweetness.

14 They that hold her fast, shall inherit life: and whithersoever she entereth, God will give a blessing.

15 They that serve her, shall be servants to the holy one: and God loveth them that love her.

16 He that hearkeneth to her, shall judge nations: and he that looketh upon her, shall remain secure.

17 If he trust to her, he shall inherit her, and his generation shall be in assurance.

18 For she walketh with him in temptation, and at the first she chooseth him.

19 She will bring upon him fear, and dread, and trial: and she will scourge him with the affliction of her discipline, till she try him by her laws, and trust his soul.

20 Then she will strengthen him, and make a straight way to him, and give him joy,

21 And will disclose her secrets to him, and will heap

23 Son, observe the time, and fly from evil.

24 For thy soul, be not ashamed to say the truth.

25 For there is a shame that bringeth sin, and there is a shame that bringeth glory and grace.

26 Accept no person against thy own person, nor against thy soul a lie.

27 Reverence not thy neighbour in his fall:

28 And refrain not to speak in the time of salvation. Hide not thy wisdom in her beauty.

29 For by the tongue wisdom is discerned: and understanding, and knowledge, and learning by the word of the wise, and steadfastness in the works of justice.

30 In no wise speak against the truth, but be ashamed of the lie of thy ignorance.

31 Be not ashamed to confess thy sins, ^abut submit not thyself to every man for sin.

32 Resist not against the face of the mighty, and do not strive against the stream of the river.

33 Strive for justice for thy soul, and even unto death fight for justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for thee.

34 Be not hasty in thy tongue: and slack, and remiss in thy works.

35 Be not as a lion in thy nouse, terrifying them of thy household, and oppressing them that are under thee.

36 Let not thy hand be stretched out to receive, and shut when thou shouldst give.

CHAP. V.

We must not presume of our wealth or strength: nor of the mercy of God, to go on in sin: we must be steadfast in virtue and truth.

SET not thy heart upon unjust possessions, and say not: I have enough to live on: for it shall be of no service in the time of vengeance and darkness.

2 Follow not in thy strength the desires of thy heart:

3 And say not: How mighty am I! and who shall bring me under for my deeds? for God will surely take revenge.

^a Infra, vi. 6.—^b Prov. x. 6.

afflictions, and temptations, the usual noviceship of the children of God. Ch.—Gr. “for sideways or through crooked paths she shall walk with him at first, (19) she,” &c. H.

VER. 21. To him. And explain why she has treated him so roughly.

VER. 22. Enemy. Gr. “ruin.” This road leads to eternal misery. H.

VER. 23. Time. For all things. Eccles. iii. 1. All depends on the proper season.

VER. 24. Ashamed, to ask for relief, (ver. 25. C.) or to say the truth, as the martyrs have done.

VER. 25. Grace. When we refrain from doing things truly shameful. Chap. xli. C.—To abhor sin is glorious; but to yield to it, through shamefacedness, or not to reprove it, is vicious. W.

VER. 27. Fall. Excuse not his faults, (C.) lest thou partake in them.

VER. 28. Hide, &c. is not in the Alex. copy, though inserted by Grabe. H.—Ostentation is blameable; still we must speak in defence of the truth. C.

VER. 29. Tongue. Gr. “by speech, wisdom shall be known, and instruction by the word of the tongue.”

VER. 30. Lie. Gr. “of thy want of information.” Yet Grabe and the Comp. edit. have lie, &c. H.—Always yield to the truth, (C.) and never tell a lie, but speak the truth at proper times. W.

VER. 33. Strive. Gr. “unto death strive for the truth, and the Lord God will fight for thee.” H.—The saints were modest, but intrepid. C.—All must rather lose their lives than act against justice or truth. W.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Unjust. The translator styles riches unjust, because they often proceed from, or tend to injustice. They can afford no protection in death. Psal. xlviii. 17; Luke xii. 19, and xvi. 9. C.

VER. 2. Heart. If no man can oppose thee, remember God’s judgments. W.

4 Say not: I have sinned, and what harm hath befallen me? for the Most High is a patient rewarder.

5 Be not without fear about sin forgiven, and add not sin upon sin:

6 And say not: The mercy of the Lord is great, he will have mercy on the multitude of my sins.

7 ^bFor mercy and wrath quickly come from him, and his wrath looketh upon sinners.

8 Delay not to be converted to the Lord, and defer it not from day to day.

9 For his wrath shall come on a sudden, and in the time of vengeance he will destroy thee.

10 ^cBe not anxious for goods unjustly gotten: for they shall not profit thee in the day of calamity and revenge.

11 Winnow not with every wind, and go not into every way: for so is every sinner proved by a double tongue.

12 Be steadfast in the way of the Lord, and in the truth of thy judgment, and in knowledge, and let the word of peace and justice keep with thee.

13 Be meek to hear the word, that thou mayest understand: and return a true answer with wisdom.

14 If thou have understanding, answer thy neighbour: but if not, let thy hand be upon thy mouth, lest thou be surprised in an unskilful word, and be confounded.

15 Honour and glory is in the word of the wise, but the tongue of the fool is his ruin.

16 Be not called a whisperer, and be not taken in thy tongue, and confounded.

17 For confusion and repentance is upon a thief, and an evil mark of disgrace upon the double-tongued, but to the whisperer hatred, and enmity, and reproach.

18 Justify alike the small, and the great.

CHAP. VI.

Of true and false friends: and of the fruits of wisdom.

INSTEAD of a friend, become not an enemy to thy neighbour: for an evil man shall inherit reproach and shame, so shall every sinner that is envious and double-tongued.

2 ^dExtol not thyself in the thoughts of thy soul like a bull: lest thy strength be quashed by folly,

^c Prov. xi. 4, and 28.—^a Rom. xii. 6; Phil. ii. 3.

VER. 4. Rewarder. Gr. “is long-suffering, he will not let thee escape.”

VER. 5. And add. Gr. “to add.” Take not occasion from God’s goodness to offend him. H.—He will punish at last. Jans.—Satisfaction must be made even after the sin has been remitted. W.

VER. 7. Looketh. Gr. “shall rest” in hell, to punish the abuse of mercy. H.

VER. 8. Day. “God has promised thee pardon, if thou repent, but he has not promised thee to-morrow.” S. Aug. Psal. cxiv.

VER. 12. The way. Gr. “thy knowledge or sentiment, and let thy speech be one,” (H.) that men may depend upon thee.

VER. 13. Word. Comp. adds, “of God.” But the Rom. edit. has, “be quick to hear, and answer slowly.” James i. 19. “It is safer to hear than to preach.” S. Aug. 59 in John.

VER. 14. Lest. Gr. “honour and infamy is in his speech; and the tongue of man proves his ruin.” H.—Nothing can be productive of better or of worse consequences. Prov. xviii. 21. C.

VER. 16. Be. Gr. “insnare not by thy tongue, (17) for evil confusion is upon the thief, and great condemnation on the double-tongued. (18) Be not ignorant in any thing, great or small.” H.—The detractor is more dangerous than the thief. He pierces without being seen. Eccles. x. 11; Prov. xxvi. 20; Rom. i. 29.

VER. 18. Great. Only examine the justice of the cause; or, according to the Greek, commit no fault of ignorance, nor say, “I did not think.” C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Instead. Gr. “and instead,” &c. Detraction will separate friends.

VER. 2. Extol. This conduct is inimical to true friendship, which requires that we should make allowances for one another’s faults. C.—Like. Gr. “lest thy soul be torn away like a bull. Thou wilt eat,” &c. H.—Vulg. is better. C.

3 And it eat up thy leaves, and destroy thy fruit, and thou be left as a dry tree in the wilderness.

4 For a wicked soul shall destroy him that hath it, and maketh him to be a joy to his enemies, and shall lead him into the lot of the wicked.

5 A sweet word multiplieth friends, and appeaseth enemies, and a gracious tongue in a good man aboundeth.

6 Be in peace with many, but let one of a thousand be thy counsellor.

7 If thou wouldst get a friend, try him before thou takest him, and do not credit him easily.

8 For there is a friend for his own occasion, and he will not abide in the day of thy trouble.

9 And there is a friend that turneth to enmity: and there is a friend that will disclose hatred and strife, and reproaches.

10 And there is a friend, a companion at the table, and he will not abide in the day of distress.

11 A friend, if he continue stedfast, shall be to thee as thyself, and shall act with confidence among them of thy household.

12 If he humble himself before thee, and hide himself from thy face, thou shalt have unanimous friendship for good.

13 Separate thyself from thy enemies, and take heed of thy friends.

14 A faithful friend is a strong defence: and he that hath found him, hath found a treasure.

15 Nothing can be compared to a faithful friend, and no weight of gold and silver is able to countervail the goodness of his fidelity.

16 A faithful friend is the medicine of life and immortality: and they that fear the Lord, shall find him.

17 He that feareth God, shall likewise have good friendship: because according to him shall his friend be.

18 My son, from thy youth up receive instruction, and even to thy grey hairs thou shalt find wisdom.

19 Come to her as one that plougheth, and soweth, and wait for her good fruits.

20 For in working about her, thou shalt labour a little, and shalt quickly eat of her fruits.

21 How very unpleasant is wisdom to the unlearned, and the unwise will not continue with her.

^a Infra, viii. 9.

22 She shall be to them as a mighty stone of trial, and they will cast her from them before it be long.

23 For the wisdom of doctrine is according to her name, and she is not manifest unto many, but with them to whom she is known, she continueth even to the sight of God.

24 Give ear, my son, and take wise counsel, and cast not away my advice.

25 Put thy feet into her fetters, and thy neck into her chains:

26 Bow down thy shoulder, and bear her, and be not grieved with her bands.

27 Come to her with all thy mind, and keep her ways with all thy power.

28 Search for her, and she shall be made known to thee, and when thou hast gotten her, let her not go:

29 For in the latter end thou shalt find rest in her, and she shall be turned to thy joy.

30 Then shall her fetters be a strong defence for thee, and a firm foundation, and her chain a robe of glory:

31 For in her is the beauty of life, and her bands are a healthful binding.

32 Thou shalt put her on as a robe of glory, and thou shalt set her upon thee as a crown of joy.

33 My son, if thou wilt attend to me, thou shalt learn: and if thou wilt apply thy mind, thou shalt be wise.

34 If thou wilt incline thy ear, thou shalt receive instruction: and if thou love to hear, thou shalt be wise.

35 Stand in the multitude of ancients that are wise, and join thyself from thy heart to their wisdom, that thou mayest hear every discourse of God, and the sayings of praise may not escape thee.

36 And if thou see a man of understanding, go to him early in the morning, and let thy foot wear the steps of his doors.

37 Let thy thoughts be upon the precepts of God, and meditate continually on his commandments: and he will give thee a heart, and the desire of wisdom shall be given to thee.

CHAP. VII.

Religious and moral duties.

DO no evils, and no evils shall lay hold of thee.

2 Depart from the unjust, and evils shall depart from thee.

^b Psal. i. 2.

VER. 5. Appeaseth. Gr. "and an eloquent tongue multiplies good words." H.—The affable gain our affections.

VER. 6. Counsellor. Only few are capable of this office, (H.) or of keeping a secret. Yet we must have peace, if possible, with all. Rom. xii. 18. C.

VER. 7. Get. Lit. "dost possess a friend, possess him in trial," (H.) as the Greek also has it. But the Heb. term kanah, means likewise "to acquire," and a friend ought to be chosen with judgment. It is too late to try him after he has been received. C.

VER. 8. Trouble. Such are interested friends; but true "friendship is a kind and perfect agreement in all Divine and human affairs." Cic. S. Aug. c. Acad. 3.—Religion must be the foundation.

VER. 9. Reproaches. Disclosing all your imperfections. C.

VER. 13. Friends. Such as have been just described.—Entire confidence becomes those who are friends indeed.

VER. 16. And immortality, is not in Greek. C.—But shows the meaning of life in this place; as a true friend will not cease to give good advice for eternity. H.—But even in this world nothing can be more advantageous. C.—Him. Cicero himself says, "friendship can subsist only among the virtuous." Yet these, judging of others by themselves, are more easily imposed upon, and ought, therefore, to address themselves to God. C.

VER. 17. Be. He will instil into his friend sentiments of piety, if he have them not before.

VER. 18. Wisdom. A good education will, at last, bring forth fruit, though the passions may choke the good seed for a time. C.

VER. 22. Trial. Such stones were used to try people's strength, (Zach. xii. 3. C.) or to try gold. Vat.—The Syriac explains it of a precious stone. But the first idea is preferable. Many will not so much as attempt to become acquainted with wisdom and piety.

VER. 23. Name. Perhaps the author may compare the Greek word Sophia (C.) with Tsopie, (H.) "hidden," or with another Greek term, zophos, which means "darkness." See chap. xliii. 8, and xli. 1. The original Heb. text is lost, so that we cannot determine to what word allusion is made. See Corn. a. Laphio, who has written the best commentary on this book.—But, &c., is not in Greek. C.—Many prefer learning before piety. But S. Aug. says the unlearned rise and take the kingdom of heaven, while we with our learning, devoid of heart, (or charity. H.) behold we fall into the dirt. Conf. viii. 8. W.

VER. 28. Thee. She will even seek thee first. Wisd. vi. 14; Prov. viii.; Matt. vii. 7.—Gotten. Continence does not here signify being chaste, (C.) though this is one of the fruits of wisdom. Wisd. viii. 21; Gal. v. 23. H.

VER. 35. Wise. Lit. "prudent." The Latin has this epithet, because old people are not always such, though it may be expected of them. C.

VER. 36. Morning, with the utmost diligence. C.—"The very meeting of the wise is of advantage; and thou mayest learn something of a great man, though he open not his mouth." Sen. Ep. 94.

3 My son, sow not evils in the furrows of injustice, and thou shalt not reap them seven-fold.

4 Seek not of the Lord a pre-eminence, nor of the king the seat of honour.

5 *Justify not thyself before God, for he knoweth the heart: and desire not to appear wise before the king.

6 Seek not to be made a judge, unless thou have strength enough to extirpate iniquities: lest thou fear the person of the powerful, and lay a stumblingblock for thy integrity.

7 Offend not against the multitude of a city, neither cast thyself in upon the people,

8 *Nor bind sin to sin: for even in one thou shalt not be unpunished.

9 Be not faint-hearted in thy mind:

10 Neglect not to pray, and to give alms.

11 Say not: God will have respect to the multitude of my gifts, and when I offer to the most high God, he will accept my offerings.

12 Laugh no man to scorn in the bitterness of his soul: *for there is one that humbleth and exalteth, God; who seeth all.

13 Devise not a lie against thy brother: neither do the like against thy friend.

14 Be not willing to make any manner of lie: for the custom thereof is not good.

15 Be not full of words in a multitude of ancients, and repeat not the word in thy prayer.

16 Hate not laborious works, nor husbandry ordained by the Most High.

17 Number not thyself among the multitude of the disorderly.

18 Remember wrath, for it will not tarry long.

19 Humble thy spirit very much: for the vengeance on the flesh of the ungodly is fire and worms.

20 Do not transgress against thy friend, deferring money, nor despise thy dear brother for the sake of gold.

21 Depart not from a wise and good wife, whom thou hast gotten in the fear of the Lord: for the grace of her modesty is above gold.

^c 1 Kings ii. 7.

CHAP. VII. VER. 2. Evils. Gr. "injustice." Evil communications corrupt good manners, (H.) or the punishment of sin follows its commission. C.

VER. 3. Not. Gr. "Not in." H.—Seven-fold: more abundantly. Osee x. 11; Job iv. 5; Gal. vi. 7. C.

VER. 4. Honour. Ambition is the source of ruin to men and empires. James iii. 1. C.

VER. 5. God. Gr. "the Lord, and affect not wisdom (σοφίαν) before the king." H.—Of ourselves we are despicable; and kings love not those whose superior talents seem to eclipse their own.

VER. 6. Integrity. A judge is exposed to many dangers. 2 Par. xix. 6. C.

VER. 8. To sin. Correct not thy severity by too great indulgence, nor entangle thyself with the sins of others, as with a chain. Isa. v. 18.

VER. 9. Mind. If thou hast committed a fault, despair not, but pray, (ver. 10,) avoiding presumption. Ver. 11.

VER. 12. Soul. Whether the person have incurred a fault or not we ought to show pity, reflecting on our own frailty. 1 Cor. x. 12.

VER. 13. Devise. Lit. "plough."—Brother. We cannot hence infer, with Grotius, that the Jews allowed themselves to deceive strangers. C.

VER. 14. Good, but very pernicious. Matt. v. 37; Apoc. xxi. 8. S. Aug. Mend. C.

VER. 15. Repeat not. Make not much babbling by repetition of words, but aim more at fervour of heart. Ch.—A supplication ought to be drawn up in a concise manner. H.—Judges and orators should speak with due reserve. Prayer must be unceasing: yet many words must not be used to inform God of our wants. Our Saviour seems to allude to this text, Matt. vi. 7.

VER. 19. On the flesh, is not in Greek. Christ appears to have had this pas-

22 *Hurt not the servant that worketh faithfully, nor the hired man that giveth thee his life.

23 Let a wise servant be dear to thee as thy own soul, defraud him not of liberty, nor leave him needy.

24 Hast thou cattle? have an eye to them: and if they be for thy profit, keep them with thee.

25 Hast thou children? instruct them, and bow down their neck from their childhood.

26 Hast thou daughters? have a care of their body, and show not thy countenance gay towards them.

27 Marry thy daughter well, and thou shalt do a great work, and give her to a wise man.

28 If thou hast a wife according to thy soul, cast her not off: and to her that is hateful, trust not thyself. With thy whole heart,

29 *Honour thy father, and forget not the groanings of thy mother:

30 Remember that thou hadst not been born but through them: and make a return to them as they have done for thee.

31 With all thy soul fear the Lord, and reverence his priests.

32 With all thy strength love him that made thee: and forsake not his ministers.

33 *Honour God with all thy soul, and give honour to the priests, and purify thyself with thy arms.

34 Give them their portion, *as it is commanded thee, of the first-fruits, and of purifications: and for thy negligences purify thyself with a few.

35 Offer to the Lord the gift of thy shoulders, and the sacrifice of sanctification, and the first-fruits of the holy things:

36 And stretch out thy hand to the poor, that thy expiation and thy blessing may be perfected.

37 A gift hath grace in the sight of all the living, and restrain not grace from the dead.

38 *Be not wanting in comforting them that weep, and walk with them that mourn.

39 *Be not slow to visit the sick: for by these things thou shalt be confirmed in love.

sage in view, Mark ix. 44. Many suppose that both allude to the fire which burnt dead bodies, &c. in the vale of Hinnon. But all allow that the inextinguishable flames of hell are meant. C.—Fire and the worm of conscience are both eternal. W.—The punishment at least is such, and more intense than we can conceive.

VER. 21. Wife. The virtuous never approved of divorcing any but the incorrigible. C. Dis.

VER. 27. Man. The Jews in general embraced the married state in their youth. S. Paul prefers virginity. 1 Cor. vii. 8.

VER. 28. Hateful. To marry such a one would be an occasion of divorce which is always odious.

VER. 34. Few offerings, if thou be poor. Sa.

VER. 36. Poor. They and Levites are always to be invited. Deut. xii. 19. and xiv. 26.

VER. 37. Dead: detained in purgatory. W.—And restrain not grace from the dead. Withhold not from them the benefit of alms, prayers, and sacrifices. Such was the doctrine and practice of the Church of God, even in the time of the Old Testament. And the same has always been continued from the days of the apostles in the Church of the New Testament. Ch.

VER. 38. Walk. Gr. "mourn." H.

VER. 39. Love, being approved both by God and man.

VER. 40. End. Gr. "things;" death, judgment, and either hell or heaven. 11.—This consideration is a powerful preservative against sin. W.—For who would 40 In all thy works remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin.

CHAP. VIII.

Other lessons of wisdom and virtue.

STRIVE not with a powerful man, lest thou fall into his hands.

2 ^aContend not with a rich man, lest he bring an action against thee.

3 ^bFor gold and silver hath destroyed many, and hath reached even to the heart of kings, and perverted them.

4 Strive not with a man that is full of tongue, and heap not wood upon his fire.

5 Communicate not with an ignorant man, lest he speak ill of thy family.

6 Despise not a man that turneth away from sin, nor reproach him therewith: remember that we are all worthy of reproof.

7 ^dDespise not a man in his old age: for we also shall become old.

8 Rejoice not at the death of thy enemy: knowing that we all die, and are not willing that others should rejoice at our death.

9 ^eDespise not the discourse of them that are ancient and wise, but acquaint thyself with their proverbs.

10 For of them thou shalt learn wisdom, and instruction of understanding, and to serve great men without blame.

11 Let not the discourse of the ancients escape thee, for they have learned of their fathers:

12 For of them thou shalt learn understanding, and to give an answer in time of need.

13 Kindle not the coals of sinners by rebuking them, let thou be burnt with the flame of the fire of their sins.

14 Stand not against the face of an injurious person, lest he sit as a spy to entrap thee in thy words.

15 ^fLend not to a man that is mightier than thyself: and if thou lendest, count it as lost.

16 Be not surety above thy power: and if thou be surety, think as if thou wert to pay it.

17 Judge not against a judge: for he judgeth according to that which is just.

18 ^gGo not on the way with a bold man, lest he burden thee with his evils: for he goeth according to his own will, and thou shalt perish together with his folly.

dare to offend his Judge, if he believed that the next moment he would be arraigned before his dreadful tribunal? C.—“We die daily,” &c. S. Jer. ad Heliod.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Bring. Gr. “overweigh thee,” (H.) or turn the balance of the judge (C.) against thee, by money, (H.) which sometimes will corrupt kings. It is better, therefore, to avoid all law-suits. W.

VER. 5. Family. Gr. “ancestors.” They will be accused of having neglected thy education. People generally associate with those of the like dispositions.

VER. 13. Sinners. Gr. “a sinner, lest thou be burnt in the fire of his flame,” when he shall be enraged. H.—This is not the time for reprehension. C.

VER. 14. Words. Thus the Pharisees attacked our Saviour. Matt. xxii. 15.

VER. 20. Love. Gr. “keep the word secret. (21) Do no hidden thing before a stranger.” H.—The skilful alone must be consulted. W.

VER. 22. Evil. Gr. “false kindness.” The rest is omitted. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Lest. “A husband should teach his wife to be chaste by his own example.” Lact. Relig. 6.

VER. 4. Dancer. Gr. “musician, lest,” &c. H.—The same person is often his sight, and where there is no help he will overthrow thee.

20 Advise not with fools, for they cannot love but such things as please them.

21 Before a stranger do no matter of counsel: for thou knowest not what he will bring forth.

22 Open not thy heart to every man: lest he repay thee with an evil turn, and speak reproachfully to thee.

CHAP. IX.

Cautions with regard to women, and dangerous conversations.

BE not jealous over the wife of thy bosom, lest she show in thy regard the malice of a wicked lesson.

2 Give not the power of thy soul to a woman, lest she enter upon thy strength, and thou be confounded.

3 Look not upon a woman that hath a mind for many: lest thou fall into her snares.

4 Use not much the company of her that is a dancer, and hearken not to her, lest thou perish by the force of her charms.

5 ⁱGaze not upon a maiden, lest her beauty be a stumblingblock to thee.

6 ^kGive not thy soul to harlots in any point: lest thou destroy thyself and thy inheritance.

7 Look not round about thee in the ways of the city, nor wander up and down in the streets thereof.

8 ^lTurn away thy face from a woman dressed up, and gaze not about upon another's beauty.

9 For many have perished by the beauty of a woman, and hereby lust is enkindled as a fire.

10 Every woman that is a harlot, shall be trodden upon as dung in the way.

11 Many, by admiring the beauty of another man's wife, have become reprobate, for her conversation burneth as fire.

12 Sit not at all with another man's wife, nor repose upon the bed with her:

13 And strive not with her over wine, lest thy heart decline towards her, and by thy blood thou fall into destruction.

14 Forsake not an old friend, for the new will not be like to him.

15 A new friend is as new wine: it shall grow old, and thou shalt drink it with pleasure.

16 ^mEnvy not the glory and riches of a sinner, for thou knowest not what his ruin shall be.

VER. 5. Gaze. It is not always possible to avoid seeing them: but the greatest caution is requisite. Job xxxii. 1; Matt. v. 28. C.

VER. 8. Up. Gr. “of a fine appearance.” Grabe substitutes, “who has found favour.” H.—The Fathers condemn too much dressing, as a mark of levity and incontinence.

VER. 12. Nor, &c., is also omitted in many copies, though found in the Comp. and Ald. edit. C.—Grabe replaces it on the authority of Clem., (Pæd. ii. 7,) as he does many other passages, which are erroneously left out in several editions. Prolog. t. iv. c. 3.

unjust, knowing that even to hell the wicked shall not please.

18 Keep thee far from the man that hath power to kill, so thou shalt not suspect the fear of death.

19 And if thou come to him, commit no fault, lest he take away thy life.

20 Know it to be a communication with death: for thou art going in the midst of snares, and walking upon the arms of them that are grieved.

21 According to thy power beware of thy neighbour: and treat with the wise and prudent.

22 Let just men be thy guests, and let thy glory be in the fear of God.

23 And let the thought of God be in thy mind, and all thy discourse on the commandments of the Highest.

24 Works shall be praised for the hand of the artificers, and the prince of the people for the wisdom of his speech, but the word of the ancients for the sense.

25 A man full of tongue is terrible in his city, and he that is rash in his word shall be hateful.

CHAP. X.

The virtues and vices of men in power: the great evil of pride.

A WISE judge shall judge his people, and the government of a prudent man shall be steady.

2 ^aAs the judge of the people is himself, so also are his ministers: and what manner of man the ruler of a city is, such also are they that dwell therein.

3 ^bAn unwise king shall be the ruin of his people: and cities shall be inhabited through the prudence of the rulers.

4 The power of the earth is in the hand of God, and in his time he will raise up a profitable ruler over it.

5 The prosperity of man is in the hand of God, and upon the person of the scribe he shall lay his honour.

6 Remember not any injury done thee by thy neighbour, ^cand do thou nothing by deeds of injury.

7 Pride is hateful before God and men: and all iniquity of nations is execrable.

8 ^dA kingdom is translated from one people to another, because of injustices, and wrongs, and injuries, and divers deceits.

9 But nothing is more wicked than the covetous man. Why is earth and ashes proud?

10 There is not a more wicked thing than to love money: for such a one setteth even his own soul to sale: because while he liveth, he hath cast away his bowels.

11 All power is of short life. A long sickness is troublesome to the physician.

^a Prov. xxix. 12.—^b 3 Kings xii. 13.—^c Lev. xix. 13.—^d Dan. iv. 14.

VER. 20. It. Gr. "Know that thou art . . . walking on the pinnacles of the city." H.—The same sense is given in the Vulg., as people walking among armed men in a rage are exposed to imminent danger. M.

VER. 21. Beware. Gr. "aim at." Examine the person to whom thou intrustest a secret.

VER. 24. Artificers. All strive to excel in their profession.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Judge. Gr. "instruct." Ch.—The example of rulers is very powerful. W.

VER. 3. Rulers. All wish to live under just kings. Prov. xxix. 4.

VER. 5. The scribe. That is, the man that is wise and learned in the law. Ch.—It also denotes an officer. Judg. v. 14. God must give light and success. C.

VER. 6. Injury, out of revenge. H. Lev. xix. 18.

VER. 7. Men. It invades the rights of the former, and disturbs the repose of mankind.—All. Gr. is obscure, "and from both proceeds injustice" (C.); or, "t shall act unjustly." H.—Pride attacks both God and man. Grot.

VER. 8. Deceits. Hence kingdoms are changed. W.

12 The physician cutteth off a short sickness: so also a king is to-day, and to-morrow he shall die.

13 For when a man shall die, he shall inherit serpents, and beasts, and worms.

14 The beginning of the pride of man is to fall off from God:

15 Because his heart is departed from him that made him: "for pride is the beginning of all sin: he that holdeth it, shall be filled with maledictions, and it shall ruin him in the end.

16 Therefore hath the Lord disgraced the assemblies of the wicked, and hath utterly destroyed them.

17 God hath overturned the thrones of proud princes, and hath set up the meek in their stead.

18 God hath made the roots of proud nations to wither, and hath planted the humble of these nations.

19 The Lord hath overthrown the lands of the Gentiles, and hath destroyed them even to the foundation.

20 He hath made some of them to wither away, and hath destroyed them, and hath made the memory of them to cease from the earth.

21 God hath abolished the memory of the proud, and hath preserved the memory of them that are humble in mind.

22 Pride was not made for men: nor wrath for the race of women.

23 That seed of men shall be honoured, which feareth God: but that seed shall be dishonoured, which transgresseth the commandments of the Lord.

24 In the midst of brethren their chief is honourable: so shall they that fear the Lord be in his eyes.

25 The fear of God is the glory of the rich, and of the honourable, and of the poor:

26 Despise not a just man that is poor, and do not magnify a sinful man that is rich.

27 The great man, and the judge, and the mighty, is in honour: and there is none greater than he that feareth God.

28 They that are free, shall serve a servant that is wise: ^eand a man that is prudent and well instructed, will not murmur when he is reprov'd: and he that is ignorant, shall not be honoured.

29 Extol not thyself in doing thy work, and linger not in the time of distress:

30 ^fBetter is he that laboureth, and aboundeth in all things, than he that boasteth himself and wanteth bread.

^e Prov. xviii. 11.—^f Prov. xvii. 2.—^g 2 Kings xii. 13.—^h Prov. xii. 9.

VER. 9. Man. The desire of plunder, or of glory, occasions revolutions. H.—Covetousness is the root of all evils, and causes people to abandon the faith. 1 Tim. vi. 10. W.

VER. 10. Bowels, and would have no compassion for others or for himself.

VER. 14. Beginning, or summit; ἀρχή. C.—Thus Lucifer and Adam fell by pride. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, xii. 6. All sin, being a contempt of God, springs from pride, (Prosper. Contemp. iii. 3,) and from an inordinate self-love. C.

VER. 15. Sin, because man abandons God's law, and falls into all misery. W.—The proud easily yield to all sorts of iniquity. M.

VER. 16. Disgraced. Gr. "hath taken an exemplary vengeance, and hath," &c. H.

VER. 17. Stead. Luke i. 52. C.

VER. 18. Nations, the Chanaanites, who submitted to the yoke: or rather the Hebrews. C.—Gr. "instead of them."

VER. 19. Foundation: overturning Sodom, Babylon, and even Jerusalem for their sins. C.

31 My son, keep thy soul in meekness, and give it honour according to its desert.

32 Who will justify him that sinneth against his own soul? and who will honour him that dishonoureth his own soul?

33 The poor man is glorified by his discipline and fear: and there is a man that is honoured for his wealth.

34 But he that is glorified in poverty, how much more in wealth? and he that is glorified in wealth, let him fear poverty.

CHAP. XI.

Lessons of humility and moderation in all things.

THE wisdom of the humble shall exalt his head, and shall make him sit in the midst of great men.

2 ^bPraise not a man for his beauty, neither despise a man for his look.

3 The bee is small among flying things, but her fruit hath the chiefest sweetness.

4 ^cGlory not in apparel at any time, and be not exalted in the day of thy honour: for the works of the Highest only are wonderful, and his works are glorious, and secret, and hidden.

5 Many tyrants have sat on the throne, and he whom no man would think on hath worn the crown.

6 ^dMany mighty men have been greatly brought down, and the glorious have been delivered into the hand of others.

7 Before thou inquire, blame no man: and when thou hast inquired, reprove justly.

8 ^eBefore thou hear, answer not a word: and interrupt not others in the midst of their discourse.

9 Strive not in a matter which doth not concern thee, and sit not in judgment with sinners.

10 My son, meddle not with many matters: ^fand if thou be rich, thou shalt not be free from sin: for if thou pursue after, thou shalt not overtake: and if thou run before, thou shalt not escape.

11 ^gThere is an ungodly man that laboureth, and maketh haste, and is in sorrow, and is so much the more in want.

12 Again, there is an inactive man that wanteth help, is very weak in ability, and full of poverty:

13 ^hYet the eye of God hath looked upon him for good, and hath lifted him up from his low estate, and hath exalted his head: and many have wondered at him, and have glorified God.

14 ⁱGood things and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, are from God.

15 Wisdom and discipline, and the knowledge of the law, are with God. Love and the ways of good things are with him.

16 Error and darkness are created with sinners: and they that glory in evil things, grow old in evil.

17 The gift of God abideth with the just, and his advancement shall have success for ever.

18 There is one that is enriched by living sparingly, and this is the portion of his reward.

19 In that he saith: ^jI have found me rest, and now I will eat of my goods alone:

20 And he knoweth not what time shall pass, and that death approacheth, and that he must leave all to others, and shall die.

21 Be stedfast in thy covenant, and be conversant therein, and grow old in the work of thy commandments.

22 Abide not in the works of sinners. But trust in God, and stay in thy place.

23 For it is easy in the eyes of God on a sudden to make the poor man rich.

24 The blessing of God maketh haste to reward the just, and in a swift hour his blessing beareth fruit.

25 Say not: What need I, and what good shall I have by this?

26 Say not: I am sufficient for myself: and what shall I be made worse by this?

27 ^kIn the day of good things be not unmindful of evils: and in the day of evils be not unmindful of good things:

28 For it is easy before God in the day of death to reward every one according to his ways.

29 The affliction of an hour maketh one forget great delights, and in the end of a man is the disclosing of his works.

30 Praise not any man before death, for a man is known by his children.

^a Gen. xii. 4; Dan. vi. 3; John vii. 18.—^b 1 Kings xvi. 17; 2 Cor. x. 10; James ii. 1, and 9.
^c Acts xii. 12, and 22.—^d 1 Kings xv. 28; Esth. vi. 7.

^e Prov. xviii. 13.—^f 1 Tim. vi. 9.—^g Eccles. iv. 8.—^h Job xlii. 10.—ⁱ Job ii. 10.
^j Luke xviii. 19.—^k Infra, xviii. 25.

VER. 31. Desert. Let not avarice deprive thee of the necessities of life, nor do any thing beneath thy dignity. Luke xxi. 19.

VER. 33. Glorified. Gr. "honoured on account of his knowledge, and the rich is," &c. H.

VER. 34. And. Gr. omits this sentence (C.): yet Grabe has, And the man who is without honour in wealth, how much more so will he be in poverty? H. Eccles. vii. 12.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Men. Merit is preferable to high birth, as it surmounts difficulties. C.

VER. 3. Sweetness. Honey was more esteemed before sugar became common. As the little bee produces such sweetness, so the less beautiful often by their abilities surpass the comely.

VER. 5. Throne. Gr. "pavement."

VER. 7. Man, as David did Miphiboseth. 2 Kings xvi. 4. Constantine the Great grieved for having put his son Crispus to death on too weak evidence; and Theodosius repented for the sentence he had rashly passed on the inhabitants of Thessalonica.

VER. 8. Discourse. This is a mark of impertinence. Prov. xviii. 13. C.—Let others finish their sentence, and wait if there be any elder or better informed to speak. W.

VER. 10. Escape. God will grant thee riches without so much solicitude (Lyran); or rather, meddle not with too many things, as that is the way to succeed in none, and destroys all repose

VER. 16. Sinners. They are all born in sin. But some appear to have worse dispositions than others. Psal. lviii. 4. C.—God is not the author of iniquity. H.—He punishes in order to save, though he be offended by the wicked choice of man. C.—Blindness of heart and obduracy are punishments of sin. W.

VER. 17. Ever. All things work together for the good of the elect. Rom. viii. 8. H.—God never abandons first. Trid. Ses. vii. 11.—The wicked often abuse graces. C.

VER. 21. Covenant. All the Israelites partook in the covenants entered into between God and their fathers, which became their own by circumcision, as we become entitled to the alliance of Christ by baptism.

VER. 22. Place. If God bestow not riches, it may be for thy advantage.

VER. 24. Fruit. Prosperity was a sign of God's favour under the old law. Now nothing is more equivocal, and the poor are declared blessed. C.

VER. 26. Myself. Neither the poor nor the rich can be independent of God. H.

VER. 28. Death, in old age, (Grot.) or rather after the soul's departure. The pagans had not this consolation. Their hopes were confined to the earth; and as they saw many honest people miserable, they introduced a chimerical idea of happiness, consisting in virtue alone. The views of Christians are chiefly bent on future rewards.

VER. 29. Hour. The last of life. It demonstrates the vanity of past pleasures.

VER. 30. Children. If they take wicked ways, it is a stain on their fathers' memory; and though the latter were blameless, it must greatly disturb their repose. C.

31 Bring not every man into thy house: for many are the snares of the deceitful.

32 For as corrupted bowels send forth stinking breath, and as the partridge is brought into the cage, and as the roe into the snare: so also is the heart of the proud, and as a spy that looketh on the fall of his neighbour.

33 For he lieth in wait, and turneth good into evil, and on the elect he will lay a blot.

34 Of one spark cometh a great fire, and of one deceitful man much blood: and a sinful man lieth in wait for blood.

35 Take heed to thyself of a mischievous man, for he worketh evils: lest he bring upon thee reproach for ever.

36 Receive a stranger in, and he shall overthrow thee with a whirlwind, and shall turn thee out of thy own.

CHAP. XII.

We are to be liberal to the just: and not to trust the wicked.

IF thou do good, know to whom thou dost it, and there shall be much thanks for thy good deeds.

2 Do good to the just, and thou shalt find great recompense: and if not of him, assuredly of the Lord.

3 For there is no good for him that is always occupied in evil, and that giveth no alms: for the Highest hateth sinners, and hath mercy on the penitent.

4 *Give to the merciful, and uphold not the sinner: God will repay vengeance to the ungodly and to sinners, and keep them against the day of vengeance.

5 Give to the good, and receive not a sinner.

6 Do good to the humble, and give not to the ungodly: hold back thy bread, and give it not to him, lest thereby he over-master thee.

7 For thou shalt receive twice as much evil for all the good thou shalt have done to him: for the Highest also hateth sinners, and will repay vengeance to the ungodly.

8 A friend shall not be known in prosperity, and an enemy shall not be hidden in adversity.

9 In the prosperity of a man, his enemies are grieved: and a friend is known in his adversity.

10 Never trust thy enemy: for as a brass pot his wickedness rusteth:

11 Though he humble himself and go crouching, yet take good heed and beware of him.

12 Set him not by thee, neither let him sit on thy right hand, lest he turn into thy place, and seek to take thy seat: and at the last thou acknowledge my words, and be pricked with my sayings.

* Gal. vi. 7.—Jer. xli. 6.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. To whom. All must not be admitted into the house, nor treated with marks of particular esteem. Yet daily alms must be given without too scrupulous an inquiry. Luke vi. 30. C.—It would be wrong to encourage sinners, who would run to their ruin. But we must relieve the penitent. W.

VER. 2. Lord. Christ rewards what good is done to his poor brethren.

VER. 3. For. Gr. (4) "Give to the pious, and receive not the sinner, (6) Do," &c. H.—The gospel enjoins us to do good to all. S. Aug. (Dort. iii. 16) and S. Tho. (ii. 2, q. 32, a. 9) explain this in a spiritual sense, that we must not partake in the crimes of others. We may also make presents to the virtuous, and pass over people of a different character, particularly when they would abuse our gifts. The honest poor must be preferred.

VER. 10. Rusteth. So his malice always returns, (C.) and he shows what he is. Vat.—Christianity does not blame due reserve in treating with those whom we know not, or who have formerly injured us. Though we must love them from our heart, yet we need not intrust our secrets to them; nor even to every friend. C.

VER. 11. Of him. Gr. adds, "and thou shalt be to him as one who has rubbed a mirror, (of brass from the rust. It returns perpetually, C.) and shalt know that the rust is not removed for ever. Grabe. H.

13 Who will pity an enchanter struck by a serpent, or any that come near wild beasts? so is it with him that keepeth company with a wicked man, and is involved in his sins.

14 For an hour he will abide with thee: but if thou begin to decline, he will not endure it.

15 ^bAn enemy speaketh sweetly with his lips, but in his heart he lieth in wait to throw thee into a pit.

16 An enemy weepeth with his eyes: but if he find an opportunity, he will not be satisfied with blood:

17 And if evils come upon thee, thou shalt find him there first.

18 An enemy hath tears in his eyes, and while he pretendeth to help thee, will undermine thy feet.

19 He will shake his head, and clap his hands, and whisper much, and change his countenance.

CHAP. XIII.

Cautions in the choice of company.

HE^c that toucheth pitch, shall be defiled with it: and he that hath fellowship with the proud, shall put on pride.

2 He shall take a burden upon him that hath fellowship with one more honourable than himself. And have no fellowship with one that is richer than thyself.

3 What agreement shall the earthen pot have with the kettle? for if they knock one against the other, it shall be broken.

4 The rich man hath done wrong, and yet he will fume: but the poor is wronged, and must hold his peace.

5 If thou give, he will make use of thee: and if thou have nothing, he will forsake thee.

6 If thou have any thing, he will live with thee, and will make thee bare, and he will not be sorry for thee.

7 If he have need of thee, he will deceive thee; and smiling upon thee, will put thee in hope; he will speak thee fair, and will say: What wantest thou?

8 And he will shame thee by his meats, till he have drawn thee dry twice or thrice, and at last he will laugh at thee: and afterward, when he seeth thee, he will forsake thee, and shake his head at thee.

9 Humble thyself to God, and wait for his hands.

10 Beware that thou be not deceived into folly, and be humbled.

11 Be not lowly in thy wisdom, lest being humbled thou be deceived into folly.

* Deut. vii. 2.

VER. 13. Beasts. Vipers, &c. Why should they familiarize themselves with such? C.

VER. 16. Blood. Jer. xli. 6. Samson yielded to the tears of women. Judg. xiv. 16, and xvi. 6.

VER. 18. Eyes. Is taken from ver. 16. It is not in Gr. H.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Pride. We are naturally prone to it, and the friendship and manners of the proud will increase it. C.—If therefore the rich be not virtuous, it is dangerous to keep their company, (W.) both for this and the next world.

VER. 3. Kettle. Made of iron. It will presently be broken. So the poor must suffer, if they marry or have society with those who are much above their rank. C.

VER. 8. Drawn. Lit. "exhaust." H.—He will feast thee, while he wants thy service, or he will come to dine with thee, and thus reduce thee to distress. Prov. xxiii. 1. C.

VER. 10. Humbled. By foolishly attempting to rival the sumptuous feasts of the great. Ver. 9 and 11 are not in the Greek. H.

VER. 11. Wisdom. Depend not on others' bounty. M.—When the cause of God is at stake be firm, like S. Paul. C.

12 If thou be invited by one that is mightier, withdraw thyself: for so he will invite thee the more.

13 Be not troublesome to him, lest thou be put back: and keep not far from him, lest thou be forgotten.

14 Affect not to speak with him as an equal: and believe not his many words: for by much talk he will sift thee, and smiling, will examine thee concerning thy secrets.

15 His cruel mind will lay up thy words: and he will not spare to do thee hurt, and to cast thee into prison.

16 Take heed to thyself, and attend diligently to what thou hearest: for thou walkest in danger of thy ruin.

17 When thou hearest those things, see as it were in sleep, and thou shalt awake.

18 Love God all thy life, and call upon him for thy salvation.

19 Every beast loveth its like: so also every man him that is nearest to himself.

20 All flesh shall consort with the like to itself, and every man shall associate himself to his like.

21 If the wolf shall at any time have fellowship with the lamb, so the sinner with the just.

22 ^aWhat fellowship hath a holy man with a dog, or what part hath the rich with the poor?

23 The wild ass is the lion's prey, in the desert: so also the poor are devoured by the rich.

24 And as humility is an abomination to the proud, so also the rich man abhorreth the poor.

25 When a rich man is shaken, he is kept up by his friends; but when a poor man is fallen down, he is thrust away even by his acquaintance.

26 When a rich man hath been deceived, he hath many helpers: he hath spoken proud things, and they have justified him.

27 The poor man was deceived, and he is rebuked also: he hath spoken wisely, and could have no place.

28 The rich man spoke, and all held their peace; and what he said, they extol even to the clouds.

29 The poor man spoke, and they say: Who is this? and if he stumble, they will overthrow him.

30 Riches are good to him that hath no sin in his conscience: and poverty is very wicked in the mouth of the ungodly.

31 The heart of a man changeth his countenance, either for good or for evil.

32 The token of a good heart, and a good countenance, thou shalt hardly find, and with labour.

^a 2 Cor. vi. 14.—^b Infra, xix. 17.

VER. 14. Concerning, &c., is not expressed in Gr. H.—If a person be so weak as to disclose his secret to a great man, he will never be trusted by him. C.

VER. 19. Himself. Similarity of manners and of condition is favourable to friendship. C.

VER. 25. Away. Psal. lxi. 4. C.

VER. 26. Helpers. Who prevent his ruin, (C.) and turn his words to a good sense. M.—Proud. Gr. "what should not be disclosed," apopnra. H. C.—Their "fault increases, being fed by applause." S. Greg. Mor. iv. 29.

VER. 28. Clouds. People suppose that the rich must possess genius. Hor. 2. Sat. 3. C.—Exception of persons hinders many good counsels, and promotes evil. W.

VER. 30. Ungodly. The abuse of riches is alone blameable. All things are clean for the clean, while the wicked pervert every advantage.

VER. 31. Evil. Sorrow will manifest itself. C.

VER. 32. Find. Few are perfectly sincere. C.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Mouth. He is perfect. James iii. 2.

VER. 3. Envious. Who will neither use his wealth himself, nor bestow it. The true use of riches is to take a sufficiency, and to relieve the poor. C.

CHAP. XIV.

The evil of avarice: works of mercy are recommended, and the love of wisdom.

BLESSED ^bis the man that hath not slept by a word out of his mouth, and is not pricked with the remorse of sin.

2 Happy is he that hath had no sadness of his mind, and who is not fallen from his hope.

3 Riches are not comely for a covetous man and a niggard, and what should an envious man do with gold?

4 He that gathereth together by wronging his own soul, gathereth for others, and another will squander away his goods in rioting.

5 He that is evil to himself, to whom will he be good? and he shall not take pleasure in his goods.

6 There is none worse than he that envieth himself, and this is the reward of his wickedness:

7 And if he do good, he doth it ignorantly and unwillingly: and at the last he discovereth his wickedness.

8 The eye of the envious is wicked: and he turneth away his face, and despiseth his own soul.

9 The eye of the covetous man is insatiable in his portion of iniquity: he will not be satisfied till he consume his own soul, drying it up.

10 An evil eye is towards evil things: and he shall not have his fill of bread, but shall be needy and pensive at his own table.

11 My son, if thou have any thing, do good to thyself, and offer to God worthy offerings.

12 Remember that death is not slow, and that the covenant of hell hath been shown to thee: for the covenant of this world shall surely die.

13 ^cDo good to thy friend before thou die; and according to thy ability, stretching out thy hand, give to the poor.

14 Defraud not thyself of the good day, and let not the part of a good gift overpass thee.

15 Shalt thou not leave to others to divide by lot thy sorrows and labours?

16 Give and take, and justify thy soul.

17 Before thy death work justice: for in hell there is no finding food.

18 ^dAll flesh shall fade as grass, and as the leaf that springeth out on a green tree.

19 Some grow, and some fall off: so is the generation

VER. 4. Gathereth. Gr. "taketh from his," &c. H.—Such misers are continually derided, but will never be cured. Eccles. ii. 18, and vi. 2.

VER. 6. Envieth. By refusing himself the necessities of life he rejects God's gifts, and scandalizes his neighbour. W.

VER. 11. Offerings. Make a proper use of what God has bestowed. C.

VER. 12. The covenant of hell. The decree by which all are to go down to the regions of death, (Ch.) which hell frequently denotes. H.—Hath been. Gr. "hath not," &c. We know not when we shall die, though all must taste of death. (H.) and therefore we must make haste to do good. M.

VER. 15. Sorrows. Gr. "toils," or what thou hast amassed with much care. H.

VER. 16. Take. Alms-deeds will insure the remission of sins. This usury is lawful. We must also keep up a good society with our friends. C.—Justify. Gr. "sanctify thy soul (17) for." Grabe. H.

VER. 18. Fade. Gr. "grow old like a garment. For the covenant from the beginning is, he shall die the death. Like a leaf flourishing on a bushy tree." H.

of flesh and blood : one cometh to an end, and another is born.

20 Every work that is corruptible, shall fail in the end : and the worker thereof shall go with it.

21 And every excellent work shall be justified : and the worker thereof shall be honoured therein.

22 *Blessed is the man that shall continue in wisdom, and that shall meditate in his justice, and in his mind shall think of the all-seeing eye of God.

23 He that considereth her ways in his heart, and hath understanding in her secrets, who goeth after her as one that traceth and stayeth in her ways :

24 He who looketh in at her windows, and hearkeneth at her door :

25 He that lodgeth near her house, and fastening a pin in her walls shall set up his tent nigh unto her, where good things shall rest in his lodging for ever :

26 He shall set his children under her shelter, and shall lodge under her branches :

27 He shall be protected under her covering from the heat, and shall rest in her glory.

CHAP. XV.

Wisdom embraceth them that fear God. God is not the author of sin.

HE that feareth God, will do good : and he that pos- sesseth justice, shall lay hold on her.

2 And she will meet him as an honourable mother, and will receive him as a wife married of a virgin.

3 With the bread of life and understanding she shall feed him, and give him the water of wholesome wisdom to drink : and she shall be made strong in him, and he shall not be moved :

4 And she shall hold him fast, and he shall not be con- founded : and she shall exalt him among his neighbours.

5 And in the midst of the church she shall open his mouth, and shall fill him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and shall clothe him with a robe of glory.

6 She shall heap upon him a treasure of joy and glad- ness, and shall cause him to inherit an everlasting name.

7 But foolish men shall not obtain her : and wise men shall meet her, foolish men shall not see her : for she is far from pride and deceit.

8 Lying men shall not be mindful of her : but men that speak truth shall be found with her, and shall ad- vance, even till they come to the sight of God.

9 Praise is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner :

VER. 20. End. The fruits of the Spirit are alone immortal. Ver. 21; Gal. vi. 8.

VER. 27. Glory. As under the miraculous pillar. Exod. xxiv. 17. He who shall abide with wisdom shall have nothing to fear. C.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Good. Gr. "these things, and he who possesses the knowledge of the law will find her," (C.) or, "he who keeps the law, will receive her." Grabe. 1 Cor. iv. 20. H.

VER. 2. Married. Lit. "from virginity." H.—Those who have been espoused in youth have the most durable love for one another. Prov. ii. 17; Mal. ii. 14. C.

VER. 5. She. Or Gr. "he shall open his mouth, (6) he shall find joy and a crown of exultation, and shall inherit," &c. H.—Church, or assembly of the peo- ple. In both the wise shall be heard with respect. C.

VER. 9. Praise. Or Gr. "a proverb." Prov. xvii. 7, and xxvi. 7. C.—David invites even dragons to praise God, but sinners never. S. Chrys. Hom. Presbyt. Psal. xlix. 16.

VER. 10. Wisdom. Gr. "it was not sent to him, (C.) or he was not com- missioned by the Lord. For praise shall be spoken in wisdom, and the Lord will give him success."

10 For wisdom came forth from God : For praise shall be with the wisdom of God, and shall abound in a faithful mouth, and the sovereign Lord will give praise unto it.

11 Say not : It is through God that she is not with me : for do not thou the things that he hateth.

12 Say not : He hath caused me to err : for he hath no need of wicked men.

13 The Lord hateth all abomination of error, and they that fear him shall not love it.

14 God made man from the beginning, and left him in the hand of his own counsel.

15 He added his commandments and precepts.

16 *If thou wilt keep the commandments, and perform acceptable fidelity for ever, they shall preserve thee.

17 He hath set water and fire before thee : stretch forth thy hand to which thou wilt.

18 *Before man is life and death, good and evil ; that which he shall choose shall be given him :

19 For the wisdom of God is great, and he is strong in power, seeing all men without ceasing.

20 *The eyes of the Lord are towards them that fear him, and he knoweth all the work of man.

21 He hath commanded no man to do wickedly, and he hath given no man licence to sin :

22 For he desireth not a multitude of faithless and un- profitable children.

CHAP. XVI.

It is better to have none than many wicked children. Of the justice and mercy of God. His ways are unsearchable.

REJOICE not in ungodly children, if they be multi- plied : neither be delighted in them, if the fear of God be not with them.

2 Trust not to their life, and respect not their labours.

3 For better is one that feareth God than a thousand ungodly children.

4 And it is better to die without children, than to leave ungodly children.

5 By one that is wise, a country shall be inhabited ; the tribe of the ungodly shall become desolate.

6 Many such things hath my eye seen, and greater things than these my ear hath heard.

7 *In the congregation of sinners a fire shall be kindled, and in an unbelieving nation wrath shall flame out.

8 *The ancient giants did not obtain pardon for their sins, who were destroyed, trusting to their own strength :

a Jer. xxi. 8.—c Psal. xxxiii. 17; Heb. iv. 13.—f Infra, xxi. 10.—g Gen. vi. 4.

VER. 11. She. Ignorance and vice are defects, and consequently not the work of God, but of the perversion of free-will. See James i. 13; Ezec. xxxiii. 11. S. Aug. Grat. et lib. 2. C.

VER. 14. Counsel. Many explain this of Adam, before his fall, when he stood not in need of asking continually for God's assistance. S. Aug. Correp. 2, n. 35.—But if we examine the context, it shows that man, in his present state, is declared inexcusable if he yield to sin, as he has still free-will, which may avoid it, with the grace of God, (C.) which is always ready to support us. Gr. subjoins, (ver. 16,) "if thou wilt, thou shalt keep the commandments, even to execute faithfully the good pleasure. (17) He," &c. H.

VER. 15. Precepts. These would never be imposed if man were not free. C.

VER. 17. And fire. Or, good and evil, as the Vulg. explains it, (ver. 18,) though the Gr. be silent. H.—The law written on the heart, as well as on the tables of stone, shows man his duty ; and he has free-will to comply with it. Deut. xxx. 15; Jer. xxi. 8. C.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 7. Out. They shall perish by civil and foreign wars, (C.) and by God's indignation. Deut. xxxii. 23. H.—They who yield to the fire of cor- cupiscence will feel God's wrath for ever. W.

9 And he spared not the place where Lot sojourned, but abhorred them for the pride of their word.

10 He had not pity on them, destroying the whole nation that extolled themselves in their sins.

11 *So did he with the six hundred thousand footmen, who were gathered together in the hardness of their heart: and if one had been stiff-necked, it is a wonder if he had escaped unpunished:

12 For mercy and wrath are with him. He is mighty to forgive, and to pour out indignation:

13 According as his mercy is, so his correction judgeth a man according to his works.

14 The sinner shall not escape in his rapines, and the patience of him that sheweth mercy shall not be put off.

15 ^bAll mercy shall make a place for every man according to the merit of his works, and according to the wisdom of his sojournment.

16 Say not: I shall be hidden from God, and who shall remember me from on high?

17 In such a multitude I shall not be known: for what is my soul in such an immense creation?

18 Behold the heaven, and the heavens of heavens, the deep, and all the earth, and the things that are in them, shall be moved in his sight:

19 The mountains also, and the hills, and the foundations of the earth: when God shall look upon them, they shall be shaken with trembling.

20 And in all these things the heart is senseless: and every heart is understood by him:

21 And his ways who shall understand, and the storm, which no eye of man shall see?

22 For many of his works are hidden: but the works of his justice who shall declare? or who shall endure? for the testament is far from some, and the examination of all is in the end.

23 He that wanteth understanding, thinketh vain things: and the foolish and erring man thinketh foolish things.

24 Hearken to me, my son, and learn the discipline of understanding, and attend to my words in thy heart.

25 And I will show forth good doctrine in equity, and will seek to declare wisdom: and attend to my words in thy heart, whilst with equity of spirit I tell thee the virtues that God hath put upon his works from the beginning, and I show forth in truth his knowledge.

26 The works of God are done in judgment from the beginning, and from the making of them he distinguished their parts, and their beginnings in their generations.

27 He beautified their works for ever; they have neither hungered, nor laboured, and they have not ceased from their works.

28 Nor shall any of them straiten his neighbour at any time.

29 Be not thou incredulous to his word.

30 After this, God looked upon the earth, and filled it with his goods.

31 The soul of every living thing hath shown forth before the face thereof, and into it they return again.

CHAP. XVII.

The creation and favour of God to man. An exhortation to turn to God.

GOD created man of the earth, and made him after his own image.

2 And he turned him into it again, and clothed him with strength according to himself.

3 He gave him the number of his days and time, and gave him power over all things that are upon the earth.

4 He put the fear of him upon all flesh, and he had dominion over beasts and fowls.

5 ^aHe created of him a help-mate like to himself: he gave them counsel, and a tongue, and eyes, and ears, and a heart to devise: and he filled them with the knowledge of understanding.

6 He created in them the science of the spirit, he filled their heart with wisdom, and showed them both good and evil.

7 He set his eye upon their hearts, to show them the greatness of his works:

8 That they might praise the name which he hath sanctified: and glory in his wondrous acts; that they might declare the glorious things of his works.

9 Moreover, he gave them instructions, and the law of life for an inheritance.

10 He made an everlasting covenant with them, and he showed them his justice and judgments.

11 And their eye saw the majesty of his glory, and their ears heard his glorious voice, and he said to them: Beware of all iniquity.

12 And he gave to every one of them commandment concerning his neighbour.

13 Their ways are always before him, they are not hidden from his eyes.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. And made. This is transposed in Gr. to the end of the third verse. H.—The creation of other things had been specified before. Man was designed to be immortal, and was made like to God in his soul, which is spiritual, intelligent, &c. But sin caused his days to be shortened. C.

VER. 6. Evil. Man has understanding, and may merit, which brutes cannot.

VER. 7. Hearts. God will bring them to judgment, and has given them a law. C.

VER. 9. Life. The observance of which will insure life both now and for ever. Rom. x. 5. This was the peculiar privilege of Israel, (C.) though the natural law had the same effect, and God had left none without sufficient light. H.—The law was for a trial of obedience. Gen. ii. W.

VER. 11. Saw. When he gave the law on Mount Sinai. Ch. Exod. xx. 16.—Voice. Thunder. Psal. xxviii. 4. C.

VER. 13. Eyes. He conducted them in the pillar and always watched over 14 "Over every nation he set a ruler.

15 And Israel was made the manifest portion of God.

16 And all their works are as the sun in the sight of God: and his eyes are continually upon their ways.

17 Their covenants were not hid by their iniquity: and all their iniquities are in the sight of God.

18 "The alms of a man is as a signet with him, and shall preserve the grace of a man as the apple of the eye:

19 "And afterward he shall rise up, and shall render them their reward, to every one upon their own head, and shall turn them down into the bowels of the earth.

20 But to the penitent he hath given the way of justice, and he hath strengthened them that were fainting in patience, and hath appointed to them the lot of truth.

21 Turn to the Lord, and forsake thy sins:

22 Make thy prayer before the face of the Lord, and offend less.

23 Return to the Lord, and turn away from thy injustice, and greatly hate abomination.

24 And know the justices and judgments of God, and stand firm in the lot set before thee, and in prayer to the most high God.

25 Go to the side of the holy age,^d with them that live and give praise to God.

26 Tarry not in the error of the ungodly, give glory before death. Praise perisheth from the dead as nothing.

27 Give thanks whilst thou art living, whilst thou art alive and in health thou shalt give thanks, and shalt praise God, and shalt glory in his mercies.

28 How great is the mercy of the Lord, and his forgiveness to them that turn to him!

29 For all things cannot be in men, because the son of man is not immortal, and they are delighted with the vanity of evil.

30 What is brighter than the sun? yet it shall be eclipsed. Or what is more wicked than that which flesh and blood hath invented? and this shall be reproved.

31 He beholdeth the power of the height of heaven: and all men are earth and ashes.

VER. 15. God. Comp. adds, "he nourishes him as his first-born with instruction, and dividing the light of love, he does not abandon him." H.—But the Rom. edit. agrees with us.

VER. 17. Covenants. Gr. "injustices were not concealed from him, and all," &c. H.—God. Comp. adds, "but the Lord being good, and knowing his work, neither left nor abandoned them, still sparing them." Heb. xiii. 5. H.

VER. 18. Alms, and all good works are placed in God's treasury, and as a ring which a person wears on his finger with the utmost care. Jer. xxii. 24; Cant. viii. 6

VER. 19. Head. Giving a crown of glory.—And shall, &c. is not in Greek. It implies that the wicked will be punished like Core. C.

VER. 24. And. Gr. "return to the Highest, and be converted from injustice, (for he shall lead from darkness to the light of health,) and greatly abhor abomination. Who shall praise the Most High in hell, instead of the living, and of those who make a return of praise, or confession? Praise perisheth from the dead, as from one who has had no being. The living and sound of heart shall praise the Lord. (28) How," &c. H. Psal. lxxxvii. 11. C.—We cannot merit perseverance, but must pray for it incessantly. W.

VER. 25. Go to the side, &c. Fly from the side of satan and sin, and join with the holy ones, that follow God and godliness. Ch.

HE that liveth for ever, "created all things together. God only shall be justified, and he remaineth an invincible King for ever.

2 Who is able to declare his works?

3 For who shall search out his glorious acts?

4 And who shall show forth the power of his majesty? or who shall be able to declare his mercy?

5 Nothing may be taken away, nor added, neither is it possible to find out the glorious works of God:

6 When a man hath done, then shall he begin: and when he leaveth off, he shall be at a loss.

7 What is man, and what is his grace? and what is his good, or what is his evil?

8 "The number of the days of men at the most are a hundred years: as a drop of water of the sea are they esteemed: and as a pebble of the sand, so are a few years compared to eternity.

9 Therefore God is patient in them, and poureth forth his mercy upon them.

10 He hath seen the presumption of their heart, that it is wicked, and hath known their end, that it is evil.

11 Therefore hath he filled up his mercy in their favour, and hath shown them the way of justice.

12 The compassion of man is toward his neighbour: but the mercy of God is upon all flesh.

13 He hath mercy, and teacheth, and correcteth, as a shepherd doth his flock.

14 He hath mercy on him that receiveth the discipline of mercy, and that maketh haste in his judgments.

15 My son, in thy good deeds, make no complaint, and when thou givest any thing, add not grief by an evil word.

16 Shall not the dew assuage the heat? so also the good word is better than the gift.

17 Lo, is not a word better than a gift? but both are with a justified man.

18 A fool will upbraid bitterly: and a gift of one ill taught consumeth the eyes.

19 Before judgment prepare thee justice, and learn before thou speak.

20 Before sickness take a medicine,^e and before judgment examine thyself, and thou shalt find mercy in the sight of God.

VER. 29. Immortal. We all stand in need of pardon. C.—We cannot exact absolute perfection from any mortal. But still a person may be watchful, and trust in God's mercies. Chap. xviii. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Together, as to their substance, though they received different forms successively, as Moses relates. Both writers are Divinely inspired. S. Aug. de Gen. ad Sit. iv. 33. W. S. Tho. i. p. 974, a. 2.—This passage only means that God alone was the Creator both of the sun and of man, and without him nothing was made, (John i.; Psal. xxxii. 15,) as he gave existence to all, κoinῶν, "in common." C.

VER. 6. Begin. God is so great and incomprehensible, that when man has done all that he can to find out his greatness and boundless perfections, he is still to begin: for what he has found out is but a mere nothing in comparison of his infinity. Ch.—It is best to adore him in silence and humility. C.

VER. 12. Flesh. It is infinite and disinterested. Man assists his neighbour, expecting a recompence, and remembering that he may be distressed.

VER. 14. Judgments. To execute his orders. Here ends the discourse begun chap. xiv. 22. C.

VER. 15. Complaint. Gr. "reproach." H.—The manner of giving enhances the value of the gift, or even surpasses it. C.

VER. 21. Sick. Rom. Gr. adds, "by abstinence, and in the time of sins

21 Humble thyself before thou art sick, and in the time of sickness show thy conversation.

22 Let nothing hinder thee from praying^a always, and be not afraid to be justified even to death: for the reward of God continueth for ever.

23 Before prayer prepare thy soul: and be not as a man that tempteth God.

24 ^bRemember the wrath that shall be at the last day, and the time of repaying, when he shall turn away his face.

25 ^cRemember poverty in the time of abundance, and the necessities of poverty in the day of riches.

26 From the morning until the evening the time shall be changed, and all these are swift in the eyes of God.

27 A wise man will fear in every thing, and in the days of sins will beware of sloth.

28 Every man of understanding knoweth wisdom, and will give praise to him that findeth her.

29 They that were of good understanding in words, have also done wisely themselves: and have understood truth and justice, and have poured forth proverbs and judgments.

30 ^dGo not after thy lusts, but turn away from thy own will.

31 If thou give to thy soul her desires, she will make thee a joy to thy enemies.

32 Take no pleasure in riotous assemblies, be they ever so small: for their concertation is continual.

33 Make not thyself poor, by borrowing to contribute to feasts when thou hast nothing in thy purse: for thou shalt be an enemy to thy own life.

CHAP. XIX.

Admonitions against sundry vices.

A WORKMAN that is a drunkard shall not be rich: and he that contemneth small things, shall fall by little and little.

2 ^eWine and women make wise men fall off, and shall rebuke the prudent:

3 And he that joineth himself to harlots, will be wicked. Rottenness and worms shall inherit him, and he shall be lifted up for a greater example, and his soul shall be taken away out of the number.

4 ^fHe that is hasty to give credit, is light of heart, and shall be lessened: and he that sinneth against his own soul, shall be despised.

5 He that rejoiceth in iniquity, shall be censured, and he that hateth chastisement, shall have less life: and he that hateth babbling, extinguisheth evil.

6 He that sinneth against his own soul, shall repent: and he that is delighted with wickedness, shall be condemned.

7 Rehearse not again a wicked and harsh word, and thou shalt not fare the worse.

8 Tell not thy mind to friend or foe: and if there be a sin with thee, disclose it not.

9 For he will hearken to thee, and will watch thee, and as it were defending thy sin, he will hate thee, and so will he be with thee always.

10 Hast thou heard a word against thy neighbour? let it die within thee, trusting that it will not burst thee.

11 At the hearing of a word the fool is in travail, as a woman groaning in the bringing forth a child.

12 As an arrow that sticketh in a man's thigh: so is a word in the heart of a fool.

13 ^gReprove a friend, lest he may not have understood, and say: I did it not: or if he did it, that he may do it no more.

14 Reprove thy neighbour, for it may be he hath not said it: and if he hath said it, that he may not say it again.

15 Admonish thy friend: for there is often a fault committed.

16 And believe not every word. There is one, that slippeth with the tongue, but not from his heart.

17 ^hFor who is there that hath not offended with his tongue? Admonish thy neighbour before thou threaten him.

18 And give place to the fear of the Most High: for the fear of God is all wisdom, and therein is to fear God, and the disposition of the law is in all wisdom.

19 But the learning of wickedness is not wisdom, and the device of sinners is not prudence.

20 There is a subtle wickedness, and the same is detestable: and there is a man that is foolish, wanting in wisdom.

21 Better is a man that hath less wisdom, and wanteth understanding, with the fear of God, than he that abound-

VER. 8. Not. Only to God and his minister. Friends do not require to be informed of such things. Gr. "disclose not the conduct of others."—Be. Gr. "be not." Do not boast of sins which thou hast not committed, (C.) as S. Aug. did before his conversion. H.—But the Vulg. seems preferable. C.

VER. 9. Hate thee. Whether thou hast spoken of thy own or of others' faults, he will distrust thee.

VER. 10. Burst thee. Like poison, or as new wine (C.) does a leathern bottle. H.—This expression well implies the eagerness which some manifest to divulge a secret injurious to their neighbour. C.

eth in understanding, and transgresseth the law of the Most High.

22 There is an exquisite subtilty, and the same is unjust.

23 And there is one that uttereth an exact word, telling the truth. There is one that humbleth himself wickedly, and his interior is full of deceit.

24 And there is one that submitteth himself exceedingly with a great lowliness: and there is one that casteth down his countenance, and maketh as if he did not see that which is unknown:

25 And if he be hindered from sinning for want of power, if he shall find opportunity to do evil, he will do it.

26 A man is known by his look, and a wise man, when thou meetest him, is known by his countenance.

27 The attire of the body, and the laughter of the teeth, and the gait of the man, show what he is.

28 There is a lying rebuke in the anger of an injurious man: and there is a judgment that is not allowed to be good: and there is one that holdeth his peace, he is wise.

CHAP. XX.

Rules with regard to correction, discretion, and avoiding lies.

HOW much better is it to reprove, than to be angry, and not to hinder him that confesseth in prayer!

2 *The lust of an eunuch shall deflower a young maiden:

3 So is he that by violence executeth unjust judgment.

4 How good is it, when thou art reprov'd, to show repentance! for so thou shalt escape wilful sin.

5 There is one that holdeth his peace, that is found wise: and there is another that is hateful, that is bold in speech.

6 There is one that holdeth his peace, because he knoweth not what to say: and there is another that holdeth his peace, knowing the proper time.

7 A wise man will hold his peace till he see opportunity: but a babbler, and a fool, will regard no time.

8 He that useth many words shall hurt his own soul: and he that taketh authority to himself unjustly, shall be hated.

9 There is success in evil things to a man without discipline, and there is a finding that turneth to loss.

10 There is a gift that is not profitable: and there is a gift, the recompence of which is double.

VER. 2. Maiden. Or "woman," (H.) who has been intrusted to his care. M.—Such people are not free from concupiscence, which must be restrained by the virtue of chastity. S. Aug. c. Jul. vi. 14.

VER. 9. Loss. The prosperity of the wicked must not be envied. Psal. xxviii. 1, 8. C.

VER. 12. Sevenfold. As the merchandise was good for nothing which the miser had obtained for a little money, thinking to save thereby.

VER. 13. Graces. Or favours bestowed with ill-nature.

11 There is an abasement because of glory: and there is one that shall lift up his head from a low estate.

12 There is that buyeth much for a small price, and restoreth the same sevenfold.

13 A man wise in words shall make himself beloved: but the graces of fools shall be poured out.

14 The gift of the fool shall do thee no good: for his eyes are sevenfold.

15 He will give a few things, and upbraid much: and the opening of his mouth is the kindling of a fire.

16 To-day a man lendeth, and to-morrow he asketh it again: such a man as this is hateful.

17 A fool shall have no friend, and there shall be no thanks for his good deeds.

18 For they that eat his bread are of a false tongue. How often, and how many will laugh him to scorn?

19 For he doth not distribute with right understanding that which was to be had: in like manner also that which was not to be had.

20 The slipping of a false tongue is as one that falleth on the pavement: so the fall of the wicked shall come speedily.

21 A man without grace is as a vain fable, it shall be continually in the mouth of the unwise.

22 A parable coming out of a fool's mouth shall be rejected: for he doth not speak it in due season.

23 There is that is hindered from sinning through want, and in his rest he shall be pricked.

24 There is that will destroy his own soul through shamefacedness, and by occasion of an unwise person he will destroy it: and by respect of person he will destroy himself.

25 There is that for bashfulness promiseth to his friend, and maketh him his enemy for nothing.

26 A lie is a foul blot in a man, and yet it will be continually in the mouth of men without discipline.

27 A thief is better than a man that is always lying: but both of them shall inherit destruction.

28 The manners of lying men are without honour: and their confusion is with them without ceasing.

29 A wise man shall advance himself with his words, and a prudent man shall please the great ones.

30 He that tilleth his land shall make a high heap of corn: and he that worketh justice shall be exalted: and he that pleaseth great men shall escape iniquity.

make them dumb in the mouth, so that they cannot correct.

32 ^aWisdom that is hid, and treasure that is not seen: what profit is there in them both?

33 Better is he that hideth his folly, than the man that hideth his wisdom.

CHAP. XXI.

Cautions against sin in general, and some sins in particular.

MY son, hast thou sinned? do so no more: but for thy former sins also pray that they may be forgiven thee.

2 Flee from sins as from the face of a serpent: for if thou comest near them, they will take hold of thee.

3 The teeth thereof are the teeth of a lion, killing the souls of men.

4 All iniquity is like a two-edged sword, there is no remedy for the wound thereof.

5 Injuries and wrongs will waste riches: and the house that is very rich shall be brought to nothing by pride: so the substance of the proud shall be rooted out.

6 The prayer out of the mouth of the poor shall reach the ears of God, and judgment shall come for him speedily.

7 He that hateth to be reprov'd walketh in the trace of a sinner: and he that feareth God will turn to his own heart.

8 He that is mighty by a bold tongue is known afar off, but a wise man knoweth to slip by him.

9 He that buildeth his house at other men's charges, is as he that gathereth himself stones to build in the winter.

10 ^bThe congregation of sinners is like tow heaped together, and the end of them is a flame of fire.

11 The way of sinners is made plain with stones, and in their end is hell, and darkness, and pains.

12 He that keepeth justice shall get the understanding thereof.

13 The perfection of the fear of God is wisdom and understanding.

14 He that is not wise in good, will not be taught.

15 But there is a wisdom that aboundeth in evil: and there is no understanding where there is bitterness.

16 The knowledge of a wise man shall abound like a flood, and his counsel continueth like a fountain of life.

17 The heart of a fool is like a broken vessel, and no wisdom at all shall it hold.

VER. 31. Make. Gr. "like a bit in the mouth, remove corrections." Exod. xxiii. 8. C.

VER. 32. Both. He who, through a false humility, refuses to take charge of others, resembles a man who locks up his corn in time of scarcity. S. Greg. Part. iiii. 26; Matt. xxv. 25. C.—Wisdom must be shown for the benefit of others. W.

VER. 33. Folly. He may still appear to have some sense, and injures none. C. CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Thee. The just may offend: but the wicked relapse continually.

VER. 2. Hold. Gr. "bite," (C.) in the same sense. M.—Serpents sting in secret: so all sins inveigle the soul. W.

VER. 3. Lion. Yet only those are hurt who consent to sin. The devil may go round about, (1 Pct. v. 8,) and tempt (C.); he cannot bite, except a man wilfully expose himself, and come near. Ver. 2.

VER. 4. Remedy. In man. H.—Only the sovereign Physician can cure it. C.

VER. 5. Riches. As they make enemies arise. Gr. subjoins, "so the house of the proud shall be made desolate." H.

VER. 7. Sinner. He rejects all medicines. How shall he be cured? C.—They who fear God will examine their actions when they are warned. W.

VER. 8. By him. And to avoid his reproaches. Gr. "knoweth when he is injured." H.—He is more reserved, and escapes the dangers of talkativeness.

18 A man of sense will praise every wise word he shall hear, and will apply it to himself: the luxurious man hath heard it, and it shall displease him, and he will cast it behind his back.

19 The talking of a fool is like a burden in the way: but in the lips of the wise grace shall be found.

20 The mouth of the prudent is sought after in the church, and they will think upon his words in their hearts.

21 As a house that is destroyed, so is wisdom to a fool: and the knowledge of the unwise is as words without sense.

22 Doctrine to a fool is as fetters on the feet, and like manacles on the right hand.

23 A fool lifteth up his voice in laughter: but a wise man will scarce laugh low to himself.

24 Learning to the prudent is as an ornament of gold, and like a bracelet upon his right arm.

25 The foot of a fool is soon in his neighbour's house but a man of experience will be abashed at the person of the mighty.

26 A fool will peep through the window into the house: but he that is well taught, will stand without.

27 It is the folly of a man to hearken at the door: and a wise man will be grieved with the disgrace.

28 The lips of the unwise will be telling foolish things: but the words of the wise shall be weighed in a balance.

29 The heart of fools is in their mouth: and the mouth of wise men is in their heart.

30 While the ungodly curseth the devil, he curseth his own soul.

31 The tale-bearer shall defile his own soul, and shall be hated by all: and he that shall abide with him shall be hateful: the silent and wise man shall be honoured.

6 A tale out of time is like music in mourning: but the stripes and instruction of wisdom are never out of time.

7 He that teacheth a fool, is like one that gluethe a potsherd together.

8 He that telleth a word to him that heareth not, is like one that waketh a man out of a deep sleep.

9 He speaketh with one that is asleep, who uttereth wisdom to a fool: and in the end of the discourse he saith: Who is this?

10 *Weep for the dead, for his light hath failed: and weep for the fool, for his understanding faileth.

11 Weep but a little for the dead, for he is at rest.

12 For the wicked life of a wicked fool is worse than death.

13 *The mourning for the dead is seven days: but for a fool and an ungodly man all the days of their life.

14 Talk not much with a fool, and go not with him that hath no sense.

15 Keep thyself from him, that thou mayest not have trouble, and thou shalt not be defiled with his sin.

16 Turn away from him, and thou shalt find rest, and shalt not be wearied out with his folly.

22 So also a fearful heart in the imagination of a fool shall not resist against the violence of fear.

23 As a fearful heart in the thought of a fool at all times will not fear, so neither shall he that continueth always in the commandments of God.

24 He that pricketh the eye, bringeth out tears: and that pricketh the heart, bringeth forth resentment.

27 If thou hast opened a sad mouth, fear not, for there may be a reconciliation: except upbraiding, and reproach, and pride, and disclosing of secrets, or a treacherous wound: for in all these cases a friend will flee away.

28 Keep fidelity with a friend in his poverty, that in his prosperity also thou mayest rejoice.

29 In the time of his trouble continue faithful to him, that thou mayest also be heir with him in his inheritance.

30 As the vapour of a chimney, and the smoke of the fire goeth up before the fire: so also injurious words, and reproaches, and threats, before blood.

31 I will not be ashamed to salute a friend, neither will I hide myself from his face: and if any evil happen to me by him, I will bear it.

32 But every one that shall hear it, will beware of him.

33 *Who will set a guard before my mouth, and a sure seal upon my lips, that I fall not by them, and that my tongue destroy me not?

CHAP. XXIII.

A prayer for grace to flee sin: cautions against profane swearing and other vices.

O LORD Father, and Sovereign Ruler of my life, leave me not to their counsel: nor suffer me to fall by them.

2 Who will set scourges over my thoughts, and the discipline of wisdom over my heart, that they spare me not in their ignorances, and that their sins may not appear:

3 Lest my ignorances increase, and my offences be multiplied, and my sins abound, and I fall before my adversaries, and my enemies rejoice over me?

4 O Lord Father, and God of my life, leave me not to their devices.

5 Give me not haughtiness of my eyes, and turn away from me all coveting.

6 Take from me the greediness of the belly, and let not the lusts of the flesh take hold of me, and give me not over to a shameless and foolish mind.

7 Hear, O ye children, the discipline of the mouth: and he that will keep it, shall not perish by his lips, nor be brought to fall into most wicked works.

8 A sinner is caught in his own vanity, and the proud and the evil speakers shall fall thereby.

9 *Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearing: for in it there are many falls.

VER. 2. Ignorances, &c. That is, that the scourges and discipline of wisdom may restrain the ignorances, that is, the slips and offences which are usually committed by the tongue and the lips. Ch.—The tongue is a restless evil. James iii. 8.

VER. 3. Over me. The noblest motives are not always proposed first.

VER. 5. Eyes. God never makes such presents, but he permits us to fall in punishment of former transgressions. C.—Coveting. Gr. "from thy servant's all-giant-like affection. Vain hopes and desires remove from me; and thou shalt possess him who wishes to serve thee without ceasing." Grabe. H.

mouth, and meddle not with the names of saints, for thou shalt not escape free from them.

11 For as a slave daily put to the question, is never without a blue mark: so every one that sweareth, and nameth, shall not be wholly pure from sin.

12 A man that sweareth much, shall be filled with iniquity, and a scourge shall not depart from his house.

13 And if he make it void, his sin shall be upon him: and if he dissemble it, he offendeth double:

14 And if he swear in vain, he shall not be justified: for his house shall be filled with his punishment.

15 There is also another speech opposite to death, let it not be found in the inheritance of Jacob.

16 For from the merciful all these things shall be taken away, and they shall not wallow in sins.

17 Let not thy mouth be accustomed to indiscreet speech: for therein is the word of sin.

18 Remember thy father and thy mother, for thou sittest in the midst of great men:

19 Lest God forget thee in their sight, and thou, by thy daily custom, be infatuated and suffer reproach: and wish that thou hadst not been born, and curse the day of thy nativity.

20 "The man that is accustomed to opprobrious words, will never be corrected all the days of his life.

21 Two sorts of men multiply sins, and the third bringeth wrath and destruction.

22 A hot soul is a burning fire, it will never be quenched till it devours something.

23 And a man that is wicked in the mouth of his flesh, will not leave off till he hath kindled a fire.

24 To a man that is a fornicator, all bread is sweet; he will not be weary of sinning unto the end.

25 Every man that passeth beyond his own bed, despising his own soul, and saying: "Who seeth me?"

26 Darkness compasseth me about, and the walls cover me, and no man seeth me: whom do I fear? the Most High will not remember my sins.

27 And he understandeth not that his eye seeth all things, for such a man's fear driveth from him the fear of God, and the eyes of men fearing him:

28 And he knoweth not that the eyes of the Lord are far brighter than the sun, beholding round about all the ways of men, and the bottom of the deep, and looking into the hearts of men, into the most hidden parts.

VER. 14. In vain. Without a design to execute, (Grot.,) or through levity, or rather falsely. Exod. xxiii. 1; Deut. v. 11.

VER. 15. Opposite. Or equal. Gr. "clothed with death." He denotes blasphemy, (Lev. xxiv. 14,) or the invitation to idolatry, (Deut. xiii. 1,) or calumny. Ver. 17; Lev. xix. 12. C.—In oaths God is called to witness, as being unable to deceive.

VER. 17. Of sin. A Hebrew idiom, to imply something criminal. Those who have laid aside shame, are capable of any wickedness.

VER. 18. Men. Treat thy parents with no less regard, (C.) even though thou shouldst be exalted in dignity. Lyr.—Thus thou wilt be rewarded, (C.) or, if thou transgress, wilt be brought to judgment. Bossuet.—Gr. "thou shalt sit," &c. H.

VER. 21. Two. The first is a passionate man. (ver. 22,) the second a libertine, (ver. 23,) and the third an adulterer. Ver. 25. C.

29 For all things were known to the Lord God before they were created: so also, after they were perfected, he beholdeth all things.

30 This man shall be punished in the streets of the city, and he shall be chased as a colt: and where he suspected not, he shall be taken.

31 And he shall be in disgrace with all men, because he understood not the fear of the Lord.

32 "So also every woman that leaveth her husband, and bringeth in an heir by another:

33 For first she hath been unfaithful to the law of the Most High: and secondly, she hath offended against her husband: thirdly, she hath fornicated in adultery, and hath gotten her children of another man.

34 This woman shall be brought into the assembly, and inquisition shall be made of her children.

35 Her children shall not take root, and her branches shall bring forth no fruit.

36 She shall leave her memory to be cursed, and her infamy shall not be blotted out.

37 And they that remain shall know, that there is nothing better than the fear of God: and that there is nothing sweeter than to have regard to the commandments of the Lord.

38 It is great glory to follow the Lord: for length of days shall be received from him.

CHAP. XXIV.

Wisdom praiseth herself: her origin, her dwelling, her dignity, and her fruits.

WISDOM shall praise her own self, and shall be honoured in God, and shall glory in the midst of her people,

2 And shall open her mouth in the churches of the Most High, and shall glorify herself in the sight of his power,

3 And in the midst of her own people she shall be exalted, and shall be admired in the holy assembly,

4 And in the multitude of the elect she shall have praise, and among the blessed she shall be blessed, saying:

5 I came out of the mouth of the Most High, the first-born before all creatures:

6 I made that in the heavens there should rise light that never faileth, and as a cloud I covered all the earth:

7 I dwelt in the highest places, and my throne is in a pillar of a cloud.

VER. 27. And. Gr. "the eyes of men are his dread." H.—Such is the folly of the adulterer!

VER. 30. And he. Gr. "and where," &c. He shall be stoned. Lev. xx. 10. C.—Taken. Gr. subjoins (ver. 32) "so," &c. H.—If carnal adultery be thus punished, how much more will spiritual adultery, schism, and apostacy from the Catholic religion! W.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Wisdom. Gr. title, "the praise of wisdom." Here the Book of Ecclesiastes is imitated. H.—See also Prov. viii., and Wisd. vii. 24, and viii. 1.—Own self. Lit. "soul." She alone is capable of this office. C.—In God. Referring all the glory to him. M.—This sentence is not in Gr. H.

VER. 3. And. Gr. (5) "I came out of the mouth of the Highest, (6) and as," &c. H.—He alludes to the darkness which covered the earth. Gen. i. 2; Job xxxviii. 9. Many explain this of the uncreated Wisdom, born in the womb of the blessed Virgin; and the Church, in her office, applies it to her in a mystical sense. But it seems literally to refer to the wisdom and grace granted to the saints, which enlignens every man, and presides over the creation.

8 I alone have compassed the circuit of heaven, and have penetrated into the bottom of the deep, and have walked in the waves of the sea,

9 And have stood in all the earth: and in every people,

10 And in every nation I have had the chief rule:

11 And by my power I have trodden under my feet the hearts of all the high and low: and in all these I sought rest, and I shall abide in the inheritance of the Lord.

12 Then the Creator of all things commanded, and said to me: and he that made me, rested in my tabernacle,

13 And he said to me: Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thy inheritance in Israel, and take root in my elect.

14 From the beginning, and before the world, was I created, and unto the world to come I shall not cease to be, and in the holy dwelling-place I have ministered before him.

15 And so was I established in Sion, and in the holy city likewise I rested, and my power was in Jerusalem.

16 And I took root in an honourable people, and in the portion of my God his inheritance, and my abode is in the full assembly of saints.

17 I was exalted like a cedar in Libanus, and as a cypress-tree on Mount Sion.

18 I was exalted like a palm-tree in Cades, and as a rose-plant in Jericho:

19 As a fair olive-tree in the plains, and as a plane-tree by the water in the streets, was I exalted.

20 I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon, and aromatical balm: I yielded a sweet odour like the best myrrh:

21 And I perfumed my dwelling as storax, and galbanum, and onyx, and aloes, and as the frankincense not cut, and my odour is as the purest balm.

22 I have stretched out my branches as the turpentine-tree, and my branches are of honour and grace.

23 As the vine I have brought forth a pleasant odour: and my flowers are the fruit of honour and riches.

24 I am the mother of fair love, and of fear, and of knowledge, and of holy hope.

25 In me is all grace of the way, and of the truth; in me is all hope of life and of virtue.

33 Moses commanded a law in the precepts of justices, and an inheritance to the house of Jacob, and the promises to Israel.

34 He appointed to David, his servant, to raise up of him a most mighty king, and sitting on the throne of glory for ever.

35 Who filleth up wisdom as the Phison, and as the Tigris in the days of the new fruits.

36 Who maketh understanding to abound as the Euphrates, who multiplieth it as Jordan in the time of harvest.

37 Who sendeth knowledge as the light, and riseth up as Gehon in the time of the vintage.

38 Who first hath perfect knowledge of her, and a weaker shall not search her out.

39 For her thoughts are more vast than the sea, and her counsels more deep than the great ocean.

40 I wisdom have poured out rivers.

41 I like a brook out of a river of a mighty water, I like a channel of a river, and like an aqueduct came out of paradise.

42 I said: I will water my garden of plants, and I will water abundantly the fruits of my meadow.

43 And behold my brook became a great river, and my river became near to a sea:

44 For I make doctrine to shine forth to all as the morning light, and I will declare it afar off.

45 I will penetrate to all the lower parts of the earth, and will behold all that sleep, and will enlighten all that hope in the Lord.

• Gen. ii. 11.—d Jos. iii. 15.

VER. 30. Sin. Or lose their labour. They shall be directed in the paths of life. C.

VER. 31. They. Gr. "all these things are the book of the covenant of the most high God, the law which Moses gave unto us, an inheritance to the synagogues of Jacob."—Everlasting. Provided his life correspond with his doctrine. No occupation can be more glorious. C.—"Let thy Scriptures be my chaste delights: let me not be deceived in them, nor deceive others by them." S. Aug. Conf. xi. 2. C. Dan. xii. M.

VER. 32. Truth. They are equally certain, and no more is required. C.—He that loves has fulfilled the law. H.

VER. 34. King. Viz. Christ, who by his gospel, like an overflowing river, hath enriched the earth with heavenly wisdom. Ch.—Ever. The Lord (H.) is a king, (carriers,) who, &c. Ver. 35. H.—Solomon's wisdom is also praised. C.

VER. 35. Phison. Or Phase of Colchis, which rises in Armenia, like the Tigris and Euphrates, all which overflow their banks at the beginning of summer, on account of the snow melting.

VER. 36. Harvest. The snow of Libanus makes the Jordan swell at Pentecost. Jos. iii. 15.

VER. 37. Light. Giving to all the light of reason, and to Israel the law. Psal. cxlvii. 20.

VER. 40. Rivers of saving waters, on all, but particularly (H.) on Judea. Ver. 42. Gr. "and like a ditch (dioryx. C.) from a river, and as an aqueduct, I came into paradise," (H.) like the four rivers aforesaid. Gen. ii.

VER. 44. Off. He alludes to the conversion of the Gentiles.

VER. 45. I will. Many Fathers explain this of Christ's descent into hell. Bru

46 I will yet pour out doctrine as prophecy, and will leave it to them that seek wisdom, and will not cease to instruct their offspring even to the holy age.

47 "See ye that I have not laboured for myself only, but for all that seek out the truth.

CHAP. XXV.

Documents of wisdom on several subjects.

WITH three things my spirit is pleased, which are approved before God and men:

2 The concord of brethren, and the love of neighbours, and man and wife that agree well together.

3 Three sorts my soul hateth, and I am greatly grieved at their life:

4 A poor man that is proud: a rich man that is a liar: an old man that is a fool, and doting.

5 The things that thou hast not gathered in thy youth, how shalt thou find them in thy old age?

6 O how comely is judgment for a grey head, and for ancients to know counsel!

7 O how comely is wisdom for the aged, and understanding and counsel to men of honour!

8 Much experience is the crown of old men, and the fear of God is their glory.

9 Nine things that are not to be imagined by the heart have I magnified, and the tenth I will utter to men with my tongue.

10 A man that hath joy of his children: and he that liveth and seeth the fall of his enemies.

11 "Blessed is he that dwelleth with a wise woman, and that hath not slipped with his tongue, and that hath not served such as are unworthy of him.

12 Blessed is he that findeth a true friend: and that declareth justice to an ear that heareth.

13 How great is he that findeth wisdom and knowledge! but there is none above him that feareth the Lord.

14 The fear of God hath set itself above all things:

15 Blessed is the man, to whom it is given to have the fear of God: he that holdeth it, to whom shall he be likened?

16 The fear of God is the beginning of his love: and the beginning of faith is to be fast joined unto it.

17 The sadness of the heart is every plague: and the wickedness of a woman is all evil.

18 And a man will choose any plague, but the plague of the heart:

^a Infra, xxxiii. 18.—^b Infra, xxvi. 1.—^c Supra, xiv. 1, and xix. 16; James iii. 2.

as it occurs not in the Gr. it may be considered as the tradition of the first Christians, who gave this version, (C.) or they found it in their copies. H.

VER. 46. Prophecy. Of no less authority. The prophets had ceased for some time before Christ. C.—Thea. Gr. "to ages of ages. See," &c. H.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Pleased. Wisdom still speaks. Solomon often makes similar divisions, to make the deeper impression. Prov. xxx. 15, 24.

VER. 9. Things. Gr. "nine suppositions I have blessed in my heart," (H.) or thought that they may confer felicity. But the tenth will certainly do it. Chap. xiv.

VER. 10. Enemies. Not out of revenge, but for the glory of God. See Matt. v. 43.

VER. 12. A true. Gr. "prudence." C.

VER. 14. Things. Gr. adds, "for light (15) he that," &c. H.

VER. 16. It. This is not in the edit. of Rome, or of Aldus: but it is in the rest. Fear commonly begins the work of salvation, and love perfects it. 1 Tim. i. 5. C.—All happiness in this life is grounded on the fear of God. W.

VER. 18. Choose. Lit. "see." H.—Some supply "send any plague," &c.

VER. 21. Enemies. Which they wish, or may behold. Chap. xviii. 31. C.

VER. 22. Head. Or poison, as the Heb. rass signifies both. Rondet.

19 And any wickedness, but the wickedness of a woman:

20 And any affliction, but the affliction from them that hate him:

21 And any revenge, but the revenge of enemies.

22 There is no head worse than the head of a serpent:

23 And there is no anger above the anger of a woman. "It will be more agreeable to abide with a lion and a dragon, than to dwell with a wicked woman.

24 The wickedness of a woman changeth her face: and she darkeneth her countenance as a bear: and showeth it like a sackcloth. In the midst of her neighbours, 25 Her husband groaned, and hearing, he sighed a little.

26 All malice is short to the malice of a woman: let the lot of sinners fall upon her.

27 As the climbing of a sandy way is to the feet of the aged, so is a wife full of tongue to a quiet man.

28 Look not upon a woman's beauty, and desire not a woman for beauty.

29 "A woman's anger, and impudence, and confusion is great.

30 A woman, if she have superiority, is contrary to her husband.

31 A wicked woman abateth the courage, and maketh a heavy countenance and a wounded heart.

32 Feeble hands, and disjointed knees, a woman that doth not make her husband happy.

33 "From the woman came the beginning of sin, and by her we all die.

34 Give no issue to thy water, nor not a little: nor to a wicked woman liberty to gad abroad.

35 If she walk not at thy hand, she will confound thee in the sight of thy enemies.

36 Cut her off from thy flesh, lest she always abuse thee.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of good and bad women.

HAPPY is the husband of a good wife: for the number of his years is double.

2 A virtuous woman rejoiceth her husband, and shall fulfil the years of his life in peace.

3 A good wife is a good portion: she shall be given in the portion of them that fear God, to a man for his good deeds:

4 Rich or poor, if his heart is good, his countenance shall be cheerful at all times.

^d Prov. xxi. 19.—^e Infra, xlii. 6.—^f Gen. iii. 6.

VER. 23. Woman. Gr. "enemy." C.—Revenge is the passion of little souls, and of women. Juv. xiii.

VER. 24. Sackcloth. And is black when passion bursts forth, though women too frequently conceal their anger, to take deeper vengeance.

VER. 25. Groaned. Gr. "shall fall."—Little. Gr. "bitterly." He cannot avoid hearing of his wife's misconduct. H.—She will raise him enemies on all sides.

VER. 26. Her. I could wish no greater evil to the worst of enemies. Eccles. vii. 27.

VER. 28. Beauty. Other qualifications of more importance must be regarded. H.—He should choose one who may be a companion and assistant in domestic concerns. Grot.

VER. 30. A. Gr. "If she bring a fortune to her husband," (H.) she will continually upbraid him with it, and cover him with confusion. Ver. 29. C.—Laziness in spiritual things is so unreasonable, that few heretics will endure it. W.

VER. 33. Die. Eve tempted her husband, and thus we are all involved in sin. 1 Tim. ii. 14.

VER. 35. She will. Gr. "cut her off from thy flesh." Grabe and Comp. add, (H.) "give a bill of divorce, or her dowry, and send her away." C.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 5. Fourth. A jealous wife. Ver. 8.

5 Of three things my heart hath been afraid, and at the fourth my face hath trembled :

6 The accusation of a city, and the gathering together of the people :

7 And a false calumny, all are more grievous than death.

8 A ealous woman is the grief and mourning of the heart.

9 With a jealous woman is a scourge of the tongue which communicateth with all.

10 As a yoke of oxen that is moved to and fro, so also is a wicked woman : he that hath hold of her, is as he that taketh hold of a scorpion.

11 A drunken woman is a great wrath : and her reproach and shame shall not be hid.

12 The fornication of a woman shall be known by the haughtiness of her eyes, and by her eye-lids.

13 *On a daughter that turneth not away herself, set a strict watch : lest finding an opportunity she abuse herself.

14 Take heed of the impudence of her eyes, and wonder not if she slight thee.

15 She will open her mouth as a thirsty traveller to the fountain, and will drink of every water near her, and will sit down by every hedge, and open her quiver against every arrow, until she fail.

16 The grace of a diligent woman shall delight her husband, and shall fat his bones.

17 Her discipline is the gift of God.

18 Such is a wise and silent woman, and there is nothing so much worth as a well instructed soul.

19 A holy and shamefaced woman is grace upon grace.

20 And no price is worthy of a continent soul.

21 As the sun, when it riseth to the world in the high places of God, so is the beauty of a good wife for the ornament of her house.

22 As the lamp shining upon the holy candlestick, so is the beauty of the face in a ripe age.

23 As golden pillars upon bases of silver, so are the firm feet upon the soles of a steady woman.

24 As everlasting foundation upon a solid rock, so the commandments of God in the heart of a holy woman.

25 At two things my heart is grieved, and the third bringeth anger upon me :

* Infra, xlii. 11.

VER. 6. City. When all are charged with a crime, or when all rise up against a man. C.

VER. 8. Woman. Gr. adds, "against another woman."

VER. 9. With. Gr. "and the scourge of the tongue, which," &c. H.—Backbiting occasions the four evils aforesaid. Grot.

VER. 10. Woman. When oxen move the yoke moves also. Thus heresy will suffer none to rest. W.

VER. 11. Hid. She will be given to debauchery. S. Chrys. C.

VER. 13. Herself. From gazing at men. C.

VER. 15. Hedge. Or "stake," palum, (H.) on which tents were fixed. Gen. xxxviii. 14. C.—Fail. Incontinence will at last ruin her health. H.

VER. 16. Bones. The Catholic faith is the ground of all virtues. W.

VER. 18. Worth. Lit. "exchange." Gr. (H.) such a wife is above all price. M.

VER. 20. Continent. Adhering to virtue. C.

VER. 22. Holy. Made of gold, and placed in the sanctuary. M.

VER. 23. Soles. Gr. "heels." Comp. "solid pavement."

VER. 27. To sin. He is less excusable, as he knows what he abandons. Jer. ii. 12. C.

VER. 28. Two. Gr. "scarcely is a merchant exempted from negligence, and no seller of wine and eatables, (Grot.) or retailer, (Voss. καπηλος;) shall not be justified from sin." H.—Negligence. That is, from the neglect of the service of 26 A man of war fainting through poverty : and a man of sense despised :

27 And he that passeth over from justice to sin, God hath prepared such an one for the sword.

28 Two sorts of callings have appeared to me hard and dangerous : a merchant is hardly free from negligence : and a huckster shall not be justified from the sins of the lips.

CHAP. XXVII.

Dangers of sin from several heads : the fear of God is the best preservative. He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it.

THROUGH poverty many have sinned : and he that seeketh to be enriched, turneth away his eye.

2 As a stake sticketh fast in the midst of the joining of stones, so also in the midst of selling and buying, sin shall stick fast.

3 Sin shall be destroyed with the sinner.

4 Unless thou hold thyself diligently in the fear of the Lord, thy house shall quickly be overthrown.

5 As when one sifteth with a sieve, the dust will remain : so will the perplexity of a man in his thoughts.

6 The furnace trieth the potter's vessels, and the trial of affliction just men.

7 As the dressing of a tree showeth the fruit thereof, so a word out of the thought of the heart of man.

8 Praise not a man before he speaketh, for this is the trial of men.

9 If thou followest justice, thou shalt obtain her : and shalt put her on as a long robe of honour, and thou shalt dwell with her : and she shall protect thee for ever, and in the day of acknowledgment thou shalt find a strong foundation.

10 Birds resort unto their like : so truth will return to them that practise her.

11 The lion always lieth in wait for prey : so do sins for them that work iniquities.

12 A holy man continueth in wisdom as the sun : but a fool is changed as the moon.

13 In the midst of the unwise keep in the word till its time : but be continually among men that think.

14 The discourse of sinners is hateful, and their laughter is at the pleasure of sin.

15 The speech that sweareth much shall make the hair of the head stand upright : and its irreverence shall make one stop his ears.

God : because the eager pursuit of the mammon of this world is apt to make men of that calling forget the great duties of loving God above all things, and their neighbours as themselves.—A huckster. Or a retailer of wine. Men of that profession are both greatly exposed to danger of sin themselves, and are too often accessory to the sins of others. Ch.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Poverty. Gr. "the indifferent thing," as the Stoics represented money. Chap. vii. 20.—Sinned. Hence proceeds the danger to which little merchants are exposed.

VER. 4. Fear. By this the soul is preserved in a good state. W.

VER. 5. Thoughts. The more he thinks on some things, the more is he perplexed. C.

VER. 6. Affliction. Gr. "thought," (H.) or speech. C.

VER. 7. As. Gr. "the fruit shows the dressing," &c.

VER. 9. Honour. The desire of justice is the sure method to obtain it. The rest is not in Gr. H.

VER. 11. Iniquities. They fall deeper, or sin entails punishment. C.

VER. 12. A. Gr. "the speech of the wise man is wisdom throughout : but," &c. H.—The fool always mixes something improper with what good he speaks.—Sun. The wise man preserves his virtue, whether it appear or not. W.

VER. 13. Keep. Gr. "wait an opportunity." H.—Go but seldom. Their discourse tends to promote iniquity, (ver. 14.) and blasphemous oaths, (ver. 15.) and bloodshed, ver. 16. C.

16 In the quarrels of the proud is the shedding of blood: and their cursing is a grievous hearing.

17 He that discloseth the secret of a friend, loseth his credit, and shall never find a friend to his mind.

18 Love thy neighbour, and be joined to him with fidelity.

19 But if thou discover his secrets, follow no more after him.

20 For as a man that destroyeth his friend, so also is he that destroyeth the friendship of his neighbour.

21 And as one that letteth a bird go out of his hand, so hast thou let thy neighbour go, and thou shalt not get him again.

22 Follow after him no more, for he is gone afar off, he is fled, as a roe escaped out of the snare: because his soul is wounded:

23 Thou canst no more bind him up. And of a curse there is reconciliation:

24 But to disclose the secrets of a friend leaveth no hope to an unhappy soul.

25 He that winketh with the eye, forgeth wicked things, and no man will cast him off:

26 In the sight of thy eyes he will sweeten his mouth, and will admire thy words: but at the last he will writhe his mouth, and on thy words he will lay a stumblingblock.

27 I have hated many things, but not like him, and the Lord will hate him.

28 If one cast a stone on high, it will fall upon his own head: and the deceitful stroke will wound the deceitful.

29 He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it: and he that setteth a stone for his neighbour, shall stumble upon it: and he that layeth a snare for another, shall perish in it.

30 A mischievous counsel shall be rolled back upon the author, and he shall not know from whence it cometh to him.

31 Mockery and reproach are of the proud, and vengeance as a lion shall lie in wait for him.

32 They shall perish in a snare that are delighted with the fall of the just: and sorrow shall consume them before they die.

33 Anger and fury are both of them abominable, and the sinful man shall be subject to them.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Lessons against revenge and quarrels. The evils of the tongue.

HE that seeketh to revenge himself, shall find vengeance from the Lord, and he will surely keep his sins in remembrance.

* Deut. xxxii. 35; Matt. vi. 14; Mark xi. 25; Rom. xii. 19.

VER. 15. Ears. The Jews did so, when they heard blasphemy. Acts vii. 56. M.

VER. 19. Him. He will never trust thee more. Ver. 22.

VER. 20. Friend. Sept. Rom. and Alex., "enemy." H.—This crime is like murder.

VER. 22. Because. Gr. "for one may bind up a wound, and an insult may be pardoned. But he who hath revealed secrets, hath lost all hope," (H.) or "confidence." Ver. 24; chap. xxii. 27.

VER. 25. Off. Some Gr. copies have, "he who knows him will depart from him."

VER. 28. Wound. Gr. "deal wounds. He," &c. H.—Traitors, in the dark, often wound their fellows, (C.) or themselves. M.

VER. 30. Him. God will punish, when the sinner has perhaps forgotten his offence. C.—Such are often chastised here, and always hereafter. W.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Sins. To seek revenge out of rancour, or contrary to justice, is a grievous sin. W.

2 Forgive thy neighbour if he hath hurt thee: and then shall thy sins be forgiven to thee when thou prayest.

3 Man to man reserveth anger, and doth he seek remedy of God?

4 He hath no mercy on a man like himself, and doth he entreat for his own sins?

5 He that is but flesh, nourisheth anger, and doth he ask forgiveness of God? who shall obtain pardon for his sins?

6 Remember thy last things, and let enmity cease:

7 For corruption and death hang over in his commandments.

8 Remember the fear of God, and be not angry with thy neighbour.

9 Remember the covenant of the Most High, and overlook the ignorance of thy neighbour.

10 Refrain from strife, and thou shalt diminish thy sins:

11 For a passionate man kindleth strife, and a sinful man will trouble his friends, and bring in debate in the midst of them that are at peace.

12 For as the wood of the forest is, so the fire burneth: and as man's strength is, so shall his anger be, and according to his riches he shall increase his anger.

13 A hasty contention kindleth a fire: and a hasty quarrel sheddeth blood: and a tongue that beareth witness bringeth death.

14 If thou blow the spark, it shall burn as a fire: and if thou spit upon it, it shall be quenched: both come out of the mouth.

15 The whisperer and the double-tongued is accursed: for he hath troubled many that were at peace.

16 The tongue of a third person hath disquieted many, and scattered them from nation to nation.

17 It hath destroyed the strong cities of the rich, and hath overthrown the houses of great men.

18 It hath cut in pieces the forces of people, and undone strong nations.

19 The tongue of a third person hath cast out valiant women, and deprived them of their labours.

20 He that hearkeneth to it, shall never have rest, neither shall he have a friend in whom he may repose.

21 The stroke of a whip maketh a blue mark: but the stroke of the tongue will break the bones.

22 Many have fallen by the edge of the sword, but not so many as have perished by their own tongue.

23 Blessed is he that is defended from a wicked tongue, that hath not passed into the wrath thereof, and

VER. 2. Forgive. This charity enforces, when the offender is penitent, if the remission of punishment be not contrary to justice and discipline. W.—Matt. vi. 12, and xviii. 32; Luke vi. 37.

VER. 5. And doth. Gr. "who will expiate his sins?" Is God bound to receive his victims or prayers while he entertains such dispositions? C.

VER. 7. In his commandments. Supply the sentence out of the Greek thus: Remember corruption and death, and abide in the commandments, (Ch.) which condemn revenge. Exod. xxiii. 4. C.—Comp. "and do not rage or menace thy neighbour with destruction and death; yea, stick to the commandments. Be mindful of the precepts, and be not angry with thy neighbour; and of the covenant," &c. Ver. 9. H.

VER. 9. Ignorance. He uses a softer term. In effect, most quarrels proceed from a misunderstanding. "Every sinner is ignorant."

VER. 16. Third. Who carries stories between friends, to set them at variance. C.

VER. 22. Their own. Gr. "the." Detraction separates many friends. C.

that hath not drawn the yoke thereof, and hath not been bound in its bands :

24 For its yoke is a yoke of iron : and its bands are bands of brass.

25 The death thereof is a most evil death : and hell is preferable to it.

26 Its continuance shall not be for a long time, but it shall possess the ways of the unjust : and the just shall not be burnt with its flame.

27 They that forsake God shall fall into it, and it shall burn in them, and shall not be quenched, and it shall be sent upon them as a lion, and as a leopard it shall tear them.

28 Hedge in thy ears with horns, hear not a wicked tongue, and make doors and bars to thy mouth.

29 Melt down thy gold and silver, and make a balance for thy words, and a just bridle for thy mouth :

30 And take heed lest thou slip with thy tongue, and fall in the sight of thy enemies who lie in wait for thee, and thy fall be incurable unto death.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of charity in lending money, and justice in repaying. Of alms, and of being surety.

HE that showeth mercy, lendeth to his neighbour : and he that is stronger in hand keepeth the commandments.

2 Lend to thy neighbour in the time of his need, and pay thou thy neighbour again in due time.

3 Keep thy word, and deal faithfully with him : and thou shalt always find that which is necessary for thee.

4 Many have looked upon a thing lent as a thing found, and have given trouble to them that helped them.

5 Till they receive, they kiss the hands of the lender, and in promise they humble their voice :

6 But when they should repay, they will ask time, and will return tedious and murmuring words, and will complain of the time :

7 And if he be able to pay, he will stand off, he will scarce pay one half, and will count it as if he had found it.

8 But if not, he will defraud him of his money, and he shall get him for an enemy without cause :

9 And he will pay him with reproaches and curses, and instead of honour and good turn : ill repay him injuries.

10 Many have refused to lend, not out of wickedness, but they were afraid to be defrauded without cause.

^a Tobias iv. 10 ; Supra, xvii. 18.

11 But yet towards the poor be thou more hearty, and delay not to show him mercy.

12 Help the poor because of the commandment : and send him not away empty-handed because of his poverty.

13 Lose thy money for thy brother and thy friend, and hide it not under a stone to be lost.

14 Place thy treasure in the commandments of the Most High, and it shall bring thee more profit than gold.

15 Shut up alms in the heart of the poor, and it shall obtain help for thee against all evil.

16 Better than the shield of the mighty, and better than the spear :

17 It shall fight for thee against thy enemy.

18 A good man is surety for his neighbour : and he that hath lost shame will leave him to himself.

19 Forget not the kindness of thy surety : for he hath given his life for thee.

20 The sinner and the unclean fleeth from his surety.

21 A sinner attributeth to himself the goods of his surety : and he that is of an unthankful mind will leave him that delivered him.

22 A man is surety for his neighbour : and when he hath lost all shame, he shall forsake him.

23 Evil suretyship hath undone many of good estate, and hath tossed them as a wave of the sea.

24 It hath made powerful men to go from place to place round about, and they have wandered in strange countries.

25 A sinner that transgresseth the commandment of the Lord shall fall into an evil suretyship : and he that undertaketh many things shall fall into judgment.

26 Recover thy neighbour according to thy power, and take heed to thyself that thou fall not.

27 The chief thing for man's life is water and bread, and clothing, and a house to cover shame.

28 Better is the poor man's fare under a roof of boards, than sumptuous cheer abroad in another man's house.

29 Be contented with little instead of much, and thou shalt not hear the reproach of going abroad.

30 It is a miserable life to go as a guest from house to house : for where a man is a stranger, he shall not deal confidently, nor open his mouth.

31 He shall entertain, and feed, and give drink to the unthankful, and moreover he shall hear bitter words.

^b Infra, xxxix. 31.

VER. 25. Hell. Or rather "the grave."

VER. 26. Its. Gr. "it shall not take hold of the pious, and they shall not," &c. H.—Their virtue shall quickly shine forth. C.

VER. 28. Hear. Gr. "lo, hedge in thy possessions with thorns : bind up thy silver and gold." H.—To pay attention to detraction is as bad as to utter it. W.

VER. 29. Just. Gr. "a door and bol," &c., as ver. 28. If people guard their property with so much care, why do they make light of words? H.

VER. 30. Tongue. Gr. "by them, lest thou fall before him who lays snares." Chap. xxix. H.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. Hand. That is, he that is hearty and bountiful in lending to his neighbour in his necessity. C. l'enus, in this book, means simply "lending." Rondet.—This is a work of mercy, and a sort of alms.—He who lends will receive usury from the Lord. Prov. xix. 17. Psal. xxxvi. 21.—In hand. Rich.

VER. 5. Hands. Like slaves. Macrob. .

VER. 7. Found it. Seeming to make thee partaker of his good fortune, (Jans.) or he will keep the other half as his own. Grot.

VER. 9. Injuries. Thus one loses both money and friends. Must we then never lend? If the person be poor, we must be ready to give. C.

VER. 11. And delay. Or lit "and for an alms, drag him not along." H.—

Let not the fraud of many deter thee from assisting the poor, for the sake of God and justice. C.

VER. 13. Friend. He is entitled to partake of all thy goods. If he be only thy fellow creature, assist him ; and God will reward thee. Matt. vi. 19.

VER. 15. Heart. Gr. "thy store-houses," the poor. C.—I never read that one who was liberal to the poor came to an evil death, as he has so many to intercede for him, whose prayers must be heard. S. Jer. ad Nepot.

VER. 19. Life. Or his subsistence, (chap. xix. 28,) though some answered for the person of another. 3 Kings xx. 39.

VER. 20. And. Gr. "will turn away the goods of his surety, (21) and the ungrateful in mind will abandon his redeemer." H.—Him. Gr. subjoins ver. 23. H.

VER. 23. Estate, (dirigentes,) whose affairs were prosperous. M.

VER. 26. Not. Prudence requires that we should not ruin ourselves to help others. W.

VER. 27. Shame. Clothing is like a portable house. Grot.—Man stands in need of little, and those who are content will not need to borrow. Ver. 29.

VER. 31. Shall. Or "has formerly entertained" those, who now reproach him, make him serve in the meanest offices, and at last cast him forth. It may 32 Go, stranger, and furnish the table, and give others to eat what thou hast in thy hand.

33 Give place to the honourable presence of my friends: for I want my house, my brother being to be lodged with me.

34 These things are grievous to a man of understanding: the upbraiding of house-room, and the reproaching of the lender.

CHAP. XXX.

Of correction of children. Health is better than wealth. Excessive grief is hurtful.

HE* that loveth his son, frequently chastiseth him, that he may rejoice in his latter end, and not grope after the doors of his neighbours.

2 He that instructeth his son, shall be praised in him, and shall glory in him in the midst of them of his household.

3^b He that teacheth his son, maketh his enemy jealous, and in the midst of his friends he shall glory in him.

4 His father is dead, and he is as if he were not dead: for he hath left one behind him that is like himself.

5 While he lived he saw and rejoiced in him: and when he died he was not sorrowful, neither was he confounded before his enemies,

6 For he left behind him a defender of his house against his enemies, and one that will requite kindness to his friends.

7 For the souls of his sons he shall bind up his wounds, and at every cry his bowels shall be troubled.

8 A horse not broken becometh stubborn, and a child left to himself will become headstrong.

9 Give thy son his way, and he shall make thee afraid: play with him, and he shall make thee sorrowful.

10 Laugh not with him, lest thou have sorrow, and at the last thy teeth be set on edge.

11 Give him not liberty in his youth, and wink not at his devices.

12^c Bow down his neck while he is young, and beat his sides while he is a child, lest he grow stubborn, and regard thee not, and so be a sorrow of heart to thee.

13 Instruct thy son, and labour about him, lest his lewd behaviour be an offence to thee.

14 Better is a poor man who is sound, and strong of constitution, than a rich man who is weak, and afflicted with evils.

15 Health of the soul in holiness of justice, is better than all gold and silver: and a sound body, than immense revenues.

16 There is no riches above the riches of the health of the body: and there is no pleasure above the joy of the heart.

17 Better is death than a bitter life: and everlasting rest, than continual sickness.

18 Good things that are hidden in a mouth that is shut, are as messes of meat set about a grave.

19^d What good shall an offering do to an idol? for it can neither eat, nor smell:

20 So is he that is persecuted by the Lord, bearing the reward of his iniquity:

21^e He seeth with his eyes, and groaneth, as an eunuch embracing a virgin, and sighing.

22^f Give not up thy soul to sadness, and afflict not thyself in thy own counsel.

23 The joyfulness of the heart, is the life of a man, and a never failing treasure of holiness: and the joy of a man is length of life.

24 Have pity on thy own soul, pleasing God, and contain thyself: gather up thy heart in his holiness: and drive away sadness far from thee.

25^g For sadness hath killed many, and there is no profit in it.

26 Envy and anger shorten a man's days, and pensiveness will bring old age before the time.

27 A cheerful and good heart is always feasting: for his banquets are prepared with diligence.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of the desire of riches, and of moderation in eating and drinking.

WATCHING for riches consumeth the flesh, and the thought thereof driveth away sleep.

2 The thinking beforehand turneth away the understanding, and a grievous sickness maketh the soul sober.

3 The rich man hath laboured in gathering riches together, and when he resteth he shall be filled with his goods.

4 The poor man hath laboured in his low way of life, and in the end he is still poor.

VER. 4. Poor. All have not equal success. Prov. x. 22; Psal. cxxvi. 1. Drus.

5 He that loveth gold, shall not be justified: and he that followeth after corruption, shall be filled with it.

6 Many have been brought to fall for gold, and the beauty thereof hath been their ruin.

7 Gold is a stumblingblock to them that sacrifice to it: woe to them that eagerly follow after it, and every fool shall perish by it.

8 Blessed is the rich man that is found without blemish: and that hath not gone after gold, nor put his trust in money nor in treasures.

9 Who is he, and we will praise him? for he hath done wonderful things in his life.

10 Who hath been tried thereby, and made perfect, he shall have glory everlasting. He that could have transgressed, and hath not transgressed: and could do evil things, and hath not done them:

11 Therefore are his goods established in the Lord, and all the church of the saints shall declare his alms.

12 Art thou set at a great table? be not the first to open thy mouth upon it.

13 Say not: There are many things which are upon it.

14 Remember that a wicked eye is evil.

15 What is created more wicked than an eye? therefore shall it weep over all the face when it shall see.

16 Stretch not out thy hand first, lest being disgraced with envy thou be put to confusion.

17 Be not hasty in a feast.

18 Judge of the disposition of thy neighbour by thyself.

19 Use as a frugal man the things that are set before thee: lest if thou eatest much, thou be hated.

20 Leave off first, for manners sake: and exceed not, lest thou offend.

out, and vomit: and it shall refresh thee, and thou shalt not bring sickness upon thy body.

26 Hear me, my son, and despise me not: and in the end thou shalt find my words.

27 In all thy works be quick, and no infirmity shall come to thee.

28 The lips of many shall bless him that is liberal of his bread, and the testimony of his truth is faithful.

29 Against him that is niggardly of his bread, the city will murmur, and the testimony of his niggardliness is true.

30 Challenge not them that love wine:^b for wine hath destroyed very many.

31 Fire trieth hard iron: so wine drunk to excess shall rebuke the hearts of the proud.

32 Wine taken with sobriety is equal life to men: if thou drink it moderately, thou shalt be sober.

33 What is his life, who is diminished with wine?

34 What taketh away life? death.

35 Wine was created from the beginning to make men joyful, and not to make them drunk.

36 Wine drunken with moderation is the joy of the soul, and the heart.

37 Sober drinking is health to soul and body.

38 Wine drunken with excess raiseth quarrels, and wrath, and many ruins.

39 Wine drunken with excess is bitterness of the soul.

40 The heat of drunkenness is the stumblingblock of the fool, lessening strength, and causing wounds.

41 Rebuke not thy neighbour in a banquet of wine: and despise him not in his mirth.

5 To speak the first word with careful knowledge, and hinder not music.

6 Where there is no hearing, pour not out words, and be not lifted up out of season with thy wisdom.

7 A concert of music in a banquet of wine is as a carbuncle set in gold.

8 As a signet of an emerald in a work of gold: so is the melody of music with pleasant and moderate wine.

9 Hear in silence, and for thy reverence good grace shall come to thee.

10 Young man, scarcely speak in thy own cause.

11 If thou be asked twice, let thy answer be short.

12 In many things be as if thou wert ignorant, and hear in silence, and withal seeking.

13 In the company of great men take not upon thee: and when the ancients are present, speak not much.

14 Before a storm goeth lightning: and before shamefacedness goeth favour: and for thy reverence good grace shall come to thee.

15 And at the time of rising be not slack: but be first to run home to thy house, and there withdraw thyself, and there take thy pastime.

16 And do what thou hast a mind, but not in sins or proud speech.

17 And for all these things bless the Lord, that made thee, and that replenisheth thee with all his good things.

18 He that feareth the Lord, will receive his discipline: and they that will seek him early, shall find a blessing.

19 He that seeketh the law, shall be filled with it: and he that dealeth deceitfully, shall meet with a stumblingblock therein.

20 They that fear the Lord, shall find just judgment, and shall kindle justice as a light.

21 A sinful man will flee reproof, and will find an excuse according to his will.

22 A man of counsel will not neglect understanding, a strange and proud man will not dread fear:

23 Even after he hath done with fear without counsel, he shall be controlled by the things of his own seeking.

24 My son, do thou nothing without counsel, and thou shalt not repent when thou hast done.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The fear of God is the best security. Times and men are in the hands of God. Take care of thyself as long as thou livest, and look to thy servants.

NO evils shall happen to him that feareth the Lord, but in temptation God will keep him, and deliver him from evils.

2 A wise man hateth not the commandments and justices, and he shall not be dashed in pieces as a ship in a storm.

3 A man of understanding is faithful to the law of God, and the law is faithful to him.

4 He that clearth up a question, shall prepare what to say, and so having prayed he shall be heard, and shall keep discipline, and then he shall answer.

5 The heart of a fool is as a wheel of a cart: and his thoughts are like a rolling axletree.

6 A friend that is a mocker, is like a stallion horse: he neigheth under every one that sitteth upon him.

7 Why doth one day excel another, and one light another, and one year another year, when all come of the sun?

8 By the knowledge of the Lord they were distinguished, the sun being made, and keeping his commandment.

9 And he ordered the seasons, and holidays of them, and in them they celebrated festivals at an hour.

10 Some of them God made high and great days, and some of them he put in the number of ordinary days. And all men are from the ground, and out of the earth, from whence Adam was created.

11 With much knowledge the Lord hath divided them, and diversified their ways.

12 Some of them hath he blessed, and exalted: and some of them hath he sanctified, and set near himself: and some of them hath he cursed and brought low, and turned them from their station.

CHAP. XXXIV.

The vanity of dreams. The advantage of experience, and of the fear of God.

THE hopes of a man that is void of understanding are vain and deceitful : and dreams lift up fools.

2 The man that giveth heed to lying visions, is like to him that catcheth at a shadow, and followeth after the wind.

3 The vision of dreams is the resemblance of one thing to another : as when a man's likeness is before the face of a man.

4 What can be made clean by the unclean ? and what truth can come from that which is false ?

5 Deceitful divinations, and lying omens, and the dreams of evil-doers, are vanity.

6 And the heart fancieth as that of a woman in travail : except it be a vision sent forth from the Most High, set not thy heart upon them.

7 For dreams have deceived many, and they have failed that put their trust in them.

8 The word of the law shall be fulfilled without a lie, and wisdom shall be made plain in the mouth of the faithful.

9 What doth he know, that hath not been tried ? A man that hath much experience, shall think of many things : and he that hath learned many things, shall show forth understanding.

10 He that hath no experience, knoweth little : and he that hath been experienced in many things, multiplieth prudence.

11 He that hath not been tried, what manner of things doth he know ? he that hath been surprised, shall abound with subtlety.

12 I have seen many things by travelling, and many customs of things.

13 Sometimes I have been in danger of death for these things, and I have been delivered by the grace of God.

14 The spirit of those that fear God, is sought after, and by his regard shall be blessed.

15 For their hope is on him that saveth them, and the eyes of God are upon them that love him.

16 He that feareth the Lord shall tremble at nothing, and shall not be afraid : for he is his hope.

17 The soul of him that feareth the Lord is blessed.

18 To whom doth he look, and who is his strength.

19 *The eyes of the Lord are upon them that fear him.

25 The bread of the needy is the life of the poor: he that defraudeth them thereof, is a man of blood.

26 He that taketh away the bread gotten by sweat, is like him that killeth his neighbour.

27 He that sheddeth blood, and he that defraudeth the labourer of his hire, are brothers.

28 When one buildeth up, and another pulleth down: what profit have they but the labour?

29 When one prayeth, and another curseth: whose voice will God hear?

30 He that washeth himself after touching the dead, if he toucheth him again, what doth his washing avail?

31 "So a man that fasteth for his sins, and doth the same again, what doth his humbling himself profit him? who will hear his prayer?

CHAP. XXXV.

What sacrifices are pleasing to God.

HE that keepeth the law, multiplieth offerings.

2 "It is a wholesome sacrifice to take heed to the commandments, and to depart from all iniquity.

3 And to depart from injustice, is to offer a propitiatory sacrifice for injustices, and a begging of pardon for sins.

4 He shall return thanks, that offereth fine flour: and he that doth mercy, offereth sacrifice.

5 "To depart from iniquity, is that which pleaseth the Lord, and to depart from injustice, is an entreaty for sins.

6 "Thou shalt not appear empty in the sight of the Lord.

7 For all these things are to be done, because of the commandment of God.

8 The oblation of the just maketh the altar fat, and is an odour of sweetness in the sight of the Most High.

9 The sacrifice of the just is acceptable, and the Lord will not forget the memorial thereof.

10 Give glory to God with a good heart: and diminish not the first-fruits of thy hands.

11 "In every gift show a cheerful countenance, and sanctify thy tithes with joy.

12 Give to the Most High according to what he hath given to thee, and with a good eye do according to the ability of thy hands:

13 For the Lord maketh recompense, and will give thee seven times as much.

14 "Do not offer wicked gifts, for such he will not receive.

15 And look not upon an unjust sacrifice, for the Lord is judge, and there is not with him respect of person.

16 The Lord will not accept any person against a poor man, and he will hear the prayer of him that is wronged.

17 He will not despise the prayers of the fatherless: nor the widow, when she poureth out her complaint.

18 Do not the widow's tears run down the cheek, and her cry against him that causeth them to fall?

19 For from the cheek they go up even to heaven, and the Lord that heareth will not be delighted with them.

20 He that adoreth God with joy, shall be accepted, and his prayer shall approach even to the clouds.

21 The prayer of him that humbleth himself, shall pierce the clouds: and till it come nigh he will not be comforted: and he will not depart till the Most High behold.

22 And the Lord will not be slack, but will judge for the just, and will do judgment: and the Almighty will not have patience with them, that he may crush their back:

23 And he will repay vengeance to the Gentiles, till he have taken away the multitude of the proud, and broken the sceptres of the unjust,

24 Till he have rendered to men according to their deeds: and according to the works of Adam, and according to his presumption.

25 Till he have judged the cause of his people, and he shall delight the just with his mercy.

VER. 21. Mockeries. Some Gr. copies have, "gifts." Such unjust presents, or sacrifices, God will abhor. Isa. xli. 8; Deut. xxiv. 15. C.

VER. 22. Lord. Gr. (23) "most . . . wicked, nor," &c.

VER. 28. Labour. So, if your sacrifices be ill-gotten, they will not be received; and if you relapse, you will be as bad as ever. C.

VER. 30. Dead. Lit. "is baptized by or from the dead:" baptizatur a mortuo. H.—S. Cyprian thought this text was peremptory against the baptism of heretics, and the Donatists were of the same opinion. They seem not to have read, if he touch him again, which entirely alters the meaning. S. Aug. admonishes them of this; though he explains it of the pagan rather than of the Jewish purifications, to which it refers. Num. xix. 11. See S. Aug. c. Cres. i. 24, and ii. 25; c. Petil. i. 9. S. Cyp. Ep. ad Quint. C.

VER. 31. Prayer. A relapse makes the former repentance useless. Matt. xviii. 33. W.

CHAP. XXXV. VER. 1. Offerings. He cannot otherwise observe the law. H.

VER. 2. And to. Gr. (4) "He," &c. H.—The peace-offering and that for sin, as well as the oblation of fine flour and of praise, (which is the most perfect of all,) are noticed. C.—External sacrifices must not be neglected. W.

VER. 4. Sacrifice. Gr. adds, "of praise." H.—This was the true spirit of the law. C.

VER. 6. Lord. The poor, who present a virtuous heart, are more acceptable than the rich, who are buried in sin, though the latter may offer the most splendid sacrifices. H.

VER. 10. Heart. Lit. "mind." Gr. "eye," (H.) free from avarice. 2 Cor. ix. 7.

VER. 11. Sanctify: "set apart" for the use of the ministers, and of the temple. C.

VER. 14. Wicked; defective. Lev. xxii. 21; Mal. i. 7. Gr. "curtailed, or ill-acquired," (C.) or "do not bribe" God (δοροκορεν. Grot.); as the word is used 2 Mac. God will not regard our gifts, to let our offences escape punishment. Isa. xlii. 1. C.

VER. 21. He, or "it." C.—Prayer is personified, and presents itself before God.

VER. 22. Them, the Gentiles, &c., ver. 23. Gr. "will not delay to punish them, till he crush the loins of the unmerciful. And," &c. H.

VER. 24. Adam, who was not spared. C.—Gr. "of men and their desires." H.—Our version seems to be taken from the Heb. D.—Adam sometimes denotes any man. M

26 The mercy of God is beautiful in the time of affliction, as a cloud of rain in the time of drought.

CHAP. XXXVI.

A prayer for the church of God. Of a good heart, and a good wife.

HAVE mercy upon us, O God of all, and behold us, and show us the light of thy mercies:

2 And send thy fear upon the nations, that have not sought after thee: that they may know that there is no God beside thee, and that they may show forth thy wonders.

3 Lift up thy hand over the strange nations, that they may see thy power.

4 For as thou hast been sanctified in us in their sight, so thou shalt be magnified among them in our presence,

5 That they may know thee, as we also have known thee, that there is no God beside thee, O Lord.

6 Renew thy signs, and work new miracles.

7 Glorify thy hand, and thy right arm.

8 Raise up indignation, and pour out wrath.

9 Take away the adversary, and crush the enemy.

10 Hasten the time, and remember the end, that they may declare thy wonderful works.

11 Let him that escapeth be consumed by the rage of the fire: and let them perish that oppress thy people.

12 Crush the head of the princes of the enemies, that say: There is no other beside us.

13 Gather together all the tribes of Jacob: that they may know that there is no God besides thee, and may declare thy great works: and thou shalt inherit them as from the beginning.

14 Have mercy on thy people, upon whom thy name is invoked: and upon Israel, whom thou hast raised up to be thy first-born.

15 Have mercy on Jerusalem, the city which thou hast sanctified, the city of thy rest.

16 Fill Sion with thy unspeakable words, and thy people with thy glory.

17 Give testimony to them that are thy creatures from the beginning, and raise up the prophecies which the former prophets spoke in thy name.

18 Reward them that patiently wait for thee, that thy prophets may be found faithful: and hear the prayers of thy servants,

19 ^aAccording to the blessing of Aaron over thy people, and direct us into the way of justice, and let all know that dwell upon the earth, that thou art God, the beholder of all ages.

^a Exod. iv. 22.

CHAP. XXXVI. VER. 1. Have. He has pointed out the conditions for prayer, and now he gives a model.—And show. Gr. (2) "send."

VER. 2. That. Gr. Rom. omits the rest. But Grabe retains, "all nations which seek not after thee." H.

VER. 4. Sanctified, by chastising us, or by protecting our fathers in the desert.

VER. 11. Escapeth the sword. Deut. xxxii. 36. He foretells the event, or wishes that they may be chastised, in order that they may enter into themselves, and adore the one true God.

VER. 13. That. Gr. transposes the rest, and has only, and thou, &c. H.

VER. 15. Rest, where the temple is built. 2 Par. vi. 41; Psal. cxxxi. 8.

VER. 18. Thee. The Jews were more faithful after the captivity. The author seems to beg for the coming of the Messias.

VER. 19. People, which thou hast prescribed. Num. vi. 24. C.—Direct. Gr. "All shall know."—Art Gr. "Lord art the God of ages." H.—Here the prayer ends. C.

20 The belly will devour all meat, yet one is better than another.

21 The palate tasteth venison, and the wise heart false speeches.

22 A perverse heart will cause grief, and a man of experience will resist it.

23 A woman will receive every man: yet one daughter is better than another.

24 The beauty of a woman cheereth the countenance of her husband, and a man desireth nothing more.

25 If she have a tongue that can cure, and likewise mitigate and show mercy: her husband is not like other men.

26 He that possesseth a good wife, beginneth a possession: she is a help like to himself, and a pillar of rest.

27 Where there is no hedge, the possession shall be spoiled: and where there is no wife, he mourneth that is in want.

28 Who will trust him that hath no rest, and that lodgeth wheresoever the night taketh him, as a robber well appointed, that skippeth from city to city.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Of the choice of friends and counsellors.

EVERY friend will say: I also am his friend: but there is a friend, that is only a friend in name. Is not this a grief even to death?

2 But a companion and a friend shall be turned to an enemy.

3 O wicked presumption, whence camest thou to cover the earth with thy malice, and deceitfulness?

4 There is a companion who rejoiceth with his friend in his joys, but in the time of trouble he will be against him.

5 There is a companion who condoleth with his friend for his belly's sake, and he will take up a shield against the enemy.

6 Forget not thy friend in thy mind, and be not unmindful of him in thy riches.

7 Consult not with him that layeth a snare for thee, and hide thy counsel from them that envy thee.

8 Every counsellor giveth out counsel, but there is one that is a counsellor for himself.

9 Beware of a counsellor. And know before what need he hath: for he will devise to his own mind:

10 Lest he thrust a stake into the ground, and say to thee:

11 Thy way is good; and then stand on the other side to see what shall befall thee.

^b Num. vi. 24.

VER. 20. Another. Thus act discreetly in the pursuit of knowledge. The good may be distinguished from bad, as easily as venison can from other meats. C

VER. 22. Resist. Gr. "requite it," as it deserves. H.

VER. 26. Good, is not in Greek, but the context shows that it is necessary. H.—By concord small possessions increase, as by discord the greatest are lost. W.

VER. 28. Rest, or abode with his wife and family. The Jews in general married, and such as delayed were deemed suspicious characters. Prov. xxvii. 8. C.

CHAP. XXXVII. VER. 1. Death. Gr. explains this (C.): I mean (2) "a companion and friend turned?" &c. H.—True friendship is most necessary, and false most dangerous. W.

VER. 5. Will. Grotius suspects that not is wanting. Yet, if such a false friend take up arms, it will only be (C.) for his own belly. M.—Not is ill-omitted in the Comp. edit. in the last part of the following verse.

VER. 7. Snare. Gr. Rom. and Alex. has at the end (C.) of ver. 11, "with him that suspecteth thee." H.

12 Treat not with a man without religion concerning holiness, nor with an unjust man concerning justice, nor with a woman touching her of whom she is jealous, nor with a coward concerning war, nor with a merchant about traffic, nor with a buyer of selling, nor with an envious man of giving thanks.

13 Nor with the ungodly of piety, nor with the dishonest of honesty, nor with the field-labourer of every work.

14 Nor with him that worketh by the year of the finishing of the year, nor with an idle servant of much business: give no heed to these in any matter of counsel.

15 But be continually with a holy man, whomsoever thou shalt know to observe the fear of God,

16 Whose soul is according to thy own soul: and who, when thou shalt stumble in the dark, will be sorry for thee.

17 And establish within thyself a heart of good counsel: for there is no other thing of more worth to thee than it.

18 The soul of a holy man discovereth sometimes true things, more than seven watchmen that sit in a high place to watch.

19 But above all these things pray to the Most High, that he may direct thy way in truth.

20 In all thy works let the true word go before thee, and steady counsel before every action.

21 A wicked word shall change the heart: out of which four manner of things arise, good and evil, life and death: and the tongue is continually the ruler of them. There is a man that is subtle and a teacher of many, and yet is unprofitable to his own soul.

22 A skilful man hath taught many, and is sweet to his own soul.

23 He that speaketh sophistically, is hateful: he shall be destitute of every thing.

24 Grace is not given him from the Lord: for he is deprived of all wisdom.

25 There is a wise man that is wise to his own soul: and the fruit of his understanding is commendable.

26 A wise man instructeth his own people, and the fruits of his understanding are faithful.

27 A wise man shall be filled with blessings, and they that see shall praise him.

28 The life of a man is in the number of his days: but the days of Israel are innumerable.

^a Exod. xv. 25.

VER. 12. Treat not. The negation is omitted in the Vulg., (H.) which speaks ironically in the three following verses. Gr. "consult not with him who suspecteth thee, and hide thy counsel from those who are jealous of thee. With a woman," &c. Consult not, is always understood.

VER. 13. Nor. Gr. "with the merciless concerning kindness, with the sluggard concerning any work. With one hired for the year, concerning coming to an end:" συντελειας. H.

VER. 17. It. Gr. "more faithful than it," the well-regulated heart. H.

VER. 18. Holy is not in Gr., but must be understood. C.—The soul or heart, which is attentive to God, (ver. 17,) will be the best guide. H.

VER. 20. In. Gr. "Reason is the chief of every work, and counsel must go before every action." H.

VER. 21. Them. The heart gives birth to good or evil, which the tongue utters. Matt. xii. 34, and xv. 18.—Soul. What will science, without charity, profit him, if he should even gain the world? Matt. xvi. 26, and 1 Cor. xiii. 1.

VER. 23. Hateful. His sophisms are soon discovered. Gr. "There is one wise, hateful in his discourses: He shall be devoid of all wisdom."

VER. 25. Soul. Being replenished with wisdom, he communicates it to others, and obtains an eternal reward. C.

VER. 28. But. Gr. "And." The wisest must soon die. Even the race of Israel shall end. But the virtuous shall be for ever remembered. Ver. 29. H.

29 A wise man shall inherit honour among his people, and his name shall live for ever.

30 My son, prove thy soul in thy life: and if it be wicked, give it no power:

31 For all things are not expedient for all, and every kind pleaseth not every soul.

32 Be not greedy in any feasting, and pour not out thyself upon any meat:

33 For in many meats there will be sickness, and greediness will turn to choler.

34 By surfeiting, many have perished: but he that is temperate, shall prolong life.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Of physicians and medicines: what is to be done in sickness, and how we are to mourn for the dead. Of the employments of labourers and artificers.

HONOUR the physician for the need thou hast of him: for the Most High hath created him.

2 For all healing is from God, and he shall receive gifts of the king.

3 The skill of the physician shall lift up his head, and in the sight of great men he shall be praised.

4 The Most High hath created medicines out of the earth, and a wise man will not abhor them.

5 ^a Was not bitter water made sweet with wood?

6 The virtue of these things is come to the knowledge of men, and the Most High hath given knowledge to men, that he may be honoured in his wonders.

7 By these he shall cure and shall allay their pains, and of these the apothecary shall make sweet confections, and shall make up ointments of health, and of his works there shall be no end.

8 For the peace of God is over all the face of the earth.

9 ^b My son, in thy sickness neglect not thyself, but pray to the Lord, and he shall heal thee.

10 Turn away from sin, and order thy hands aright, and cleanse thy heart from all offence.

11 Give a sweet savour, and a memorial of fine flour, and make a fat offering, and then give place to the physician.

12 For the Lord created him: and let him not depart from thee, for his works are necessary.

13 For there is a time when thou must fall into their hands:

^b Isa. xxxviii. 3.

VER. 30. Life. Attempt nothing above thy strength: or, Gr. "try what agrees with thy health or soul, (C.) and see thou give it not what is hurtful to it." H.

VER. 33. Choler, or indigestion. "Gluttony has slain more than the sword." C. CHAP. XXXVIII. VER. 1. Honour and pay. Prov. viii. 9. C.—Gr. adds, "with his fees." H.

VER. 4. Them, as he will all superstitious remedies. C.—Yet we must not condemn the prudent use of medicine. C.

VER. 5. Wood, of various sorts. Grot.—Many suppose that he alludes to the miracle of Moses, (Exod. xv. 25,) who thus was supernaturally informed (C.) of the effects of a certain wood. T. M. S. Aug. q. 57, in Ex.

VER. 7. These plants.—And of. Gr. "Of these the maker of ointments shall compose a mixture; and his works are not yet finished, when peace (health) from him appears on the face of the earth." H.

VER. 9. Thee. We must neither trust too much in physicians, (2 Par. xvi. 12,) nor despise them, as this would be tempting God.

VER. 10. Sin. All diseases are in consequence of original sin, and many are inflicted for actual transgressions. John ix. 2, and 1 Cor. xi. 30; Num. xii. 10. C.

VER. 11. Then. Gr. "as being no longer. Yet give," &c. H.—Be converted and offer sacrifice, as if there were no hopes of life. Still do not despair. C.

14 And they shall beseech the Lord, that he would prosper what they give for ease and remedy, for their conversation.

15 He that sinneth in the sight of his Maker, shall fall into the hands of the physician.

16 My son, shed tears over the dead, and begin to lament as if thou hadst suffered some great harm, and according to judgment cover his body, and neglect not his burial.

17 And for fear of being ill spoken of, weep bitterly for a day, and then comfort thyself in thy sadness.

18 And make mourning for him according to his merit, for a day or two, for fear of detraction.

19 ^aFor of sadness cometh death, and it overwhelmeth the strength, and the sorrow of the heart boweth down the neck.

20 In withdrawing aside, sorrow remaineth: and the substance of the poor is according to his heart.

21 Give not up thy heart to sadness, but drive it from thee: and remember the latter end.

22 Forget it not: for there is no returning, and thou shalt do him no good, and shalt hurt thyself.

23 Remember my judgment: for thine also shall be so: yesterday for me, and to-day for thee.

24 ^bWhen the dead is at rest, let his remembrance rest, and comfort him in the departing of his spirit.

25 The wisdom of a scribe cometh by his time of leisure: and he that is less in action, shall receive wisdom.

26 With what wisdom shall he be furnished that holdeth the plough, and that glorieth in the goad, that driveth the oxen therewith, and is occupied in their labours, and his whole talk is about the offspring of bulls?

27 He shall give his mind to turn up furrows, and his care is to give the kine fodder.

28 So every craftsman and workmaster that laboureth night and day, he who maketh graven seals, and by his continual diligence varieth the figure: he shall give his mind to the resemblance of the picture, and by his watching shall finish the work.

29 So doth the smith, sitting by the anvil, and considering the iron-work. The vapour of the fire wasteth his flesh, and he fighteth with the heat of the furnace:

30 The noise of the hammer is always in his ears, and his eye is upon the pattern of the vessel he maketh.

^a Prov. xv. 13, and xvii. 22.

VER. 16. Burial. Thus we must show our respect for the deceased. The Jews also prayed for them. 2 Mac. xii. 42. C.

VER. 17. For. Gr. "and shed burning tears of mourning, (18) and lament for," &c. H.—Sorrow would be unsuitable for the saints, and useless for the damned, who, being rebellious to God, do not deserve our lamentations. Yet nature dictates, and people expect that we should allow something to the first emotions of sorrow, (C.) for a day or two; and we may receive the consolatory visits of our friends during the seven days of mourning. Chap. xxii. 13; John xi. 19. S. Paulin. ad Pam.

VER. 19. And the, &c. is not in Greek. Excessive sorrow brings on sickness, and renders us unfit for any thing.

VER. 20. Aside, in solitude.—Substance; or what the poor has to live on, will seem sweet or bitter according as he is affected with joy or grief.

VER. 23. Thee. A man on his death-bed, or already dead, is introduced speaking. C.

VER. 24. Him. Gr. "thyself." He is at rest, we hope (H.); be thou so too. C.

VER. 25. A scribe; that is, a doctor of the law, or a learned man. Ch.—Sorrow (H.) and too much employment are injurious to learning. C.

VER. 34. Glazing. The earthen vessel would otherwise spoil all but oil and water. C.

31 He setteth his mind to finish his work, and his watching to polish them to perfection.

32 So doth the potter sitting at his work, turning the wheel about with his feet, who is always carefully set to his work, and maketh all his work by number:

33 He fashioneth the clay with his arm, and boweth down his strength before his feet.

34 He shall give his mind to finish the glazing, and his watching to make clean the furnace.

35 All these trust to their hands, and every one is wise in his own art.

36 Without these a city is not built.

37 And they shall not dwell nor walk about therein, and they shall not go up into the assembly.

38 Upon the judges' seat they shall not sit, and the ordinance of judgment they shall not understand, neither shall they declare discipline and judgment, and they shall not be found where parables are spoken:

39 But they shall strengthen the state of the world, and their prayer shall be in the work of their craft, applying their soul, and searching in the law of the Most High.

CHAP. XXXIX.

The exercises of the wise man. The Lord is to be glorified for his works.

THE wise man will seek out the wisdom of all the ancients, and will be occupied in the prophets.

2 He will keep the sayings of renowned men, and will enter withal into the subtilties of parables.

3 He will search out the hidden meanings of proverbs, and will be conversant in the secrets of parables.

4 He shall serve among great men, and appear before the governor.

5 He shall pass into strange countries: for he shall try good and evil among men:

6 He will give his heart to resort early to the Lord, that made him, and he will pray in the sight of the Most High.

7 He will open his mouth in prayer, and will make supplications for his sins.

8 For if it shall please the great Lord, he will fill him with the spirit of understanding:

9 And he will pour forth the words of his wisdom as showers, and in his prayer he will confess to the Lord.

10 And he shall direct his counsel, and his knowledge, and in his secrets shall he meditate.

^b 2 Kings xii. 21.

VER. 37. Dwell. Gr. "travel," to get a livelihood, (Grot.) or to acquire wisdom, (chap. xxxiv. 9, and xxxix. 5,) and walk about like the ancient philosophers. They shall not be chosen magistrates. C.

VER. 39. World, giving children to the commonwealth, (M.) and employing themselves in useful arts.—Craft. They pray that they may succeed in their employment, while some also strive to comply with their religious duties. C.

CHAP. XXXIX. VER. 1. Ancients. The Essenes (Jos. Bel. i. 7) and Therapeuts (Philo, Contemp.) were most famous for doing so. In general the Jews despise the learning of foreign nations: but some have applied themselves to it, particularly Philo, Josephus, &c. 1 Mac. i. 11, and 2 Mac. iv. 11.

VER. 2. Sayings, or history of Abraham, &c.—Parables. This was most in vogue. 3 Kings x.

VER. 4. Governor of the province or army. The most enlightened were chosen, like Joseph. Dan. i. 4, &c.

VER. 5. Men. Travelling was very requisite, (chap. xxxiv. 11,) and history records the actions of the bad as well as of the good, for the instruction of the public.

VER. 6. Pray. Diligence and prayer are the means to acquire wisdom. Chap. iv. 13.

VER. 9. Lord, being in a sort of rapture, and enlightened by Him.

11 He shall show forth the discipline he hath learned, and shall glory in the law of the covenant of the Lord.

12 Many shall praise his wisdom, and it shall never be forgotten.

13 The memory of him shall not depart away, and his name shall be in request from generation to generation.

14 Nations shall declare his wisdom, and the church shall show forth his praise.

15 If he continue, he shall leave a name above a thousand: and if he rest, it shall be to his advantage.

16 I will yet meditate, that I may declare: for I am filled as with a holy transport.

17 By a voice he saith: Hear me, ye divine offspring, and bud forth as the rose planted by the brooks of waters.

18 Give ye a sweet odour as frankincense.

19 Send forth flowers as the lily, and yield a smell, and bring forth leaves in grace, and praise with canticles, and bless the Lord in his works.

20 Magnify his name, and give glory to him with the voice of your lips, and with the canticles of your mouths, and with harps; and in praising him, you shall say in this manner:

21 ^aAll the works of the Lord are exceeding good.

22 ^bAt his word the waters stood as a heap: and at the words of his mouth the receptacles of waters:

23 For at his commandment favour is shown, and there is no diminishing of his salvation.

24 The works of all flesh are before him, and there is nothing hid from his eyes.

25 He seeth from eternity to eternity, and there is nothing wonderful before him.

26 There is no saying: What is this, or what is that? for all things shall be sought in their time.

27 His blessing hath overflowed like a river.

28 ^cAnd as a flood hath watered the earth; so shall his wrath inherit the nations that have not sought after him:

29 ^dEven as he turned the waters into a dry land, and the earth was made dry: and his ways were made plain for their journey: so to sinners they are stumbling-blocks in his wrath.

30 Good things were created for the good from the beginning; so for the wicked, good and evil things.

31 ^eThe principal things necessary for the life of men, are: water, fire, and iron, salt, milk, and bread of flour, and honey, and the cluster of the grape, and oil, and clothing.

32 All these things shall be for good to the holy; so to the sinners, and the ungodly, they shall be turned into evil.

33 There are spirits that are created for vengeance, and in their fury they lay on grievous torments:

34 In the time of destruction they shall pour out their force: and they shall appease the wrath of him that made them.

35 Fire, hail, famine, and death: all these were created for vengeance.

36 The teeth of beasts, and scorpions, and serpents, and the sword taking vengeance upon the ungodly unto destruction.

37 In his commandments they shall feast, and they shall be ready upon earth when need is, and when their time is come, they shall not transgress his word.

38 Therefore, from the beginning I was resolved, and I have meditated and thought on these things, and left them in writing.

39 ^fAll the works of the Lord are good, and he will furnish every work in due time.

40 It is not to be said: This is worse than that: for all shall be well approved in their time.

41 Now, therefore, with the whole heart and mouth praise ye him, and bless the name of the Lord.

CHAP. XL.

The miseries of the life of man are relieved by the grace of God and his fear.

GREAT labour is created for all men, and a heavy yoke is upon the children of Adam, from the day of their coming out of their mother's womb, until the day of their burial into the mother of all.

2 Their thoughts and fears of the heart, their imagination of things to come, and the day of their end:

3 From him that sitteth on a glorious throne, unto him that is humbled in earth and ashes:

4 From him that weareth purple, and beareth the crown, even to him that is covered with rough linen: wrath, envy, trouble, unquietness, and the fear of death, continual anger and strife,

5 And in the time of rest upon his bed, the sleep of the night changeth his knowledge.

6 A little and as nothing is his rest, and afterward in sleep, as in the day of keeping watch.

^d Exod. xiv. 21.—^e Supra, xxix. 28.—^f Gen. i. 31; Mark vii. 37.

VER. 16. With. Gr. "as the moon in the first quarter," δισκομηνία. H.—The Vulg. has read Διομηνία, "divine transport." The author declares that he was inspired. C.

VER. 17. By. Gr. "Hear me, ye holy children."—Offspring. Lit. "fruits." H.—He speaks to the children of Israel, the people of God: whom he exhorts to bud forth and flourish with virtue. Ch.

VER. 22. Waters. At the world's creation, or at the passage of the Israelites. C.

VER. 25. Wonderful, or new. C.—The greatest miracles cost him nothing. H.

VER. 26. Time. The veil shall be withdrawn, and Providence will appear. Gr. "all things are made for their proper use."

VER. 28. That. Gr. "as he changed the waters into saltness," (H.) at Sodom, (C.) "his ways are plain for the saints: so to sinners they are stumbling-blocks." Ver. 30. The Red Sea gave a passage to Israel, and overwhelmed the Egyptians. H.

VER. 30. Good and, is omitted in Gr. Before the fall all was happiness. Now the wicked have still some mixture of good. Ver. 32. Bossuet.

VER. 31. Water and fire. These are requisite to prepare bread. The Romans refused them to the enemies of the state.—Cluster. Gr. "blood," as Deut. xxxii. 14. C.

VER. 33. Spirits. Storms, (Psal. x. 7, and cxlviii. 8,) good angels, (Gen. xix. 11; Isa. xxxvii. 36,) or rather devils; who, though created in holiness, fell, and became executioners of the wicked. C.—They abused their free-will, and are eternally punished. W.

VER. 34. Destruction, and final ruin of the impious, or at the last day. C.—Appase. God is pleased with the execution of justice. M.—Yet the devils cannot obtain a reconciliation: neither do they act to please God, having their will obstinately bent against his, though they be forced to obey. H.

VER. 37. Feast. Gr. "rejoice," as at a feast. Ezec. xxxix. 16.—Word. They will be ready at the first sign. C.—All creatures, but the rebel angels and man, obey God. H.

VER. 38. Resolved. Lit. "confirmed" in this opinion by a Divine light. Ver. 16, 21.

VER. 40. That. Even sin contributes to manifest the justice and mercy of God; and we are not to judge of his works, but to praise him; as every thing is created for wise purposes, and evil proceeds from our abuse of things. C.

CHAP. XL. VER. 1. Labour, "anxiety," ασχολία. M.—All misery (C.) is in consequence of original sin. W.

VER. 5. Knowledge. He is disquieted by restless (C.) and frightful dreams. Ver. 6. H.

7 He is troubled in the vision of his heart, as if he had escaped in the day of battle. In the time of his safety he rose up, and wondereth that there is no fear:

8 Such things happen to all flesh, from man even to beast, and upon sinners are seven-fold more.

9 *Moreover, death and bloodshed, strife and sword, oppressions, famine, and affliction, and scourges:

10 All these things are created for the wicked, ^band for their sakes came the flood.

11 *All things that are of the earth shall return to the earth again, ^aand all waters shall return to the sea.

12 All bribery and injustice shall be blotted out, and fidelity shall stand for ever.

13 The riches of the unjust shall be dried up like a river, and shall pass away with a noise like a great thunder in rain.

14 While he openeth his hands, he shall rejoice: but transgressors shall pine away in the end.

15 The offspring of the ungodly shall not bring forth many branches, and make a noise as unclean roots upon the top of a rock.

16 The weed growing over every water, and at the bank of the river, shall be pulled up before all grass.

17 Grace is like a paradise in blessings, and mercy remaineth for ever.

18 The life of a labourer, that is content with what he hath, shall be sweet, and in it thou shalt find a treasure.

19 Children, and the building of a city, shall establish a name; but a blameless wife shall be counted above them both.

20 Wine and music rejoice the heart: but the love of wisdom is above them both.

21 The flute and the psaltery make a sweet melody, but a pleasant tongue is above them both.

22 Thy eye desireth favour and beauty, but more than these green sown fields.

23 A friend and companion meeting together, in season; but above them both, is a wife with her husband.

24 Brethren are a help in the time of trouble, but mercy shall deliver more than they.

25 Gold and silver make the feet stand sure, but wise counsel is above them both.

26 Riches and strength lift up the heart, but above these is the fear of the Lord.

^a Supra, xxxix. 35, and 36.—^b Gen. vii. 10.

VER. 9. Moreover. Gr. "death," &c., are all destined for the wicked.

VER. 12. Out, and severely punished. C.—They shall not appear in the book of life.

VER. 14. Rejoice. The corrupt judge once rejoiced: but now he shall mourn. H.

VER. 15. And make. Gr. "they are unclean," (H.) and will produce no fruit.

VER. 16. Weed. Lit. "verdure."

VER. 17. Grace. The beneficent will produce fruits, like those of paradise. Gen. ii. 8.

VER. 18. That is. Gr. "and of one that."—In it. Gr. "and more than both is one discovering a treasure," (H.) who finds himself rich, without labour or injustice.

VER. 20. Wisdom. Virtue gives more content to the soul than corporal pleasures do to the body. It brings us near to God. C.

VER. 26. Heart, and make people presumptuous; while piety gives real courage. Psal. xxvi. 1. C.

VER. 28. It, or "him." H.—The virtuous man is covered with glory.

VER. 29. Indigent. Gr. "live not by begging," being too lazy to work, or incurring this punishment for thy sins. Lev. xxvi. 16; Psal. cviii.; Deut. xv. 4. Involuntary poverty is a most severe scourge. C.

27 There is no want in the fear of the Lord, and it needeth not to seek for help.

28 The fear of the Lord is like a paradise of blessing, and they have covered it above all glory.

29 My son, in thy life-time be not indigent; for it is better to die than to want.

30 The life of him that looketh toward another man's table, is not to be counted a life: for he feedeth his soul with another man's meat.

31 But a man well instructed and taught, will look to himself.

32 Begging will be sweet in the mouth of the unwise, but in his belly there shall burn a fire.

CHAP. XLI.

Of the remembrance of death: of an evil and of a good name: of what things we ought to be ashamed.

O DEATH, how bitter is the remembrance of thee to a man that hath peace in his possessions!

2 To a man that is at rest, and whose ways are prosperous in all things, and that is yet able to take meat!

3 O death, thy sentence is welcome to the man that is in need, and to him whose strength faileth:

4 Who is in a decrepit age, and that is in care about all things: and to the distrustful that loseth patience!

5 Fear not the sentence of death. Remember what things have been before thee, and what shall come after thee: this sentence is from the Lord upon all flesh.

6 And what shall come upon thee by the good pleasure of the Most High? whether ten, or a hundred, or a thousand years?

7 For among the dead there is no accusing of life.

8 The children of sinners become children of abominations, and they that converse near the houses of the ungodly.

9 The inheritance of the children of sinners shall perish, and with their posterity shall be a perpetual reproach.

10 The children will complain of an ungodly father, because for his sake they are in reproach.

11 Woe to you, ungodly men, who have forsaken the law of the most high Lord.

12 And if you be born, you shall be born in malediction: and if you die, in malediction shall be your portion.

13 *All things that are of the earth, shall return into

^a Infra, xli. 13.—^b Eccles. i. 7.—^c Supra, xl. 11.

VER. 32. Unwise. Some read, "impudent man," with the Gr.—Fire. He shall feel the inconveniences of poverty (H.); yet will not work, being lost to all shame. C.

CHAP. XLI. VER. 1. Death is terrible to all, but most to those who live comfortably. C.

VER. 3. Sentence, pronounced on Adam and all his posterity. C.

VER. 5. Flesh. "It is a great consolation to share the fate of all." Sen. Provid. 5.

VER. 6. What. Gr. "why wouldst thou refuse to submit to the?" &c. H.

VER. 7. Life. Thou wilt not be asked how long, but how well thou hast lived. No one will then envy thy long life. C.—It will be in vain to plead that the length or shortness of life has occasioned thy sins; for God does all with justice and for the best, if men would use rightly his benefits. W.—Thou wilt not repine at having lived too short a time. M.—An evil life will be alone condemned. Wisd. v. D.

VER. 8. Ungodly. They adopt the wicked manners of their parents (C.) and companions, and thus become still more criminal. H.

VER. 10. Father. He is rather their executioner, (C.) and would have been less cruel if he had murdered them while they were innocent. Wisd. xii. 10. H.

VER. 12. Portion. It would have been better for them never to have existed. Matt. xxvi. 24. This is the case of heresiarchs. C.

the earth: so the ungodly shall from malediction to destruction.

14 The mourning of men is about their body, but the name of the ungodly shall be blotted out.

15 Take care of a good name: for this shall continue with thee more than a thousand treasures, precious and great.

16 A good life hath its number of days: but a good name shall continue for ever.

17 My children, keep discipline in peace: ^afor wisdom that is hid, and a treasure that is not seen, what profit is there in them both?

18 Better is the man that hideth his folly, than the man that hideth his wisdom.

19 Wherefore, have a shame of these things I am now going to speak of.

20 For it is not good to keep all shamefacedness, and all things do not please all men, in opinion.

21 Be ashamed of fornication before father and mother; and of a lie before a governor and a man in power;

22 Of an offence before a prince and a judge; of iniquity before a congregation and a people;

23 Of injustice before companion and friend: And in regard to the place where thou dwellest,

24 Of theft, and of the truth of God, and the covenant; of leaning with thy elbow over meat, and of deceit in giving and taking;

25 Of silence before them that salute thee; of looking upon a harlot; and of turning away thy face from thy kinsman.

26 Turn not away thy face from thy neighbour; and of taking away a portion, and not restoring.

27 ^bGaze not upon another man's wife, and be not inquisitive after his handmaid, and approach not her bed.

28 Be ashamed of upbraiding speeches before friends; and after thou hast given, upbraid not.

CHAP. XLII.

Of what things we ought not to be ashamed. Cautions with regard to women. The works and greatness of God.

REPEAT not the word which thou hast heard, and disclose not the thing that is secret; so shalt thou

^a Supra, xx. 32.—^b Matt. v. 28.

VER. 13. From. Gr. "go to destruction." H.

VER. 14. Body. The death of the body is bewailed in the just, but that of the soul also of wicked people calls for our tears. They will soon perish. Psal. ix. 7.

VER. 15. Great. The concern which all have for a good name, is one of the strongest proofs of the soul's immortality. Prov. xxii. 11.

VER. 17. Peace, with docility, (Matt. xi. 25,) or in the midst of prosperity, be on your guard. Chap. xx. 32. C.

VER. 19. Have a shame, &c. That is to say, be ashamed of doing any of these things which I am now going to mention: for though sometimes shamefacedness is not to be indulged, yet it is often good and necessary; as in the following cases. Ch.

VER. 20. Opinion. Grotius corrects the Gr. "It is not landable to be incredulous in all."

VER. 21. Mother. Thy misconduct seems to redound to their dishonour, as if they had not given thee a proper education.

VER. 22. People. They will stone thee. Remember the fate of Roboam. 3 Kings xii. C.

VER. 24. And of. Lit. "out of respect for thee," &c. Blush for lying, which is contrary to the truth of God; and for the other sins, which injure his covenant.

CHAP. XLII. VER. 1. Men. Here the Gr. concludes the former chapter very properly, (H.) as we must be ashamed of doing these things, and not of those which follow. C.

VER. 2. Covenant. We must be ashamed of transgressing these, (chap. xli. 24,) but not of complying with them. This is the first duty of man.—Ungodly. Blush not to oppose such a judgment, (C.) though all the judges should be against thee. Follow no collusion of man to do evil. H.—Pass sentence without respect of be truly without confusion, and shalt find favour before all men: be not ashamed of any of these things,^c and accept no person to sin thereby.

2 Of the law of the Most High, and of his covenant, and of judgment to justify the ungodly.

3 Of the affair of companions and travellers, and of the gift of the inheritance of friends.

4 Of exactness of balance and weights, of getting much or little.

5 Of the corruption of buying, and of merchants, and of much correction of children, and to make the side of a wicked slave to bleed.

6 Sure keeping is good over a wicked wife.

7 Where there are many hands, shut up, and deliver all things in number and weight; and put all in writing that thou givest out or receivest in.

8 Be not ashamed to inform the unwise and foolish, and the aged, that are judged by young men: and thou shalt be well instructed in all things, and well approved in the sight of all men living.

9 The father waketh for the daughter when no man knoweth, and the care for her taketh away his sleep, when she is young, lest she pass away the flower of her age, and when she is married lest she should be hateful:

10 In her virginity, lest she should be corrupted, and be found with child in her father's house: and having a husband, lest she should misbehave herself, or at the least become barren.

11 Keep a sure watch over a shameless daughter; lest at any time she make thee become a laughing-stock to thy enemies, and a by-word in the city, and a reproach among the people, and she make thee ashamed before all the multitude.

12 Behold not every body's beauty: and tarry not among women.

13 For from garments cometh a moth, and from a woman the iniquity of a man.

14 For better is the iniquity of a man, than a woman doing a good turn, and a woman bringing shame and reproach.

persons, (Deut. i. 16. C.) whether the parties be thy companions, or only travellers. Ver. 3. H.

VER. 3. Friends. Be not ashamed to leave something to thy friends, though relations may grumble; or execute thy friend's will exactly. C.

VER. 4. Little. Be scrupulously exact in thy dealings, but not afraid of advancing thy fortune by lawful means.

VER. 5. Buying. This regards magistrates, who must correct such frauds. Gr. "of the money (C.) to purchase from merchants." H.—Bleed. Great severity was formerly used. Chap. xxx. 12. C.

VER. 6. Keeping. Lit. "a seal." H.—All must be locked up.

VER. 8. Men. So Daniel discovered the malice of the two ancients. Dan. xiii. 46. Admonish the aged not to enter into disputes, or strive with the young. C.

VER. 9. Knoweth. Lit. "who is hidden." H.—An unmarried woman was styled Halma, or "hidden." Isa. vii. 11. C.—Pass away. Gr. "abuse." H.

VER. 10. Barren. And thus fall into contempt. Deut. vii. 14. If she committed adultery she must die; or if she were only suspected she must drink the waters of jealousy. Num. v. 17. Husbands would often seek a divorce on such occasions; which would involve the father in fresh difficulties.

VER. 11. Multitude, who will accuse thee of negligence. C.

VER. 13. Man. Gr. "woman." Malice is natural to her. Beauty becomes her ruin, as well as that of others. C.

VER. 14. Better, &c. That is, there is, commonly speaking, less danger to be apprehended to the soul from the churlishness or injuries we receive from men, than from the flattering favours and familiarity of women. Ch.—Reproach. This explains what sort of good the woman aforesaid has done; she has fostered the passions of men, and brought them to shame, which all the malevolence of an enemy could not have done. H.

15 I will now remember the works of the Lord, and I will declare the things I have seen. By the words of the Lord are his works.

16 The sun giving light hath looked upon all things, and full of the glory of the Lord is his work.

17 Hath not the Lord made the saints to declare all his wonderful works, which the Lord Almighty hath firmly settled to be established for his glory?

18 He hath searched out the deep, and the heart of men, and considered their crafty devices.

19 For the Lord knoweth all knowledge, and hath beheld the signs of the world, he declareth the things that are past, and the things that are to come, and revealeth the traces of hidden things.

20 No thought escapeth him, and no word can hide itself from him.

21 He hath beautified the glorious works of his wisdom: and he is from eternity to eternity, and to him nothing may be added.

22 Nor can he be diminished, and he hath no need of any counsellor.

23 O how desirable are all his works, and what we can know is but as a spark!

24 All these things live and remain for ever, and for every use all things obey him.

25 All things are double, one against another, and he hath made nothing defective.

26 He hath established the good things of every one. And who shall be filled with beholding his glory?

CHAP. XLIII.

The works of God are exceedingly glorious and wonderful: no man is able sufficiently to praise him.

THE firmament on high is his beauty, the beauty of heaven with its glorious show.

2 The sun, when he appeareth showing forth at his rising, an admirable instrument, the work of the Most High.

3 At noon he burneth the earth; and who can abide his burning heat? As one keeping a furnace in works of heat:

4 The sun three times as much, burneth the mountains, breathing out fiery vapours, and shining with his beams, he blindeth the eyes.

5 Great is the Lord that made him, and at his words he hath hastened his course.

6 And the moon in all in her season, is for a declaration of times and a sign of the world.

VER. 15. Remember, or publish. He praises God and the great men of his nation, to the end of the book, (C.) or to chap. l. 29. H.—By. Lit. "in." H.

VER. 16. Work. The world displays God's glory and power. Psal. xviii. 6.

VER. 17. Saints, in heaven, or rather the Israelites. Psal. cxlvii. 20. C.

VER. 19. Signs. Lit. "sign," the order of the stars, &c. H.—Yet God does not study these things, to discover what will happen. C.

VER. 26. He. Gr. "one thing establishes the good of another," (H.) serving as a counterpoise. C.—Black colours cause the white to shine forth. Youth is guided by the experience of old age. M.

CHAP. XLIII. VER. 1. Show. We cannot behold these things without admiration of God.

VER. 2. High. The sun is the most excellent of all irrational creatures, affording light (W.) and heat for the production of things. Yet it is inferior to man, being devoid of reason. All creatures manifest God's majesty; the little as well as the great. W.

VER. 6. In all. Gr. Comp. "to stand guard." Other copies agree with the Vulg., though embarrassed.—World. To mark out the seasons. Gen. i. 14; Psal. ciii. 19.

7 From the moon is the sign of the festival-day, a light that decreaseth in her perfection.

8 The month is called after her name, increasing wonderfully in her perfection.

9 Being an instrument of the armies on high, shining gloriously in the firmament of heaven.

10 The glory of the stars is the beauty of heaven; the Lord enlighteneth the world on high.

11 By the words of the holy one they shall stand in judgment, and shall never fail in their watches.

12 Look upon the rainbow, and bless him that made it: "it is very beautiful in its brightness.

13 It encompasseth the heaven about with the circle of its glory, the hands of the Most High have displayed it.

14 By his commandment he maketh the snow to fall apace, and sendeth forth swiftly the lightnings of his judgment.

15 Through this are the treasures opened, and the clouds fly out like birds.

16 By his greatness he hath fixed the clouds, and the hailstones are broken.

17 At his sight shall the mountains be shaken, and at his will the south wind shall blow.

18 The noise of his thunder shall strike the earth, so doth the northern storm, and the whirlwind:

19 And as the birds lighting upon the earth, he scattereth snow, and the falling thereof is as the coming down of locusts.

20 The eye admireth at the beauty of the whiteness thereof, and the heart is astonished at the shower thereof.

21 He shall pour frost as salt upon the earth: and when it freezeth, it shall become like the tops of thistles.

22 The cold north wind bloweth, and the water is congealed into crystal; upon every gathering together of waters it shall rest, and shall clothe the waters as a breast-plate.

23 And it shall devour the mountains, and burn the wilderness, and consume all that is green as with fire.

24 A present remedy of all is the speedy coming of a cloud, and a dew that meeteth it, by the heat that cometh, shall overpower it.

25 At his word the wind is still, and with his thought he appeaseth the deep, and the Lord hath planted islands therein.

26 Let them that sail on the sea, tell the dangers thereof: and when we hear with our ears, we shall admire.

a Gen. ix. 13.

VER. 8. Name. Meni is used for the moon, (Jer. lxxv. 11,) which resembles the Gr. mēn, "month." This is also derived from mēnē, "the moon."

VER. 11. Judgment. The angels are not pure before God (Job iv. 18, and xv. 15); or rather the stars obey his orders. Bar. iii. 34; Judg. v. 20; Psal. cxviii. 91. C.

VER. 14. Judgment, to punish the wicked. Exod. xiv. 24; Isa. xxxvii. 36. C.

VER. 16. Broken, as from huge mountains. Job xxxviii. 39. C.

VER. 19. Lighting. Gr. "flying, he," H.

VER. 20. Shower, as if God were about to drown the world. The melting of snow occasions dreadful inundations. C.

VER. 21. Thistles. Gr. "stakes," pointed as it were with steel. M.

VER. 22. Crystal, or ice. C.

VER. 23. Burn. Cold destroys verdure no less than fire. Gen. xxxi. 40.

VER. 24. Overpower it. Gr. "give joy; (25) with," &c. H.

VER. 25. Still. Lit. "silent." Matt. viii. 26.

VER. 26. Thereof. Psal. cvi. 23. "He who has not sailed has seen nothing evil." Possidip.

VER. 27. Monstrous. Gr. "creation of whales" H.

27 There are great and wonderful works: a variety of beasts, and of all living things, and the monstrous creatures of whales.

28 Through him is established the end of their journey, and by his word all things are regulated.

29 We shall say much, and yet shall want words: but the sum of our words is, He is all.

30 What shall we be able to do to glorify him? for the Almighty himself is above all his works.

31 The Lord is terrible, and exceeding great, and his power is admirable.

32 Glorify the Lord as much as ever you can, for he will yet far exceed, and his magnificence is wonderful.

33 Blessing the Lord, exalt him as much as you can: for he is above all praise.

34 When you exalt him, put forth all your strength, and be not weary: for you can never go far enough.

35 "Who shall see him, and declare him? and who shall magnify him as he is from the beginning?"

36 There are many things hidden from us that are greater than these: for we have seen but a few of his works.

37 But the Lord hath made all things, and to the godly he hath given wisdom.

CHAP. XLIV.

The praises of the holy fathers, in particular of Henoch, Noe, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

LET us now praise men of renown, and our fathers in their generation.

2 The Lord hath wrought great glory through his magnificence, from the beginning.

3 Such as have borne rule in their dominions, men of great power, and endued with their wisdom, showing forth in the prophets the dignity of prophets,

4 And ruling over the present people, and by the strength of wisdom instructing the people in most holy words.

5 Such as by their skill sought out musical tunes, and published canticles of the scriptures.

6 Rich men in virtue, studying beautifulness: living at peace in their houses.

7 All these have gained glory in their generations, and were praised in their days.

* Psal. cv. 2.—b Gen. v. 24; Heb. xi. 5.—c Gen. vi. 9.—d Gen. ix. 11; Heb. xi. 7.

VER. 28. Is. Gr. "his angel gives a prosperous journey."—Regulated. Gr. "blended." H.—If God be angry, all will go to the bottom. Grot.

VER. 29. All. Lit. "in all." Every thing obeys God. Chap. xlii. 15; Eccles. xii. 13.

VER. 30. Him. So the Gr. reads. Vulg. seems to say, "boasting in all, what shall we be able to do?" What is man, fighting against the Lord! C.

VER. 32. His. Gr. "exalting the Lord, exert your power; and labour, for you will not come up to him: (35) who." H.—He is above all praise. Psal. cxliv. 3. C.

VER. 35. From. Gr. "many hidden things are," &c. H.—The angels, and many secrets of nature, have not been mentioned. C.

CHAP. XLIV. VER. 1. Gr. prefixes, "A Hymn of the Fathers."—It was the custom to sound forth the praises of these Fathers in the temple and synagogues. Ver. 15. Grot.

VER. 2. Glory. Gr. adds, "in them." He was the author of all their virtue, (H.) and has acquired much glory by their means, (C.) among men; though his essential glory can never increase.

VER. 3. In the. Gr. "futuraity by their predictions." Kings, judges, and prophets are praised. H.

VER. 4. The present. Gr. "the people by counsels, and by the knowledge of the office of scribes of the people. Wise in speech by their instruction. (5) Seeking out," &c. H.

8 They that were born of them have left a name behind them, that their praises might be related.

9 And there are some, of whom there is no memorial: who are perished, as if they had never been: and are born, as if they had never been born, and their children with them.

10 But these were men of mercy, whose godly deeds have not failed:

11 Good things continue with their seed,

12 Their posterity are a holy inheritance, and their seed hath stood in the covenants:

13 And their children for their sakes remain for ever their seed and their glory shall not be forsaken.

14 Their bodies are buried in peace, and their name liveth unto generation and generation.

15 Let the people show forth their wisdom, and the church declare their praise.

16 "Henoch pleased God, and was translated into paradise, that he may give repentance to the nations."

17 "Noe was found perfect, just, and in the time of wrath he was made a reconciliation."

18 Therefore was there a remnant left to the earth, when the flood came.

19 "The covenants of the world were made with him, that all flesh should no more be destroyed with the flood."

20 "Abraham was the great father of a multitude of nations, and there was not found the like to him in glory, who kept the law of the Most High, and was in covenant with him."

21 "In his flesh he established the covenant, and in temptation he was found faithful."

22 Therefore, by an oath he gave him glory in his posterity, that he should increase as the dust of the earth,

23 And that he would exalt his seed as the stars, and they should inherit from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth.

24 And he did in like manner with Isaac, for the sake of Abraham, his father.

25 The Lord gave him the blessing of all nations, and confirmed his covenant upon the head of Jacob.

26 He acknowledged him in his blessings, and gave him an inheritance, and divided him his portion in twelve tribes.

27 And he preserved for him men of mercy, that found grace in the eyes of all flesh.

VER. 6. In. Gr. "established in power, living," &c., (H.) like Abraham, Ezechias, &c. C.

VER. 8. Born. Gr. "some of them have left a name," (H.) or posterity. Deut. xxv. 6.

VER. 16. Into. Gr. "a model of penance to past or future generations." H.—The Latin Fathers suppose that Henoch was translated to heaven, or to the earthly paradise. It is the tradition both of Jews and of Christians that he is still alive, and will come to oppose Antichrist, (Apoc. xi. 3; Gen. v. 22; Heb. xi. 5. C.) when he will preach penance, (W.) chiefly to the Gentiles, while Elias will address himself to the Jews. H.

VER. 17. A. Gr. "an exchange," to save mankind. Gen. vi. 8, and viii. 21. C.

VER. 20. Multitude. His name implies as much. C.—He was father of all who believe in Christ. W.

VER. 22. In his. Gr. "that the nations should be blessed in his posterity."—Dust. Lit. "a heap." H. Gen. xii. 2, and xxii. 17.

VER. 23. Earth. In Arabia, and from the Red Sea to the Euphrates. This was verified in David. Psal. lxxi.; Gen. xiii. 14.

VER. 26. Tribes. Giving him so many children, who inherited Chanaan.

VER. 27. Men. The Israelites. Ver. 10. Gr. "the man," Joseph; though the Gr. of the Rom. edit. would refer it to Moses. C.—Grabe corrects his copy agreeably to the Vulg. H.

CHAP. XLV.

The praises of Moses, of Aaron, and of Phinees.

MOSESES^a was beloved of God, and men: whose memory is in benediction.

2 He made him like the saints in glory, and magnified him in the fear of his enemies, and with his words he made prodigies to cease.

3 ^bHe glorified him in the sight of kings, and gave him commandments in the sight of his people, and showed him his glory.

4 ^cHe sanctified him in his faith and meekness, and chose him out of all flesh.

5 For he heard him, and his voice, and brought him into a cloud.

6 And he gave him commandments before his face, and a law of life and instruction, that he might teach Jacob his covenant, and Israel his judgments.

7 He exalted Aaron, his brother, and like to himself of the tribe of Levi:

8 He made an everlasting covenant with him, and gave him the priesthood of the nation, and made him blessed in glory.

9 And he girded him about with a glorious girdle, and clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him with majestic attire.

10 He put upon him a garment to the feet, and breeches, and an ephod, and he compassed him with many little bells of gold all round about,

11 "That as he went there might be a sound, and a noise made that might be heard in the temple, for a memorial to the children of his people.

12 He gave him a holy robe of gold, and blue, and purple, a woven work, of a wise man, endued with judgment and truth:

13 Of twisted scarlet, the work of an artist, with precious stones cut and set in gold, and graven by the work of a lapidary, for a memorial, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

14 And a crown of gold upon his mitre, wherein was engraved Holiness, an ornament of honour: a work of power, and delightful to the eyes for its beauty.

15 Before him there were none so beautiful, even from the beginning.

CHAP. XLV. VER. 1. Men. Pharaoh, Jethro, and the whole nation of the Hebrews, whom he governed as a father, being the mildest of men. Num. xii. 23. His life was a continued miracle, and he was honoured more than any prophet, (Num. vi.; Acts vii. C.) seeing God's works more clearly, but not his substance. Exod. xxxiii. W.

VER. 2. Saints, patriarchs or angels, as he saw God face to face.—Enemies. The Egyptians, Amalacites, and all who rebelled against God.—Cease. Removing the scourges which he had inflicted. His serpent devoured those of the magicians, who were confounded before him.

VER. 4. Meekness, giving him these necessary qualifications to rule a rebellious people. Ver. 1.

VER. 6. Face, familiarly.—Life, by observing which the Hebrews might live.

VER. 7. His. Gr. "holy, like to himself his brother of the," &c. H. Psal. cv. 15.—He was the interpreter of Moses, and honoured with the high priesthood.

VER. 9. Robe. Lit. "stole," (H.) which was a long robe, used in the East by both sexes.—Crowned. Gr. "confringed" him in his dignity. C.

VER. 10. Many. Gr. "spheres, (H. or pomegranates. Exod. xxviii. 23. C.) with many little bells," (H.) to admonish the people of his coming.

VER. 12. Man. Beseleel, who made the greatest part. C.—Gr. "of an embroiderer, with the rational of judgment, and the signs (manifestation. C.) of truth." H.

16 No stranger was ever clothed with them, but only his children alone, and his grandchildren for ever.

17 His sacrifices were consumed with fire every day.

18 ^dMoses filled his hands, and anointed him with holy oil.

19 This was made to him for an everlasting testament, and to his seed as the days of heaven, to execute the office of the priesthood, and to have praise, and to glorify his people in his name.

20 He chose him out of all men living, to offer sacrifice to God, incense, and a good savour, for a memorial to make reconciliation for his people:

21 And he gave him power in his commandments, in the covenants, of his judgments, that he should teach Jacob his testimonies, and give light to Israel in his law.

22 ^eAnd strangers stood up against him, and through envy, the men that were with Dathan and Abiron, compassed him about in the wilderness, and the congregation of Core, in their wrath.

23 The Lord God saw, and it pleased him not, and they were consumed in his wrathful indignation.

24 He wrought wonders upon them, and consumed them with a flame of fire.

25 And he added glory to Aaron, and gave him an inheritance, and divided unto him the first-fruits of the increase of the earth.

26 He prepared them bread in the first place unto fulness: for the sacrifices also of the Lord they shall eat, which he gave to him, and to his seed.

27 But he shall not inherit among the people in the land, and he hath no portion among the people: for he himself is his portion and inheritance.

28 ^fPhinees, the son of Eleazar, is the third in glory, by imitating him in the fear of the Lord:

29 And he stood up in the shameful fall of the people: in the goodness and readiness of his soul, he appeased God for Israel.

30 Therefore he made to him a covenant of peace, to be the prince of the sanctuary, and of his people, that the dignity of priesthood should be to him and to his seed for ever.

31 And a covenant to David, the king, the son of Jesse, of the tribe of Juda, an inheritance to him and to

VER. 13. Tribes. Gr. "sons." H.—Their names were engraven on twelve stones.

VER. 14. Holiness, or "holy to the Lord." Exod. xxviii. C.—Work. Gr. "works very rich." H.—This regards all his attire. The high priest only used it in the temple on grand festivals. C.

VER. 18. Filled. Consecrated. Lev. viii. 26.

VER. 19. Testament. It prefigured that of Christ, which lasts for ever. Heb. vii. C.—Execute. Gr. "serve him, both by executing the priestly office, and by blessing the people," &c. H.—This was one of the high priest's functions. Num. vi. 23.

VER. 21. Law. The most important causes were to be tried before the high priest, who, with his brethren, were the interpreters of the law. Matt. ii. 6.

VER. 24. Fire. Thus consuming two hundred and fifty men. Num. xvi. 30.

VER. 26. Eat. The skin of holocausts was alone given to the priests.

VER. 27. People. Having only 2000 cubits round their cities. Num. xxxv. The priests were thus interested to keep the people to their duty, as their own subsistence depended on the devotion and gifts of the latter. C.

VER. 31. That he. Or so he made a covenant with Aaron, that he, &c. C.—Gr. "and (Grabe puts according to) the covenant made to David . . . that the king's son successively should alone inherit, the inheritance of Aaron was for his posterity. May he impart wisdom to your heart," &c.—He made. Gr. "glory during their age." H.—The sacred writer pours forth this prayer for God's minishis seed, that he might give wisdom into our heart to judge his people in justice, that their good things might not be abolished, and he made their glory in their nation everlasting.

CHAP. XLVI.

The praise of Josue, of Caleb, and of Samuel.

VALIENT in war was Jesus, the son of Nave, who was successor of Moses among the prophets, who was great according to his name,

2 Very great for the saving the elect of God, to overthrow the enemies that rose up against them, that he might get the inheritance for Israel.

3 How great glory did he gain when he lifted up his hands, and stretched out swords against the cities?

4 Who before him hath so resisted? for the Lord himself brought the enemies.

5 Was not the sun stopped in his anger, and one day made as two?

6 He called upon the most high Sovereign, when the enemies assaulted him on every side, and the great and holy God heard him by hailstones of exceeding great force.

7 He made a violent assault against the nation of his enemies, and in the descent he destroyed the adversaries,

8 That the nations might know his power, that it is not easy to fight against God. And he followed the mighty one:

9 And in the days of Moses he did a work of mercy, he and Caleb, the son of Jephone, in standing against the enemy, and withholding the people from sins, and appeasing the wicked murmuring.

10 And they two being appointed, were delivered out of the danger, from among the number of six hundred thousand men on foot, to bring them into their inheritance, into the land that floweth with milk and honey.

11 And the Lord gave strength also to Caleb, and his strength continued even to his old age, so that he went up to the high places of the land, and his seed obtained it for an inheritance:

12 That all the children of Israel might see, that it is good to obey the holy God.

13 Then all the judges, every one by name, whose heart was not corrupted: who turned not away from the Lord,

^a Jos. x. 14.—^b Num. xiv. 6.—^c 1 Kings vii.—^d 1 Kings xlii.—^e Gen. xiv. 23.

ters, (C.) that their good things and glory may never end, as long as the Jewish dispensation should last. He is equally solicitous for the priesthood as for the sceptre of David. In both the families of Aaron and of David children succeeded to their father's dignity, and God had made a covenant for that purpose. H.

CHAP. XLVI. VER. 1. Jesus, the son of Nave. So Josue is named in the Greek Bibles. For Josue and Jesus signify the same thing, viz. a Saviour: (Ch.) and Nave is the Greek pronunciation of Nun (H.); or this is an old fault of transcribers. C.—Among. Gr. "in the prophecies." H.

VER. 2. Israel. He led the people into Chanaan, and divided it among them.

VER. 3. Hands. To pray, (Vat.) or fight, (Boss.) or to give a signal. Jos. viii. 26. A. Lap.—Stretched. Lit. threw (H.) darts, romphæas.

VER. 5. In. Gr. "by his hand," (H.) and order, so that the day-light continued twenty-four hours

VER. 7. Adversaries. The hail destroyed more than the sword. Jos. x. 11.

VER. 8. Power. Gr. "complete armour for his warfare was before the Lord, since he," &c. They found it was impossible to resist such weapons. H.

VER. 9. Mercy, and piety, (C.) endeavouring to prevent the murmurs of the people, which would draw upon them destruction, as the event showed. H.

VER. 11. Land. Hebron, when he was eighty-five years old. Jos. xiv. 6. H.

VER. 14. Place. A* the resurrection, which the Jews firmly believed. Eze. xlvii. 3.

14 That their memory might be blessed, and their bones spring up out of their place,

15 And their name continue for ever, the glory of the holy men remaining unto their children.

16 Samuel, the prophet of the Lord, the beloved of the Lord, his God, established a new government, and anointed princes over his people.

17 By the law of the Lord he judged the congregation, and the God of Jacob beheld, and by his fidelity he was proved a prophet.

18 And he was known to be faithful in his words, because he saw the God of light:

19 And called upon the name of the Lord Almighty, in fighting against the enemies who beset him on every side, when he offered a lamb without blemish.

20 And the Lord thundered from heaven, and with a great noise made his voice to be heard,

21 And crushed the princes of the Tyrians, and all the lords of the Philistines:

22 And before the time of the end of his life in the world, he protested before the Lord, and his anointed: money, or any thing else, even to a shoe, he had not taken of any man, and no man did accuse him.

23 And after this he slept, and he made known to the king, and showed him the end of his life, and he lifted up his voice from the earth in prophecy, to blot out the wickedness of the nation.

CHAP. XLVII.

The praise of Nathan, of David, and of Solomon: of his fall and punishment.

THEN Nathan, the prophet, arose in the days of David.

2 And as the fat taken away from the flesh, so was David chosen from among the children of Israel.

3 He played with lions as if with lambs; and with bears he did in like manner as with the lambs of the flock, in his youth.

4 Did not he kill the giant, and take away reproach from his people?

5 In lifting up his hand, with the stone in the sling, he beat down the boasting of Goliath:

6 For he called upon the Lord, the Almighty, and he gave strength in his right hand, to take away the mighty warrior, and to set up the horn of his nation.

^f 1 Kings xxxviii. 18.—^g 1 Kings xlii. 1.—^h 1 Kings xvii. 34.—ⁱ 1 Kings xvii. 49.

VER. 16. People. Though he disapproved of their resolution. 1 Kings viii. 6; Osee xiii. 11.

VER. 17. And the. Sixt. V., &c. read, "and he beheld the God." 1 Kings iii. 7. C.—Vulg. may signify also, "God beheld Jacob" (Gr.) with a favourable eye, and enabled Samuel to restore their fallen state, and to recover the ark. H.

VER. 18. Because. Gr. has not faithful, or what follows. C.—Yet Grabe's copy retains πιστος ορασις, "faithful in seeing" into futurity; so that his predictions were always verified, and he acquired the confidence of all. 1 Kings iii. 20.

VER. 19. Without. Gr. "fed with milk." 1 Kings vii. 6. The Philistines were discomfited, and continued peaceable during the rest of Samuel's government.

VER. 22. Shoe. So Abraham declared he would not receive the latchet of a shoe from the king of Sodom. Gen. xiv. 23.

VER. 23. Nation. Foretelling that Israel should be defeated. Some doubt whether the soul of Samuel appeared: but it seems clear from this passage, (1 Kings xxxviii. 18. C. Diss.) as he could not otherwise be praised for it. W.

CHAP. XLVII. VER. 1. Nathan. Many other prophets lived at the same time. But he was most conspicuous, and crowned Solomon. C.—Gr. "and after him Nathan arose to prophesy," (H.) and keep up the succession.

VER. 3. Played. Tearing them to pieces with the greatest ease. 1 Kings xvii. 34. C.

VER. 6. Nation. Who were no longer under the control of the Philistines. H.

7 *So in ten thousand did he glorify him, and praised him in the blessings of the Lord, in offering to him a crown of glory :

8 For he destroyed the enemies on every side, and extirpated the Philistines, the adversaries unto this day : he broke their horn for ever.

9 In all his works he gave thanks to the Holy One, and to the Most High, with words of glory.

10 With his whole heart he praised the Lord, and loved God that made him : and he gave him power against his enemies.

11 And he set singers before the altar, and by their voices he made sweet melody.

12 And to the festivals he added beauty, and set in order the solemn times, even to the end of his life, that they should praise the holy name of the Lord, and magnify the holiness of God in the morning.

13 *The Lord took away his sins, and exalted his horn for ever : and he gave him a covenant of the kingdom, and a throne of glory in Israel.

14 After him arose up a wise son, and for his sake he cast down all the power of the enemies.

15 *Solomon reigned in days of peace, and God brought all his enemies under him, that he might build a house in his name, and prepare a sanctuary for ever : O how wise wast thou in thy youth !

16 *And thou wast filled as a river with wisdom, and thy soul covered the earth.

17 And thou didst multiply riddles in parables : thy name went abroad to the islands far off, and thou wast beloved in thy peace.

18 The countries wondered at thee for thy canticles, and proverbs, and parables, and interpretations, 19 And at the name of the Lord God, whose surname is, God of Israel.

20 *Thou didst gather gold as copper, and didst multiply silver as lead,

21 And thou didst bow thyself to women : and by thy body thou wast brought under subjection.

22 Thou hast stained thy glory, and defiled thy seed, so as to bring wrath upon thy children, and to have thy folly kindled,

23 That thou shouldst make the kingdom to be divided, and out of Ephraim a rebellious kingdom to rule.

24 But God will not leave off his mercy, and he will not destroy, nor abolish his own works, neither will he cut up by the roots the offspring of his elect : and he will not utterly take away the seed of him that loveth the Lord.

25 Wherefore he gave a remnant to Jacob, and to David, of the same stock.

26 And Solomon had an end with his fathers.

27 And he left behind him of his seed, the folly of the nation,

28 Even Roboam, that had little wisdom, who turned away the people through his counsel :

29 *And Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who caused Israel to sin, and showed Ephraim the way of sin, and their sins were multiplied exceedingly.

30 They removed them far away from their land.

31 And they sought out all iniquities, till vengeance came upon them, and put an end to all their sins.

CHAP. XLVIII.

The praise of Elias, of Eliseus, of Ezechias, and of Isaias.

AND *Elias, the prophet, stood up, as a fire, and his word burnt like a torch.

2 He brought a famine upon them, and they that provoked him in their envy, were reduced to a small number, for they could not endure the commandments of the Lord.

3 *By the word of the Lord he shut up the heaven, and he brought down fire from heaven thrice.

4 Thus was Elias magnified in his wondrous works. And who can glory like to thee ?

5 *Who raisedst up a dead man from below, from the lot of death, by the word of the Lord God.

6 Who broughtest down kings to destruction, and brokest easily their power in pieces, and the glorious from their bed.

7 Who hearest judgment in Sina, and in Horeb the judgments of vengeance.

VER. 7. Thousand. This was sung in the cities, (1 Kings xviii. 7. C.) and excited the envy of Saul, who nevertheless could not prevent David's exaltation. H.—Did he, or the people, who praised the Lord and David. C.

VER. 8. Horn. Power and glory. H.—For ever, is not in Gr.

VER. 9. Glory. Contained in the Psalms. H.—He was always very grateful. C.

VER. 12. Set. Lit. "adorned the times."—Of his. Gr. "while they praised his holy name, and sounded forth holiness early." H.

VER. 13. Sins. Remitting the punishment, (2 Kings xiii. 13. C.) and the guilt also, (H.) in consequence of his repentance.—Covenant. Engaging that his posterity should enjoy the throne (2 Kings vii. 12. C.) if they continued faithful. Psal. cxxxi. 11; Supra, xlv. 31.

VER. 14. Enemies. The piety of David was thus rewarded. H.—It must have been the greatest satisfaction to him to see so wise a son on the throne, and all in perfect peace. 3 Kings i. 48, and iv. 24. C.

VER. 15. Youth. When others are less informed. This serves to place the apostasy of Solomon in a more striking light. C.

VER. 16. Earth. Or explored all the secrets of nature, reterxit. 3 Kings iv. 29.

VER. 21. Thyself. Lit. "thy thighs." Gr. "sides." Syr. "strength."—Subjection. Lit. "thou hadst power over thy body," (H.) using it as if it belonged not to God.

VER. 24. Lord. David's piety caused the sceptre to be still preserved in his family, (H.) though Solomon's conduct deserved to lose it. C.

VER. 25. Of the. Gr. "a root from him," to govern a part, while Jeroboam reigned over the other tribes of Jacob. H.—God fulfilled his promises to Jacob and David. M

VER. 26. Fathers. Some would hence infer that Solomon died penitent. H.

VER. 27. Folly. A most imprudent prince, despised by the whole nation. He answered the people roughly, and lost the ten tribes; but idolatry was his greatest folly, and from this he was never reclaimed. 3 Kings xiv. 22. C.

VER. 29. Jeroboam. Though not of his seed, as we only find Roboam mentioned of all the thousand wives of Solomon.—Sin. This is the usual title given to this introducer of idolatry. He engaged the ten tribes in the worship of the golden calves, which ruined the state and religion of Israel.

VER. 31. Vengeance, (defensio), and put, &c. is not in Gr. Thelathphalasar and Salmanasar carried the tribes away into captivity. 1 Par. v. 26, and 4 Kings xvii. 6. C.

CHAP. XLVIII. VER. 1. Torch. He was animated with a burning zeal, (M.) like the Baptist, admonishing kings, &c. John v. 35; Luke i. 17. C.

VER. 2. And they. Gr. "and by his zeal he diminished them. By," &c. H.—He slew the priests of Baal, and many perished by famine. 4 Kings xviii. Grot. C.

VER. 3. Heaven. That it should not rain for three years and a half. 3 Kings xvii. 1.—Thrice. First upon his sacrifice, and twice to destroy fifty soldiers. 3 Kings xviii. 38, and 4 Kings i. 10. C. W.

VER. 6. Destruction. The prophets are said to perform what they foretold; to indicate the certainty of the event. Elias denounced death to Achab, Jezabel, Ochozias, and the two Jorams. 4 Kings ix. 12, and 2 Par. xxi. 12, &c. C.—Brokest. Gr. "those in honour from," &c., alluding to (H.) Ochozias and Joram. 4 Kings i. 16, and 1 Par. xxi. 15. C.

VER. 7. Judgment. Gr. "the reprimand of the Lord," for betraying fear (3 Kings xix. 3, 9, 12. H.) or the reprimand regarded Israel. C.

8 Who anointest kings to penance, and makest prophets successors after thee.

9 "Who wast taken up in a whirlwind of fire, in a chariot of fiery horses.

10 Who art registered in the judgments of times to appease the wrath of the Lord,^b to reconcile the heart of the father to the son, and to restore the tribes of Jacob.

11 Blessed are they that saw thee, and were honoured with thy friendship.

12 For we live only in our life, but after death our name shall not be such.

13 "Elias was indeed covered with the whirlwind, and his spirit was filled up in Eliseus: in his days he feared not the prince, and no man was more powerful than he.

14 No word could overcome him, "and after death his body prophesied.

15 In his life he did great wonders, and in death he wrought miracles.

16 For all this the people repented not, neither did they depart from their sins, till they were cast out of their land, and were scattered through all the earth.

17 And there was left but a small people, and a prince in the house of David.

18 Some of these did that which pleased God: but others committed many sins.

19 Ezechias fortified his city, and brought in water into the midst thereof, and he digged a rock with iron, and made a well for water.

20 "In his days Sennacherib came up, and sent Rab-saces, and lifted up his hand against them, and he stretched out his hand against Sion, and became proud through his power.

21 Then their hearts and hands trembled: and they were in pain as women in travail.

22 And they called upon the Lord, who is merciful, and spreading their hands, they lifted them up to heaven: and the holy Lord God quickly heard their voice.

23 He was not mindful of their sins, neither did he deliver them up to their enemies, but he purified them by the hand of Isaias, the holy prophet.

24 "He overthrew the army of the Assyrians, and the angel of the Lord destroyed them.

25 For Ezechias did that which pleased God, and walked valiantly in the way of David, his father, which Isaias, the great prophet, and faithful in the sight of God, had commanded him.

26 "In his days the sun went backward, and he lengthened the king's life.

27 With a great spirit he saw the things that are to come to pass at last, and comforted the mourners in Sion.

28 He showed what should come to pass for ever, and secret things before they came.

CHAP. XLIX.

The praise of Josias, of Jeremias, Ezechiel, and the twelve prophets. Also of Zorobabel, Jesus, the son of Josedeck, Nehemias, Henoch, Joseph, Seth, Sem, and Adam.

THE "memory of Josias is like the composition of a sweet smell made by the art of a perfumer:

2 His remembrance shall be sweet as honey in every mouth, and as music at a banquet of wine.

3 He was directed by God unto the repentance of the nation, and he took away the abominations of wickedness.

4 And he directed his heart towards the Lord, and in the days of sinners he strengthened godliness.

5 Except David, and Ezechias, and Josias; all committed sin.

6 For the kings of Juda forsook the law of the Most High, and despised the fear of God.

7 So they gave their kingdom to others, and their glory to a strange nation.

8 "They burnt the chosen city of holiness, and made the streets thereof desolate, according to the prediction of Jeremias.

9 For they treated him evil, who was consecrated a prophet from his mother's womb, to overthrow, and pluck up, and destroy, and to build again, and renew.

10 "It was Ezechiel who saw the glorious vision, which was shown him upon the chariot of cherubims.

11 For he made mention of the enemies under the figure of rain, and of doing good to them that showed right ways.

12 And may the bones of the twelve prophets spring up out of their place: for they strengthened Jacob, and redeemed themselves by strong faith.

VER. 8. Penance. Gr. "reward," (H.) or punish the guilty. Hazael and Jehu were anointed by Eliseus, though by order of Elias.

VER. 10. Jacob. Prot. reject the authority of this book, partly (H.) on account of this (W.) ancient tradition. Henoch and Elias will appear in the days of antichrist, to convert many. The Jews will then agree with the patriarchs, and embrace the religion of Christ. C.—Elias came in the person of the Baptist, at the first coming of our Saviour, but he will come in person before his second appearance. H.—The application which Christ makes of the prediction of Malachy (iv. 6) to the Baptist does not exclude this more distant accomplishment.

VER. 11. Friendship. Like Eliseus, or the disciples of both. C.—Gr. "who slept in love, for we also shall live indeed; (13) Elias," &c. H.

VER. 13. Eliseus. Who received his double spirit, with his garment. 4 Kings ii. 15.—Prince. Joram. 4 Kings iii. 14, and vi. 32.

VER. 14. Overcome. Or "escape." Gr. Syr. He knew what Giezi and the Syrians were doing, at a distance. 4 Kings v. 26, and vi. 12.—Prophesied. Or raised the dead to life. 4 Kings xiii. 21. C.—On his death-bed (ver. 15) he also foretold the victory of Joas. 4 Kings xiii. 14, Vatab., &c.

VER. 23. He was. Gr. "and he purified (H. or redeemed C.) them by the hand (ministry) of Isaias. (24) He," &c. H.—Prayer prevailed when troops were insufficient. 4 Kings xix. 24.

VER. 25. Sight. Gr. "vision." All his predictions were verified. C.

VER. 26. Life Fifteen years. Isa. xxxviii., and 4 Kings xl. 11. H.

VER. 27. At last. After the captivity, (Isa. ii. 2. C.) or in the days of the Messias. M.

CHAP. XLIX. VER. 1. Perfumer. The Scripture reproaches this king alone with no fault. C.

VER. 3. Directed. Gr. "prosperous in converting the people." 4 Kings xxii., and 2 Par. xxxiv. H.—He began when he was only eight years old: but set to work more effectually ten years afterwards. The prophets complain of the disorders which prevailed before that period. C.

VER. 4. Sinners. Or "sins," when iniquity was become fashionable. He consulted no false policy, (H.) but boldly exerted himself in God's service, and even invited the Israelites out of his dominions to come and celebrate the passover. 2 Par. xxxiv. 6. C.

VER. 5. Sin. The two former effaced their sins by repentance, and never tolerated idolatry, which even Josaphat and Asa did, (3 Kings xxii. 43, &c. C.) not destroying the high places. Many others yielded not to idol worship. W.

VER. 7. They gave. Achaz called in to his assistance the king of Assyria, who afterwards claimed the kingdom as tributary to him. 4 Kings xviii. 7, 14.

VER. 9. Renew. To foretell the destruction and establishment of kingdoms. Jer. i. 5, 10.

VER. 11. Rain. Denoting great misery. Ezec. xiii. 11, and xxxviii. 22. C.

VER. 12. Place. Chap. xlv. 15. The Pharisees adorned the tombs of the prophets. Matt. xxiii. 29.

13 *How shall we magnify Zorobabel? for he was as a signet on the right hand:

14 *In like manner Jesus, the son of Josedec? who in their days built the house, and set up a holy temple to the Lord, prepared for everlasting glory.

15 And let Nehemias be a long time remembered, who raised up for us our walls that were cast down, and set up the gates and the bars, who rebuilt our houses.

16 No man was born upon earth like Henoch: for he also was taken up from the earth.

17 *Nor as Joseph, who was a man born prince of his brethren, the support of his family, the ruler of his brethren, the stay of the people:

18 And his bones were visited, and after death they prophesied.

19 *Seth, and Sem, obtained glory among men: and above every soul Adam in the beginning.

CHAP. L.

The praises of Simon, the high priest. The conclusion.

SIMON, *the high priest, the son of Onias, who in his life propped up the house, and in his days fortified the temple.

2 By him also the height of the temple was founded, the double building, and the high walls of the temple.

3 In his days the wells of water flowed out, and they were filled as the sea above measure.

4 He took care of his nation, and delivered it from destruction.

5 He prevailed to enlarge the city, and obtained glory in his conversation with the people: and enlarged the entrance of the house, and the court.

6 He shone in his days as the morning star in the midst of a cloud, and as the moon at the full.

7 And as the sun when it shineth, so did he shine in the temple of God.

8 And as the rainbow giving light in the bright clouds, and as the flower of roses in the days of the spring, and as the lilies that are on the brink of the water, and as the sweet smelling frankincense in the time of summer.

VER. 14. Josedec. He was a noble figure of Christ, and helped to build the temple. Agg. i. 2, and ii. 3; Zac. iii. 1, and vi. 11.

VER. 16. Hench. Before the deluge. M.—He stood up for the Lord, amid the most corrupt people, and was translated. Chap. xlv. 16.

VER. 17. Joseph. He has not been named, but designated. Chap. xlv. ult. C.

VER. 18. They prophesied. That is, by their being carried out of Egypt, they verified the prophetic prediction of Joseph. Gen. i. Ch. Carriers.—This sentence is omitted in Gr. H. See chap. xlviii. 14.—Joseph had intimated that the Israelites should leave Egypt. W.

VER. 19. Men. The former was the father of the faithful, before the deluge; the latter after. C.—Beginning. Gr. “in the creation” was appointed to rule. H.—He alone among men was innocent, coming from the hands of God, and he might glory that he had no other father. C.—Eve enjoyed the like privileges. H.

CHAP. L. VER. 1. Simon I. was “styled the just, on account of his piety towards God, and his good-will to his countrymen.” Jos. xii. 2. Many apply what follows to him. Eus. Salien. M. &c.—But Simon II. is more probably meant, who opposed the entrance of Philopator into the sanctuary, after he had offered sacrifice for him, in the pompous manner here described. Boss. 3 Mac. C.—Temple. Which began to want repairs. M.—Simon II. reigned twenty years. C. Jos. xii. 4. H.—The first lived in the time of Ptolemy I. of Egypt, when this book was written; and died before it was translated, under Ptolemy III., about three hundred years before Christ. W.

VER. 2. Walls. Gr. αναλημμα, “the repairs (or elevated building, Mello. 2 Par. xxii. 5) round the temple,” including the court of the Gentiles, which had not been finished. Ezech. xl. 5.

VER. 3. Out Of the reservoirs. But he repaired them. H.

VER. 4. Destruction. When it was in the most imminent danger from Philopator. 3 Mac. Boss. C.

9 As a bright fire, and frankincense burning in the fire.

10 As a massy vessel of gold, adorned with every precious stone.

11 As an olive-tree budding forth, and a cypress-tree rearing itself on high, when he put on the robe of glory, and was clothed with the perfection of power.

12 When he went up to the holy altar, he honoured the vesture of holiness.

13 And when he took the portions out of the hands of the priests, he himself stood by the altar. And about him was the ring of his brethren: and as the cedar planted in Mount Libanus,

14 And as branches of palm-trees, they stood round about him, and all the sons of Aaron, in their glory.

15 And the oblation of the Lord was in their hands, before all the congregation of Israel: and finishing his service, on the altar, to honour the offering of the most high King, 16 He stretched forth his hand to make a libation, and offered of the blood of the grape.

17 He poured out at the foot of the altar a divine odour to the most high Prince.

18 Then the sons of Aaron shouted, they sounded with beaten trumpets, and made a great noise, to be heard for a remembrance before God.

19 Then all the people together made haste, and fell down to the earth upon their faces, to adore the Lord, their God, and to pray to the Almighty God, the Most High.

20 And the singers lifted up their voices, and in the great house the sound of sweet melody was increased.

21 And the people in prayer besought the Lord, the Most High, until the worship of the Lord was perfected, and they had finished their office.

22 Then coming down, he lifted up his hands over all the congregation of the children of Israel, to give glory to God with his lips, and to glory in his name:

23 And he repeated his prayer, willing to show the power of God.

24 And now pray ye to the God of all, who hath done

H.—Leaving the most holy place, he was surrounded by crowds of sacred ministers, (ver. 14,) or rather, on the day of expiation, he came into the court of the people, to purify them. C.

VER. 7. So did. Gr. “on the temple of the Most High,” with dazzling effulgence. Jos. Bel. vi. 6.

VER. 11. Forth. Gr. adds, “fruits.”—Rearing. Gr. “elevated to the clouds.” H.—Robe. Stole, or violet tunic. C.—Power. That is, with all his vestments, denoting his dignity and authority, (Ch.) and extremely rich, as virtus often implies. Chap. xlv. 3. C.

VER. 21. Office. λειτουργιαν αυτου, “his service.” H.—The people prayed for king Ptolemy, to whom they were subject; though the high priest possessed almost sovereign power. The Egyptian monarch was present, (C.) and at the end of the sacrifice expressed his resolution to go into the inmost recesses of the temple, from which the people endeavoured to dissuade him. Finding their efforts to be in vain, “they all (addressing themselves to God) said with one accord.” 3 Mac. ii.

VER. 23. Prayer. Gr. “adoration, that they might receive a blessing from the Most High.” H.—Power. In keeping Philopator out of the temple. God granted his request, (C. λιτανειας,) “and scourged him who was so insolent and bold . . . throwing him like a reed, unable to move and speechless, on the pavement.” 2 Mac. ii. 26.

great things in all the earth, who hath increased our days from our mother's womb, and hath done with us according to his mercy :

25 May he grant us joyfulness of heart, and that there be peace in our days in Israel for ever :

26 That Israel may believe that the mercy of God is with us, to deliver us in his days.

27 There are two nations which my soul abhorreth : and the third is no nation, which I hate :

28 They that sit on Mount Seir, and the Philistines, and the foolish people that dwell in Sichem.

29 Jesus, the son of Sirach, of Jerusalem, hath written in this book the doctrine of wisdom and instruction, who renewed wisdom from his heart.

30 Blessed is he that is conversant in these good things : and he that layeth them up in his heart, shall be wise always.

31 For if he do them, he shall be strong to do all things : because the light of God guideth his steps.

CHAP. LI.

A prayer of praise and thanksgiving.

A PRAYER of Jesus, the son of Sirach. I will give glory to thee, O Lord, O King, and I will praise thee, O God, my Saviour.

2 I will give glory to thy name : for thou hast been a helper and protector to me.

3 And hast preserved my body from destruction, from the snare of an unjust tongue, and from the lips of them that forge lies, and in the sight of them that stood by, thou hast been my helper.

4 And thou hast delivered me, according to the multitude of the mercy of thy name, from them that did roar, prepared to devour.

5 Out of the hands of them that sought my life, and from the gates of afflictions, which compassed me about :

6 From the oppression of the flame which surrounded me, and in the midst of the fire I was not burnt.

7 From the depth of the belly of hell, and from an unclean tongue, and from lying words, from an unjust king, and from a slanderous tongue :

8 My soul shall praise the Lord even to death :

9 And my life was drawing near to hell beneath.

VER. 27. Abhorreth. Viz. with a holy indignation, as enemies of God and persecutors of his people. Such were then the Edomites, who abode in Mount Seir, the Philistines, and the Samaritans, who dwelt in Sichem, and had their schismatical temple in that neighbourhood. Ch.—This was the source of continual dissensions. Joseph. xi. 8, and xii. 2; John iv. 20. The Jews and Samaritans are still at variance.—Which, &c., is omitted in Gr. These three nations had evinced the greatest hatred towards the Jews, and thus deserved to be accounted objects of horror, though if the author harboured any ill-will, his conduct is not praised, (C.) but only recorded. H.

VER. 28. Seir. Gen. xiv. 6. All the Greek copies read corruptly "of Samaria."—Foolish. Thus Christ said, you adore what you know not. John iv. 22. C. See 4 Kings xvii. 29. W.

VER. 29. Jesus. He declares his name, and concludes with wishing peace to the observers of these maxims. Grotius thinks that this was inserted by the grandson, (C.) who translated the work into Greek. H.—But there is no reason for this supposition. Solomon puts his name at the beginning and at the end of Ecclesiastes, and he frequently commends his own instructions, as this author does. Chap. xxxiii. 17, and xxxix. 16, and li. 19. C.

CHAP. LI. VER. 1. Sirach. This prayer may be in imitation of the Book of Wisdom. H.—Grotius assigns it to the grandson, without reason ; as the author continues to speak of his travels, &c. He seems to have lived under Onias III., and under Seleucus and Antiochus Epiphanes, of Syria, to whom he was probably accused, and hence took occasion to retire into Egypt, where Ptolemy Epiphanes was king. C.—Others think (H.) that he was accused before Ptolemy Lagus, when 10 They compassed me on every side, and there was no one that would help me. I looked for the succour of men, and there was none.

11 I remembered thy mercy, O Lord, and thy works which are from the beginning of the world.

12 How thou deliverest them that wait for thee, O Lord, and savest them out of the hands of the nations.

13 Thou hast exalted my dwelling-place upon the earth, and I have prayed for death to pass away.

14 I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord, that he would not leave me in the day of my trouble, and in the time of the proud, without help.

15 I will praise thy name continually, and will praise it with thanksgiving, and my prayer was heard.

16 And thou hast saved me from destruction, and hast delivered me from the evil time.

17 Therefore, I will give thanks, and praise thee, and bless the name of the Lord.

18 When I was yet young, before I wandered about, I sought for wisdom openly in my prayer.

19 I prayed for her before the temple, and unto the very end I will seek after her, and she flourished as a grape soon ripe.

20 My heart delighted in her, my foot walked in the right way, from my youth up I sought after her.

21 I bowed down my ear a little, and received her.

22 I found much wisdom in myself, and I profited much therein.

23 To him that giveth me wisdom, will I give glory.

24 For I have determined to follow her : I have had a zeal for good, and shall not be confounded.

25 My soul hath wrestled for her, and in doing it I have been confirmed.

26 I stretched forth my hands on high, and I bewailed my ignorance of her.

27 I directed my soul to her, and in knowledge I found her.

28 I possessed my heart with her from the beginning : therefore I shall not be forsaken.

29 My entrails were troubled in seeking her : therefore shall I possess a good possession.

30 The Lord hath given me a tongue for my reward : and with it I will praise him.

VER. 25. Wrestled. Against pleasure, idleness, &c. This shows how arduous a task it is to attain wisdom. C.—Confirmed. Greek, "in earnest."

VER. 27. Knowledge. Gr. Alex. "time of harvest."

VER. 28. Heart. Or understanding, as the Heb. place this in the heart. 3 Kings iii. 9.

VER. 31. Gather. Gr. "dwell in the," &c. H.—He addresses those who are walking in the broad road.

31 Draw near to me, ye unlearned, and gather yourselves together into the house of discipline.

32 Why are ye slow? and what do you say of these things? your souls are exceedingly thirsty.

33 I have opened my mouth, and have spoken: buy her for yourselves without silver,

34 And submit your neck to the yoke, and let your soul receive discipline: for she is near at hand to be found.

VER. 33. Silver. Only good-will is necessary, which all may have. Isa. lv. 1; Rom. x. 6; Wisd. vi. 13.

VER. 36. Gold. The wise man has more opportunities of enriching himself than others; but he despises unnecessary wealth. C.—We must labour for wisdom more than for riches, and we shall be rewarded hereafter. W.

35 Behold with your eyes how I have laboured a little, and have found much rest to myself.

36 Receive ye discipline as a great sum of money, and possess abundance of gold by her.

37 Let your soul rejoice in his mercy, and you shall not be confounded in his praise.

38 Work your work before the time, and he will give you your reward in his time.

VER. 38. The time. It is never too soon to be wise. In doing good let us not fail, (Gal. vi. 9,) in order to obtain that food which remains for ever. Isa. vi. 7. Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is all man. Eccles. xii. 13. C.—This is the sum of the sapiential works, and of all the Scriptures: To depart from evil is understanding. Job xxviii. 28. H.

ON THE PROPHETS.

We come now to another division of the Bible, specified by our Saviour: All things must needs be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me, Luke xxiv. 44. He more frequently comprises all the Scriptures under the titles of Moses, or the Law and the Prophets (ib. ver. 27); as, in effect, all the sacred writings refer ultimately to him, who is the end of the law (Rom. x. 4); and the Jews comprise under the name of the first prophets, the histories of Josue, &c. H.—God has kept up a succession of prophets from the beginning, who either by word of mouth, or by writing, established the true religion. Their predictions are the most convincing proof of its Divine origin. Isa. xli. 23. They contain many things clear, and others obscure: having, for the most part, a literal, and a mystical sense. C.—Yet some relate solely to Christ, while others must not be applied to him. Bossuet.—The Fathers, in imitation of the ancient Jews, and of the apostles, discover frequently a spiritual sense, concealed under the letter, as Christ himself declared that Jonas, in the whale's belly, prefigured his burial and resurrection on the third day. See Matt. xii. 39; Mark ix. 11; Gal. iv. 24. When the figurative sense is thus authorized, it may serve to prove articles of faith; and such arguments must be more cogent in disputes with the Jews than what can be drawn from their authors. They must confess that the New Testament contains a true history, or they cannot require that we should pay greater deference to the Old. Tertullian (Præc.) well observes, that heretics have no right to the Scriptures: But if they will quote them, they must receive them all, and adopt the sense given to them by the Church. C.—We have the writings of the four great, and the twelve less prophets. In these many things are hard to be understood, which must not be interpreted by the private spirit. 2 Pet. i.—The Sept. varies much from the original in Isaias. C.—S. Jerom has frequently given a double version in his learned comments on the prophets. as he would not peremptorily decide which exhibited the sense of God's word more accurately. H.

PROPHECY OF ISAIAS.

This inspired writer is called, by the Holy Ghost, (Ecclesiasticus xlviii. 25,) the great prophet; from the greatness of his prophetic spirit, by which he hath foretold, so long before, and in so clear a manner, the coming of Christ, the mysteries of our redemption, the calling of the Gentiles, and the glorious establishment and perpetual flourishing of the Church of Christ: insomuch that he may seem to have been rather an evangelist than a prophet. His very name is not without mystery; for Isaias in Hebrew signifies the salvation of the Lord, or, Jesus is the Lord. He was, according to the tradition of the Hebrews, of the blood royal of the kings of Juda; and, after a most holy life, ended his days by a glorious martyrdom; being saved in two, at the command of his wicked son-in-law, king Manasses, for re-proving his evil ways. Ch.—He began to prophesy ten years before the foundation of Rome, and the ruin of Ninive. His style is suitable to his high birth. He may be called the prophet of the mercies of the Lord. Under the figure of the return from captivity, he foretells the redemption of mankind (C.) with such perspicuity, that he might seem to be an evangelist. S. Jer.

4 Woe to the sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a wicked seed, ungracious children: they have forsaken the Lord, they have blasphemed the Holy One of Israel, they are gone away backwards.

there is no soundness therein: wounds and bruises, and swelling sores: they are not bound up, nor dressed, nor fomented with oil.

7 ^aYour land is desolate, your cities are burnt with fire: your country strangers devour before your face, and it shall be desolate as when wasted by enemies.

8 And the daughter of Sion shall be left as a covert in a vineyard, and as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, and as a city that is laid waste.

9 ^bExcept the Lord of hosts had left us seed, ^cwe had been as Sodom, and we should have been like to Gomorrha.

10 Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom, give ear to the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrha.

11 ^dTo what purpose do you offer me the multitude of your victims, saith the Lord? I am full, I desire not holocausts of rams, and fat of fatlings, and blood of calves, and lambs, and buck-goats.

12 When you came to appear before me, who required these things at your hands, that you should walk in my courts?

13 Offer sacrifice no more in vain: incense is an abomination to me. The new moons, and the sabbaths, and other festivals, I will not abide, your assemblies are wicked.

14 My soul hateth your new moons, and your solemnities: they are become troublesome to me, I am weary of bearing them.

15 And when you stretch forth your hands, I will turn away my eyes from you: and when you multiply prayer, I will not hear: ^efor your hands are full of blood.

16 ^fWash yourselves, be clean, take away the evil of your devices from my eyes: cease to do perversely,

17 Learn to do well: seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge for the fatherless, defend the widow.

18 And then come, and accuse me, saith the Lord: if your sins be as scarlet, they shall be made as white as snow: and if they be red as crimson, they shall be white as wool.

19 If you be willing, and will hearken to me, you shall eat the good things of the land.

20 But if you will not, and will provoke me to wrath: the sword shall devour you, because the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

21 How is the faithful city, that was full of judgment, become a harlot? justice dwelt in it, but now murderers.

All nations shall flow to the Church of Christ. The Jews shall be rejected for their sins. Idolatry shall be destroyed.

THE word that Isaias, the son of Amos, saw, concerning Juda and Jerusalem.

2 ^bAnd in the last days the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be prepared on the top of mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it.

3 And many people shall go, and say: Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall come forth from Sion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

4 And he shall judge the Gentiles, and rebuke many people: and they shall turn their swords into plough shares, and their spears into sickles: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they be exercised any more to war.

VER. 25. Tin. I will reform abuses in the reign of Ezechias, but much more by establishing the Church of Christ, which shall be the faithful city. C.

VER. 29. Idols. Prot. "oaks, which ye have desired, and ye shall be confounded for the gardens," &c. H.

VER. 31. It. The efforts of Achan and Ezechias against the enemy proved in vain. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Jerusalem. Many particular prophecies are blended with the general one, which regards Christ. C.

VER. 2. Days. The whole time of the new law, from the coming of Christ till the end of the world, is called in the Scripture the last days: because no other age or time shall come after it, but only eternity. Ch.—It is therefore styled the last hour. 1 John ii. W.—Mountains. This shows the perpetual visibility of the Church of Christ: for a mountain upon the top of mountains cannot be hid. Ch.—The Jews can never show the fulfilment of this prophecy in any material temple. Micheas (iv. 1) copies this text.

VER. 4. War. Ezechias enjoyed peace after the defeat of Sennacherib, as the whole world did at the birth of Christ. C.

5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord.

6 For thou hast cast off thy people, the house of Jacob : because they are filled as in times past, and have had soothsayers as the Philistines, and have adhered to strange children.

7 Their land is filled with silver and gold : and there is no end of their treasures.

8 And their land is filled with horses : and their chariots are innumerable. Their land also is full of idols : they have adored the work of their own hands, which their own fingers have made.

9 And man hath bowed himself down, and man hath been debased : therefore, forgive them not.

10 Enter thou into the rock, and hide thee in the pit from the face of the fear of the Lord, and from the glory of his majesty.

11 The lofty eyes of man are humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be made to stoop : and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

12 Because the day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and high-minded, and upon every one that is arrogant, and he shall be humbled

13 And upon all the tall and lofty cedars ^f Libanus, and upon all the oaks of Basan.

14 And upon all the high mountains. and upon all the elevated hills.

15 And upon every high tower, and every fenced wall.

16 And upon all the ships of Tharsis, and upon all that is fair to behold.

17 And the loftiness of men shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be humbled, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

18 And idols shall be utterly destroyed.

19 ^a And they shall go into the holes of rocks, and into the caves of the earth, from the face of the fear of the Lord, and from the glory of his majesty, when he shall rise up to strike the earth.

20 In that day a man shall cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which he had made for himself to adore, moles and bats.

21 And he shall go into the clefts of rocks, and into the holes of stones, from the face of the fear of the Lord, and from the glory of his majesty, when he shall rise up to strike the earth.

22 Cease ye, therefore, from the man, whose breath is in his nostrils, for he is reputed high.

CHAP. III.

*The confusion and other evils that shall come upon the Jews for their sins
The pride of their women shall be punished.*

FOR behold the Sovereign, the Lord of hosts, shall take away from Jerusalem, and from Juda, the valiant and the strong, the whole strength of bread, and the whole strength of water.

2 The strong man, and the man of war, the judge, and the prophet, and the cunning man, and the ancient.

3 The captain over fifty, and the honourable in countenance, and the counsellor, and the architect, and the skilful in eloquent speech.

4 ^b And I will give children to their princes, and the effeminate shall rule over them.

5 And the people shall rush one upon another, and every man against his neighbour : the child shall make a tumult against the ancient, and the base against the honourable.

6 For a man shall take hold of his brother, one of the house of his father, saying : Thou hast a garment, be thou our ruler, and let this ruin be under thy hand.

7 In that day he shall answer, saying : I am no healer, and in my house there is no bread, nor clothing : make me not ruler of the people.

8 For Jerusalem is ruined, and Juda is fallen : because their tongue, and their devices, are against the Lord, to provoke the eyes of his majesty.

9 The show of their countenance hath answered them : and they have proclaimed abroad their sin as Sodom, and they have not hid it : woe to their soul, for evils are rendered to them.

VER. 9. Forgive. Sept. "I will not dismiss them." Heb. "and thou hast not pardoned them."

VER. 10. Rock. Screen thyself if thou canst. He alludes to the kingdom of Israel, which was ruined by idolatry. Ver. 18, 20.

VER. 13. Basan. Israel ; or Syria and the Ammonites, (C.) whom Nabuchodonosor subdued, five years after he had taken Jerusalem, (Joseph. x. 11,) as the Idumeans, (ver. 14,) Philistines, and Egyptians, (ver. 15,) and Tyrians, (ver. 16,) who felt also the indignation of the Lord. Jer. xxv. 15.

VER. 18. Destroyed. This was verified by the establishment of Christianity. And by this and other texts of the like nature, the wild system of some modern sectaries is abundantly confuted, who charge the whole Christian Church with worshipping idols, for many ages. Ch.

VER. 20. Bats. The Egyptians adored all sorts of animals.—The mole was much esteemed by magicians, who promised any the art of divination and success who should eat the heart of one still warm. Pliny, xxx. 3. The Israelites were always ready to embrace such superstitious practices. C.

VER. 22. High. Adhere to Jesus Christ. Orig. M.—Sept. omit this sentence, and S. Jer. thinks they did it perhaps for fear of shocking their brethren. Hence they," &c. H. Wisd. ii. 12. Many of the Fathers quote it thus. But our version agrees very well with the original, as Isaias joins consoling predictions with those which are of a distressing nature. C.—Yet the Sept. seem to have thrown light on the Heb. by supplying an omission from the 14 The Lord will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and its princes: for you have devoured the vineyard, and the spoil of the poor is in your house.

15 Why do you consume my people, and grind the faces of the poor, saith the Lord, the God of hosts?

16 And the Lord said: Because the daughters of Sion are haughty, and have walked with stretched-out necks, and wanton glances of their eyes, and made a noise as they walked with their feet, and moved in a set pace:

17 The Lord will make bald the crown of the head of the daughters of Sion, and the Lord will discover their hair.

3 And it shall come to pass, that every one that shall be left in Sion, and that shall remain in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, every one that is written in life in Jerusalem.

4 If the Lord shall wash away the filth of the daughters of Sion, and shall wash away the blood of Jerusalem out of the midst thereof, by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning.

5 And the Lord will create upon every place of Mount Sion, and where he is called upon, a cloud by day, and a smoke, and the brightness of a flaming fire in the night: for over all the glory shall be a protection.

6 And there shall be a tabernacle for a shade in the day-time from the heat, and for a security and covert from the whirlwind, and from rain.

CHAP. V.

The reprobation of the Jews is foreshown under the parable of a vineyard. A woe is pronounced against sinners: the army God shall send against them.

I WILL sing to my beloved the canticle of my cousin concerning his vineyard. My beloved had a vineyard on a hill in a fruitful place.

2 And he fenced it in, and picked the stones out of it, and planted it with the choicest vines, and built a tower in the midst thereof, and set up a wine-press therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

3 And now, O ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and ye men of Juda, judge between me and my vineyard.

4 What is there that I ought to do more to my vineyard, that I have not done to it? was it that I looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it hath brought forth wild grapes?

5 And now I will show you what I will do to my vineyard. I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be wasted: I will break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down.

6 And I will make it desolate: it shall not be pruned, and it shall not be digged: but briars and thorns shall come up: and I will command the clouds to rain no rain upon it.

7 For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel: and the man of Juda, his pleasant plant: and I looked that he should do judgment, and behold iniquity: and do justice, and behold a cry.

8 Woe to you that join house to house, and lay field to field, even to the end of the place: shall you alone dwell in the midst of the earth?

9 These things are in my ears, saith the Lord of hosts: unless many great and fair houses shall become desolate, without an inhabitant.

10 For ten acres of vineyard shall yield one little measure, and thirty bushels of seed shall yield three bushels.

11 Woe to you that rise up early in the morning to follow drunkenness, and to drink till the evening, to be inflamed with wine.

12 The harp, and the lyre, and the timbrel, and the pipe, and wine, are in your feasts: and the work of the Lord you regard not, nor do you consider the works of his hands.^a 13 Therefore is my people led away captive, because they had not knowledge, and their nobles have perished with famine, and their multitude were dried up with thirst.

14 Therefore hath hell enlarged her soul, and opened her mouth without any bounds, and their strong ones, and their people, and their high and glorious ones shall go down into it.

15 And man shall be brought down, and man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be brought low.

16 And the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and the holy God shall be sanctified in justice.

17 And the lambs shall feed according to their order, and strangers shall eat the deserts turned into fruitfulness.

18 Woe to you that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as the rope of a cart.

19 That say: Let him make haste, and let his work come quickly, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel come, that we may know it.

20 Woe to you that call evil good, and good evil: that put darkness for light, and light for darkness: that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter.

21 ^bWoe to you that are wise in your own eyes, and prudent in your own conceits.

VER. 19. It. The Jews were often guilty of the like insolence. Jer. xvii. 15.

VER. 23. Drink. Heb. "mix sechar." People generally mixed wine and water. They also strove who could drink most, and the Greeks had a feast for this purpose, (C.) which they styled Choas, from the measure, which was to be swallowed down.

VER. 25. Still. After the ruin of Jerusalem, the people were led away. C.

22 Woe to you that are mighty to drink wine, and stout men at drunkenness.

23 That justify the wicked for gifts, and take away the justice of the just from him.

24 Therefore, as the tongue of the fire devoureth the stubble, and the heat of the flame consumeth it; so shall their root be as ashes, and their bud shall go up as dust: for they have cast away the law of the Lord of hosts, and have blasphemed the word of the Holy One of Israel.

25 Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, and he hath stretched out his hand upon them, and struck them: and the mountains were troubled, and their carcasses became as dung in the midst of the streets. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

26 And he will lift up a sign to the nations afar off, and will whistle to them from the ends of the earth: and behold they shall come with speed swiftly.

27 There is none that shall faint, nor labour among them: they shall not slumber, nor sleep, neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken.

28 Their arrows are sharp, and all their bows are bent. The hoofs of their horses shall be like the flint, and their wheels like the violence of a tempest.

29 Their roaring like that of a lion, they shall roar like young lions: yea, they shall roar, and take hold of the prey, and they shall keep fast hold of it, and there shall be none to deliver it.

30 And they shall make a noise against them that day, like the roaring of the sea: we shall look towards the land, and behold darkness of tribulation, and the light is darkened with the mist thereof.

CHAP. VI.

A glorious vision, in which the prophet's lips are cleansed: he foretelleth the obstinacy of the Jews.

IN the year that king Ozias died, 'I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and elevated: and his train filled the temple.

2 Upon it stood the Seraphims: the one had six wings, and the other had six wings: with two they covered his face, and with two they covered his feet, and with two they flew.

5 And I said: Woe is me, because I have held my peace; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people that hath unclean lips, and I have seen with my eyes the King, the Lord of hosts.

6 And one of the Seraphims flew to me, and in his hand was a live coal, which he had taken with the tongs off the altar.

7 And he touched my mouth, and said: Behold this hath touched thy lips, and thy iniquities shall be taken away, and thy sin shall be cleansed.

8 And I heard the voice of the Lord, saying: Whom shall I send? and who shall go for us? And I said: Lo, here am I, send me.

9 And he said: Go, and thou shalt say to this people: ^bHearing, hear, and understand not: and see the vision, and know it not.

10 Blind the heart of this people, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes: lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and be converted, and I heal them.

11 And I said: How long, O Lord? And he said: Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land shall be left desolate.

12 And the Lord shall remove men far away, and she shall be multiplied that was left in the midst of the earth.

13 And there shall be still a tithing therein, and she shall turn, and shall be made a show as a turpentine-tree, and as an oak that spreadeth its branches: that which shall stand therein, shall be a holy seed.

CHAP. VII.

The prophet assures king Achaz that the two kings, his enemies, shall not take Jerusalem. A virgin shall conceive and bear a son.

AND ^cit came to pass in the days of Achaz, the son of Joathan, the son of Ozias, king of Juda, that Rasin, king of Syria, and Phacee, the son of Romelia, king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem, to fight against it: but they could not prevail over it.

2 And they told the house of David, saying: Syria hath rested upon Ephraim, and his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the woods are moved with the wind.

3 And the Lord said to Isaias: Go forth to meet Achaz, thou and Jasub, thy son, that is left, to the conduit of the upper pool, "in the way of the fullers' field."

4 And thou shalt say to him: See thou be quiet: fear not, and let not thy heart be afraid of the two tails of these firebrands, smoking with the wrath of the fury of Rasin, king of Syria, and of the son of Romelia.

5 Because Syria hath taken counsel against thee, unto the evil of Ephraim and the son of Romelia, saying:

6 Let us go up to Juda, and rouse it up, and draw it away to us, and make the son of Tabeel king in the midst thereof.

7 Thus saith the Lord God: It shall not stand, and this shall not be.

8 But the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rasin: and within threescore and five years, Ephraim shall cease to be a people:

9 And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria, the son of Romelia. If you will not believe, you shall not continue.

10 And the Lord spoke again to Achaz, saying:

11 Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God, either unto the depth of hell, or unto the height above.

12 And Achaz said: I will not ask, and I will not tempt the Lord.

13 And he said: Hear ye, therefore, O house of David: Is it a small thing for you to be grievous to men, that you are grievous to my God also?

14 Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign. ^cBehold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and his name shall be called Emmanuel.

15 He shall eat butter and honey, that he may know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good.

16 For before the child know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good, the land which thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of the face of her two kings.

17 The Lord shall bring upon thee, and upon thy

C.—He intimates that all the graces offered would be rendered useless by the hardened Jews. S. Isid. Pclus. 2, ep. 270.—Hab. may be, "surely they will not see," &c. C.

VER. 11. Desolate. By means of Nabuchodonosor, (S. Chrys.,) and the Romans, (Eus., &c.,) or even till the end of the world, their obstinacy will continue.

VER. 13. Tithing. The land shall produce its fruit, and people shall bring their tithes. Eze. xx. 40. There shall be some left (chap. i. 9, and iv. 3. C.); though only a tenth part will embrace Christianity. S. Bas.—Made. Sept. "ravaged." They shall be exposed to any persecutions under Epiphanes, and few shall escape the arms of the Romans, (C.) those particularly (H.) who shall be a holy seed. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Achaz. This must be seventeen years later than the former prediction. 4 Kings xv. 37. The kings of Syria and Israel jointly attacked Juda, but were forced to raise the siege of Jerusalem. The next year they came separately, and committed the following ravages. The news of their junction threw all into confusion. Ver. 2. Isaias was then sent to inform the king that the designs of his enemies should not take effect. Yet the two kings obtained each a victory. But they could not dethrone Achaz, as they intended. C.

VER. 4. Tails. Se he styles the two kings in derision. The distrust of Achaz was punished by the loss of many of his subjects, but he was not dethroned, having engaged the Assyrians and Egyptians to attack his enemies. Ver. 17.

VER. 8. Rasin. Both the king and his capital shall be ruined.—And five. Capellus (p. 497) would read six and five; or, in eleven years' time. But (C.) Ephraim was led captive twenty-one years after, and the Cutheans took their place when sixty-five years had elapsed. A. 3327. Usher.—Most people date from the prophecy of Amos to the ruin of Samaria, just sixty-five years. The former solution seems preferable. C.

VER. 9. Continue. Sept. "and will not understand, even the Lord," &c. H.—Heb. "and since you do not believe," (C.) or "because you are not confirmed" by a miracle. Grot.

VER. 12. Lord. He was afraid of being forced to relinquish his evil ways. S. Jer.

VER. 14. Virgin, alme, (H.) one secluded from the company of men. Alme in Latin signifies "a holy person," and in Punic "a virgin." The term is never applied to any but "a young virgin." If it only meant a young woman, what sort of a sign would this be? S. Jer.—It was indeed above the sagacity of man to declare that the child to be born would be a boy, and live till the kings should be destroyed. But the prophet undoubtedly speaks of Jesus Christ, the wonderful, &c. (chap. ix. 5,) as well as of a boy, who should prefigure him, and be an earnest of the speedy destruction of the two kings. He was to be born of Isaias (chap. viii. 4); and of all the qualities belonging to the true Emmanuel, only that regarded him, which intimates that the country should be delivered before he should come to years of discretion. Ver. 16. C. Diss. Bossuet.—The Fathers generally apply all to Christ.

VER. 16. Good. Being arrived at the age of discretion, Achaz engaged the Assyrians to invade Damascus. Its citizens and four tribes were carried into people, and upon the house of thy father, days that have not come since the time of the separation of Ephraim from Juda, with the king of the Assyrians.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly, that is in the uttermost parts of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria.

19 And they shall come, and shall all of them rest in the torrents of the valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all places set with shrubs, and in all hollow places.

20 In that day the Lord shall shave with a razor that is hired by them that are beyond the river, by the king of the Assyrians, the head and the hairs of the feet, and the whole beard.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep,

22 And for the abundance of milk he shall eat butter: for butter and honey shall every one eat that shall be left in the midst of the land.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place where there were a thousand vines, at a thousand pieces of silver, shall become thorns and briers.

24 With arrows and with bows they shall go in thither: for briers and thorns shall be in all the land.

25 And as for all the hills that shall be raked with a rake, the fear of thorns and briers shall not come thither, but they shall be for the ox to feed on, and the lesser cattle to tread upon.

CHAP. VIII.

The name of a child that is to be born: many evils shall come upon the Jews for their sins.

AND the Lord said to me: Take thee a great book, and write in it with a man's pen. Take away the spoils with speed, quickly take the prey.

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses, Urias, the priest, and Zacharias, the son of Barachias.

3 And I went to the prophetess, and she conceived, and bore a son. And the Lord said to me: Call his name, Hasten to take away the spoils: Make haste to take away the prey.

4 For before the child know to call his father and his mother, the strength of Damascus, and the spoils of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of the Assyrians.

captivity the year following. Phacee only survived another year, A. 3265. This was a pledge, that what regarded the son of the virgin would also be accomplished. C.—Land of the enemy. C. 4 Kings xvi. M.

VER. 17. Assyrians. His aid shall prove the greatest scourge, (2 Par. xxviii. 20,) while the Idumeans and Philistines shall also ravage the country. Ib. 17. Achaz has vainly trusted in man.

VER. 20. Razor. Or cut off with seissors all the hair, as was done with lepers, (Lev. xiv. 9,) and Levites, Num. viii. 7. The country shall be pillaged, and all shall be in mourning. C.—The men shall be despised as no better than women and eowards. S. Jer. Theod.—Hired. With large sums. C.

VER. 22. Land. Pastures shall be so large, (M.) though uncultivated, the greatest part of the inhabitants being removed.

VER. 23. Pieces. Sicles. This was the price of the best vineyards. Cant. viii. 2. C.—Now people may hunt in them. H.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Book. This mystery would require a large explanation. W.—Pen. Lit. "style." H.—Write intelligibly. Here all is plain. C.—Take. Prot. "concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz." Marg. "in making speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey." H.—Chasch-baz, the son of Isaias, was a sign that Syria and Israel should soon be rendered desolate; and in a more elevated sense he showed that Christ should overturn the powers of hell. C.

VER. 2. Zacharias. A person to us unknown. C.

VER. 4. Assyrians. Theglathphalassar, the next year, took the Damascenes to Kir, and Nephtali, Reuben, Gad, and Manasses into captivity. Yet the kingdom continued some time longer. Never was prediction more explicit.

5 And the Lord spoke to me again, saying:

6 Forasmuch as this people hath cast away the waters of Siloe, that go with silence, and hath rather taken Rasin, and the son of Romelia:

7 Therefore, behold the Lord will bring upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, the king of the Assyrians, and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and shall overflow all his banks,

8 And shall pass through Juda, overflowing, and going over, shall reach even to the neck. And the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Emmanuel.

9 Gather yourselves together, O ye people, and be overcome, and give ear, all ye lands afar off: strengthen yourselves, and be overcome, gird yourselves, and be overcome.

10 Take counsel together, and it shall be defeated: speak a word, and it shall not be done: because God is with us.

11 For thus saith the Lord to me: As he hath taught me, with a strong arm, that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying:

12 Say ye not: A conspiracy: for all that this people speaketh, is a conspiracy: neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid.

13 Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself: and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread.

14 And he shall be a sanctification to you. *But for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence to the two houses of Israel, for a snare and a ruin to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

15 And very many of them shall stumble and fall, and shall be broken in pieces, and shall be snared, and taken.

16 Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples.

17 And I will wait for the Lord, who hath hid his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for him.

18 Behold I and my children, whom the Lord hath given me for a sign, and for a wonder in Israel, from the Lord of hosts, who dwelleth in Mount Sion.

19 And when they shall say to you: Seek of pythons, and of diviners, who mutter in their enchantments: should

VER. 6. Silence. Being willing to receive Tabcel, instead of their lawful prince. Achaz was then terrified, and chose to become tributary, rather than to lose his crown. Herein both offended God, in whom they ought to have trusted; and the auxiliary king looked upon himself as master of the country. 2 Par. xxviii. 20. C.

VER. 8. Wings. Or troops.—Emmanuel. Christ was born in the country, and Lord of it: though it might be said to belong to the son of Isaias, as being his figure. C.

VER. 9. Overcome. The defeat of Sennacherib, of the Idumeans, &c., under Ezechias, is intimated. 4 Kings xviii. 8, and xix. 35.

VER. 12. Conspiracy. In despair they wish to submit to the enemy. Ver. 6 Isaias exhorts them to have recourse rather to the Lord. C.

VER. 14. Two. The wicked of both kingdoms, (H.) who choose to revolt from God. Many of Israel were led into captivity, and the territory of Juda was laid waste. C.

VER. 18. I and my two children. Chap. vii. 3, and viii. 4. H.—The actions of some were prophetic. Chap. xx. 2; Osee xii. 10. C.—God announces what will happen, by the names of my children, (H.) and by their age, as well as by my mouth. C.

VER. 19. Seek of pythons. That is, people pretending to tell future things by a prophesying spirit.—Should not the people seek of their God, for the living of the dead? Here is signified that it is to God we should pray to be directed, and not to seek of the dead (that is, of fortune-tellers dead in sin) for the health or the living. Ch.

not the people seek of their God, for the living of the dead?

20 To the law rather, and to the testimony. And if they speak not according to this word, they shall not have the morning light.

21 And they shall pass by it, they shall fall, and be hungry: and when they shall be hungry, they will be angry, and curse their king, and their God, and look upwards.

22 And they shall look to the earth, and behold trouble and darkness, weakness and distress, and a mist following them, and they cannot fly away from their distress.

CHAP. IX.

What joy shall come after afflictions by the birth and kingdom of Christ: which shall flourish for ever. Judgments upon Israel for their sins.

AT^a the first time the land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephtali, was lightly touched: and at the last the way of the sea beyond the Jordan of the Galilee of the Gentiles was heavily loaded.

2 The people that walked in darkness, have seen a great light: to them that dwelt in the region of the shadow of death, light is risen.

3 Thou hast multiplied the nation, and hast not increased the joy. They shall rejoice before thee, as they that rejoice in the harvest, as conquerors rejoice after taking a prey, when they divide the spoils.

4 For the yoke of their burden, and the rod of their shoulder, and the sceptre of their oppressor thou hast overcome, ^aas in the day of Madian.

5 For every violent taking of spoils, with tumult, and garment mingled with blood, shall be burnt, and be fuel for the fire.

6 For a CHILD IS BORN to us, and a son is given to us, and the government is upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the world to come, the Prince of Peace.

7 His empire shall be multiplied, and there shall be no end of peace: he shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom: to establish it, and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and for ever: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

8 The Lord sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

VER. 21. By it. The word of God. H.—God. Elohim means also princes or idols. C.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Loaded. Theglathphalassar took away whole tribes (2 Par. v. 26) the year after this. Yet these people were the first enlightened with the rays of the gospel. (Matt. iv. 13,) though so much despised. John vii. 52. C.—Here Christ preached first.

VER. 3. And hast. Parkhurst says it should be, "(whom) thou hast not brought up (the Gentiles) with joy they," &c. Sym. H.—Spoils. They shall return thanks to God for the unexpected liberation.

VER. 4. Oppressor. Who levied taxes for Assyria. 4 Kings xviii. 7. Senacherib made war, because Ezechias refused to pay them any longer, and his troops fell upon each other, (C.) as the Madianites had done. Judg. vii. H.

From whom all good advice proceeds.—God. The three Greek versions maliciously render El "the strong," though it be uncertain that it ever has that meaning, as it certainly has not when joined with gibbor, "mighty." Why should two terms of the same import be used? The Sept. copies vary much. Some read only, "he shall be called the 9 And all the people of Ephraim shall know, and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the pride and haughtiness of their heart:

10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with square stones: they have cut down the sycamores, but we will change them for cedars.

11 And the Lord shall set up the enemies of Rasin over him, ^aand shall bring on his enemies in a crowd:

12 The Syrians from the east, and the Philistines from the west: and they shall devour Israel with open mouth. For all this his indignation is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

13 And the people are not returned to him who hath struck them, and have not sought after the Lord of hosts.

14 And the Lord shall destroy out of Israel the head and the tail, him that bendeth down, and him that holdeth back, in one day.

15 The aged and honourable, he is the head: and the prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail.

16 And they that call this people blessed, shall cause them to err: and they that are called blessed, shall be thrown down headlong.

17 Therefore the Lord shall have no joy in their young men: neither shall he have mercy on their fatherless, and widows: for every one is a hypocrite and wicked, and every mouth hath spoken folly. For all this his indignation is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

18 For wickedness is kindled as a fire, it shall devour the brier and the thorn: and shall kindle in the thicket of the forest, and it shall be wrapped up in smoke, ascending on high.

19 By the wrath of the Lord of hosts the land is troubled, and the people shall be as fuel for the fire: no man shall spare his brother.

20 And he shall turn to the right hand, and shall be hungry: and shall eat on the left hand, and shall not be filled: every one shall eat the flesh of his own arm: Manasses Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they together shall be against Juda.

21 After all these things his indignation is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

angel of the great council, for I will bring peace upon the princes and his health." S. Jerom thinks they were afraid to style the child God. But this reason falls to the ground, as other copies have, (C.) after council, "Wonderful, Counsellor, God, the Mighty, the Potent, ἐξουσιάρχης, the Prince of Peace, the Father of the world to come, for, &c. (7) His." Grabe (de Vitiis, 70, p. 29) asserts that the former is the genuine version, and that the inserted titles are a secondary one; so that there must have been two versions before the days of Aquila, as the text is thus quoted at large by Clement and S. Iræneus, A. 180; Kennicott adds also by S. Ignatius, A. 110. H.

VER. 8. Word. Sept. "death." This also agrees with the Heb. term, and with the context.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Injustice. These great ones excite God's indignation. C.

CHAP. X.

Woe to the makers of wicked laws. The Assyrians shall be a rod for punishing Israel: but for their pride they shall be destroyed: and a remnant of Israel saved.

WOE to them that make wicked laws: and when they write, write injustice:

2 To oppress the poor in judgment, and do violence to the cause of the humble of my people: that widows might be their prey, and that they might rob the fatherless.

3 What will you do in the day of visitation, and of the calamity which cometh from afar? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory?

4 That you be not bowed down under the bond, and fall with the slain? In all these things his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

5 Woe to the Assyrian, he is the rod and the staff of my anger, and my indignation is in their hands.

6 I will send him to a deceitful nation, and I will give him a charge against the people of my wrath, to take away the spoils, and to lay hold on the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

7 But he shall not take it so, and his heart shall not think so: but his heart shall be set to destroy, and to cut off nations not a few.

8 For he shall say:

9 Are not my princes as so many kings? is not Calano as Charcamis: and Emath as Arphad? is not Samaria as Damascus?

10 As my hand hath found the kingdoms of the idol, so also their idols of Jerusalem, and of Samaria.

11 Shall I not, as I have done to Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols?

12 And it shall come to pass, that when the Lord shall have performed all his works in Mount Sion, and in Jerusalem, I will visit the fruit of the proud heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of the haughtiness of his eyes.

13 For he hath said: By the strength of my own hand I have done it, and by my own wisdom I have understood: and I have removed the bounds of the people, and have taken the spoils of their princes, and as a mighty man have pulled down them that sat on high.

14 And my hand hath found the strength of the people as a nest: and as eggs are gathered that are left, so have

VER. 3. Afar. When Salmanasar shall come from Ninive to destroy Samaria, to punish the people for their idolatry (C.) and oppressions. H.—Glory. Golden calves, (Osee viii. 5, and x. 5,) or possessions. Chap. ix. 8.

VER. 7. So. He will not think that he is executing my vengeance, supposing that he conquers by his own power.

VER. 9. As. Lit. "altogether kings." H.—Thus Nabuchodonosor kept the conquered princes for derision. Hab. i. 10; Judg. i. 7.—Arphad, Arad, or rather Rathanæ Jer. xlix. 23.—Damascus. These two cities were not yet subdued.

VER. 12. Works. Humbling and terrifying Ezechias and his subjects, who were reduced to great distress, in order to avert the impending war. H.

VER. 14. Nest. Some put these words in the mouth of God. Tert. Abdias iv.—But they show the insolence of Sennacherib.

VER. 15. Axe. The Assyrian has no right to boast. What can man do without God's assistance? C.—Gratia tua deputo et quaecumque non feci mala. S. Aug. Conf. ii. 7.

VER. 17. Light. God, H.—Thorns. Private soldiers. C.

VER. 18. Glory. Officers.—Flesh. Or body. All shall perish. H.—Fear. Sennacherib escaped alone, and fell by the sword of his own sons.

I gathered all the earth: and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or made the least noise.

15 Shall the axe boast itself against him that cutteth with it? or shall the saw exalt itself against him by whom it is drawn? as if a rod should lift itself up against him that lifteth it up, and a staff exalt itself, which is but wood.

16 Therefore, the sovereign Lord, the Lord of hosts, shall send leanness among his fat ones: and under his glory shall be kindled a burning, as it were the burning of a fire.

17 And the light of Israel shall be as a fire, and the Holy One thereof as a flame: and his thorns and his briers shall be set on fire, and shall be devoured in one day.

18 And the glory of his forest, and of his beautiful hill, shall be consumed from the soul even to the flesh, and he shall run away through fear.

19 And they that remain of the trees of his forest shall be so few, that they shall easily be numbered, and a child shall write them down.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and they that shall escape of the house of Jacob, shall lean no more upon him that striketh them: but they shall lean upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 The remnant shall be converted, the remnant, I say, of Jacob, to the mighty God.

22 ^bFor if thy people, O Israel, shall be as the sand of the sea, a remnant of them shall be converted, the consumption abridged shall overflow with justice.

23 For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, and an abridgment in the midst of all the land.

24 Therefore, thus saith the Lord, the God of hosts: O my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall strike thee with his rod, and he shall lift up his staff over thee in the way of Egypt.

25 For yet a little, and a very little while, and my indignation shall cease, and my wrath shall be upon their wickedness.

26 ^cAnd the Lord of hosts shall rise up a scourge against him, ^daccording to the slaughter of Madian in the rock of Oreb, and his rod over the sea, and he shall lift it up in the way of Egypt.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day, that his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his 30 Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim; attend, O Laisa, poor Anathoth.

31 Medemena is removed: ye inhabitants of Gabim, take courage.

32 It is yet day enough, to remain in Nobe: he shall shake his hand against the mountain of the daughter of Sion, the hill of Jerusalem.

33 Behold the sovereign Lord of hosts shall break the earthen vessel with terror, and the tall of stature shall be cut down, and the lofty shall be humbled.

34 And the thickets of the forest shall be cut down with iron, and Libanus, with its high one, shall fall.

AND "there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.

2 And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: the spirit of wisdom, and of understanding, the spirit of counsel, and of fortitude, the spirit of knowledge, and of godliness,

3 And he shall be filled with the spirit of the fear of the Lord. He shall not judge according to the sight of the eyes, nor reprove according to the hearing of the ears.

4 But he shall judge the poor with justice, and shall reprove with equity, for the meek of the earth: "and he shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Root. Juda shall not be exterminated, like the Assyrians. C.—Christ shall spring from the blessed Virgin, (W.) for the salvation of mankind. The Jews agree that this prediction regards the Messias; though some, with Grotius, would explain it literally of Ezechias. They do not reflect that he was now ten years old, and that the prophet speaks of an event which should still take place after he had been a long while upon the throne.

12 And he shall set up a standard unto the nations, and shall assemble the fugitives of Israel, and shall gather together the dispersed of Juda from the four quarters of the earth.

13 And the envy of Ephraim shall be taken away, and the enemies of Juda shall perish: Ephraim shall not envy Juda, and Juda shall not fight against Ephraim.

14 But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines by the sea, they together shall spoil the children of the east: Edom, and Moab, shall be under the rule of their hand, and the children of Ammon shall be obedient.

15 And the Lord shall lay waste the tongue of the sea of Egypt, and shall lift up his hand over the river in the strength of his spirit: and he shall strike it in the seven streams, so that men may pass through it in their shoes.

16 And there shall be a highway for the remnant of my people, which shall be left from the Assyrians: as there was for Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

CHAP. XII.

A canticle of thanksgiving for the benefits of Christ.

AND thou shalt say in that day: I will give thanks to thee, O Lord, for thou wast angry with me: thy wrath is turned away, and thou hast comforted me.

^c Infra, lxxv. 25.—^d Rom. xv. 12.

VER. 6. Wolf. Some explain this of the Millennium. Ap. S. Jer. Lact. vii. 24.—But the more intelligent understand that the fiercest nations shall embrace the gospel, and kings obey the pastors of the Church. C.—Lead. Or "drive," as the word is used by Festus. H.

VER. 10. Ensign. The cross is the standard of Christians.—Sepulchre. Heb., Sept., &c., "rest." S. Jerom gives the true sense. The holy places have been greatly revered, and Christian princes strove for a long time to recover them. C.—They are respected even by the Turks. Christ's death was ignominious, but his monument was full of glory. W.

VER. 11. Time. After the deliverance from Sennacherib they shall return from captivity. Ezechias recalled some few. 2 Par. xxix. 9.—Remnant. Some embraced the gospel. Rom. xi. 2; Acts ii. 41, &c.—Phetros, in Egypt.

VER. 14. Shoulders. Or confines. Ezech. xxv. 9. Ezechias and the Machabees attacked the Philistines. C.—Sept. "and they shall fly on the ships of the strangers; they shall plunder the sea together, and those on the east, and Idumea." H.—East. Ammonites, &c., often defeated by the Machabees, and probably by Ezechias.

VER. 15. Tongue. Gulf of the Mediterranean, near Pelusium, or the seven mouths of the river Nile. The country was ravaged by Sennacherib, Cambyses, Alexander, and Epiphanes. Chap. xix. 4, &c. The Jewish captives shall return thence. Chap. i. 3; Zac. x. 10.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Thanks. Lit. "confess." The Jews thank God for their return, as the Church does for her deliverance from sin. W.—Canticles were composed on such occasions. Exod. xv.—Angry. They do not thank God on this account; but because he had averted his indignation. C.

2 Behold, God is my Saviour, I will deal confidently, and will not fear: *because the Lord is my strength, and my praise, and he is become my salvation.

3 You shall draw waters with joy out of the Saviour's fountains:

4 And you shall say in that day: Praise ye the Lord, and call upon his name: make his works known among the people: remember that his name is high.

5 Sing ye to the Lord, for he hath done great things: show this forth in all the earth.

6 Rejoice, and praise, O thou habitation of Sion: for great is he that is in the midst of thee, the Holy One of Israel.

CHAP. XIII.

The desolation of Babylon.

THE burden of Babylon, which Isaiah, the son of Amos, saw.

2 Upon the dark mountain lift ye up a banner, exalt the voice, lift up the hand, and let the rulers go into the gates.

3 I have commanded my sanctioned ones, and have called my strong ones in my wrath, them that rejoice in my glory.

4 The noise of a multitude in the mountains, as it were of many people, the noise of the sound of kings, of nations gathered together: the Lord of hosts hath given charge to the troops of war,

5 To them that come from a country afar off, from the end of heaven: the Lord, and the instruments of his wrath, to destroy the whole land.

6 Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is near: it shall come as a destruction from the Lord.

7 Therefore shall all hands be faint, and every heart of man shall melt,

8 And shall be broken. Gripings and pains shall take hold of them, they shall be in pain as a woman in labour. Every one shall be amazed at his neighbour, their countenances shall be as faces burnt.

9 Behold, the day of the Lord shall come, a cruel day, and full of indignation, and of wrath, and fury, to lay the land desolate, and to destroy the sinners thereof out of it.

10 ^bFor the stars of heaven, and their brightness, shall not display their light: the sun shall be darkened in his rising, and the moon shall not shine with her light.

11 And I will visit the evils of the world, and against he wicked for their iniquity, and I will make the pride of infidels to cease, and will bring down the arrogance of the mighty.

12 A man shall be more precious than gold; yea, a man than the finest of gold.

13 For this I will trouble the heaven: and the earth shall be moved out of her place, for the indignation of the Lord of hosts, and for the day of his fierce wrath.

14 And they shall be as a doe fleeing away, and as a sheep: and there shall be none to gather them together. every man shall turn to his own people, and every one shall flee to his own land.

15 Every one that shall be found, shall be slain: and every one that shall come to their aid, shall fall by the sword.

16 Their infants shall be dashed in pieces before their eyes: their houses shall be pillaged, and their wives shall be ravished.

17 Behold I will stir up the Medes against them, who shall not seek silver, nor desire gold:

18 But with their arrows they shall kill the children, and shall have no pity upon the sucklings of the womb, and their eye shall not spare their sons.

19 And that Babylon, glorious among kingdoms, the famous pride of the Chaldeans, shall be even as the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrha.

20 It shall no more be inhabited for ever, and it shall not be founded unto generation and generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch his tents there, nor shall shepherds rest there.

21 But wild beasts shall rest there, and their houses shall be filled with serpents, and ostriches shall dwell there, and the hairy ones shall dance there:

22 And owls shall answer one another there, in the houses thereof, and sirens in the temples of pleasure.

CHAP. XIV.

The restoration of Israel after their captivity. The parable or song insulting over the king of Babylon. A prophecy against the Philistines.

HER time is near at hand, and her days shall not be prolonged. For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose out of Israel, and will make them rest upon their own ground: and the stranger shall be joined with them, and shall adhere to the house of Jacob.

2 And the people shall take them, and bring them into their place: and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the Lord for servants and handmaids: and Job xxviii. 7; Lev. xiv.—Sirens, fabulously supposed to be sweet singing women with wings.—Thonim denotes some great sea monsters, such as whales or sea-calves. C.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Prolonged. Babylon was taken one hundred and seventy-two years after. C.—Ground. Cyrus restored the Jews; yet all did not return at that time.

VER. 2. Place. Cyrus probably granted an escort, as Artaxerxes did. 2 Esd.

they shall make them captives that had taken them, and shall subdue their oppressors.

3 And it shall come to pass in that day, that when God shall give thee rest from thy labour, and from thy vexation, and from the hard bondage wherewith thou didst serve before,

4 Thou shalt take up this parable against the king of Babylon, and shalt say: How is the oppressor come to nothing, the tribute hath ceased?

5 The Lord hath broken the staff of the wicked, the rod of the rulers,

6 That struck the people in wrath with an incurable wound, that brought nations under in fury, that persecuted in a cruel manner.

7 The whole earth is quiet and still; it is glad, and hath rejoiced.

8 The fir-trees also have rejoiced over thee, and the cedars of Libanus, saying: Since thou hast slept, there hath none come up to cut us down.

9 Hell below was in an uproar to meet thee at thy coming, it stirred up the giants for thee. All the princes of the earth are risen up from their thrones, all the princes of nations.

10 All shall answer, and say to thee: Thou also art wounded, as well as we, thou art become like unto us.

11 Thy pride is brought down to hell, thy carcass is fallen down: under thee shall the moth be strewed, and worms shall be thy covering.

12 How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, who didst rise in the morning? how art thou fallen to the earth, that didst wound the nations?

13 And thou saidst in thy heart: I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God, I will sit in the mountain of the covenant, in the sides of the north.

14 I will ascend above the height of the clouds, I will be like the Most High.

15 But yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, into the depth of the pit.

16 They that shall see thee, shall turn toward thee, and behold thee: Is this the man that troubled the earth, that shook kingdoms,

17 That made the world a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof, that opened not the prison to his prisoners?

18 All the kings of the nations have all of them slept in glory, every one in his own house.

19 But thou art cast out of thy grave, as an unprofitable branch defiled, and wrapped up among them that were slain by the sword, and are gone down to the bottom of the pit, as a rotten carcass.

20 Thou shalt not keep company with them, even in burial: for thou hast destroyed thy land, thou hast slain thy people: the seed of the wicked shall not be named for ever.

21 Prepare his children for slaughter, for the iniquity of their fathers: they shall not rise up, nor inherit the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities.

22 And I will rise up against them, saith the Lord of hosts: and I will destroy the name of Babylon, and the remains, and the bud, and the offspring, saith the Lord.

23 And I will make it a possession for the ericium and pools of waters, and I will sweep it, and wear it out with a besom, saith the Lord of hosts.

24 The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying: Surely as I have thought, so shall it be: and as I have purposed, 25 So shall it fall out: That I will destroy the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: and his yoke shall be taken away from them, and his burden shall be taken off their shoulder.

26 This is the counsel, that I have purposed upon all the earth, and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all nations.

27 For the Lord of hosts hath decreed, and who can disannul it? and his hand is stretched out: and who shall turn it away?

28 In the year that king Achaz died, was this burden.

29 Rejoice not thou, whole Philistia, that the rod of him that struck thee is broken in pieces: for out of the root of the serpent shall come forth a basilisk, and his seed shall swallow the bird.

30 And the first-born of the poor shall be fed, and the poor shall rest with confidence: and I will make thy root perish with famine, and I will kill thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate, cry, O city: all Philistia is thrown down: for a smoke shall come from the north, and there is none that shall escape his troop.

32 And what shall be answered to the messengers of the nations? That the Lord hath founded Sion, and the poor of his people shall hope in him.

VER. 9. Hell is personified, deriding the Chaldean monarch, Baltassar, who perished the very night after he had profaned the sacred vessels. Dan. v. 3. C.

VER. 12. O Lucifer. O day-star. All this, according to the letter, is spoken of the king of Babylon. It may also be applied, in a spiritual sense, to Lucifer, the prince of devils, who was created a bright angel, but fell by pride and rebellion against God. Ch. Luke x. 18. C.—He fell by pride, as Nabuchodonosor did. W.

VER. 13. North. And be adored as God in the temple of Jerusalem. Psal. xviii. 3. The Assyrian and Persian monarchs claimed Divine honours. 4 Kings xviii. 33; Judith iii. 13.

VER. 19. Grave. Strangers seized the crown of Baltassar, and neglected his sepulture: or if we explain it of Nabuchodonosor, his tomb was probably plundered, (C.) as the Persians did not spare that of Belus.

VER. 20. Thy. Sept. "my." Thou hast been a murderer instead of a shepherd.

VER. 32. Nations. Surprised that Ezechias should escape, when the power of the Philistines was overturned so easily; or when the king sent ambassadors to his allies, to announce the defeat of Sennacherib by the angel. All confessed that this was an effect of the Divine protection towards Sion. C.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Moab. Which would be visited in three years' time (chap. xvi. 14) either by Ezechias, or by Sennacherib, though history be silent on this head. The Moabites had been very cruel. Amos i. and ii.—Night. Suddenly. C.—Their misery was so much the greater. W.—Ar. The capital. C.

CHAP. XV.

A prophecy of the desolation of the Moabites.

THE burden of Moab. Because in the night Ar, of Moab, is laid waste, it is silent: because the wall of Moab is destroyed in the night, it is silent.

2 The house is gone up, and Dibon to the high places, to mourn over Nabo, and over Medaba, Moab hath howled: *on all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard shall be shaven.

3 In their streets they are girded with sackcloth: on the tops of their houses, and in their streets all shall howl, and come down weeping.

4 Hesebon shall cry, and Eleale, their voice is heard even to Jasa. For this shall the well-appointed men of Moab howl, his soul shall howl to itself.

5 My heart shall cry to Moab, the bars thereof shall flee unto Segor, a heifer of three years old: for by the ascent of Luith they shall go up weeping: and in the way of Oronaim they shall lift up a cry of destruction.

6 For the waters of Nemrim shall be desolate, for the grass is withered away, the spring is faded, all the greenness is perished.

7 According to the greatness of their work, is their visitation also: they shall lead them to the torrent of the willows.

8 For the cry is gone round about the border of Moab: the howling thereof unto Gallim, and unto the well of Elim the cry thereof.

9 For the waters of Dibon are filled with blood: for I will bring more upon Dibon: the lion upon them that shall flee of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land.

CHAP. XVI.

The prophet prayeth for Christ's coming. The affliction of the Moabites for their pride.

SEND forth, O Lord, the lamb, the ruler of the earth, from Petra of the desert, to the mount of the daughter of Sion.

2 And it shall come to pass, that as a bird fleeing away, and as young ones flying out of the nest, so shall the daughters of Moab be in the passage of Arnon.

3 Take counsel, gather a council: make thy shadow as the night in the mid-day: hide them that flee, and betray not them that wander about.

4 My fugitives shall dwell with thee: O Moab, be thou a covert to them from the face of the destroyer: for the dust is at an end, the wretch is consumed: he hath failed, that trod the earth under foot.

5 And a throne shall be prepared in mercy, and one shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging and seeking judgment, and quickly rendering that which is just.

6 ^bWe have heard of the pride of Moab, he is exceedingly proud: his pride and his arrogancy, and his indignation, is more than his strength.

7 Therefore shall Moab howl to Moab, every one shall howl: to them that rejoice upon the brick walls, tell ye their stripes.

8 For the suburbs of Hesebon are desolate, and the lords of the nations have destroyed the vineyard of Sabama: the branches thereof have reached even to Jazer: they have wandered in the wilderness, the branches thereof are left, they are gone over the sea.

9 Therefore, I will lament with the weeping of Jazer, the vineyard of Sabama: I will water thee with my tears, O Hesebon, and Eleale: for the voice of the treaders hath rushed in upon thy vintage, and upon thy harvest.

10 And gladness and joy shall be taken away from Carmel, and there shall be no rejoicing nor shouting in the vineyards. He shall not tread out wine in the press that was wont to tread it out: the voice of the treaders I have taken away.

11 Wherefore my bowels shall sound like a harp for Moab, and my inward parts for the brick wall.

12 And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab is wearied on his high places, that he shall go into his sanctuaries to pray, and shall not prevail.

13 This is the word, that the Lord spoke to Moab from that time:

14 And now the Lord hath spoken, saying: In three years, as the years of a hireling, the glory of Moab shall be taken away for all the multitude of the people, and it shall be left small and feeble, not many.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Damascus. When it was taken by Theglathphalassar, or rather by Sennacherib. Chap. x. 8. It was again ruined by Nabuchodonosor. Jer. xlix. 24.

VER. 2. Aroer. Chal. "abandoned, shall be folds for sheep." Sept. "left for ever a resting-place for flocks and herds, and none shall pursue." The tribes on the east of the Jordan shall be led captive, as well as those on the west Ephraim, &c. H.

shall rest there, and there shall be none to make them afraid.

3 And aid shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus: and the remnant of Syria shall be as the glory of the children of Israel: saith the Lord of hosts.

4 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the glory of Jacob shall be made thin, and the fatness of his flesh shall grow lean.

5 And it shall be as when one gathereth in the harvest that which remaineth, and his arm shall gather the ears of corn: and it shall be as he that seeketh ears in the vale of Raphaim.

6 And the fruit thereof, that shall be left upon it, shall be as one cluster of grapes, and as the shaking of the olive-tree, two or three berries in the top of a bough, or four or five upon the top of the tree, saith the Lord, the God of Israel.

7 In that day man shall bow down himself to his Maker, and his eyes shall look to the Holy One of Israel.

8 And he shall not look to the altars which his hands made: and he shall not have respect to the things that his fingers wrought, such as groves and temples.

9 In that day his strong cities shall be forsaken, as the ploughs and the corn that were left before the face of the children of Israel, and thou shalt be desolate.

10 Because thou hast forgotten God, thy Saviour, and hast not remembered thy strong helper: therefore shalt thou plant good plants, and shalt sow strange seed.

11 In the day of thy planting shall be the wild grape, and in the morning thy seed shall flourish: the harvest is taken away in the day of inheritance, and shall grieve thee much.

12 Woe to the multitude of many people, like the multitude of the roaring sea: and the tumult of crowds, like the noise of many waters.

13 Nations shall make a noise like the noise of waters overflowing, but he shall rebuke him, and he shall flee far off: and he shall be carried away as the dust of the mountains before the wind, and as a whirlwind before a tempest.

14 In the time of the evening, behold there shall be trouble: the morning shall come, and he shall not be: this is the portion of them that have wasted us, and the lot of them that spoiled us.

WOE to the land, the winged cymbal, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia.

2 That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, and in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters. Go, ye swift angels, to a nation rent and torn in pieces: to a terrible people, after which there is no other: to a nation expecting and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled.

3 All the inhabitants of the world, who dwell on the earth, when the sign shall be lifted up on the mountains, you shall see, and you shall hear the sound of the trumpet.

4 For thus saith the Lord to me: I will take my rest, and consider in my place, as the noon light is clear, and as a cloud of dew in the day of harvest.

5 For before the harvest, it was all flourishing, and it shall bud without perfect ripeness, and the sprigs thereof shall be cut off with pruning-hooks: and what is left, shall be cut away, and shaken out.

6 And they shall be left together to the birds of the mountains, and the beasts of the earth: and the fowls shall be upon them all the summer, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them.

7 At that time shall a present be brought to the Lord of hosts, from a people rent and torn in pieces: from a terrible people, after which there hath been no other; from a nation expecting, expecting and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, to Mount Sion.

CHAP. XIX.

The punishment of Egypt: their call to the Church.

THE burden of Egypt. Behold the Lord will ascend upon a swift cloud, and will enter into Egypt, and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst thereof.

2 And I will set the Egyptians to fight against the Egyptians: and they shall fight brother against brother, and friend against friend, city against city, kingdom against kingdom.

3 And the spirit of Egypt shall be broken in the bowels thereof; and I will cast down their counsel: and they shall consult their idols, and their diviners, and their wizards and soothsayers.

4 And I will deliver Egypt into the hand of cruel masters, and a strong king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the God of hosts.

5 And the water of the sea shall be dried up, and the river shall be wasted and dry.

6 And the rivers shall fail: the streams of the banks

VER. 4. Place. God rules all with ease.—Harvest. The allies shall comfort my people, (C.) or Sennacherib shall threaten ruin. H.—But I will frustrate his evil designs. His army shall perish unexpectedly. Ver. 5. C.

VER. 6. Them. Their bodies shall lie unburied.

VER. 7. Sion. Egypt shall send presents to the Lord, 2 Par. xxxii. 23. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Egypt. Many refer this to the coming of Christ, (C.) at whose presence the idols fell down, and many saints adorned the country W.—But the prophet may also literally refer to the wars of the Assyrians against Egypt.—Behold. The prophet speaks fourteen years before the attack of Sennacherib.—Moved. Plundered by the Assyrians. M.

VER. 3. Egypt. Sept. "of the Egyptians shall be troubled within them." H.—Soothsayers. Feeble but too common resource of superstitious people!

VER. 5. Dry. The lakes and the Nile shall not afford sufficient moisture. C.

shall be diminished, and be dried up. The reed and the bulrush shall wither away.

7 The channel of the river shall be laid bare from its fountain; and every thing sown by the water shall be dried up; it shall wither away, and shall be no more.

8 The fishers also shall mourn; and all that cast a hook into the river shall lament; and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish away.

9 They shall be confounded that wrought in flax, combing and weaving fine linen.

10 And its watery places shall be dry; all they shall mourn that made pools to take fishes.

11 The princes of Tanis are become fools; the wise counsellors of Pharaoh have given foolish counsel: how will you say to Pharaoh, I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?

12 Where are now thy wise men? let them tell thee, and show what the Lord of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

13 The princes of Tanis are become fools; the princes of Memphis are gone astray; they have deceived Egypt, the stay of the people thereof.

14 The Lord hath mingled in the midst thereof the spirit of giddiness: and they have caused Egypt to err in all its works, as a drunken man staggereth and vomiteth.

15 And there shall be no work for Egypt, to make head or tail, him that bendeth down, or that holdeth back.

16 In that day Egypt shall be like unto women, and they shall be amazed, and afraid, because of the moving of the hand of the Lord of hosts, which he shall move over it.

17 And the land of Juda shall be a terror to Egypt: every one that shall remember it shall tremble, because of the counsel of the Lord of hosts, which he hath determined concerning it.

18 *In that day there shall be five cities in the land of Egypt, speaking the language of Chanaan, and swearing by the Lord of hosts: one shall be called the city of the sun.

19 In that day there shall be an altar of the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a monument of the Lord at the borders thereof:

—If the Nile rose less than twelve, or more than sixteen cubits, famine ensued. Pliny, xviii. 18.

VER. 7. Fountain. The Nile rises in Ethiopia. But the canals alone were left dry. C.

VER. 8. Fishers. The lake Mæris produced a talent every day for the revenue, and so great was the abundance of fish, that they could hardly be salted. The Nile was also well supplied with fish.

VER. 9. Linen. Gr. silk. Ezech. xvi. 10. C.

VER. 11. Tanis. Or of the twelve kings. Ver. 1. They are disconcerted at the approach of Psammitichus, (C.) or at the want of water. H.

VER. 13. Memphis. The seat of many kings, and a very ancient city. Heb. "Noph."—Stay. Lit. "angle," denoting the chiefs, or all the land. Judg. xx. 2.

VER. 15. Back. King and subject are equally confused. Chap. ix. 14. C.

VER. 17. Terror. Heb. also "a rejoicing," (S. Jer.), on account of Sennacherib's defeat there. Chap. xviii. 7.

VER. 18. Chanaan. Hebrew. The Israelites had a connexion with Egypt, which the prophets often blame. Chap. xxx. 2. Ezechias trusted in their aid, when he refused to pay tribute to the Assyrians. But this prediction was more fully accomplished by the propagation of the Christian religion. Grace no where shone forth more brightly than in this country. once the seat of superstition.

VER. 19. Altar. If the Jews were forbidden to have any other than the one at Jerusalem, how can the prophet announce this as a blessing? But we must allow with the Fathers and Jews in the days of S. Jerom, that this prediction regarded the Messiah, when altars might be lawfully erected in every nation. See 20 It shall be for a sign, and for a testimony to the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt. For they shall cry to the Lord, because of the oppressor, and he shall send them a Saviour and a defender to deliver them.

21 And the Lord shall be known by Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day, and shall worship him with sacrifices and offerings: and they shall make vows to the Lord, and perform them.

22 And the Lord shall strike Egypt with a scourge, and shall heal it, and they shall return to the Lord, and he shall be pacified towards them, and heal them.

23 In that day there shall be a way from Egypt to the Assyrians; and the Assyrian shall enter into Egypt; and the Egyptian to the Assyrians; and the Egyptians shall serve the Assyrian.

24 In that day shall Israel be the third to the Egyptian and the Assyrian: a blessing in the midst of the land,

25 Which the Lord of hosts hath blessed, saying: Blessed be my people of Egypt, and the work of my hands to the Assyrian: but Israel is my inheritance.

CHAP. XX.

The ignominious captivity of the Egyptians, and the Ethiopians.

IN^b the year that Tharthan entered into Azotus, when Sargon, the king of the Assyrians, had sent him, and he had fought against Azotus, and had taken it:

2 At that same time the Lord spoke by the hand of Isaias, the son of Amos, saying: "Go, and loose the sackcloth from off thy loins, and take off thy shoes from thy feet. And he did so, and went naked, and barefoot.

3 And the Lord said: As my servant, Isaias, hath walked naked and barefoot, it shall be a sign and a wonder of three years upon Egypt, and upon Ethiopia,

4 So shall the king of the Assyrians lead away the prisoners of Egypt, and the captivity of Ethiopia, young and old, naked and barefoot, with their buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt.

5 And they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia, their hope, and of Egypt, their glory.

6 And the inhabitants of this isle shall say in that day: Lo, this was our hope, to whom we fled for help, to deliver us from the face of the king of the Assyrians: and how shall we be able to escape?

c Zach. xiii. 4; Matt. iii. 4.

Misna, tr. Moneuth, xiii. 10.—Monument. The cross is set up wherever Christ is adored. C.

VER. 21. Egypt. The kings often caused sacrifices to be offered for them: but they were not acceptable as long as they continued idolaters. The country was converted to Christianity, (C.) and the Anchorites performed their vows and penitential exercises, to the admiration of all. H.

VER. 22. Scourge. By means of Sennacherib, Cambyses, and Ochus. Afterwards the country was quietly subject to the kings of Persia, Alexander, the Ptolemies, and the Romans. C.

VER. 24. Land. The apostles, who were true Israelites, (H.) procured the blessing of faith for these nations, (C.) to serve God with concord. H.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. Year. Eighteen after the preceding predictions. C.—Sargon. Sennacherib, (S. Jer.) Salmanasar, (Sanct.) or Assaradon, who intended to revenge Sennacherib, and sent his "collector of taxes" to take Azotus from Ezechias, and then to proceed further. C.

VER. 2. Sackcloth. The prophets lived in poverty. Zach. xiii. 4. Their persons were prophetic.—People are said to be naked when they are almost so 4 Kings vi.; John xxi. H.

VER. 3. Years. Isaias went so long, or perhaps only three days undressed Num. xiv. 34; Ezech. iv. 5. Egypt and the Arabian Ethiopia were to be abandoned to the Assyrians in or during three years.

VER. 5. Glory. The alliance of these nations shall not avail the Jews, who are said to inhabit an island, because they neglected God's service no less than the most distant and abandoned nations. C.

CHAP. XXI.

The destruction of Babylon by the Medes and Persians: a prophecy against the Edomites and the Arabians.

THE burden of the desert of the sea. As whirlwinds come from the south, it cometh from the desert, from a terrible land.

2 A grievous vision is told me: he that is unfaithful dealeth unfaithfully: and he that is a spoiler, spoileth. Go up, O Elam, besiege, O Mede: I have made all the mourning thereof to cease.

3 Therefore are my loins filled with pain; anguish hath taken hold of me, as the anguish of a woman in labour: I fell down at the hearing of it; I was troubled at the seeing of it.

4 My heart failed; darkness amazed me: Babylon, my beloved, is become a wonder to me.

5 Prepare the table; behold in the watch-tower them that eat and drink: arise, ye princes, take up the shield.

6 For thus hath the Lord said to me: Go, and set a watchman; and whatsoever he shall see, let him tell.

7 And he saw a chariot, with two horsemen, a rider upon an ass, and a rider upon a camel: and he beheld them diligently with much heed.

8 And a lion cried out, I am upon the watch-tower of the Lord, standing continually by day; and I am upon my ward, standing whole nights.

9 Behold this man cometh; the rider upon the chariot, with two horsemen, and he answered, and said: "Babylon is fallen, she is fallen, and all the graven gods thereof are broken unto the ground."

10 O my threshing, and the children of my floor, that which I have heard of the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, I have declared unto you.

11 The burden of Duma calleth to me out of Seir: Watchman, what of the night? watchman, what of the night?

12 The watchman said: The morning cometh, also the night: if you seek, seek: return, come.

13 The burden in Arabia. In the forest at evening you shall sleep, in the paths of Dedanim.

14 Meeting the thirsty, bring him water, you that inhabit the land of the south; meet with bread him that fleeth.

^a Hab. ii. 1.—^b Jer. li. 8; Apoc. xiv. 8.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. The desert of the sea. So Babylon is here called, because from a city as full of people as the sea is with water, it was become a desert. Ch.—After its fall, it was mostly inundated. Chap. xiii. 20.—Land. Media and Persia, which lay to the south, and were not so beautiful as the environs of Babylon.

VER. 2. Spoileth. Baltassar is incorrigible, or his opponents must proceed. C.—Elam; that is, O Persia (Ch.): Cyrus, and Darius, the Mede. C.—The former nation was weak, and the latter strong. W.—Cease. The enemy will show no pity; nor shall I; as Babylon did not heretofore. H.

VER. 3. Pain. He bewails the crimes and the fall of Babylon, which at this time was in anity with Ezechias. Ver. 10. C.

VER. 4. Babylon. Prot. "the night of my pleasure hath he turned into fear unto me." Sept. "My soul is turned into fear." H.

VER. 5. Drink. Persians, refresh yourselves.—Take up. Heb. "anoint."

VER. 7. Camel. These two riders are the kings of the Persians and Medes. Ch.—The centinel, placed by Isaías, in spirit, or rather by the king of Babylon, brings these tidings. C.

VER. 8. Out. Lit. "He cried, a lion." H.—Cyrus appears like one. Sept. "And call Urias to the watch-tower," &c. Chap. viii. 2.

VER. 10. Floor: you who must shortly be reduced to the utmost distress. Baladan was friendly to Ezechias. But Assaradon having seized Babylon, took Manasses prisoner; and the city thenceforward continued to fill up the measure of its sins. C.

15 For they are fled from before the swords, from the sword that hung over them, from the bent bow, from the face of a grievous battle.

16 For thus saith the Lord to me: Within a year, according to the years of a hireling, all the glory of Cedar shall be taken away.

17 And the residue of the number of strong archers of the children of Cedar shall be diminished: for the Lord, the God of Israel, hath spoken it.

CHAP. XXII.

The prophet laments the devastation of Juda. He foretells the deprivation of Sobna, and substitution of Eliacim, a figure of Christ.

THE burden of the valley of vision. What aileth thee also, that thou too art wholly gone up to the house-tops?

2 Full of clamour, a populous city, a joyous city: thy slain are not slain by the sword, nor dead in battle.

3 All thy princes are fled together, and are bound hard: all that were found, are bound together, they are fled far off.

4 Therefore have I said: Depart from me, I will weep bitterly: labour not to comfort me, for the devastation of the daughter of my people.

5 For it is a day of slaughter, and of treading down, and of weeping to the Lord, the God of hosts, in the valley of vision, searching the wall, and magnificent upon the mountain.

6 And Elam took the quiver, the chariot of the horseman, and the shield was taken down from the wall.

7 And thy choice valleys shall be full of chariots, and the horsemen shall place themselves in the gate.

8 And the covering of Juda shall be discovered, and thou shalt see in that day the armoury of the house of the forest.

9 And you shall see the breaches of the city of David, that they are many: and you have gathered together the waters of the lower pool.

10 And have numbered the houses of Jerusalem, and broken down houses to fortify the wall.

11 And you made a ditch between the two walls for the water of the old pool: and you have not looked up to the maker thereof, nor regarded him even at a distance that wrought it long ago.

^c 4 Kings xx. 20; 2 Par. xxxii. 30.

VER. 11. Duma. That is, Idumea, or Edom. Ch.—It was a city of that country, twenty miles from Eleutheropolis. S. Jer.—Assaradon desolated Idumea the year following. Ver. 16.

VER. 13. Arabia. This sentence is not in the Rom. (C.) or Alex. Sept., (H.) and Dedan is a city of Idumea. C.—The Ismaelites are threatened. W.

VER. 16. Hireling: counting precisely. Chap. xvi. 14. C.—Cedar: Arabia, (Ch.) near to Edom. C.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. The valley of vision: Jerusalem. The temple of Jerusalem was built upon Mount Moria, or the mountain of vision. But the city is here called, the valley of vision, either because it was lower than the temple, or because of the low condition to which it was to be reduced (Ch.) during the captivity. W.

VER. 4. People. He saw this in spirit, though he might not live to witness it. C.

VER. 5. Searching. That day beheld the Assyrians (H.) undermining the wall, and behaving with haughtiness (C.) on Mount Sion. H.

VER. 8. Covering. Heb. mosoe, (H.) "shade," for the convenience of the people. 4 Kings xvi. 18.—Forest, built by Solomon. Ezechias has also procured store of arms, which were now delivered out to the citizens.

VER. 9. Many, but you have neglected them, (C.) till it be too late. H.—Pool, communicating with Gehon on the west. C.

VER. 11. Walls. Manasses enclosed the pool within walls, forming a second town. 4 Kings xxii. 29.

12 And the Lord, the God of hosts, in that day shall call to weeping, and to mourning, to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth :

13 And behold joy and gladness, killing calves, and slaying rams, eating flesh, and drinking wine : * Let us eat, and drink ; for to-morrow we shall die.

14 And the voice of the Lord of hosts was revealed in my ears : Surely this iniquity shall not be forgiven you till you die, saith the Lord God of hosts.

15 Thus saith the Lord God of hosts : Go, get thee in to him that dwelleth in the tabernacle, to Sobna, who is over the temple : and thou shalt say to him :

16 What dost thou here, or as if thou wert somebody here? for thou hast hewed thee out a sepulchre here, thou hast hewed out a monument carefully in a high place, a dwelling for thyself in a rock.

17 Behold the Lord will cause thee to be carried away, as a cock is carried away, and he will lift thee up as a garment.

18 He will crown thee with a crown of tribulation ; he will toss thee like a ball into a large and spacious country : there shalt thou die, and there shall the chariot of thy glory be, the shame of the house of thy lord.

19 And I will drive thee out from thy station, and depose thee from thy ministry.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant Eliacim the son of Helcias.

21 And I will clothe him with thy robe, and will strengthen him with thy girdle, and will give thy power into his hand : and he shall be as a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Juda.

22 ^b And I will lay the key of the house of David upon his shoulder : and he shall open, and none shall shut : and he shall shut, and none shall open.

23 And I will fasten him as a peg in a sure place, and he shall be for a throne of glory to the house of his father.

24 And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, divers kinds of vessels, every little vessel, from the vessels of cups, even to every instrument of music.

25 In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, shall the peg be removed, that was fastened in the sure place : and it shall be broken and shall fall : and that which hung thereon, shall perish, because the Lord hath spoken it.

CHAP. XXIII.

The destruction of Tyre. It shall be repaired again after seventy years.

* Wisd. ii. 6 ; Infra, lvi. 12 ; 1 Cor. xv. 32.

VER. 14. Die. The repentance of Manasses, and the piety of Josias, could not avert the storm.

VER. 15. Temple, in the place of Eliacim. He had been secretary before, (C.) and had intruded himself into some office in the temple, which he abused. W.

VER. 17. Cock. S. Jerom's master assured him that the word which is usually rendered a warrior, has this meaning. H.—The comparison agrees well with a proud man reduced to misery. C.—Heb. "With the captivity of a man, and he will cover thee." Sept. "he will cast out and bruise the man, and will take away thy comely robe, and throw thee into," &c. H.

VER. 18. Lord ; Manasses, who hath exalted thee. C.

VER. 20. Eliacim, who had been displaced, ver. 15. He acted as regent after the departure of Manasses, who always followed his counsels at his return. Judith iv. 5. The priesthood was not then incompatible with civil and military functions.

VER. 21. Girdle, the badge of power. Job xii. 18.

VER. 22. Shoulder. Here the marks of dignity were worn. Eliacim was appointed master of the palace, over all the other servants. C.—Thus we may gather what power Christ conferred on S. Peter, when he gave him the keys of heaven. Matt. xvi. 19 ; Apoc. iii. 7. H.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Tyre was destroyed, in part, by Nabuchodonosor.

THE burden of Tyre. Howl, ye ships of the sea, for the house is destroyed, from whence they were wont to come : from the land of Cethim it is revealed to them.

2 Be silent, you that dwell in the island : the merchants of Sidon passing over the sea, have filled thee.

3 The seed of the Nile, in many waters, the harvest of the river, is her revenue : and she is become the mart of the nations.

4 Be thou ashamed, O Sidon : for the sea speaketh, even the strength of the sea, saying : I have not been in labour, nor have I brought forth, nor have I nourished up young men, nor brought up virgins.

5 When it shall be heard in Egypt, they will be sorry when they shall hear of Tyre :

6 Pass over the seas, howl, ye inhabitants of the island.

7 Is not this your city, which gloried from of old in her antiquity ? her feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.

8 Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, that was formerly crowned, whose merchants were princes, and her traders the nobles of the earth ?

9 The Lord of hosts hath designed it, to pull down the pride of all glory, and bring to disgrace all the glorious ones of the earth.

10 Pass thy land as a river, O daughter of the sea, thou hast a girdle no more.

11 He stretched out his hand over the sea : he troubled kingdoms : the Lord hath given a charge against Chanaan, to destroy the strong ones thereof,

12 And he said : Thou shalt glory no more, O virgin, daughter of Sidon, who art oppressed : arise and sail over to Cethim, there also thou shalt have no rest.

13 Behold the land of the Chaldeans, there was not such a people, the Assyrian founded it : they have led away the strong ones thereof into captivity ; they have destroyed the houses thereof ; they have brought it to ruin.

14 Howl, O ye ships of the sea, for your strength is laid waste.

15 And it shall come to pass in that day, that thou, O Tyre, shalt be forgotten, seventy years, according to the days of one king : but after seventy years, there shall be unto Tyre as the song of a harlot.

16 Take a harp, go about the city, thou harlot, that hast been forgotten : sing well, sing many a song, that thou mayest be remembered.

^b Apoc. iii. 7 ; Job xii. 14.

Cyrus permitted all the captives of this, as well as of other countries, to return. Cethim ; Cyrus, or rather Macedonia. Merchants come thence no longer.

VER. 2. Island. Tyre was originally surrounded with water. A communication with the land was made afterwards. Jos. xix. 29. C. Ezec. xxvii. W.

VER. 3. Nile. Heb. Sihor, or "muddy water," designates that river. Jos. xiii. 3.

VER. 4. Strength : people who sail. Sept. "But the strength . . . replied : I," &c. Sidon will not be concerned for the fall of her rival. She alleges that she has nothing to do with Tyre. That city would not allow that it was a colony of Sidon. Ver. 12. C.

VER. 6. Seas. The rich Tyrians did so. S. Jer.—Sept. "to Carthage." Heb. Tharsis, in Cilicia. C.

VER. 8. Earth. The merchants were as rich as kings, or the latter sent their merchandise to Tyre. Ezec. xxvii. 33.

VER. 13. It. Heb. adds, "for fishermen." It was formerly covered with water. Eus. Præp. 9.—Ruin. The fall of Babylon has been denounced. Chap. xiii.

VER. 15. King Nabuchodonosor, whose two sons reigned but a short time. The captivity of the people of God began also A. 3308, and ended A. 3468, the first of Cyrus.—Harlot. She shall be re-established, (C.) and shall invite people

17 And it shall come to pass after seventy years, that the Lord will visit Tyre, and will bring her back again to her traffic: and she shall commit fornication again with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth.

18 And her merchandise and her hire shall be sanctified to the Lord: they shall not be kept in store, nor laid up: for her merchandise shall be for them that shall dwell before the Lord, that they may eat unto fulness, and be clothed for a continuance.

CHAP. XXIV.

The judgments of God upon all the sinners of the world. A remnant shall joyfully praise him.

BEHOLD, the Lord shall lay waste the earth, and shall strip it, and shall afflict the face thereof, and scatter abroad the inhabitants thereof.

2 *And it shall be as with the people, so with the priest: and as with the servant, so with his master: as with the handmaid, so with her mistress: as with the buyer, so with the seller: as with the lender, so with the borrower: as with him that calleth for his money, so with him that oweth.

3 With desolation shall the earth be laid waste, and it shall be utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word.

4 The earth mourned, and faded away, and is weakened: the world faded away, the height of the people of the earth is weakened.

5 And the earth is infected by the inhabitants thereof: because they have transgressed the laws, they have changed the ordinance, they have broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore shall a curse devour the earth, and the inhabitants thereof shall sin: and therefore they that dwell therein shall be mad, and few men shall be left.

7 The vintage hath mourned; the vine hath languished away; all the merry-hearted have sighed.

8 The mirth of timbrels hath ceased; the noise of them that rejoice is ended; the melody of the harp is silent.

9 They shall not drink wine with a song: the drink hall be bitter to them that drink it.

10 The city of vanity is broken down; every house is shut up, no man cometh in.

11 There shall be a crying for wine in the streets: all mirth is forsaken: the joy of the earth is gone away.

VER. 18. Sanctified to the Lord. This alludes to the conversion of the Gentiles. Ch.—Before, the Tyrians were great enemies of the Jews. 2 Esd. xiii. 16, and 1 Mac. v. 15. Our Saviour wrought a miracle in favour of one of this country. Matt. v. 22; Zac. viii. 20. C.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Earth. After the ten preceding threats, the prophet denounces destruction to the whole world, (W.) at the day of judgment; though he may also allude to the desolation of the promised land, as our Saviour joins both in the same prediction. Matt. xxiv. C.

VER. 4. Weakened: Joakim, &c. are made prisoners. The greatest monarchs must come before God's tribunal.

VER. 6. Sin. Towards the end of the world iniquity will abound, and men shall rage against each other. Matt. xxiv. W.—They will also feel the effects of sin.—Mad: abandoned to their passions, (Deut. xxviii. 28,) excepting only the elect. M.—Few. The Chaldees permitted only a few of the poorest sort to remain. 2 Par. xxix. 10

12 Desolation is left in the city, and calamity shall oppress the gates.

13 For it shall be thus in the midst of the earth, in the midst of the people, as if a few olives, that remain, should be shaken out of the olive-tree: or grapes, when the vintage is ended.

14 These shall lift up their voice, and shall give praise: when the Lord shall be glorified, they shall make a joyful noise from the sea.

15 Therefore glorify ye the Lord in instruction: the name of the Lord God of Israel in the islands of the sea.

16 From the ends of the earth we have heard praises, the glory of the just one. And I said: My secret to myself, my secret to myself, woe is me: the prevaricators have prevaricated, and with the prevarication of transgressors they have prevaricated.

17 Fear, and the pit, and the snare are upon thee, O thou inhabitant of the earth.

18 And it shall come to pass, ^bthat he that shall flee from the noise of the fear, shall fall into the pit: and he that shall rid himself out of the pit, shall be taken in the snare: for the flood-gates from on high are opened, and the foundations of the earth shall be shaken.

19 With breaking shall the earth be broken; with crushing shall the earth be crushed; with trembling shall the earth be moved.

20 With shaking shall the earth be shaken, as a drunken man, and shall be removed as the tent of one night: and the iniquity thereof shall be heavy upon it, and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21 And it shall come to pass, that in that day the Lord shall visit upon the host of heaven on high, and upon the kings of the earth, on the earth.

22 And they shall be gathered together as in the gathering of one bundle into the pit, and they shall be shut up there in prison: and after many days they shall be visited.

23 *And the moon shall blush, and the sun shall be ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Sion, and in Jerusalem, and shall be glorified in the sight of his ancients.

CHAP. XXV.

A canticle of thanksgiving for God's judgments and benefits.

O LORD, thou art my God, I will exalt thee, and give glory to thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things, thy designs of old, faithful, Amen.

* Joel ii. 31: Acts ii. 20.

VER. 9. The drink. Heb. sichar, "palm wine."

VER. 14. Sea. The few elect, (ver. 13,) being rescued from the misery of the world, shall praise God. H.—They are exhorted to lift up their heads. Luke xxi. 28. M.

VER. 16. I said. The prophet, or any other, may speak thus in the latter days. C.—Myself. I cannot recount what horrid pains I beheld. S. Jer. M. 2 Cor. xii. 4.

VER. 17. Snare. He alludes to the methods of taking wild beasts. Job xviii. 11.

VER. 18. Opened, as they were in the days of Noe. C.

VER. 21. High. The stars, which in many places of the Scripture are so called. Some commentators explain that these words here signify the demons of the air. Ch.—The apostate angels will be judged. 1 Cor. vi. 3; Matt. xxiv. 20.

VER. 22. Visited. Hence Origen (Prin. iii. 6 &c.) took occasion to assert, that the damned would one day be released, though the Scripture so often declares the contrary. The prophet speaks of the future liberation of the Jews (C.); or he intimates that after many days, yea, throughout eternity, there probate will still be punished. M.

2 For thou hast reduced the city to a heap, the strong city to ruin, the house of strangers, to be no city, and to be no more built up for ever.

3 Therefore shall a strong people praise thee; the city of mighty nations shall fear thee.

4 Because thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress: a refuge from the whirlwind, a shadow from the heat. For the blast of the mighty is like a whirlwind beating against a wall.

5 Thou shalt bring down the tumult of strangers, as heat in thirst: and as with heat under a burning cloud, thou shalt make the branch of the mighty to wither away.

6 And the Lord of hosts shall make unto all people in this mountain, a feast of fat things, a feast of wine, of fat things full of marrow, of wine purified from the lees.

7 And he shall destroy in this mountain the face of the bond with which all people were tied, and the web that he began over all nations.

8 He shall cast death down headlong for ever: and the Lord God shall wipe away tears from every face; and the reproach of his people he shall take away from off the whole earth: for the Lord hath spoken it.

9 And they shall say in that day: Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord, we have patiently waited for him, we shall rejoice and be joyful in his salvation.

10 For the hand of the Lord shall rest in this mountain: and Moab shall be trodden down under him, as straw is broken in pieces with the wain.

11 And he shall stretch forth his hands under him, as he that swimmeth stretcheth forth his hands to swim: and he shall bring down his glory with the dashing of his hands.

12 And the bulwarks of thy high walls shall fall, and be brought low, and shall be pulled down to the ground, even to the dust.

CHAP. XXVI.

A canticle of thanks for the deliverance of God's people.

IN that day shall this canticle be sung in the land of Juda. Sion, the city of our strength, a Saviour, a wall, and a bulwark, shall be set therein.

2 Open ye the gates, and let the just nation, that keepeth the truth, enter in.

3 The old error is passed away: thou wilt keep peace: peace, because we have hoped in thee.

* Apoc. vii. 17, and xxi. 4.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Amen. He approves of God's judgments (H.) against Jerusalem. W.

VER. 3. People; the Chaldees, or their conquerors.

VER. 4. Poor; Juda, whom Nabuchodonosor's fury could not exterminate.

VER. 5. Away. Cyrus (C.) shall reduce Babylon the great. H.

VER. 6. Mountain of Sion, a figure of the Church, and of heaven. The Jews shall feast: yea, some of all nations shall partake of the blessed Eucharist, and obtain heaven. The expressions are too grand for a corruptible feast. C.

VER. 8. Ever. Heb. "he shall swallow up death in victory." 1 Cor. xv. 54. (1st, by dying, conquered death, and rescued us from its power, if we do not voluntarily subject ourselves to it again. This was faintly represented by the liberation of the captives.

VER. 10. Mountain the Church. C.—Moab. That is, the reprobate, whose eternal punishment, from which they can no way escape, is described under these figures. Ch.—The Machabees probably executed this vengeance on Moab. 1 Mac. v. 6.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Day. Under the law of grace, Christians sing this and such like canticles. W.—Sion. This word is not in Heb., &c., though it be understood C.—The captives continue to return thanks. Yet the Holy Ghost speaks chiefly of the Church, and of the general resurrection. C.

4 You have hoped in the Lord for evermore, in the Lord God, mighty for ever.

5 For he shall bring down them that dwell on high; the high city he shall lay low. He shall bring it down even to the ground; he shall pull it down even to the dust.

6 The foot shall tread it down; the feet of the poor, the steps of the needy.

7 The way of the just is right; the path of the just is right to walk in.

8 And in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, we have patiently waited for thee: thy name, and thy remembrance are the desire of the soul.

9 My soul hath desired thee in the night: yea, and with my spirit within me, in the morning early, I will watch to thee. When thou shalt do thy judgments on the earth, the inhabitants of the world shall learn justice.

10 Let us have pity on the wicked; but he will not learn justice: in the land of the saints he hath done wicked things, and he shall not see the glory of the Lord.

11 Lord, let thy hand be exalted, and let them not see: let the envious people see, and be confounded: and let fire devour thy enemies.

12 Lord, thou wilt give us peace: for thou hast wrought all our works for us.

13 O Lord, our God, other lords besides thee have had dominion over us, only in thee let us remember thy name

14 Let not the dead live, let not the giants rise again: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and hast destroyed all their memory.

15 Thou hast been favourable to the nation, O Lord, thou hast been favourable to the nation: art thou glorified? thou hast removed all the ends of the earth far off.

16 Lord, they have sought after thee in distress; in the tribulation of murmuring thy instruction was with them.

17 As a woman with child, when she draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs, so are we become in thy presence, O Lord.

18 We have conceived, and been as it were in labour, and have brought forth wind: we have not wrought salvation on the earth, therefore the inhabitants of the earth have not fallen.

19 Thy dead men shall live, my slain shall rise again: awake, and give praise, ye that dwell in the dust: for thy

VER. 3. Away; condemning the virtuous, as if they were fools. M.—Sym. "our work, or fiction, is taken away." Heb. may have other meanings. H.

VER. 4. You, people of Juda.

VER. 5. High: Nabuchodonosor and his empire.

VER. 6. Needy. The Jews shall behold the ruin of the city by Cyrus, (C.) who was of a contemptible nation. H.

VER. 10. Justice. Clemency would therefore be ill placed. If the Israelites had not been led away captives, would they ever have been reformed?

VER. 11. Not see. Let them perish, or live to witness the glory of the Jews.

VER. 12. Works, both in punishing and rewarding. C.—God crowns his own gifts. E.

VER. 15. Nation of the Jews. C.—Sept. "add evils to them, O Lord; add evils to the nobles of the land." H.—Heb. may have the same sense.—Ends: princes, or the Chaldees, sending them also into captivity; or thou hast propagated thy Church over the world.

VER. 18. Wind. Our expectation of aid from others has been disappointed. C.—Sept. "the spirit of thy salvation, which thou hast wrought on the earth. We shall not fall, but the inhabitants of the earth shall fall." H.—Their copies must have been different from ours.

VER. 19. Dead: a civil death, shall regain their liberty; and those who have dew is the dew of the light: and the land of the giants thou shalt pull down into ruin.

20 Go, my people, enter into thy chambers, shut thy doors upon thee, hide thyself a little for a moment, until the indignation pass away.

21 *For behold the Lord will come out of his place, to visit the iniquity of the inhabitant of the earth against him: and the earth shall disclose her blood, and shall cover her slain no more.

CHAP. XXVII.

The punishment of the oppressors of God's people. The Lord's favour to his Church.

IN that day the Lord, with his hard, and great, and strong sword, shall visit Leviathan, the bar serpent, and Leviathan, the crooked serpent, and shall slay the whale that is in the sea.

2 In that day there shall be singing to the vineyard of pure wine.

3 I am the Lord that keep it, I will suddenly give it drink: lest any hurt come to it, I keep it night and day.

4 There is no indignation in me: who shall make me a thorn and a brier in battle: shall I march against it, shall I set it on fire together.

5 Or rather, shall it take hold of my strength, shall it make peace with me, shall it make peace with me?

6 When they shall rush in unto Jacob, Israel shall blossom and bud, and they shall fill the face of the world with seed.

7 Hath he struck him according to the stroke of him that struck him? or is he slain, as he killed them that were slain by him?

8 In measure against measure, when it shall be cast off, thou shalt judge it. He hath meditated with his severe spirit in the day of heat.

9 Therefore upon this shall the iniquity of the house of Jacob be forgiven? and this is all the fruit, that the sin thereof should be taken away, when he shall have made all the stones of the altar, as burnt stones broken in pieces, the groves and temples shall not stand.

10 For the strong city shall be desolate, the beautiful city shall be forsaken, and shall be left as a wilderness:

* Mic. i. 3.

left this world in a state of virtue, shall be happy.—Ruin. Cyrus liberated the Jews, having conquered Babylon.

VER. 21. Shall cover her slain no more. This is said with relation to the martyrs, and their happy resurrection. Ch.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Hard. Sept. "holy." C.—Leviathan. That is, the devil, the great enemy of the people of God. He is called the bar serpent from his strength, and the crooked serpent from his wiles, and the whale of the sea, from the tyranny he exercises in the sea of this world. He was spiritually slain by the death of Christ, when his power was destroyed. Ch.—It may also literally refer to Nabuchodonosor, and the king of Egypt, or rather to Cambyeses, or Holofernes, but particularly Cambyeses. C.

VER. 2. Vineyard; the Church of Christ, (Ch.) or Judea.

VER. 3. Drink; or, as the Hebrew may also be rendered, I will continually water it. Ch.—God will protect his people. C.

VER. 4. In me, against the Church; nor shall I become as a thorn or brier in its regard; or march against it, or set it on fire: but it shall always take fast hold of me, and keep an everlasting peace with me. Ch.—God rather speaks of the enemy. If he attempt to lay waste this vineyard, I will chastise him. C.

VER. 6. Rush in. Some understand this of the enemies of the true Israel, that shall invade it in vain. Others, of the spiritual invasion made by the apostles of Christ. Ch.

VER. 7. Struck. Hath God punished the carnal persecuting Jews, in proportion to their doings against Christ and his saints? Ch.

VER. 8. Cast off. When the synagogue shall be cast off, thou shalt judge it in there the calf shall feed, and there shall he lie down, and shall consume its branches.

11 Its harvests shall be destroyed with drought, women shall come and teach it; for it is not a wise people, therefore he that made it, shall not have mercy on it: and he that formed it, shall not spare it.

12 And it shall come to pass, that in that day the Lord will strike from the channel of the river even to the torrent of Egypt, and you shall be gathered together one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass, that in that day a noise shall be made with a great trumpet, and they that were lost, shall come from the land of the Assyrians, and they that were outcasts in the land of Egypt, and they shall adore the Lord in the holy mount in Jerusalem.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The punishment of the Israelites, for their pride, intemperance, and contempt of religion. Christ the corner-stone.

WOE to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, and to the fading flower, the glory of his joy, who were on the head of the fat valley, staggering with wine.

2 Behold, the Lord is mighty and strong, as a storm of hail; a destroying whirlwind, as the violence of many waters overflowing, and sent forth upon a spacious land.

3 The crown of pride of the drunkards of Ephraim shall be trodden under feet.

4 And the fading flower, the glory of his joy, who is on the head of the fat valley, shall be as a hasty fruit before the ripeness of autumn: which, when he that seeth it shall behold, as soon as he taketh it in his hand, he will eat it up.

5 In that day the Lord of hosts shall be a crown of glory, and a garland of joy to the residue of his people:

6 And a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and strength to them that return out of the battle to the gate.

7 But these also have been ignorant through wine, and through drunkenness have erred: the priest and the prophet have been ignorant through drunkenness; they are swallowed up with wine; they have gone astray in drunkenness; they have not known him that seeth; they have been ignorant of judgment.

measure, and in proportion to its crimes. Ch.—The Israelites have been rigorously punished. C.—He, &c. God hath designed severe punishments in the day of his wrath. Ch.

VER. 9. Jacob; viz. of such of them as shall be converted. Ch.—Altar, dedicated to idols: then he shall obtain pardon. C.

VER. 10. City. Jerusalem, (Ch.) or more probably Babylon, of which he is going to speak.

VER. 12. River Euphrates, even to the Nile. H.—Nabuchodonosor laid waste all the intermediate countries. Afterwards Cyrus gave the people liberty. On the death of Cambyeses the nations were in consternation; and it was only during the peaceable reign of Darius that Israel returned, though not in a body, as the Jews had done twenty years before. Chap. xxvi. C.

VER. 13. Trumpet. The preaching of the gospel for the conversion of the Jews. Ch.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Ephraim. That is, the kingdom of the ten tribes. Ch.—Flower. The pride of the kingdom shall thus decay. M.—Head. Samaria, situated on a hill, having under it a most fertile valley. Ch.—See Amos ii. 6, and iv. 2. Samaria was taken in the sixth year of Ezechias.

VER. 6. Gate. Ezechias reunited the divided kingdoms, and inspired his troops with courage, bringing them back victorious. 2 Par. xxx. 1, and 4 Kings xviii. 7. C.

VER. 7. These also. The kingdom of Juda. Ch.—Ezechias could not correct every abuse; though what is here specified regards rather the reigns of his successors.

8 For all tables were full of vomit and filth, so that there was no more place.

9 Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand the hearing? them that are weaned from the milk, that are drawn away from the breasts.

10 For command, command again, command, command again; expect, expect again, expect, expect again; a little there, a little there.

11 *For with the speech of lips, and with another tongue he will speak to this people.

12 To whom he said: This is my rest, refresh the weary, and this is my refreshing: and they would not hear.

13 And the word of the Lord shall be to them: Command, command again; command, command again; expect, expect again; expect, expect again; a little there, a little there: that they may go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

14 Wherefore, hear the word of the Lord; ye scornful men, rule over my people that is in Jerusalem.

15 For you have said: We have entered into a league with death, and we have made a covenant with hell. When the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come upon us: for we have placed our hope in lies, and by falsehood we are protected.

16 ^bTherefore, thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will lay a stone in the foundations of Sion, a tried stone, a corner-stone, a precious stone, founded in the foundation. He that believeth, let him not hasten.

17 And I will set judgment in weight, and justice in measure: and hail shall overturn the hope of falsehood: and waters shall overflow its protection.

18 And your league with death shall be abolished, and your covenant with hell shall not stand: when the overflowing scourge shall pass, you shall be trodden down by it.

19 Whensoever it shall pass through, it shall take you away; because in the morning early it shall pass through, in the day and in the night, and vexation alone shall make you understand what you hear.

20 For the bed is straitened, so that one must fall out, and a short covering cannot cover both.

21 *For the Lord shall stand up as in the mountain of divisions: ^ahe shall be angry as in the valley which is in Gabaon: that he may do his work, his strange work: that he may perform his work, his work is strange to him.

22 And now do not mock, lest your bonds be tied strait. For I have heard of the Lord, the God of hosts, a consumption and a cutting short upon all the earth.

23 Give ear, and hear my voice, hearken, and hear my speech.

24 Shall the ploughman plough all the day to sow? shall he open and harrow his ground?

25 Will he not, when he hath made plain the surface thereof, sow gith, and scatter cummin, and put wheat in order, and barley, and millet, and vetches in their bounds?

26 For he will instruct him in judgment: his God will teach him.

27 For gith shall not be threshed with saws, neither shall the cart-wheel turn about upon cummin: but gith shall be beaten out with a rod, and cummin with a staff.

28 But bread-corn shall be broken small: but the thresher shall not thresh it for ever; neither shall the cart-wheel hurt it, nor break it with its teeth.

29 This also is come forth from the Lord God of hosts, to make his counsel wonderful, and magnify justice.

CHAP. XXIX.

God's heavy judgments upon Jerusalem, for their blind obstinacy: with a prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles.

WOE to Ariel, to Ariel the city which David took: year is added to year: the solemnities are at an end.

2 And I will make a trench about Ariel, and it shall be in sorrow and mourning, and it shall be to me as Ariel.

3 And I will make a circle round about thee, and will cast up a rampart against thee, and raise up bulwarks to besiege thee.

4 Thou shalt be brought down, thou shalt speak out of the earth, and thy speech shall be heard out of the ground

* 1 Cor. xiv. 21.—^b Psal. cxvii. 22; Matt. xxi. 42; Acts iv. 11; Rom. ix. 33; 1 Pet. ii. 6.

VER. 9. Breasts. S. Paul seems to allude to this text. 1 Cor. iii. 2. C.

VER. 10. Command, &c. This is said in the person of the Jews, resisting the repeated commands of God, and still putting him off. Ch.—They deride the prophets, speaking words of no meaning, as if their predictions were no better. S. Jer.—The Nicholaites abused these words. S. Epip. 25.—Why do they not speak plain? Sometimes terrible things are denounced, then subjects of joy! Isaiah answers, that since they pretend not to understand, God will lead them into a country where they shall indeed have to learn the language, like children. Chap. xxix. 11. C.

VER. 12. Hear. To leave off their wicked practices and cruelty. The Jews would not understand: therefore Christ spoke to them in parables. Chap. vi. 9; Matt. xiii. 14, &c.

VER. 14. Men, who make a parade of your knowledge, (H.) to turn the most sacred things into ridicule.

VER. 15. Protected. Their conduct spoke this language. They would not fail to make alliances with Egypt, and to trust in idols, whatever the prophets might say to dissuade them. C.

VER. 16. Stone. Christ. Ch.—The Jews and Grotius would apply it to Ezechias. But he was already on the throne, and never could realize these glorious promises. The people were not to believe in him, &c. C.—Hasten. Let him expect his coming with patience. Ch.—It would be delayed some time.—Isaiah promises a Redeemer, though these people were unworthy; and then returns to his own times. M.

VER. 17. Measure. In the days of the Redeemer they shall lead a virtuous life, (C.) or the scornful shall be treated with rigour.

VER. 19. Hear. Under the last kings of Juda the misery was continual.

VER. 29. This also, &c. Such also is the proceeding of the Lord with his land, and the divers seeds he sows therein. Ch.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. Ariel. This word signifies the lion of God, and here is taken for the strong city of Jerusalem. Ch.—It was destroyed by the Chaldees (4 Kings xxv.); and still more by the Romans, forty years after Christ. W.—Ezechiel (xliii. 15) styles the altar of holocausts Ariel.

VER. 2. Trench. Sennacherib did not besiege the city. Chap. xxxvii. 33. But he made preparations for it, and his sentiments are expressed, (C.) together with the fatal consequences which he felt, when his army was offered up (H.) as a victim on the altar of holocausts. Ver. 1.

VER. 3. Circle. Thus provisions were cut off. C.

and thy voice shall be from the earth like that of the Python, and out of the ground thy speech shall mutter.

5 And the multitude of them that fan thee, shall be like small dust: and as ashes passing away, the multitude of them that have prevailed against thee.

6 And it shall be at an instant suddenly. A visitation shall come from the Lord of hosts in thunder, and with earthquake, and with a great noise of whirlwind and tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire.

7 And the multitude of all nations that have fought against Ariel, shall be as the dream of a vision by night, and all that have fought, and besieged, and prevailed against it.

8 And as he that is hungry dreameth, and eateth, but when he is awake, his soul is empty: and as he that is thirsty dreameth, and drinketh, and after he is awake, is yet faint with thirst, and his soul is empty: so shall be the multitude of all the Gentiles that have fought against Mount Sion.

9 Be astonished, and wonder, waver, and stagger: be drunk, and not with wine: stagger, and not with drunkenness.

10 For the Lord hath mingled for you the spirit of a deep sleep; he will shut up your eyes; he will cover your prophets and princes, that see visions.

11 And the vision of all shall be unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which when they shall deliver to one that is learned, they shall say: Read this: and he shall answer: I cannot, for it is sealed.

12 And the book shall be given to one that knoweth no letters, and it shall be said to him: Read: and he shall answer: I know no letters.

13 And the Lord said: Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips glorify me, but their heart is far from me, and they have feared me with the commandment and doctrines of men:

14 Therefore, behold I will proceed to cause an admiration in this people, by a great and wonderful miracle: for wisdom shall perish from their wise men, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

15 Woe to you that are deep of heart, to hide your counsel from the Lord: and their works are in the dark, and they say: "Who seeth us, and who knoweth us?"

16 This thought of yours is perverse: as if the clay should think against the potter, and the work should say to the maker thereof: Thou madest me not: or the thing framed should say to him that fashioned it: Thou understandest not.

17 Is it not yet a very little while, and Libanus shall be turned into charmel, and charmel shall be esteemed as a forest?

18 And in that day the deaf shall hear the words of the book, and out of darkness and obscurity the eyes of the blind shall see.

19 And the meek shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

20 For he that did prevail hath failed, the scorner is consumed, and they are all cut off that watched for iniquity:

21 That made men sin by word, and supplanted him that reproveth them in the gate, and declined in vain from the just.

22 Therefore, thus saith the Lord to the house of Jacob, he that redeemed Abraham: Jacob shall not now be confounded, neither shall his countenance now be ashamed.

23 But when he shall see his children, the work of my hands, in the midst of him sanctifying my name, and they shall sanctify the Holy One of Jacob, and shall glorify the God of Israel:

24 And they that erred in spirit, shall know under standing; and they that murmured, shall learn the law.

CHAP. XXX.

The people are blamed for their confidence in Egypt. God's mercies towards his Church: the punishment of sinners.

WOE to you, apostate children, saith the Lord, that you would take counsel, and not of me: and would begin a web, and not by my spirit, that you might add sin upon sin:

2 Who walk to go down into Egypt, and have not asked at my mouth, hoping for help in the strength of Pharaoh, and trusting in the shadow of Egypt.

3 And the strength of Pharaoh shall be to your confusion; and the confidence of the shadow of Egypt to your shame.

4 For thy princes were in Tanis, and thy messengers came even to Hanes.

5 They were all confounded at a people that could not profit them: they were no help, nor to any profit, but to confusion and to reproach.

11 Take away from me the way; turn away the path from me; let the Holy One of Israel cease from before us.

12 Therefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel: Because you have rejected this word, and have trusted in oppression and tumult, and have leaned upon it:

13 Therefore shall this iniquity be to you as a breach that falleth, and is found wanting in a high wall; for the destruction thereof shall come on a sudden, when it is not looked for.

14 And it shall be broken small, as the potter's vessel is broken all to pieces with mighty breaking, and there shall not a shard be found of the pieces thereof, wherein a little fire may be carried from the hearth, or a little water be drawn out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: If you return and be quiet, you shall be saved: in silence and in hope shall your strength be. And you would not:

16 But have said: No, but we will flee to horses: therefore shall you flee. And we will mount upon swift ones: therefore shall they be swifter that shall pursue after you.

17 A thousand men shall flee for fear of one: and for fear of five shall you flee, till you be left as the mast of a ship on the top of a mountain, and as an ensign upon a hill.

18 Therefore the Lord waiteth, that he may have mercy on you: and therefore shall he be exalted, sparing you: because the Lord is the God of judgment: blessed are all they that wait for him.

19 For the people of Sion shall dwell in Jerusalem: weeping, thou shalt not weep, he will surely have pity on thee: at the voice of thy cry, as soon as he shall hear, he will answer thee.

20 And the Lord will give you spare bread, and short water: and will not cause thy teacher to flee away from thee any more: and thy eyes shall see thy teacher.

21 And thy ears shall hear the word of one admonishing thee behind thy back: This is the way, walk ye in it: and go not aside neither to the right hand, nor to the left.

22 And thou shalt defile the plates of thy graven things of silver, and the garment of thy molten things of gold, and shalt cast them away as the uncleanness of a menstruous woman. Thou shalt say to it: Get thee hence.

23 And rain shall be given to thy seed, wheresoever thou shalt sow in the land: and the bread of the corn of the land shall be most plentiful and fat. The lamb in that day shall feed at large in thy possession:

24 And thy oxen, and the ass-colts that till the ground, shall eat mingled provender, as it was winnowed in the floor.

25 And there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every elevated hill, rivers of running waters in the day of the slaughter of many, when the towers shall fall.

26 And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day when the Lord shall bind up the wound of his people, and shall heal the stroke of their wound.

27 Behold the name of the Lord cometh from afar, his wrath burneth and is heavy to bear: his lips are filled with indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire.

28 His breath as a torrent overflowing even to the midst of the neck, to destroy the nations unto nothing, and the bridle of error that was in the jaws of the people.

29 You shall have a song as in the night of the sanctified solemnity, and joy of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe, to come into the mountain of the Lord, to the Mighty One of Israel.

30 And the Lord shall make the glory of his voice to be heard, and shall show the terror of his arm, in the threatening of wrath, and the flame of devouring fire: he shall crush to pieces with whirlwind, and hailstones.

31 For at the voice of the Lord the Assyrian shall fear being struck with the rod.

32 And the passage of the rod shall be strongly grounded, which the Lord shall make to rest upon him with timbrels and harps, and in great battles he shall overthrow them.

* Jer. xxxvii. 7.

Jew, (chap. xxi. 13,) though the Chal. and others explain it, "They carry on their beasts, presents to the south," to the nations of Arabia and Egypt, infested with lions, &c. The rest of the prophecy is against the Jews, who cannot well be styled beasts of the south. C.

VER. 7. Cried. Heb. "called it Rahab, (or pride,) it is rest." The people are indolent, though they will make great promises. C.

VER. 8. Box. This word was covered with wax. Propert. iii. 3.—Write, that none may pretend that they were not admonished.

VER. 12. Oppression. Lit. "calumny," (H.) or rebellion against the Assyrians. This was contrary to the respect due to God's name, used in the ratification of treaties, how wicked soever those princes might be.

VER. 16. Ones, or chariots. C.—Egypt was famous for horses. Deut. xvii. 16. Porcer.—Rabsaacs ridicules the Jews for the want of them. 4 Kings xviii. 23. H.

VER. 17. Five. A small number shall put you to flight. M.—Mast, set up after a shipwreck, to warn others, or as a signal. Chap. xxxiii. 23.

VER. 18. Wait for him. Having convinced Ezechias that he ought to trust in no other, the Lord rescues him from the hand of Sennacherib. C.

VER. 20. Water. The land will be reduced to a miserable condition by the ravages of Sennacherib. H.—The following was a sabbatical year. Ver. 23; chap. xxxvii. 30.

VER. 22. Garment. Heb. "ephod," belonging to the idol, or its priests. Ezechias had prohibited idolatry at first. After his deliverance he was still more zealous, and even those who had formerly retained an affection for idols, saw their vanity, and became sincere.

VER. 26. Sevenfold. Exceedingly great, equal to the light of forty-nine days. C.—The fame of Ezechias spread widely. His kingdom was a figure of that of Christ, when this was more perfectly realized, the preaching of the gospel having dispelled the darkness of error. C.—He alludes to the day of judgment. S. Jer. M.

VER. 28. Error. The unjust government of Sennacherib, who endeavoured to engage all in idolatry.

VER. 30. Stones. The angel raised the storm, which destroyed many, while the rest in a panic fell upon one another. Chap. ix. 5, and xxxvii. 36.

VER. 31. Rod. Sennacherib is terrified, who a few days before insulted the living God.

VER. 32. Harps. The sound of thunder will fill the people of Ezechias with joy, while the enemy shall perish irrecoverably. C.

33 For Topheth is prepared from yesterday, prepared by the king, deep, and wide. The nourishment thereof is fire and much wood: the breath of the Lord as a torrent of brimstone kindleth it.

CHAP. XXXI.

The folly of trusting to Egypt, and forgetting God. He will fight for his people against the Assyrians.

WOE to them that go down to Egypt for help, trusting in horses, and putting their confidence in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; and have not trusted in the Holy One of Israel, and have not sought after the Lord.

2 But he that is the wise one hath brought evil, and hath not removed his words: and he will rise up against the house of the wicked, and against the aid of them that work iniquity.

3 Egypt is man, and not God: and their horses, flesh, and not spirit: and the Lord shall put down his hand, and the helper shall fall, and he that is helped shall fall, and they shall all be confounded together.

4 For thus saith the Lord to me: Like as the lion roareth, and the lion's whelp upon his prey, and when a multitude of shepherds shall come against him, he will not fear at their voice, nor be afraid of their multitude: so shall the Lord of hosts come down to fight upon Mount Sion, and upon the hill thereof.

5 As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts protect Jerusalem, protecting and delivering, passing over and saving.

6 Return as you had deeply revolted, O children of Israel.

7 For in that day a man shall cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which your hands have made for you to sin.

8 *And the Assyrian shall fall by the sword, not of a man; and the sword, not of a man, shall devour him; and he shall flee not at the face of the sword: and his young men shall be tributaries:

9 And his strength shall pass away with dread, and his princes fleeing shall be afraid: the Lord hath said it, whose fire is in Sion, and his furnace in Jerusalem.

CHAP. XXXII.

The blessings of the reign of Christ. The desolation of the Jews, and prosperity of the Church of Christ.

a. Infra, xxvii. 36; 4 Kings xix. 35; 2 Par. xxxii. 21.

VER. 33. Topheth. It is the same as Gehenna, and is taken for hell. Ch.—The Assyrians perish amid horrid cries (H.) and thunders, which resembled the noise made by drums, and by children who were burning in the arms of Moloch. 4 Kings xviii. 4, and xxiii. 10, and 2 Par. xxix. 16.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 1. Chariots. He continues to inveigh against this practice. Chap. xxx. 16. C.—Salmanasar will ruin the ten tribes. M.

VER. 2. Words. The Lord will punish the wicked Jews, (C.) after the Egyptians. Joseph. x. 1.

VER. 3. Hand. If God neglect to support empires, they fall of themselves.

VER. 4. Thereof. He will thence hurl destruction on the distant enemy. C.

VER. 5. Over. He will protect Jerusalem, notwithstanding the menaces of Sennacherib, as he did his people from the destroying angel.

VER. 6. Revolted. Let your conversion bear proportion (C.) with your sins. H.

VER. 8. Flee not. Heb. "flee to himself," lu. Sept. and Vulg. have read la, "not." The angel destroyed the army, and the king was slain at his return.—Tributaries, Nineve being afterwards subject to the Chaldees, &c. C.—Heb. "shall melt." Vat.

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 1. King. Ezechias or Josias, as figures of Jesus Christ, who is meant. C.—They and their counsellors only foreshowed the advantages derived from Christ and his apostles in a more abundant manner. S. Jer.—Judgment

BEHOLD, a king shall reign in justice, and princes shall rule in judgment.

2 And a man shall be as when one is hid from the wind, and hideth himself from a storm, as rivers of waters in drought, and the shadow of a rock that standeth out in a desert land.

3 The eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken diligently.

4 And the heart of fools shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of stammerers shall speak readily and plain.

5 The fool shall no more be called prince: neither shall the deceitful be called great:

6 For the fool will speak foolish things, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and speak to the Lord deceitfully, and to make empty the soul of the hungry, and take away the drink from the thirsty.

7 The vessels of the deceitful are most wicked: for he hath framed devices to destroy the meek, with lying words, when the poor man speaketh judgment.

8 But the prince will devise such things as are worthy of a prince, and he shall stand above the rulers.

9 Rise up, ye rich women, and hear my voice: ye confident daughters, give ear to my speech,

10 For after days and a year, you that are confident shall be troubled: for the vintage is at an end, the gathering shall come no more.

11 Be astonished, ye rich women, be troubled, ye confident ones: strip you, and be confounded, gird your loins.

12 Mourn for your breasts, for the delightful country for the fruitful vineyard.

13 Upon the land of my people shall thorns and briers come up: how much more upon all the houses of joy, of the city that rejoiced?

14 For the house is forsaken, the multitude of the city is left, darkness and obscurity are come upon its den for ever. A joy of wild asses, the pastures of flocks.

15 Until the spirit be poured upon us from on high: and the desert shall be as a charmel, and charmel shall be counted for a forest.

16 And judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and justice shall sit in charmel.

17 And the work of justice shall be peace, and the service of justice quietness, and security for ever.

18 And my people shall sit in the beauty of peace, and in the tabernacles of confidence, and in wealthy rest.

and justice. These words have a higher meaning than what is assigned to them by philosophers. In God, the former implies the preparation of the means for man's redemption, as the latter does the execution; and in man, judgment denotes the selection of what is right, and justice implies the putting it willingly in practice.

VER. 3. Dim. True prophets shall speak, while false ones shall be silent. C.

VER. 5. Deceitful. Heb. "miser be called liberal." Luke xxii. 25. These good princes are contrasted with Achaz, who had oppressed his subjects.

VER. 7. Vessels. Arms, (C.) or all the words and actions of the miser are bent on evil. H.—The ministers of wicked princes resemble them. M.

VER. 9. Women. Great cities. He announces the impending dangers.

VER. 12. Mourn. Sept. "beat." H.—Breasts, suckling infants.

VER. 13. Up. Being uncultivated for two years. This was still more the case during the captivity. C.—How. Sept. "from every house joy shall be taken away, thou rich city." H.

VER. 15. High. as Ezechiel (xxxvii. 10) saw the dry bones rise again. Under this idea prosperity is frequently described.—Forest. Carmel was a fertile spot. Judea shall flourish, and Assyria shall be laid waste. The synagogue will be rejected, while the Gentiles, (C.) formerly so barren, shall embrace the faith and true piety. H.

19 But hail shall be in the descent of the forest, and the city shall be made very low.

20 Blessed are ye that sow upon all waters, sending thither the foot of the ox and the ass.

CHAP. XXXIII.

God's revenge against the enemies of his Church. The happiness of the heavenly Jerusalem.

WOE to thee that spoilest, shalt not thou thyself also be spoiled? and thou that despisest, shalt not thyself also be despised? when thou shalt have made an end of spoiling, thou shalt be spoiled: when being wearied, thou shalt cease to despise, thou shalt be despised.

2 O Lord, have mercy on us: for we have waited for thee: be thou our arm in the morning, and our salvation in the time of trouble.

3 At the voice of the angel the people fled, and at the lifting up thyself the nations are scattered.

4 And your spoils shall be gathered together as the locust is gathered, as when the ditches are full of them.

5 The Lord is magnified, for he hath dwelt on high: he hath filled Sion with judgment and justice.

6 And there shall be faith in thy times: riches of salvation, wisdom and knowledge: the fear of the Lord is his treasure.

7 Behold, they that see shall cry without: the angels of peace shall weep bitterly.

8 The ways are made desolate; no one passeth by the road; the covenant is made void; he hath rejected the cities; he hath not regarded the men.

9 The land hath mourned, and languished: Libanus is confounded, and become foul, and Saron is become as a desert: and Basan and Carmel are shaken.

10 Now will I rise up, saith the Lord: now will I be exalted, now will I lift up myself.

11 You shall conceive heat, you shall bring forth stubble: your breath, as fire, shall devour you.

12 And the people shall be as ashes after a fire; as a bundle of thorns, they shall be burnt with fire.

13 Hear, you that are far off, what I have done; and you that are near, know my strength.

14 The sinners in Sion are afraid; trembling hath seized upon the hypocrites. Which of you can dwell with devouring fire? which of you shall dwell with everlasting burnings?

a Psal. xiv. 2.

15 *He that walketh in justices, and speaketh truth, that casteth away avarice by oppression, and shaketh his hands from all bribes, that stoppeth his ears lest he hear blood, and shutteth his eyes that he may see no evil,

16 He shall dwell on high, the fortifications of rocks shall be his highness: bread is given him, his waters are sure.

17 His eyes shall see the king in his beauty, they shall see the land far off.

18 Thy heart shall meditate fear: ^b where is the learned? where is he that pondereth the words of the law? where is the teacher of the little ones?

19 The shameless people thou shalt not see, the people of profound speech: so that thou canst not understand the eloquence of his tongue, in whom there is no wisdom.

20 Look upon Sion, the city of our solemnity: thy eyes shall see Jerusalem, a rich habitation, a tabernacle that cannot be removed: neither shall the nails thereof be taken away for ever, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken:

21 Because only there our Lord is magnificent: a place of rivers, very broad and spacious streams: no ship, with oars, shall pass by it, neither shall the great galley pass through it.

22 For the Lord is our judge, the Lord is our law giver, the Lord is our king: he will save us.

23 Thy tacklings are loosed, and they shall be of no strength: thy mast shall be in such condition, that thou shalt not be able to spread the flag. Then shall the spoils of much prey be divided: the lame shall take the spoil.

24 Neither shall he that is near, say: I am feeble. The people that dwell therein, shall have their iniquity taken away from them.

CHAP. XXXIV.

The general judgment of the wicked.

COME near, ye Gentiles, and hear, and hearken, ye people: let the earth hear, and all that is therein, the world, and every thing that cometh forth of it.

2 For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath killed them, and delivered them to slaughter.

3 Their slain shall be cast forth, and out of their carcasses shall rise a stink: the mountains shall be melted with their blood.

b 1 Cor. i. 20.

VER. 19. Hail. God's judgments shall overtake Babylon, or rather Nineve.

VER. 20. Waters. Fruitful soils, abounding with cattle. C.

CHAP. XXXIII. VER. 1. Spoilest. This is particularly directed to Sennacherib. Ch.—He was a figure of persecutors of the Church, to which many passages here allude. C.—Remota justitia quid sunt regna nisi magna latrocinia? S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, iv. 4.

VER. 4. Them. The neglect of burying these insects has often brought on the plague. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei, iii. 31.

VER. 6. Faith. Sincerity and justice adorn the reigns of Ezechias and of Christ.

VER. 7. Without. The people of the country, and the envoys of Ezechias. 4 Kings xviii. 14. Heb. "Behold their Ariel, cried they without," insultingly, (C.) pointing at Jerusalem. Chap. xxix. 1. At which (H.) the envoys rent their garments, &c. Chap. xxxvi. 22. C.—"Behold I shall appear to them." Aquila. S. Jer.—Angels. Messengers or deputies sent to negotiate a peace, (Ch.) who wept because they could not obtain it. W.

VER. 8. Void, though Sennacherib had received what he demanded. 4 Kings xviii. 14.

VER. 9. Confounded. Its trees were cut down. Chap. xxxvii. 24.

VER. 14. Of you. Heb. "of us." H.—They are seriously alarmed at the sight of the fires prepared to burn the dead bodies of the Assyrians, (chap. xxx. 33,) and begin to think of hell, (C.) which their sins deserve. H.

VER. 17. King Ezechias, or he shall be one of his courtiers.—Off. Their limits shall be extended. Those who believe in Christ shall cast their eyes up towards their heavenly country. Heb. ix. 13.

VER. 18. Ones. These questions were put by the people, when the enemy approached; or they now rejoice that their severe masters were gone.

VER. 19. Shameless, unjust Assyrians. Luke xviii. 2.—Profound. Unknown to the Jews. 4 Kings xviii. 26.—No wisdom, manners, or piety.

VER. 20. Broken. It was taken 125 years afterwards.

VER. 21. Of rivers. He speaks of the rivers of endless joys that flow from the throne of God to water the heavenly Jerusalem, where no enemy's ship can come, &c. Ch.

VER. 23. Thy tacklings. He speaks of the enemies of the Church, under the allegory of a ship that is disabled. Ch.

VER. 24. Feeble. All were obliged to collect the plunder, to be afterwards divided. None shall plead illness. The inhabitants of Jerusalem will not feel the effects of sin (C.) on this occasion. H.

CHAP. XXXIV. VER. 1. Come. Both Gentiles and Jews are admonished of the world's end before judgment. W

4 And all the hosts of the heavens shall pine away, and the heavens shall be folded together as a book: and all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth from the vine, and from the fig-tree.

5 For my sword is inebriated in heaven: behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my slaughter unto judgment.

6 The sword of the Lord is filled with blood; it is made thick with the blood of lambs and buck-goats, with the blood of rams full of marrow: for there is a victim of the Lord in Bosra, and a great slaughter in the land of Edom.

7 And the unicorns shall go down with them, and the bulls with the mighty: their land shall be soaked with blood, and their ground with the fat of fat ones.

8 For it is the day of the vengeance of the Lord, the year of recompenses of the judgment of Sion.

9 And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the ground thereof into brimstone: and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

10 Night and day it shall not be quenched; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste, none shall pass through it for ever and ever.

11 The bittern and ericius shall possess it: and the ibis and the raven shall dwell in it: and a line shall be stretched out upon it, to bring it to nothing, and a plummet, unto desolation.

12 The nobles thereof shall not be there: they shall call rather upon the king, and all the princes thereof shall be nothing.

13 And thorns and nettles shall grow up in its houses, and the thistle in the fortresses thereof: and it shall be the habitation of dragons, and the pasture of ostriches.

14 And demons and monsters shall meet, and the hairy ones shall cry out to one another, there hath the lamia lain down, and found rest for herself.

15 There hath the ericius had its hole, and brought up its young ones, and hath dug round about, and cherished them in the shadow thereof: thither are the kites gathered together one to another.

16 Search ye diligently in the book of the Lord, and read: not one of them was wanting, one hath not sought for the other: for that which proceedeth out of my mouth, he hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.

VER. 4. Away. These strong expressions denote great misery. Chap. xiii.; Joel ii. 10; Eze. xxxii. 27. C.—Book. Heb. "roll." H.

VER. 5. Heaven. Casting down the rebel angels. S. Jer.—The resolution to destroy the Idumeans, for their cruelty to the Jews, has been taken long ago. All these expressions allude to the last judgment. C.—Idumea. Under the name of Idumea or Edom, a people that were enemies of the Jews, are here understood the wicked in general, the enemies of God and his Church. Ch.—Assaradon fell upon Edom two years after Sennacherib's death. C.

VER. 7. The unicorns. That is, the great and mighty. Ch.

VER. 8. Recompences. When the persecutors of Sion, that is, of the Church, shall receive their reward. Ch.—The Idumeans had frequently shown their ill-will towards the Jews. 2 Par. xxviii. 17; Amos i. 11. C.

VER. 9. Pitch. The soil was sulphureous, and became neglected, (ver. 10,) like the territory of Sodom. The people are now no more, and only a few miserable Arabs pitch their tents there.

VER. 11. Line. Intimating entire destruction. Lam. ii. 8, and 4 Kings xi. 13. C.—Yet God will not punish more than people deserve. M.

VER. 13. Dragons, Thonim. Chap. xiii. 22. H.—Ostriches, or swans.

VER. 14. Monsters. Lit. "Ass-centaurs." H.—Heb. "fishermen shall find islands." Chap. xiii. 21.—Ones. Goats.—Lamia. Heb. litith. Chal. "owl," the bird of Minerva, or the Moon, which the Arabs style Alilat. C.

17 And he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it to them by line: they shall possess it for ever; from generation to generation they shall dwell therein.

CHAP. XXXV.

The joyful flourishing of Christ's kingdom: in his Church shall be a holy and secure way.

THE land that was desolate and impassable, shall be glad, and the wilderness shall rejoice, and shall flourish like the lily.

2 It shall bud forth and blossom, and shall rejoice with joy and praise: the glory of Libanus is given to it: the beauty of Carmel, and Saron, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the beauty of our God.

3 Strengthen ye the feeble hands, and confirm the weak knees.

4 Say to the faint-hearted: Take courage, and fear not: behold, your God will bring the revenge of recompense: God himself will come and will save you.

5 Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

6 Then shall the lame man leap as a hart; and the tongue of the dumb shall be free: for waters are broken out in the desert, and streams in the wilderness.

7 And that which was dry land, shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water. In the dens, where dragons dwelt before, shall rise up the verdure of the reed and the bulrush.

8 And a path and a way shall be there, and it shall be called the holy way: the unclean shall not pass over it, and this shall be unto you a straight way, so that fools shall not err therein.

9 No lion shall be there, nor shall any mischievous beast go up by it, nor be found there: but they shall walk there that shall be delivered.

10 And the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and shall come into Sion with praise, and everlasting joy shall be upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Sennacherib invades Juda: his blasphemies.

AND it came to pass in the fourteenth year^a of king Ezechias, that Sennacherib, king of the Assyrians, came up against all the fenced cities of Juda, and took them.

^a A. M. 3291, A. C. 713. 4 Kings xviii. 13; 2 Par. xxxii. 1; Eccl. xlviii. 20.

VER. 15. Erius. Heb. "kopux (H.) hath its nest." It may denote the serpent, acrotius. Bochart.—All this shows the desolation of the country.

VER. 16. Read what I have written.—The other. All these beasts will be there. (C.) or all these declarations will be verified. H.

CHAP. XXXV. VER. 1. Lily. Judea flourishes under Ezechias; but the Church does more so after the coming of Christ, to whom these expressions conduct us. C.—The Gentiles shall be converted and flourish, as this text shows. W.

VER. 3. Knees. Ye prophets, comfort the people with these promises. C.—The apostles taught the Gentiles to do good. M.

VER. 4. Recompence. Christ will satisfy the justice of his Father. H.

VER. 6. Free. Our Saviour healed both soul and body. (C.) showing by his works, (John x. W.) that he had fulfilled this prediction. Luke vii. 22; Matt. xi. 5.—Waters. Baptism has sanctified the most wicked.

VER. 7. Dragons. Sea monsters. Chap. xxxiv. 13. C.

VER. 8. Way, leading to Jerusalem. Idolaters, &c., shall not be there. Chap. lii. 1. This was only verified (C.) in the Catholic Church, where, though some wicked may be found, the truth still prevails; and holiness can be attained nowhere else. H.—This Church is unspotted. Eph. v. 27. C.—Fools. The most simple may learn what is necessary for salvation, (M.) which will never be done by consulting Scripture alone. H.

2 And the king of the Assyrians sent Rabsaces from Lachis to Jerusalem, to king Ezechias, with a great army, and he stood by the conduit of the upper pool, in the way of the fuller's field.

3 And there went out to him Eliacim, the son of Helcias, who was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and Joahe, the son of Asaph, the recorder.

4 And Rabsaces said to them: Tell Ezechias: Thus saith the great king, the king of the Assyrians: What is this confidence wherein thou trustest?

5 Or with what counsel or strength dost thou prepare for war? or whom dost thou trust, that thou art revolted from me?

6 Lo, thou trustest upon this broken staff of a reed, upon Egypt: upon which, if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh, king of Egypt, to all that trust in him.

7 But if thou wilt answer me: We trust in the Lord our God: is it not he whose high places and altars Ezechias hath taken away, and hath said to Juda and Jerusalem: You shall worship before this altar?

8 And now deliver thyself up to my lord, the king of the Assyrians, and I will give thee two thousand horses, and thou wilt not be able, on thy part, to find riders for them.

9 And how wilt thou stand against the face of the judge of one place, of the least of my master's servants? But if thou trust in Egypt, in chariots and in horsemen:

10 And am I now come up without the Lord, against this land to destroy it? The Lord said to me: Go up against this land, and destroy it.

11 And Eliacim, and Sobna, and Joahe, said to Rabsaces: Speak to thy servants in the Syrian tongue: for we understand it: Speak not to us in the Jews' language, in the hearing of the people, that are upon the wall.

12 And Rabsaces said to them: Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee, to speak all these words; and not rather to the men that sit on the wall; that they may eat their own dung, and drink their urine with you?

13 Then Rabsaces stood, and cried out with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said: Hear the words of the great king, the king of the Assyrians.

14 Thus saith the king: Let not Ezechias deceive you, for he shall not be able to deliver you.

15 And let not Ezechias make you trust in the Lord, saying: The Lord will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be given into the hands of the king of the Assyrians.

16 Do not hearken to Ezechias: for thus said the king of the Assyrians: Do with me that which is for your advantage, and come out to me, and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the water of his cistern,

17 Till I come and take you away to a land, like to your own; a land of corn and of wine; a land of bread and vineyards.

18 Neither let Ezechias trouble you, saying: The Lord will deliver us. Have any of the gods of the nations delivered their land out of the hand of the king of the Assyrians?

19 Where is the god of Emath, and of Arphad? where is the god of Sepharvaim? have they delivered Samaria out of my hand?

20 Who is there among all the gods of these lands, that hath delivered his country out of my hand, that the Lord may deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?

21 And they held their peace, and answered him not a word. For the king had commanded, saying: Answer him not.

22 And Eliacim, the son of Helcias, that was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and Joahe, the son of Asaph, the recorder, went in to Ezechias, with their garments rent, and told him the words of Rabsaces.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Ezechias, his mourning and prayer. God's promise of protection. The Assyrian army is destroyed. Sennacherib is slain.

AND it came to pass when king Ezechias had heard it, that he rent his garments, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went in to the house of the Lord.

2 And he sent Eliacim, who was over the house, and Sobna, the scribe, and the ancients of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to Isaias, the son of Amos, the prophet.

3 And they said to him: Thus saith Ezechias: This day is a day of tribulation, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It may be the Lord thy God will hear the words of Rabsaces, whom the king of the Assyrians, his master, hath sent to blaspheme the living God, and to reproach with words which the Lord thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left.

5 And the servants of Ezechias came to Isaias.

6 And Isaias said to them: Thus shall you say to your master: Thus saith the Lord: Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of the Assyrians have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a spirit upon him, and he shall hear a message, and shall return to his own country, and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own country.

8 And Rabsaces returned, and found the king of the Assyrians besieging Lobna. For he had heard that he was departed from Lachis.

9 And he heard say about Tharaca, the king of Ethiopia: He is come forth to fight against thee. And when he heard it, he sent messengers to Ezechias, saying:

10 Thus shall you speak to Ezechias, the king of Juda, saying: Let not thy God deceive thee, in whom thou trustest, saying: Jerusalem shall not be given into the hands of the king of the Assyrians.

11 Behold, thou hast heard all that the kings of the Assyrians have done to all countries which they have destroyed, and canst thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them whom my fathers have destroyed, Gozam, and Haram, and Reseph, and the children of Eden, that were in Thalassar?

13 Where is the king of Emath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Ana, and of Ava?^a 14 And Ezechias took the letter from the hand of the messengers, and read it, and went up to the house of the Lord, and Ezechias spread it before the Lord.

15 And Ezechias prayed to the Lord, saying:

16 O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, who sittest upon the Cherubims, thou alone art the God of all the kingdoms of the earth, thou hast made heaven and earth.

17 Incline, O Lord, thy ear, and hear: open, O Lord, thy eyes, and see, and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which he hath sent to blaspheme the living God.

18 For of a truth, O Lord, the kings of the Assyrians have laid waste lands, and their countries.

19 And they have cast their gods into the fire, for they were not gods, but the works of men's hands, of wood and stone: and they broke them in pieces.

20 And now, O Lord, our God, save us out of his hand: and let all the kingdoms of the earth know, that thou only art the Lord.

21 And Isaias, the son of Amos, sent to Ezechias, saying: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: For the prayer thou hast made to me concerning Sennacherib, the king of the Assyrians:

22 This is the word which the Lord hath spoken of him: The virgin, the daughter of Sion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn: the daughter of Jerusalem hath wagged the head after thee.

23 Whom hast thou reproached, and whom hast thou blasphemed, and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thy eyes on high? Against the Holy One of Israel.

24 By the hand of thy servants thou hast reproached the Lord: and hast said: With the multitude of my chariots I have gone up to the height of the mountains, to the top of Libanus: and I will cut down all its tall cedars, and its choice fir-trees, and will enter to the top of its height, to the forest of its Carmel.

25 I have digged, and drunk water, and have dried up with the sole of my foot all the rivers shut up in banks.

26 Hast thou not heard what I have done to him of old? from the days of old I have formed it: and now I have brought it to effect: and it hath come to pass that aills fighting together, and fenced cities, should be destroyed.

27 The inhabitants of them were weak of hand, they trembled, and were confounded: they became like the grass of the field, and the herb of the pasture, and like the grass of the house-tops, which withered before it was ripe.

32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and salvation from Mount Sion: the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.

33 Wherefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of the Assyrians: He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow into it, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a trench about it.

Ezechias being advertised that he shall die, obtains by prayer a prolongation of his life: in confirmation of which the sun goes back. The canticle of Ezechias.

IN ^cthose days Ezechias was sick, even to death, and Isaias, the son of Amos, the prophet, came unto him, and said to him: Thus saith the Lord: Take order with thy house, for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 And Ezechias turned his face toward the wall, and prayed to the Lord,

3 And said: I beseech thee, O Lord, remember how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Ezechias wept with great weeping.

4 And the word of the Lord came to Isaias, saying.

9 The writing of Ezechias, king of Juda, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness.

10 I said : In the midst of my days I shall go to the gates of hell : I sought for the residue of my years.

11 I said : I shall not see the Lord God in the land of the living. I shall behold man no more, nor the inhabitant of rest.

12 My generation is at an end, and it is rolled away from me, as a shepherd's tent. My life is cut off, as by a weaver : whilst I was yet but beginning, he cut me off : from morning even to night thou wilt make an end of me.

13 I hoped till morning ; as a lion so hath he broken all my bones : from morning even to night thou wilt make an end of me.

14 I will cry like a young swallow ; I will meditate like a dove : My eyes are weakened looking upward : Lord, I suffer violence, answer thou for me.

15 What shall I say, or what shall he answer for me, whereas he himself hath done it ? I will recount to thee all my years in the bitterness of my soul.

16 O Lord, if man's life be such, and the life of my spirit be in such things as these, thou shalt correct me, and make me to live.

17 Behold in peace is my bitterness most bitter : but thou hast delivered my soul that it should not perish ; thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.

18 For hell shall not confess to thee, neither shall death praise thee : nor shall they that go down into the pit, look for thy truth.

19 The living, the living, he shall give praise to thee, as I do this day : the father shall make thy truth known to the children.

20 O Lord, save me, and we will sing our psalms all the days of our life in the house of the Lord.

21 Now Isaias had ordered that they should take a lump of figs, and lay it as a plaster upon the wound, and that he should be healed.

AT that time Merodach Baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and presents to Ezechias : for he had heard that he had been sick, and was recovered.

2 And Ezechias rejoiced at their coming, and he showed them the storehouse of his aromatical spices, and of the silver, and of the gold, and of the sweet odours, and of the precious ointment, and all the storehouses of his furniture, and all that were found in his treasures. There was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion that Ezechias showed them not.

3 Then Isaias, the prophet, came to king Ezechias, and said to him : What said these men, and from whence came they to thee ? And Ezechias said : From a far country they came to me, from Babylon.

4 And he said : What saw they in thy house ? And Ezechias said : All things that are in my house have they seen ; there was not any thing which I have not shown them in my treasures.

5 And Isaias said to Ezechias : Hear the word of the Lord of hosts.

6 Behold, the days shall come, that all that is in thy house, and that thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried away into Babylon : there shall not any thing be left, saith the Lord.

7 And of thy children, that shall issue from thee, whom thou shalt beget, they shall take away, and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8 And Ezechias said to Isaias : The word of the Lord, which he hath spoken, is good. And he said : Only let peace and truth be in my days.

12 They shall give glory to the Lord, and shall declare his praise in the islands.

13 The Lord shall go forth as a mighty man; as a man of war shall he stir up zeal: he shall shout and cry: he shall prevail against his enemies.

14 I have always held my peace, I have kept silence, I have been patient, I will speak now as a woman in labour. I will destroy, and swallow up at once.

15 I will lay waste the mountains and hills, and will make all their grass to wither: and I will turn rivers into islands, and will dry up the standing pools.

16 And I will lead the blind into the way which they know not: and in the paths which they were ignorant of I will make them walk: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight: these things have I done to them, and have not forsaken them.

17 They are turned back: let them be greatly confounded, that trust in a graven thing, that say to a molten thing: You are our gods.

18 Hear ye deaf, and ye blind behold that you may see.

19 Who is blind, but my servant? or deaf, but he to whom I have sent my messengers? Who is blind, but he that is sold? or who is blind, but the servant of the Lord?

20 Thou that seest many things, wilt thou not observe them? thou that hast ears open, wilt thou not hear?

21 And the Lord was willing to sanctify him, and to magnify the law, and exalt it.

22 But this is a people that is robbed and wasted: they are all the snare of young men, and they are hid in the houses of prisons: they are made a prey, and there is none to deliver them: a spoil, and there is none that saith: Restore.

25 And he hath poured out upon him the indignation of his fury, and a strong battle, and hath burnt him round about, and he knew not and set him on fire and he understood not.

CHAP. XLIII.

God comforts his Church, promising to protect her for ever: he exostulates with the Jews for their ingratitude.

AND now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and formed thee, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed thee, and called thee by thy name: thou art mine.

2 When thou shalt pass through the waters, I will be with thee, and the rivers shall not cover thee: when thou shalt walk in the fire, thou shalt not be burnt, and the flames shall not burn in thee:

3 For I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour, I have given Egypt for thy atonement, Ethiopia, and Saba for thee.

4 Since thou becamest honourable in my eyes, thou art glorious: I have loved thee, and I will give men for thee, and people for thy life.

5 Fear not, for I am with thee: I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west.

6 I will say to the north: Give up: and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth.

7 And every one that calleth upon my name, I have created him for my glory, I have formed him, and made him.

8 Bring forth the people that are blind, and have eyes: that are deaf, and have ears.

9 All the nations are assembled together, and the tribes are gathered: who among you can declare this, and shall make us hear the former things? let them bring forth their witnesses, let them be justified, and hear, and say: It is truth.

10 You are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen: that you may know, and believe me and understand that I myself am. Before me there was no God formed, and after me there shall be none.

22 But thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob, neither hast thou laboured about me, O Israel.

23 Thou hast not offered me the ram of thy holocaust, nor hast thou glorified me with thy victims: I have not caused thee to serve with oblations, nor wearied thee with incense.

24 Thou hast bought me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy victims. But thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thy iniquities.

God's favour to his Church. The folly of idolatry. The people shall be delivered from captivity.

AND^c now hear, O Jacob, my servant, and Israel, whom I have chosen.

2 Thus saith the Lord, that made and formed thee, thy helper from the womb: Fear not, O my servant, Jacob, and thou, most righteous, whom I have chosen.

3 For I will pour out waters upon the thirsty ground and streams upon the dry land: I will pour out my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy stock.

4 And they shall spring up among the herbs, as willows beside the running waters.

5 One shall say: I am the Lord's, and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob, and another shall subscribe with his hand, To the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Israel.

6 Thus saith the Lord, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer, the Lord of hosts: "I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God.

7 Who is like to me? let him call and declare: and let him set before me the order, since I appointed the ancient people: and the things to come, and that shall be hereafter, let them show unto them.

8 Fear ye not, neither be ye troubled, from that time I have made thee to hear, and have declared: you are my witnesses. Is there a God besides me, a Maker, whom I have not known?

9 The makers of idols are all of them nothing; and their best beloved things shall not profit them. They are their witnesses, that they do not see, nor understand, that they may be ashamed.

he hath planted the pine-tree, which the rain hath nourished.

15 And it hath served men for fuel: he took thereof, and warmed himself: and he kindled it, and baked bread: but of the rest he made a god, and adored it: he made a graven thing, and bowed down before it.

16 Part of it he burnt with fire, and with part of it he dressed his meat: he boiled pottage, and was filled, and was warmed, and said: Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire.

17 But the residue thereof he made a god, and a graven thing for himself: he boweth down before it, and adoreth it, and prayeth unto it, saying: Deliver me, for thou art my god.

18 They have not known, nor understood: for their eyes are covered, that they may not see, and that they may not understand with their heart.

19 They do not consider in their mind, nor know, nor have the thought to say: I have burnt part of it in the fire, and I have baked bread on the part thereof: I have broiled flesh, and have eaten, and of the residue thereof shall I make an idol; shall I fall down before the stock of a tree?

20 Part thereof is ashes: his foolish heart adoreth it, and he will not save his soul, nor say: Perhaps there is a lie in my right hand.

21 Remember these things, O Jacob, and Israel, for thou art my servant. I have formed thee, thou art my servant, O Israel, forget me not.

22 I have blotted out thy iniquities as a cloud, and thy sins as a mist: return to me, for I have redeemed thee.

23 Give praise, O ye heavens, for the Lord hath shown mercy: shout with joy, ye ends of the earth: ye mountains, resound with praise, thou, O forest, and every tree therein: for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and Israel shall be glorified.

27 Who say to the deep: Be thou desolate, and I will dry up thy rivers.

28 Who say to Cyrus: Thou art my shepherd, and thou shalt perform all my pleasure. Who say to Jerusalem: Thou shalt be built: and to the temple: Thy foundations shall be laid.

CHAP. XLV.

A prophecy of Cyrus, as a figure of Christ, the great deliverer of God's people.

THUS saith the Lord, to my anointed Cyrus, whose right hand I have taken hold of, to subdue nations before his face, and to turn the backs of kings, and to open the doors before him, and the gates shall not be shut.

2 I will go before thee, and will humble the great ones of the earth: I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and will burst the bars of iron.

3 And I will give thee hidden treasures, and the concealed riches of secret places: that thou mayest know that I am the Lord who called thee by thy name, the God of Israel.

4 For the sake of my servant Jacob, and Israel my elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have made a likeness of thee, and thou hast not known me.

5 I am the Lord, and there is none else: there is no God besides me: I girded thee, and thou hast not known me:

6 That they may know who are from the rising of the sun, and they who are from the west, that there is none besides me. I am the Lord, and there is none else.

7 I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil: I, the Lord, that do all these things.

8 Drop down dew, ye heavens, from above, and let the clouds rain the just: let the earth be opened, and bud forth a Saviour; and let justice spring up together: I, the Lord, have created him.

9 *Woe to him that gainsayeth his Maker, a sherd of the earthen pots: shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it: What art thou making, and thy work is without hands?

10 Woe to him that saith to his father: Why begetteth thou? and to the woman: Why dost thou bring forth?

11 Thus saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, his Maker: Ask me of things to come concerning my children, and concerning the work of my hands give ye charge to me.

12 I made the earth: and I created man upon it: my hand stretched forth the heavens, and I have commanded all their host.

13 I have raised him up to justice, and I will direct all his ways: he shall build my city, and let go my captives, not for ransom, nor for presents, saith the Lord, the God of hosts.

14 Thus saith the Lord: The labour of Egypt, and the merchandise of Ethiopia, and of Sabaim, men of stature shall come over to thee, and shall be thine: they shall walk after thee, they shall go bound with manacles: and they shall worship thee, and shall make supplication to thee: only in thee is God, and there is no God besides thee.

15 Verily, thou art a hidden God, the God of Israel, the Saviour.

16 They are all confounded, and ashamed: the forgers of errors are gone together into confusion.

17 Israel is saved in the Lord with an eternal salvation: you shall not be confounded, and you shall not be ashamed for ever and ever.

18 For thus saith the Lord, that created the heavens, God himself, that formed the earth, and made it, the very maker thereof: he did not create it in vain: he formed it to be inhabited. I am the Lord, and there is no other.

19 I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth: I have not said to the seed of Jacob: Seek me in vain. I am the Lord, that speak justice, that declare right things.

20 Assemble yourselves, and come, and draw near together, ye that are saved of the Gentiles: they have no knowledge that set up the wood of their graven work, and pray to a god that cannot save.

21 Tell ye, and come, and consult together: who hath declared this from the beginning, who hath foretold this from that time? Have not I, the Lord, and there is no God else besides me? A just God, and a Saviour, there is none besides me.

22 Be converted to me, and you shall be saved, all ye ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is no other.

23 I have sworn by myself, the word of justice shall go out of my mouth, and shall not return:

24 ^aFor every knee shall be bowed to me, and every tongue shall swear.

CHAP. XLVI.

The idols of Babylon shall be destroyed. Salvation is promised through Christ.

BEL is broken, Nabo is destroyed: their idols are put upon beasts and cattle, your burdens of heavy weight even unto weariness.

2 They are consumed, and are broken together: they could not save him that carried them, and they themselves shall go into captivity.

3 Harken unto me, O house of Jacob, all the remnant of the house of Israel, who are carried by my bowels, are borne up by my womb.

4 Even to your old age I am the same and to your grey hairs I will carry you: I have made you, and I will bear: I will carry, and will save.

5 To whom have you likened me, and made me equal, and compared me, and made me like?

6 You that contribute gold out of the bag, and weigh out silver in the scales: and hire a goldsmith to make a god: and they fall down and worship.

7 ^bThey bear him on their shoulders and carry him, and set him in his place, and he shall stand, and shall not stir out of his place. Yea, when they shall cry also unto him, he shall not hear: he shall not save them from tribulation.

8 Remember this, and be ashamed: return, ye transgressors, to the heart.

9 Remember the former age, for I am God, and there is no God beside, neither is there the like to me:

10 Who show from the beginning the things that shall be at last, and from ancient times the things that as yet are not done, saying: My counsel shall stand, and all my will shall be done:

11 Who call a bird from the east, and from a far country the man of my own will, and I have spoken, and will bring it to pass: I have created, and I will do it. Hear me, O ye hard-hearted, who are far from justice.

12 I have brought my justice near, it shall not be far off: and my salvation shall not tarry. I will give salvation in Sion, and my glory in Israel.

2 Take a mill-stone and grind meal: uncover thy shame, strip thy shoulder, make bare thy legs, pass over the rivers.

3 *Thy nakedness shall be discovered, and thy shame shall be seen: I will take vengeance, and no man shall resist me.

4 Our Redeemer, the Lord of hosts, is his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called the lady of kingdoms.

6 I was angry with my people, I have polluted my inheritance, and have given them into thy hand: thou hast shown no mercy to them: upon the ancient thou hast laid thy yoke exceedingly heavy.

7 And thou hast said: I shall be a lady for ever: thou hast not laid these things to thy heart, neither hast thou remembered thy latter end.

8 And now hear these things, thou that art delicate, and dwellest confidently, that sayest in thy heart: ^bI am, and there is none else besides me: I shall not sit as a widow, and I shall not know barrenness.

9 ^cThese two things shall come upon thee suddenly in one day, barrenness and widowhood. All things are come upon thee, because of the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great hardness of thy enchanters.

10 And thou hast trusted in thy wickedness, and hast said: There is none that seeth me. Thy wisdom, and thy knowledge, this hath deceived thee. And thou hast said in thy heart: I am, and besides me there is no other.

11 Evil shall come upon thee, and thou shalt not know the rising thereof: and calamity shall fall violently upon thee, which thou canst not keep off: misery shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know.

12 Stand now with thy enchanters, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, in which thou hast laboured from thy youth, if so be it may profit thee any thing, or if thou mayest become stronger.

13 Thou hast failed in the multitude of thy counsels: let now the astrologers stand and save thee, they that gazed at the stars, and counted the months, that from them they might tell the things that shall come to thee.

14 Behold, they are as stubble, fire hath burnt them, they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flames: there are no coals wherewith they may be warmed, nor fire, that they may sit thereat.

15 Such are all the things become to thee, in which thou hast laboured: thy merchants, from thy youth, every one hath erred in his own way, there is none that can save thee.

CHAP. XLVIII.

He reproaches the Jews for their obstinacy: he will deliver them out of their captivity, for his own name's sake.

HEAR ye these things, O house of Jacob, you that are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of Juda, you who swear by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Israel, but not in truth, nor in justice.

2 For they are called of the holy city, and are established upon the God of Israel: the Lord of hosts is his name.

3 The former things of old I have declared, and they went forth out of my mouth, and I have made them to be heard: I did them suddenly, and they came to pass.

4 For I knew that thou art stubborn, and thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy forehead of brass.

5 I foretold thee of old: before they came to pass I told thee, lest thou shouldst say: My idols have done these things, and my graven and molten things have commanded them.

6 See now all the things which thou hast heard: but have you declared them? I have shown thee new things from that time, and things are kept which thou knowest not:

7 They are created now, and not of old: and before the day, when thou heardest them not, lest thou shouldst say: Behold, I knew them.

8 Thou hast neither heard, nor known, neither was thy ear opened of old. For I know that transgressing thou wilt transgress, and I have called thee a transgressor from the womb.

9 For my name's sake I will remove my wrath far off: and for my praise I will bridle thee, lest thou shouldst perish.

10 Behold, I have refined thee, but not as silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of poverty.

11 For my own sake, for my own sake will I do it, that I may not be blasphemed: "and I will not give my glory to another.

12 Harken to me, O Jacob, and thou Israel, whom I call: "I am he, I am the first, and I am the last.

13 My hand also hath founded the earth, and my right hand hath measured the heavens: I shall call them, and they shall stand together.

14 Assemble yourselves together, all you, and hear: who among them hath declared these things? the Lord hath loved him, he will do his pleasure in Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

16 Come ye near unto me, and hear this: I have not spoken in secret from the beginning: from the time before it was done, I was there, and now the Lord God hath sent me, and his spirit.

17 Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I am the Lord thy God, that teach thee profitable things, that govern thee in the way that thou walkest.

18 O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments: thy peace had been as a river, and thy justice as the waves of the sea,

19 And thy seed had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof: his name should not have perished, nor have been destroyed from before my face:

20 *Come forth out of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, declare it with the voice of joy: make this to be heard, and speak it out even to the ends of the earth. Say: The Lord hath redeemed his servant Jacob.

21 They thirsted not in the desert, when he led them out: ^bhe brought forth water out of the rock for them, and he clove the rock, and the waters gushed out.

22 *There is no peace to the wicked, saith the Lord.

CHAP. XLIX.

Christ shall bring the Gentiles to salvation. God's love to his Church is perpetual.

GIVE ear, ye islands, and hearken, ye people, from afar. *The Lord hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother he hath been mindful of my name.

2 *And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword: in the shadow of his hand he hath protected me, and hath made me as a chosen arrow: in his quiver he hath hid-den me.

3 And he said to me: Thou art my servant, Israel, for in thee will I glory.

4 And I said: I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength without cause and in vain: therefore my judgment is with the Lord, and my work with my God.

5 And now saith the Lord, that formed me from the womb to be his servant, that I may bring back Jacob unto him, and Israel will not be gathered together: and I am glorified in the eyes of the Lord, and my God is made my strength.

6 And he said: It is a small thing that thou shouldst be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to convert the dregs of Israel. *Behold, I have given thee to be the light of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation even to the farthest part of the earth.

7 Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, his Holy One, to the soul that is despised, to the nation that is abhorred, to the servant of rulers: Kings shall see, and princes shall rise up, and adore, for the Lord's sake, because he is faithful, and for the Holy One of Israel, who hath chosen thee.

8 Thus saith the Lord: *In an acceptable time I have heard thee, and in the day of salvation I have helped thee: and I have preserved thee, and given thee to be a covenant of the people, that thou mightest raise up the earth, and possess the inheritances that were destroyed:

9 That thou mightest say to them that are bound: Come forth: and to them that are in darkness: Show yourselves. They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in every plain.

10 *They shall not hunger, nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor the sun strike them: for he that is merciful to them, shall be their shepherd, and at the fountains of waters he shall give them drink.

11 And I will make all my mountains a way, and my paths shall be exalted.

12 Behold, these shall come from afar, and behold these from the north and from the sea, and these from the south country.

13 Give praise, O ye heavens, and rejoice, O earth; ye mountains, give praise with jubilation: because the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy on his poor ones.

14 And Sion said: The Lord hath forsaken me, and the Lord hath forgotten me.

15 Can a woman forget her infant, so as not to have pity on the son of her womb? and if she should forget, yet will not I forget thee.

16 Behold, I have graven thee in my hands: *thy walls are always before my eyes.

17 Thy builders are come: they that destroy thee, and make thee waste, shall go out of thee.

18 *Lift up thy eyes round about, and see all these are gathered together, they are come to thee: I live, saith the Lord, thou shalt be clothed with all these as with an ornament, and as a bride thou shalt put them about thee.

19 For thy deserts, and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction shall now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up shall be chased far away.

20 The children of thy barrenness shall still say in thy ears: The place is too strait for me, make me room to dwell in.

21 And thou shalt say in thy heart: Who hath begotten these? I was barren, and brought not forth, led away, and captive: and who hath brought up these? I was destitute and alone: and these where were they?

22 Thus saith the Lord God: Behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and will set up my standard to the people. And they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and carry thy daughters upon their shoulders.

23 And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and queens thy nurses: they shall worship thee with their face toward the earth, and they shall lick up the dust of thy feet. *And thou shalt know that I am the Lord, for they shall not be confounded that wait for him.

24 Shall the prey be taken from the strong? or can that which was taken by the mighty be delivered?

25 For thus saith the Lord: Yea verily, even the captivity shall be taken away from the strong: and that which was taken by the mighty, shall be delivered. But I will judge those that have judged thee, and thy children I will save.

26 And I will feed thy enemies with their own flesh: and they shall be made drunk with their own blood, as with new wine: and all flesh shall know, that I am the Lord that save thee, and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

CHAP. L.

The synagogue shall be divorced for her iniquities. Christ, for her sake, will endure ignominious afflictions

THUS saith the Lord: What is this bill of the divorce of your mother, with which I have put her away? or who is my creditor, to whom I have sold you? behold, you are sold for your iniquities, and for your wicked deeds have I put your mother away.

2 Because I came, and there was not a man: I called, and there was none that would hear. ^bIs my hand shortened and become little, that I cannot redeem? or is there no strength in me to deliver? Behold, at my rebuke, I will make the sea a desert, I will turn the rivers into dry land: the fishes shall rot for want of water, and shall die for thirst.

3 I will clothe the heavens with darkness, and will make sackcloth their covering.

CHAP. L. VER. 1. Away. Such a one could not be received again, if she had taken another husband. Deut. xxiv. 3. Some explain this of the captives. But God restored them to favour. It seems rather to relate to the reprobation (C.) of the synagogue, which will never again become the true Church, (H.) though many of Israel will be converted. Rom. xi. 25.—Sold you, as a father might do. Exod. xxi. 1; Matt. xviii. 15. S. Ambrose (Tob. viii.) inveighs against such cruel parents, as the Christian religion had not then entirely repressed this inhumanity. C.

VER. 2. Hear. My spouse had gone after other lovers. The people refused to hear the prophets; and the priests were become as corrupt as the rest, when should know how to uphold by word him that is weary: he wakeneth in the morning, in the morning he wakeneth my ear, that I may hear him as a master.

5 The Lord God hath opened my ear, and I do not resist: I have not gone back.

6 ^cI have given my body to the strikers, and my cheeks to them that plucked them: I have not turned away my face from them that rebuked me, and spit upon me.

7 The Lord God is my helper, therefore am I not confounded: therefore have I set my face as a most hard rock, and I know that I shall not be confounded.

8 ^dHe is near that justifieth me, who will contend with me? let us stand together, who is my adversary? let him come near to me.

9 Behold, the Lord God is my helper: who is he that shall condemn me? Lo, they shall all be destroyed as a garment, the moth shall eat them up.

10 Who is there among you that feareth the Lord, that heareth the voice of his servant, that hath walked in darkness, and hath no light? let him hope in the name of the Lord, and lean upon his God.

11 Behold, all you that kindle a fire, encompassed with flames, walk in the light of your fire, and in the flames which you have kindled: this is done to you by my hand, you shall sleep in sorrows.

CHAP. LI.

An exhortation to trust in Christ. He shall protect the children of his Church.

GIVE ear to me, you that follow that which is just, and you that seek the Lord: look unto the rock whence you are hewn, and to the hole of the pit from which you are dug out.

2 Look unto Abraham, your father, and to Sara, that bore you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and multiplied him.

3 The Lord therefore will comfort Sion, and will comfort all the ruins thereof: and he will make her desert as a place of pleasure, and her wilderness as the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgivings and the voice of praise.

4 Hearken unto me, O my people, and give ear to me, O my tribes: ^efor a law shall go forth from me, and my judgment shall rest to be a light of the nations.

5 My just one is near at hand, my Saviour is gone forth, and my arms shall judge the people: the islands shall look for me, and shall patiently wait for my arm.

VER. 5. Just. Christ, prefigured by Cyrus, whose empire was very mild. Chap. xlv. 28.

6 Lift up your eyes to heaven, and look down to the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish like smoke, and the earth shall be worn away like a garment, and the inhabitants thereof shall perish in like manner: *but my salvation shall be for ever, and my justice shall not fail.

7 Harken to me, you that know what is just, my people who have my law in your heart: fear ye not the reproach of men, and be not afraid of their blasphemies.

8 For the worm shall eat them up as a garment: and the moth shall consume them as wool: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my justice from generation to generation.

9 Arise, arise, put on strength, O thou arm of the Lord: arise, as in the days of old, in the ancient generations. Hast not thou struck the proud one, and wounded the dragon?

10 ^bHast not thou dried up the sea, the water of the mighty deep, who madest the depth of the sea a way, that the delivered might pass over.

11 And now they that are redeemed by the Lord, shall return, and shall come into Sion singing praises, and joy everlasting shall be upon their head, they shall obtain joy, and sadness, sorrow and mourning shall flee away.

12 I, I myself will comfort you: who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a mortal man, and of the son of man, who shall wither away like grass?

13 And thou hast forgotten the Lord, thy Maker, who stretched out the heavens, and founded the earth: and thou hast been afraid continually, all the day, at the presence of his fury who afflicted thee, and had prepared himself to destroy thee: where is now the fury of the oppressor?

14 He shall quickly come that is going to open unto you, and he shall not kill unto utter destruction, neither shall his bread fail.

15 But I am the Lord thy God, who trouble the sea, and the waves thereof swell: the Lord of hosts is my name.

16 *I have put my words in thy mouth, and have protected thee in the shadow of my hand, that thou mightest plant the heavens, and found the earth: and mightest say to Sion: Thou art my people.

17 Arise, arise, stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the Lord the cup of his wrath: thou hast drunk even to the bottom of the cup of dead sleep, and thou hast drunk even to the dregs.

18 There is none that can uphold her among all the children that she hath brought forth: and there is none that taketh her by the hand among all the children that she hath brought up.

19 "There are two things that have happened to thee? who shall be sorry for thee? desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword, who shall comfort thee?"

20 Thy children are cast forth, they have slept at the head of all the ways, as the wild ox that is snared: full of the indignation of the Lord, of the rebuke of thy God.

21 Therefore hear this, thou poor little one, and thou that art drunk, but not with wine.

22 Thus saith thy Sovereign, the Lord, and thy God, who will fight for his people: Behold, I have taken out of thy hand the cup of dead sleep, the dregs of the cup of my indignation, thou shalt not drink it again any more.

23 And I will put it in the hand of them that have oppressed thee, and have said to thy soul: Bow down, that we may go over: and thou hast laid thy body as the ground, as a way to them that went over.

CHAP. LII.

Under the figure of the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, the Church is invited to rejoice for her redemption from sin. Christ's kingdom shall be exalted.

ARISE, arise, put on thy strength, O Sion, put on the garments of thy glory, O Jerusalem, the city of the Holy One: for henceforth the uncircumcised, and the unclean, shall no more pass through thee.

2 Shake thyself from the dust, arise, sit up, O Jerusalem: loose the bonds from off thy neck, O captive daughter of Sion.

3 For thus saith the Lord: You were sold gratis, and you shall be redeemed without money.

4 For thus saith the Lord God: *My people went down into Egypt at the beginning to sojourn there. and the Assyrian hath oppressed them without any cause at all.

5 And now, what have I here, saith the Lord: for my people is taken away gratis? They that rule over them, treat them unjustly, saith the Lord, and my name is continually blasphemed all the day long.

6 Therefore my people shall know my name in that day: for I myself that spoke, behold, I am here.

7 *How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, and that preacheth peace: of him that showeth forth good, that preacheth salvation, that saith to Sion: Thy God shall reign!

2 And he shall grow up as a tender plant before him, and as a root out of a thirsty ground: there is no beauty in him, nor comeliness: and we have seen him, and there was no sightliness, that we should be desirous of him:

3 "Despised, and the most abject of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with infirmity: and his look was as it were hidden and despised, whereupon we esteemed him not.

4 "Surely he hath borne our infirmities, and carried our sorrows: and we have thought him as it were a leper, and as one struck by God and afflicted.

5 "But he was wounded for our iniquities, and he was bruised for our sins: the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his bruises we are healed.

6 All we like sheep have gone astray, every one hath turned aside into his own way: and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all.

^d Luke xxiii. 34.—^e Luke xxiii. 9; Gal. iv. 27.

VER. 6. Astray. We belong to his fold. Chap. xl. 11; John x. 11; Luke xv. 4.—Laid. Sept. "abandoned him to our sins," as to so many executioners (C.); "and he, because he had been abused, opened," &c. H.

VER. 8. Judgment, or by an unjust and cruel judgment. H.—Heb. "from prison and judgment." C.—Sept. "in humiliation, (H.) or humility, his judgment was taken away," or rescinded, by his glorious resurrection. S. Philip follows this version in explaining this passage to the eunuch. Acts viii. 33.—Generation, from his eternal Father, or from the Virgin, his incarnation, life, resurrection, or posterity in the Church. All these may be meant, and are inexplicable. C.

VER. 9. Death. Heb. "and he made his grave with the wicked men, and with the rich man, in his death." H.—Grave and death seem to be transposed; and we might better read, "He was taken up with wicked men in his death, and with a rich man was his sepulchre." See Jos. xxiv. 19. Kennicott.—Sept. "and I will give the wicked for his grave, and the rich men for his death." H.—Christ was buried where malefactors were generally, yet honourably, in the tomb of Joseph. W. Matt. xxvii. 57.

VER. 10. Bruise. Sept. "to cleanse him from the wound." H.—God was pleased that he should satisfy for our crimes.—Hand. Christ has died for all, and established a Church which shall not perish.

VER. 12. Many. Even to the ends of the earth. Psal. ii. 8.—Strong. Demons, Jews, &c. Heb. "with the strong" apostles.—Wicked thieves. Barabbas, &c.—Transgressors. His executioners. The gospel could not speak plainer. C.

CHAP. LIV. VER. 1. Barren Jews in captivity, or Church of the Gentiles, to which alone many of the expressions can be applied. C.

VER. 2. Stakes, to receive so great a family. All the Israelites did not return, and it does not appear that many embraced their religion as they have done that of Christ.

shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt remember no more the reproach of thy widowhood.

5 For he that made thee shall rule over thee, *the Lord of hosts is his name: and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, shall be called the God of all the earth.

6 For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and mourning in spirit, and as a wife cast off from her youth, said thy God.

7 For a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee.

8 In a moment of indignation have I hid my face a little while from thee; but with everlasting kindness have I had mercy on thee, saith the Lord, thy Redeemer.

9 *This thing is to me as in the days of Noe, to whom I swore, that I would no more bring in the waters of Noe upon the earth: so have I sworn not to be angry with thee, and not to rebuke thee.

10 For the mountains shall be moved, and the hills shall tremble: but my mercy shall not depart from thee, and the covenant of my peace shall not be moved: said the Lord that hath mercy on thee.

11 O poor little one, tossed with tempest, without all comfort, behold, I will lay thy stones in order, and will lay thy foundations with sapphires.

12 And I will make thy bulwarks of jasper: and thy gates of graven stones, and all thy borders of desirable stones.

13 *All thy children shall be taught of the Lord: and great shall be the peace of thy children.

14 And thou shalt be founded in justice: depart far from oppression, for thou shalt not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near thee.

15 Behold, an inhabitant shall come, who was not with me; he that was a stranger to thee before, shall be joined to thee.

16 Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the killer to destroy.

17 No weapon that is formed against thee, shall prosper: and every tongue that resisteth thee in judgment, thou shalt condemn. This is the inheritance of the servants of the Lord, and their justice with me, saith the Lord.

CHAP. LV.

God promises abundance of spiritual graces to the faithful, that shall believe in Christ out of all nations, and sincerely serve him.

* Luke xi. 32.—b Gen. ix. 15.—c John vi. 45.—d John vii. 37; Eccli. ii. 33;

VER. 5. Thee. Heb. "Ba'lic (H.) shall be your Baalim," or husband, who was styled Lord. 1 Pet. iii. 6. Perhaps he may allude to the two wives, the synagogue and the Church, or to the idols, which should be adored no more.

VER. 9. Earth. Giving him the rainbow for a sign. My covenant with the Church is equally irrevocable: she is founded on a rock. Matt. xvi. 18. C.

VER. 11. Sapphires. Heb. "antimony," a mineral shining like silver. 4 Kings ix. 30.

VER. 12. Bulwarks. Heb. windows of crystal (Ezec. xxvii. 16. C.); Prot. "of agate." H.—All this is allegorical, like the redemption of the new Jerusalem. Apoc. xxi.

VER. 13. Lord, Christ. Jer. xxxi. 33; John vi. 45.

VER. 15. To thee, in the inheritance. This was verified in the Church.

VER. 16. Destroy. I can give peace or war. C.—Sept. "but I have created thee not for utter destruction." H.

CHAP. LV. VER. 1. Waters, which in that country are very scarce.—Milk. Sept. "fat." C.—In the western Churches wine and honey were given to the new baptized. Chap. vii. 15. S. Jer.—Christ invites all to come to him. John iv. 14,

ALL "you that thirst, come to the waters: and you that have no money, make haste, buy, and eat: come ye, buy wine, and milk, without money, and without any price.

2 Why do you spend money for that which is not bread, and your labour for that which doth not satisfy you? Harken diligently to me, and eat that which is good, and your soul shall be delighted in fatness.

3 Incline your ear, and come to me: hear and your soul shall live, and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, *the faithful mercies of David.

4 Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people; for a leader and a master to the Gentiles.

5 Behold, thou shalt call a nation, which thou knewest not: and the nations that knew not thee, shall run to thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel, for he hath glorified thee.

6 Seek ye the Lord, while he may be found: call upon him, while he is near.

7 Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unjust man his thoughts, and let him return to the Lord, and he will have mercy on him, and to our God: for he is bountiful to forgive.

8 For my thoughts are not your thoughts: nor your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

9 For as the heavens are exalted above the earth, so are my ways exalted above your ways, and my thoughts above your thoughts.

10 And as the rain and the snow come down from heaven, and return no more thither, but soak the earth, and water it, and make it to spring, and give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater:

11 So shall my word be, which shall go forth from my mouth: it shall not return to me void, but it shall do whatsoever I please, and shall prosper in the things for which I have sent it.

12 For you shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall sing praise before you, and all the trees of the country shall clap their hands.

13 Instead of the shrub shall come up the fig-tree, and instead of the nettle shall come up the myrtle-tree: and the Lord shall be named for an everlasting sign, that shall not be taken away.

CHAP. LVI.

God invites all to keep his commandments: the Gentiles that keep them shall be the people of God: the Jewish pastors are reproved.

VER. 3. David. I will be equally faithful to you. Psal. lxxxviii. 29. Sept. "the holy things of David faithful." Acts xiii. 34. The resurrection of Christ fully accomplished the promise made to David.

VER. 4. Him. David, who continually proclaimed the Divine mercies, (Psal. xvii. 1.) or rather Christ. C.

VER. 6. Near. He will shortly (C.) turn to the Gentiles. John xii. 35; Acts. xiii. 46. H.

VER. 8. My ways. I am not vindictive, but require a sincere conversion. C.

VER. 11. Sent it. I will assuredly bring you from Babylon; and the ruin shall sooner return upwards than I will break my promise.

VER. 12. Peace, by strangers. Chap. xlix. 22.—Hands, for joy. C.

VER. 13. Myrtle-tree. Instead of the wicked, the just shall be seen. Chal.

CHAP. LVI. VER. 1. Judgment, the right resolution to do God's will, which justice executes. Chap. xxxii. W.—My justice. Sept. "mercy."

THUS saith the Lord: Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my justice to be revealed.

2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that shall lay hold on this: that keepeth the sabbath from profaning it, that keepeth his hands from doing any evil.

3 And let not the son of the stranger, that adhereth to the Lord, speak, saying: The Lord will divide and separate me from his people. And let not the eunuch say: Behold, I am a dry tree.

4 For thus saith the Lord to the eunuchs: They that shall keep my sabbaths, and shall choose the things that please me, and shall hold fast my covenant:

5 I will give to them in my house, and within my walls, a place, and a name better than sons and daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, which shall never perish.

6 And to the children of the stranger that adhere to the Lord, to worship him, and to love his name, to be his servants: every one that keepeth the sabbath from profaning it, and that holdeth fast my covenant:

7 I will bring them into my holy mount, and will make them joyful in my house of prayer: their holocausts, and their victims shall please me upon my altar: for my house shall be called the house of prayer for all nations.

8 The Lord God, who gathereth the scattered of Israel, saith: I will still gather unto him his congregation.

9 All ye beasts of the field come to devour, all ye the beasts of the forest.

10 His watchmen are all blind, they are all ignorant: dumb dogs not able to bark, seeing vain things, sleeping and loving dreams.

11 And most impudent dogs, they never had enough: the shepherds themselves knew no understanding: all have turned aside into their own way, every one after his own gain, from the first even to the last.

12 Come, let us take wine, and be filled with drunkenness: and it shall be as to-day, so also to-morrow, and much more.

* Wisd. i. 1; Matt. xxiii. 23.—^b Jer. vii. 11; Matt. xxi. 13; Mark xi. 17; Luke xix. 46.

VER. 2. Sabbath. All the Jewish festivals, (C.) as well as those of the Christian Church, (H.) and the whole law. W.

VER. 3. People. The Jews would not admit all nations to their communion. Deut. xxxiii. 1. A little before Christ's coming they began to make more proselytes (Matt. xxiii. 15); and the sacred books being translated, came to the knowledge of the Gentiles, who were thus induced by degrees to embrace the true faith. H.

VER. 4. Eunuchs. It was ignominious to have no children, among the Jews, as the propagation of the true religion depended much on their numbers. But now, since the Church is gathered from all nations, virginity is preferable to marriage, and those who keep the sabbath, or all the commandments, and choose this state freely, will receive greater glory than the other sons and daughters of God.—The rewards of continency are great, eximia. M.—Those who choose to do more than is commanded will have a greater reward. W.

VER. 7. Prayer. So the temple is justly styled. H.—This shall be open to all nations. After the captivity the Jews condescended to let the Gentiles have a court, and they even suffered some princes to go into the court of the priests. 2 Mac. iii. 33.

VER. 9. Beasts. Here a fresh discourse begins to chap. lxi. The Chaldees and Romans are invited to punish God's people for their sins, committed before the captivity. Zac. xiv. 2. C.—The prophet foresees the negligence of some pastors, and denounces their rigorous chastisement. W.

The infidelity of the Jews: their idolatry. Promises to humble penitents

THE just perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart, and men of mercy are taken away, because there is none that understandeth; for the just man is taken away from before the face of evil.

2 Let peace come, let him rest in his bed that hath walked in his uprightness.

3 But draw near hither, you sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer, and of the harlot.

4 Upon whom have you jested? upon whom have you opened your mouth wide, and put out your tongue? are not you wicked children, a false seed?

5 Who seek your comfort in idols under every green tree, sacrificing children in the torrents, under the high rocks?

6 In the parts of the torrent is thy portion, this is thy lot: and thou hast poured out libations to them, thou hast offered sacrifice. Shall I not be angry at these things?

7 Upon a high and lofty mountain thou hast laid thy bed, and hast gone up thither to offer victims.

8 And behind the door, and behind the post, thou hast set up thy remembrance: for thou hast discovered thyself near me, and hast received an adulterer: thou hast enlarged thy bed, and made a covenant with them: thou hast loved their bed with open hand.

9 And thou hast adorned thyself for the king, with ointment, and hast multiplied thy perfumes. Thou hast sent thy messengers far off, and was debased even to hell.

10 Thou hast been wearied in the multitude of thy ways: yet thou saidst not: I will rest: thou hast found life of thy hand, therefore thou hast not asked.

11 For whom hast thou been solicitous and afraid, that thou hast lied, and hast not been mindful of me, nor thought on me in thy heart? for I am silent, and as one that seeth not, and thou hast forgotten me.

12 I will declare thy justice, and thy works shall not profit thee.

VER. 11. Afraid, since thou hast despised me, my laws and offers.

13 When thou shalt cry, let thy companies deliver thee, but the wind shall carry them all off, a breeze shall take them away : but he that putteth his trust in me, shall inherit the land, and shall possess my holy mount.

14 And I will say : "Make a way : give free passage, turn out of the path, take away the stumblingblocks out of the way of my people.

15 For thus saith the High and the Eminent that inhabiteth eternity : and his name is Holy, who dwelleth in the high and holy place, and with a contrite and humble spirit : to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite.

16 For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be angry unto the end : because the Spirit shall go forth from my face, and breathings I will make.

17 For the iniquity of his covetousness I was angry, and I struck him : I hid my face from thee, and was angry : and he went away wandering in his own heart.

18 I saw his ways, and I healed him, and brought him back, and restored comforts to him, and to them that mourn for him.

19 I created the fruit of the lips, peace, peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near. said the Lord, and I healed him.

20 But the wicked are like the raging sea, which cannot rest, and the waves thereof cast up dirt and mire.

21 "There is no peace to the wicked, saith the Lord God.

CHAP. LVIII.

God rejects the hypocritical fasts of the Jews : recommends works of mercy, and sincere godliness.

CRY, cease not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their wicked doings, and the house of Jacob their sins.

2 For they seek me from day to day, and desire to know my ways, as a nation that hath done justice, and hath not forsaken the judgment of their God : they ask of me the judgments of justice : they are willing to approach to God.

3 Why have we fasted, and thou hast not regarded : have we humbled our souls, and thou hast not taken notice ? Behold, in the day of your fast, your own will is found, and you exact of all your debtors.

4 Behold, you fast for debates and strife, and strike with the fist wickedly. Do not fast as you have done until this day, to make your cry to be heard on high.

5 "Is this such a fast as I have chosen : for a man to afflict his soul for a day ? is this it, to wind his head about like a circle, and to spread sackcloth and ashes ? wilt thou call this a fast, and a day acceptable to the Lord ?

6 Is not this rather the fast that I have chosen ? loose the bands of wickedness, undo the bundles that oppress, let them that are broken, go free, and break asunder every burden.

7 "Deal thy bread to the hungry, and bring the needy and the harbourless into thy house : when thou shalt see one naked, cover him, and despise not thy own flesh.

8 Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall speedily arise, and thy justice shall go before thy face, and the glory of the Lord shall gather thee up.

9 Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall hear : thou shalt cry, and he shall say : Here I am. If thou wilt take away the chain out of the midst of thee, and cease to stretch out the finger, and to speak that which profiteth not.

10 When thou shalt pour out thy soul to the hungry, and shalt satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise up in darkness, and thy darkness shall be as the noon-day.

11 And the Lord will give thee rest continually, and will fill thy soul with brightness, and deliver thy bones, and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a fountain of waters, whose waters shall not fail.

12 "And the places that have been desolate for ages, shall be built in thee : thou shalt raise up the foundations of generation and generation : and thou shalt be called the repairer of the fences, turning the paths into rest.

13 If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy own will in my holy day, and call the sabbath delightful, and the holy of the Lord glorious, and glorify him, while thou dost not thy own ways, and thy own will is not found, to speak a word :

14 Then shalt thou be delighted in the Lord, and I will lift thee up above the high places of the earth, and will feed thee with the inheritance of Jacob, thy father. For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

2 But your iniquities have divided between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you that he should not hear.

3 ^aFor your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity: your lips have spoken lies, and your tongue uttereth iniquity.

4 There is none that calleth upon justice, neither is there any one that judgeth truly: but they trust in a mere nothing, and speak vanities: they have conceived labour, and brought forth iniquity.

5 They have broken the eggs of asps, ^band have woven the webs of spiders: ne that shall eat of their eggs, shall die: and that which is brought out, shall be hatched into a basilisk.

6 Their webs shall not be for clothing, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are unprofitable works, and the work of iniquity is in their hands.

7 ^cTheir feet run to evil, and make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts are unprofitable thoughts: wasting and destruction are in their ways.

8 They have not known the way of peace, and there is no judgment in their steps: their paths are become crooked to them: every one that treadeth in them, knoweth no peace.

9 Therefore is judgment far from us, and justice shall not overtake us. We looked for light, and behold darkness: brightness, and we have walked in the dark.

10 We have groped for the wall, and like the blind we have groped as if we had no eyes: we have stumbled at noon day, as in darkness, we are in dark places, as dead men.

11 We shall roar all of us like bears, and shall lament as mournful doves. We have looked for judgment, and there is none: for salvation, and it is far from us.

12 For our iniquities are multiplied before thee, and our sins have testified against us: for our wicked doings are with us, and we have known our iniquities.

13 In sinning and lying against the Lord: and we have turned away so that we went not after our God, but spoke calumny and transgression: we have conceived, and uttered from the heart, words of falsehood.

14 And judgment is turned away backward, and justice hath stood far off: because truth had fallen down in the street, and equity could not come in.

15 And truth hath been forgotten: and he that de-

16 And he saw that there is not a man: and he stood astonished, because there is none to oppose himself: and his own arm brought salvation to him, and his own justice supported him.

17 "He put on justice as a breastplate, and a helmet of salvation upon his head: he put on the garments of vengeance, and was clad with zeal as with a cloak.

18 As unto revenge, as it were to repay wrath to his adversaries, and a reward to his enemies: he will repay the like to the islands.

20 "And there shall come a Redeemer to Sion, and to them that return from iniquity in Jacob, saith the Lord.

21 This is my covenant with them, saith the Lord: My spirit that is in thee, and my words that I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord from henceforth, and for ever.

7 All the flocks of Cedar shall be gathered together

^d Eph. vi. 17; 1 Thess. v. 8.—^e Rom. xi. 26.—^f Supra, xlix. 18.

Some few things may refer to the terrestrial Jerusalem, though the prophet speaks chiefly of the celestial and of the Church.—Lord, very great. Christ came to save us. C.

VER. 2. People. Babylon shall suffer, while thou art relieved. C.

VER. 3. Rising. The three wise men were the first.

VER. 4. Rise up. S. Jer. "suck," as the Heb. may imply. C.—Sept. "shall be carried on the shoulders." H.

VER. 5. Wonder. Heb. and Sept. in S. Jerom, "fear." This sensation is often mixed with joy. Matt. xxviii. 8.—Thee. No such nations joined the Jews, as they did the Church.

VER. 6. Ephraim. Abraham's grandson, who dwelt near his father, Madian, in Arabia, which was famous for camels. C.—Saba. The Arabians embraced the gospel, but never brought their treasures to Jerusalem. C.—The three kings came on swift beasts to adore Christ, and fulfilled his prophecy. Matt. ii. W.

VER. 7. Cedar and Nabatith sprung from Ismael, and dwelt in desert Arabia, under tents, feeding flocks. S. Jer. Ezech. xxvii. 21.—They also were converted to Christ.

unto thee, the rams of Nabaioth shall minister to thee: they shall be offered upon my acceptable altar; and I will glorify the house of my majesty.

8 Who are these, that fly as clouds, and as doves to their windows?

9 For the islands wait for me, and the ships of the sea in the beginning: that I may bring thy sons from afar: their silver, and their gold with them, to the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee.

10 And the children of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister to thee: for in my wrath have I struck thee, and in my reconciliation have I had mercy upon thee.

11 And thy gates shall be open continually: they shall not be shut day nor night, that the strength of the Gentiles may be brought to thee, and their kings may be brought.

12 For the nation and the kingdom that will not serve thee, shall perish: and the Gentiles shall be wasted with desolation.

13 The glory of Libanus shall come to thee, the fir-tree, and the box-tree, and the pine-tree together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary: and I will glorify the place of my feet.

14 And the children of them that afflict thee, shall come bowing down to thee, and all that slandered thee shall worship the steps of thy feet, and shall call thee the city of the Lord, the Sion of the Holy One of Israel.

15 Because thou wast forsaken, and hated, and there was none that passed through thee, I will make thee to be an everlasting glory, a joy unto generation and generation.

16 And thou shalt suck the milk of the Gentiles, and thou shalt be nursed with the breasts of kings: and thou shalt know that I am the Lord, thy Saviour, and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

17 For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver: and for wood, brass, and for stones, iron: and I will make thy visitation peace, and thy overseers justice.

18 Iniquity shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting or destruction in thy borders, and salvation shall possess thy walls, and praise thy gates.

* Apoc. xxi. 25.—b Apoc. xxi. 23, and xxii. 5.

VER. 9. Afar. All nations shall receive the gospel. Many made presents to the temple, after the return of the Jews. C.

VER. 10. To thee. The Persian monarchs (C.) were mostly favourable to the Jews. H.

VER. 12. Desolation. Though the Machabees conquered several nations, this can only be verified in the Church of Christ, to which God has subjected all; so that out of his faith none can be saved. Heb. ii. 8.

VER. 13. Glory; cedar, which was chiefly used in building the temple. 1 Esd. iii. 7. C.—This must be explained of the saints, who founded the Church, &c. S. Jer.

VER. 14. Feet. Prot. "shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet." This posture is not then essentially idolatrous. H.

VER. 16. Kings. Thou shalt be treated like royal babes. Chap. xlix. 23. C.—Sept. "and thou shalt eat the riches of kings." H.

VER. 17. Visitation. Sept. "give thy chiefs in peace, and thy bishops in justice." S. Clement (ad Cor.) reads, "I will appoint their bishops in justice, and their deacons in faith." C.—The Scripture thus specifies the name and duties of the pastors of the Church. S. Jer.

VER. 19. Thou shalt, &c. In this latter part of the chapter, the prophet passes from the illustrious promises made to the Church militant on earth to the glory of the Church triumphant in heaven. Ch.—Glory. S. John seems to have copied this. Apoc. xviii., &c.

19 Thou shalt no more have the sun for thy light by day, neither shall the brightness of the moon enlighten thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee for an everlasting light, and thy God for thy glory.

20 Thy sun shall go down no more, and thy moon shall not decrease: for the Lord shall be unto thee for an everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.

21 And thy people shall be all just, they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hand to glorify me.

22 The least shall become a thousand, and a little one a most strong nation: I, the Lord, will suddenly do this thing in its time.

CHAP. LXI.

The office of Christ; the mission of the apostles: the happiness of their converts.

THE Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me: he hath sent me to preach to the meek, to heal the contrite of heart, and to preach a release to the captives, and deliverance to them that are shut up.

2 To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God: to comfort all that mourn:

3 To appoint to the mourners of Sion, and to give them a crown for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, a garment of praise for the spirit of grief: and they shall be called in it the mighty ones of justice, the planting of the Lord to glorify him.

4 And they shall build the places that have been waste from of old, and shall raise up ancient ruins, and shall repair the desolate cities, that were destroyed for generation and generation.

5 And strangers shall stand and shall feed your flocks. and the sons of strangers shall be your husbandmen, and the dressers of your vines.

6 But you shall be called the priests of the Lord: to you it shall be said: Ye ministers of our God: ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and you shall pride your selves in their glory.

7 For your double confusion and shame, they shall praise their part: therefore shall they receive double in their land, everlasting joy shall be unto them.

c Luke iv. 8.—d Matt. v. 5.—e Supra, lviii. 12.

VER. 22. The least of the apostles shall bring many converts, (C.) or shall be spiritual (H.) governor of a great city, (Mic. v. 2,) in the Church militant. C.

CHAP. LXI. VER. 1. Lord. Heb. adds, "God." Adonai seems to have been inserted to prevent the pronunciation of Jehovah, (Kennicott,) which alone occurs in the Sept., Arab., and in S. Luke, iv. 18. H.—Thus Elohim may have been substituted for Jehovah, Gen. xxii. 8, as ver. 14, "Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh, because he had said that day on the mount: Jehovah will provide" a victim, even Jesus Christ, in the same place. Perhaps no part of the Bible is "so absurdly translated" as this, (Ken.) by Prote-tants. H.—S. Luke follows the Sept. in his quotation, only instead of to preach a, &c., he has an explanation, to set at liberty them that are bruised. Isaias may here speak of himself, (Chal.) yet only as the figure of Christ. The Jews admit that the Messias is meant.

VER. 2. Year of Jubilee, (Jer. xxv. 11,) when the Jews should be delivered, as a figure of Christ's redemption.

VER. 4. Ruins, as the Jews did. Chap. lviii. 12.

VER. 5. Vines. Bishops were soon chosen from among the Gentiles.

VER. 6. Priests. They were greatly honoured, (Exod. xix. 6,) so that the sons of David had the appellation. The Jews had still to labour as before. Christians become heirs to these promises, and are styled a royal priesthood. 1 Pet. ii. 9; Apoc. i. 6.

VER. 7. Part: God, or the land. Converts shall bless God for having with-

8 For I am the Lord that love judgment, and hate robbery in a holocaust: and I will make their work in truth, and I will make a perpetual covenant with them.

9 And they shall know their seed among the Gentiles, and their offspring in the midst of peoples: all that shall see them, shall know them, that these are the seed which the Lord hath blessed.

10 I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, and my soul shall be joyful in my God: for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation: and with the robe of justice he hath covered me, as a bridegroom decked with a crown, and as a bride adorned with her jewels.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth her seed to shoot forth: so shall the Lord God make justice to spring forth, and praise before all the nations.

CHAP. LXII.

The prophet will not cease from preaching Christ: to whom all nations shall be converted: and whose Church shall continue for ever.

FOR Sion's sake, I will not hold my peace, and for the sake of Jerusalem, I will not rest, till her just one come forth as brightness, and her Saviour be lighted as a lamp.

2 And the Gentiles shall see thy just one, and all kings thy glorious one: and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name.

3 And thou shalt be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God.

4 Thou shalt no more be called forsaken: and thy land shall no more be called desolate: but thou shalt be called My pleasure in her, and thy land inhabited. Because the Lord hath been well pleased with thee: and thy land shall be inhabited.

5 For the young man shall dwell with the virgin, and thy children shall dwell in thee. And the bridegroom shall rejoice over the bride, and thy God shall rejoice over thee.

6 Upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, I have appointed watchmen all the day, and all the night; they shall never hold their peace. You that are mindful of the Lord, hold not your peace.

7 And give him no silence till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

8 The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength: Surely, I will no more give thy corn to be meat for thy enemies: and the sons of the strangers shall not drink thy wine, for which thou hast laboured.

9 For they that gather it, shall eat it, and shall praise the Lord: and they that bring it together, shall drink it in my holy courts.

10 Go through, go through the gates, *prepare the way for the people, make the road plain, pick out the stones, and lift up the standard to the people.

11 ^bBehold, the Lord hath made it to be heard in the ends of the earth, tell the daughter of Sion: Behold, thy Saviour cometh: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.

12 And they shall call them, The holy people, the redeemed of the Lord. But thou shalt be called: A city sought after, and not forsaken.

CHAP. LXIII.

Christ's victory over his enemies: his mercies to his people: their complaints.

WHO is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bosra, this beautiful one in his robe, walking in the greatness of his strength? I, that speak justice, and am a defender to save.

2 ^cWhy then is thy apparel red, and thy garments like theirs that tread in the winepress?

3 I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the Gentiles there is not a man with me: I have trampled on them in my indignation, and have trodden them down in my wrath, and their blood is sprinkled upon my garments, and I have stained all my apparel.

4 ^dFor the day of vengeance is in my heart, the year of my redemption is come.

5 I looked about, and there was none to help: I sought, and there was none to give aid: and my own arm hath saved for me, and my indignation itself hath helped me.

6 And I have trodden down the people in my wrath, and have made them drunk in my indignation, and have brought down their strength to the earth.

7 I will remember the tender mercies of the Lord, the praise of the Lord for all the things that the Lord hath bestowed upon us, and for the multitude of his good things to the house of Israel, which he hath given them according to his kindness, and according to the multitude of his mercies.

8 And he saith: Surely, they are my people, children that will not deny: so he became their Saviour.

9 In all their affliction he was not troubled, and the drawn them from the crowd of infidels, and they will rejoice in suffering for his sake, (C.) preferring their lot before that of unbelievers. W.

VER. 8. Holocaust. The pagans saw that such things were improper victims. Eus. Præp. iv. 14.—Sept. "hate unjust plunder." H.—Therefore will I subject the strangers to you. Ver. 5.—Truth. I will grant a sure reward.

VER. 10. Jewels. Apoc. xxi. 2. Jerusalem, or rather the Church, praises God.

VER. 11. Nations, whose conversion is implicitly foretold. All behold the justice with which God has treated both his people and their oppressors. C.

CHAP. LXII. VER. 1. Rest, as long as God grants me life, or till I behold the Saviour; or Cyrus, the figure of Christ. C.—True preachers will not be silent on account of any threats, but will labour for the Church. 2 Tim. ii. W.

VER. 4. Forsaken. Yet the synagogue was again rejected, at the death of Christ. The promises naturally relate to his Church. C.

VER. 5. Dwell. Heb. "marry." They shall be attached to their country.—Thee. He shall love thee as a bridegroom does one whom he has lately married. Christ never abandons his virgin spouse. C.—Isaias speaks of some state of the Jews which has not yet taken place. Houbigaut.

VER. 6. Watchmen; priests and prophets, (Matt. ii. 1; Psal. cxxxiii. 2. C.) or angels. S. Jer. S. Bern.—Mindful, whose duty it is to remind him of his promises, and to recite the Church office. C.—Heb. molcirim, monitors. 2 Kings viii. 16. H.—In these faithful watchmen the Church is always visible. W.

VER. 8. Hand; inviolably. Deut. xxxii. 40. The Persians deemed this oath most sacred. C.—Darius, just expiring, said to Polydates, "By thee I give this right hand to Alexander," (Plut.,) that he may revenge my death.

VER. 10. People, that they may return to Judea, and be converted to Christ. C.

VER. 11. Work, the redemption of mankind. H.

CHAP. LXIII. VER. 1. Edom. Edom and Bosra (a strong city of Edom) are here taken in a mystical sense for the enemies of Christ and his Church. Ch.—The first six verses are applied to our Saviour's ascension, which excites the admiration of angels. Psal. xliii. 7. Judas, the Machabee, the glorious figure of Christ, is introduced speaking in this and the following chapter. He conquered Idumea, (1 Mac. v. 3, and 2 Mac. x. 10,) and fought to save the people. 1 Mac. ix. 21. C.

VER. 3. Press. Christ suffered, (S. Cyr.,) and punished his enemies. Apoc. xiv. 19. Judas received God's sword from Jeremias, (2 Mac. xv. 15,) and liberated his people.

VER. 5. Me. I depended on the goodness of my cause, and on God's aid Chap. lix. 15. C.

VER. 8. Deny, or prove degenerate. C.—God approves the conduct of the Machabees. H.

angel of his presence saved them: in his love, and in his mercy he redeemed them, and he carried them and lifted them up all the days of old.

10 But they provoked to wrath, and afflicted the spirit of his holy One: and he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.

11 And he remembered the days of old of Moses, and of his people: "Where is he that brought them up out of the sea, with the shepherds of his flock? where is he that put in the midst of them the spirit of his holy One?"

12 He that brought out Moses by the right hand, by the arm of his majesty: that divided the waters before them, to make himself an everlasting name.

13 He that led them out through the deep, as a horse in the wilderness that stumbleth not.

14 As a beast that goeth down in the field, the Spirit of the Lord was their leader: so didst thou lead thy people to make thyself a glorious name.

15 "Look down from heaven, and behold from thy holy habitation and the place of thy glory: where is thy zeal, and thy strength, the multitude of thy bowels, and of thy mercies: they have held back themselves from me.

16 For thou art our Father, and Abraham hath not known us, and Israel hath been ignorant of us: thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer, from everlasting is thy name.

17 Why hast thou made us to err, O Lord, from thy ways: why hast thou hardened our heart, that we should not fear thee? return, for the sake of thy servants, the tribes of thy inheritance.

18 They have possessed thy holy people as nothing: our enemies have trodden down thy sanctuary.

19 We are become as in the beginning, when thou didst not rule over us, and when we were not called by thy name.

CHAP. LXIV.

The prophet prays for the release of his people: and for the remission of their sins.

O THAT thou wouldst rend the heavens, and wouldst come down: the mountains would melt away at thy presence.

2 They would melt as at the burning of fire, the waters

^a Exod. xiv. 29.—^b Deut. xxvi. 15; Bar. ii. 16.

VER. 9. Presence, in high authority. Exod. xxxiii. 20. C.—The angel guardian of the Church. Particular guardians also see God's face. Matt. xviii. W.

VER. 10. One; Moses. Num. xiv. 29, and xx. 3, 12.

VER. 11. Flock. Psal. lxxvi. 21.—One. Moses inspired by God. C.

VER. 15. Back. This is spoken by the prophet in the person of the Jews, at the time when for their sins they were given up to their enemies. Ch.—Judas uses the same language at Maspha. 1 Mac. iii. 50. C.

VER. 16. Abraham, &c. That is, Abraham will not now acknowledge us for his children, by reason of our degeneracy; but thou, O Lord, art our true Father and our Redeemer, and no other can be called our parent in comparison with thee. Ch.—Abraham is not able to save us. C.—The patriarchs may justly disregard us as degenerate children; yet we hope in God's mercies. Thus S. Jerom, &c. explain the passage, which does not favour the errors of Vigilantius and of Luther, who maintain that the saints departed do not know what passes in this world.

VER. 17. Hardened, &c. The meaning is, that God, in punishment of their great and manifold crimes, and their long abuse of his mercy and grace, had withdrawn his graces from them, and so given them up to error and hardness of heart. Ch.—They had abused his patience, to sin the more. Theod.—The Jews are accustomed to attribute all to God, though they agree with us in reality. God might prevent any sin. C.—But he chooses to leave man to the free exercise of his liberty. He hardens (H.) "not by infusing malice, but by not showing mercy; and those whom he shows it not, are undeserving." S. Aug. ep. ad Sixt. xciv. 14. W.

CHAP. LXIV. VER. 1. Presence, as at Sinai. Exod. xix. 16; Judg. v. 4. Judas continues to pray. C.—The faithful sigh for Christ's coming. 11.

would burn with fire, that thy name might be made known to thy enemies: that the nations might tremble at thy presence.

3 When thou shalt do wonderful things, we shall not bear them: thou didst come down, and at thy presence the mountains melted away.

4 From the beginning of the world they have not heard, nor perceived with the ears: "the eye hath not seen, O God, besides thee, what things thou hast prepared for them that wait for thee.

5 Thou hast met him that rejoiceth, and doth justice: in thy ways they shall remember thee: behold, thou art angry, and we have sinned: in them we have been always, and we shall be saved.

6 And we are all become as one unclean, and all our justices as the rag of a menstruous woman: and we have all fallen as a leaf, and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.

7 There is none that calleth upon thy name: that riseth up, and taketh hold of thee: thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast crushed us in the hand of our iniquity.

8 And now, O Lord, thou art our Father, and we are clay: and thou art our Maker, and we all are the works of thy hands.

9 "Be not very angry, O Lord, and remember no longer our iniquity: behold, see we are all thy people.

10 The city of thy sanctuary is become a desert, Sion is made a desert, Jerusalem is desolate.

11 The house of our holiness, and of our glory, where our fathers praised thee, is burnt with fire, and all our lovely things are turned into ruins.

12 Wilt thou refrain thyself, O Lord, upon these things, wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us vehemently?

CHAP. LXV.

The Gentiles shall seek and find Christ, but the Jews will persecute him, and be rejected, only a remnant shall be reserved. The Church shall multiply, and abound with graces.

THEY "have sought me that before asked not for me. they have found me that sought me not. I said: Behold me, behold me, to a nation that did not call upon my name.

^c 1 Cor. ii. 9.—^d Psal. lxxviii. 8.—^e Rom. x. 20.

VER. 2. They. Sept. "As wax melts before the fire, so also fire will burn the adversaries, and thy," &c. 11.—Burn. Sparks of fire seemed to proceed from it.

VER. 4. Thee. Never was deliverance more unexpected or miraculous. S. Paul quotes this passage, to show the wisdom manifested in the incarnation. 1 Cor. ii. 9. It is commonly applied to the glory of heaven.

VER. 5. Thee. The little band of Judas was sincerely attached to the Lord. 2 Mac. i. 3.—Sinned. This excited thy anger. Yet thou wilt show mercy. Sin is often put for punishment. C.

VER. 6. Unclean: leper. Grot. Lev. xiii. 45.—Justices. That is, the works by which we pretended to make ourselves just. This is spoken particularly of the sacrifices, sacraments, and ceremonies of the Jews, after the death of Christ, and the promulgation of the new law. Ch.—The justice which is under the law is stained with uncleanness, when compared with evangelical purity. Phil. iii. 8.—The good works which are done by grace, and not by man alone, cannot be said to be of this description. They constitute the internal glory of man, and God will one day crown these his gifts. Of ourselves indeed we can do nothing, and the works of the Mosaic law will not avail, as S. Paul inculcates: but those works point out the saint, which are performed by charity with faith in Christ. This justice is not imputed only, but real; and shows where true faith exists, according to S. James. Thus the apostles explain each other. H.

VER. 10. Desolate, under Antiochus Epiphanes. 1 Mac. i. 31, and iv. 38. C. CHAP. LXV. VER. 1. Me. God answers the preceding prayer, and announces the rejection of the synagogue, alluding to the armies which prevailed in 2 I have spread forth my hands all the day to an unbelieving people, who walk in a way that is not good, after their own thoughts.

3 A people that continually provoke me to anger before my face: that immolate in gardens, and sacrifice upon bricks.

4 That dwell in sepulchres, and sleep in the temple of idols: that eat swine's flesh, and profane broth is in their vessels.

5 That say: Depart from me, come not near me, because thou art unclean: these shall be smoke in my anger, a fire burning all the day.

6 Behold it is written before me: I will not be silent, but I will render and repay into their bosom.

7 Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the Lord, who have sacrificed upon the mountains, and have reproached me upon the hills; and I will measure back their first work in their bosom.

8 Thus saith the Lord: As if a grain be found in a cluster, and it be said: Destroy it not, because it is a blessing: so will I do for the sake of my servants, that I may not destroy the whole.

9 And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Juda a possessor of my mountains: and my elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

10 And the plains shall be turned to folds of flocks, and the valley of Achor into a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

11 And you, that have forsaken the Lord, that have forgotten my holy mount, that set a table for fortune, and offer libations upon it.

12 I will number you in the sword, and you shall all fall by slaughter: *because I called, and you did not answer: I spoke, and you did not hear: and you did evil in my eyes, and you have chosen the things that displease me.

13 Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: Behold my servants shall eat, and you shall be hungry: behold my servants shall drink, and you shall be thirsty.

14 Behold my servants shall rejoice, and you shall be confounded: behold my servants shall praise for joyfulness of heart, and you shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for grief of spirit.

the days of the Machabees.—Not. S. Paul explains this of the conversion of the Gentiles. Rom. x. 20. C.—It cannot regard the Jews, who are spoken of in the next verse. W.

VER. 5. Unclean. Thus acted the hypocritical Pharisees.—Smoke. A just punishment of those who had sought the smoke of human applause.

VER. 6. Bosom: good measure. Luke vi. 38. Rewards and punishments will be eternal.

VER. 7. Hills. Some offered sacrifices to God, others to idols; both unlawfully. C.

VER. 8. Whole. The good grain is preserved amid the general corruption. H.—A few of the Jews were chosen to believe in Christ.

VER. 13. Servants; Christians, (C.) particularly the elect. H.

VER. 15. Execration. They can wish to be preserved from nothing worse.—Name. The faithful shall be no longer called Jews. C.

VER. 16. Amen, or “of truth.” False gods shall be neglected. They shall not swear by them, as formerly. Soph. i. 5.

15 And you shall leave your name for an execration to my elect: and the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name.

16 In which he that is blessed upon the earth, shall be blessed in God, amen: and he that sweareth in the earth, shall swear by God, amen: because the former distresses are forgotten, and because they are hid from my eyes.

17 *For behold I create new heavens, and a new earth: and the former things shall not be in remembrance, and they shall not come upon the heart.

18 But you shall be glad, and rejoice for ever in these things, which I create: for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and the people thereof joy.

19 And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people, and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

20 There shall no more be an infant of days there, nor an old man that shall not fill up his days: for the child shall die a hundred years old, and the sinner being a hundred years old, shall be accursed.

21 And they shall build houses, and inhabit them: and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruits of them.

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit: they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree, so shall be the days of my people, and the works of their hands shall be of long continuance.

23 My elect shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth in trouble: for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their posterity with them.

24 *And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will hear: as they are yet speaking, I will hear.

25 “The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, the lion and the ox shall eat straw: and dust shall be the serpent’s food: they shall not hurt, nor kill in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord.

VER. 23. In. Heb. “for trouble.” Chal. “death.” Sept. “malediction.” The children shall not be cut off; and baptism shall secure their salvation.

VER. 25. Straw. People of the most perverse tempers shall become mild by the influence of the gospel, and shall dwell together in perfect concord. C.—Food according to the sentence. Gen. iii. 14. M.

CHAP. LXVI. VER. 1. House. This is a prophecy that the temple should be cast off. Ch.—Isaiah alludes to the return of the captives, as to a figure of the Church. They had flattered themselves with the idea of building a magnificent temple. God regards it not, as long as they follow their own wills and cherish pride. C. respect, but to him that is poor and little, and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my words?

3 He that sacrificeth an ox, is as if he slew a man: he that killeth a sheep in sacrifice, as if he should brain a dog: he that offereth an oblation, as if he should offer swine's blood: he that remembereth incense, as if he should bless an idol. All these things have they chosen in their ways, and their soul is delighted in their abominations.

4 Wherefore I also will choose their mockeries: and will bring upon them the things they feared: "because I called, and there was none that would answer: I have spoken, and they heard not: and they have done evil in my eyes, and have chosen the things that displease me.

5 Hear the word of the Lord, you that tremble at his word: Your brethren that hate you, and cast you out for my name's sake, have said: Let the Lord be glorified, and we shall see in your joy: but they shall be confounded.

6 A voice of the people from the city, a voice from the temple, the voice of the Lord, that rendereth recompense to his enemies.

7 Before she was in labour, she brought forth, before her time came to be delivered she brought forth a man-child.

8 Who hath ever heard such a thing? and who hath seen the like to this? shall the earth bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be brought forth at once, because Sion hath been in labour, and hath brought forth her children?

9 Shall not I, that make others to bring forth children, myself bring forth, saith the Lord? shall I, that give generation to others, be barren, saith the Lord, thy God?

10 Rejoice with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all you that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all you that mourn for her.

11 That you may suck, and be filled with the breasts of her consolations: that you may milk out, and flow with delights from the abundance of her glory.

12 For thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will bring upon her, as it were, a river of peace, and as an overflowing torrent, the glory of the Gentiles, which you shall suck: you shall be carried at the breasts, and upon the knees they shall caress you.

* Prov. i. 24; Supra, lxxv. 12; Jer. vii. 13.

VER. 3. He. Sept. "the wicked who." H.—Oz. This is a prophecy, that the sacrifices which were offered in the old law, should be abolished in the new; and that the offering of them should be a crime. Ch.—Brain, or slay. H.—Incense. To offer it in the way of a sacrifice (Ch.); or to remind God of his people. —Ways, to please themselves, and to bind me. But I will not have a divided heart. Chap. i. 11, and lviii. 3. C.

VER. 5. Brethren, the Idumeans, &c., or the Jews, who would not believe in Christ.

VER. 6. Lord, who is about to quit the temple, and to abandon the Jews to their internal-dissensions, and to the arms of the Romans. Many prodigies announced this judgment. C.

VER. 7. Before, &c. This relates to the conversion of the Gentiles, who were born as it were all on a sudden to the Church of God. Ch.—Sion furnished the first preachers of the gospel. 11.

VER. 10. For her. Ye shall be comforted, (H.) when the captives return, and the gospel is propagated.

VER. 12. You. S. Paul fed the weak with milk. 1 Cor. iii. 2; Heb. v. 12, and 1 Pet. ii. 2.

VER. 14. Herb, in baptism and the resurrection.—Enemies, the Chaldees, infidel Jews, and all the reprobate. Ver. 15. How many miracles were wrought by Christian preachers!

VER. 16. Muny. Few are chosen. H.—All the wicked shall perish eternally. M.

VER. 17. Within the court, or gardens, where they purified themselves, foolishly supposing that this would remove their crimes, as the pagans did. S. Jer. Tert. Bapt. 5.—Mouse, or "field rat," (Bochart,) all declared unclean (Lev. xi.

13 As one whom the mother caresseth, so will I comfort you, and you shall be comforted in Jerusalem.

14 You shall see, and your heart shall rejoice, ^band your bones shall flourish like an herb; and the hand of the Lord shall be known to his servants, and he shall be angry with his enemies.

15 For behold the Lord will come with fire, and his chariots are like a whirlwind, to render his wrath in indignation, and his rebuke with flames of fire.

16 For the Lord shall judge by fire, and by his sword unto all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many.

17 They that were sanctified, and thought themselves clean in the gardens behind the gate within, they that did eat swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse: they shall be consumed together, saith the Lord.

18 But I know their works, and their thoughts: I come that I may gather them together with all nations and tongues: and they shall come and shall see my glory.

19 And I will set a sign among them, and I will send of them, that shall be saved, to the Gentiles into the sea, into Africa, and Lydia them that draw the bow: into Italy and Greece, to the islands afar off, to them that have not heard of me, and have not seen my glory. And they shall declare my glory to the Gentiles:

20 And they shall bring all your brethren out of all nations, for a gift to the Lord, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and on mules, and in coaches, to my holy mountain, Jerusalem, saith the Lord, as if the children of Israel should bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the Lord.

21 And I will take of them to be priests, and Levites, saith the Lord.

22 "For as the new heavens, and the new earth, which I make to stand before me, saith the Lord: so shall your seed stand, and your name.

23 And there shall be month after month, and sabbath after sabbath: and all flesh shall come to adore before my face, saith the Lord.

24 And they shall go out, and see the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me: "their worm shall not die, and their fire shall not be quenched: and they shall be a loathsome sight to all flesh.

VER. 20. Brethren, as the converts may justly be styled. C.—Offering; the first-fruits, brought by all with great solemnity. Deut. xxvi. 4, and 2 Thess. ii. 12. C.

VER. 21. Of them, Gentiles (ver. 19); some of whom alone will be properly priests, though all enjoy the title in a figurative sense. 1 Pet. ii. 9. The Jews strive in vain to elude this text. C.

VER. 22. Name. The faith and morals of Christianity shall subsist for ever, like the gospel, which is termed the new heavens. Chap. lxxv. 17; Matt. xvi. 18.

VER. 23. Sabbath. Grotius explains this of the Gentiles, who should come to Jerusalem. But this was never realized before the propagation of the gospel. The Jews came thrice a year.

VER. 24. Men; rebellious Jews and persecutors, who perished miserably.—Flesh. Josephus (Bel. vi. 16) describes the horrors of the last siege of Jerusalem. The prophet may allude to the fires kept up in the vale of Hinnon (chap. xxx. 33); and our Saviour applies this text to the damned. Mark ix. 43. All shall condemn them. C.

THE PROPHECY OF JEREMIAS.

JEREMIAS was a priest, a native of Anathoth, a priestly city in the tribe of Benjamin, and was sanctified from his mother's womb to be a prophet of God: where office he began to execute when he was yet a child in age. He was in his whole life, according to the signification of his name, great before the Lord, and a special figure of Jesus Christ, in the persecutions he underwent for discharging his duty, in his charity for his persecutors, and in the violent death he suffered at their hands; it being an ancient tradition of the Hebrews, that he was stoned to death by the remnant of the Jews who had retired into Egypt, (Ch.) at Taphnes.—He was the prophet of the Gentiles, as well as of the Jews, predicting many things which befell both, and particularly the liberation of the latter, A. 3485, after seventy years captivity, dating from A. 3415, (C.) or 3398, the 4th of Joakim. Usher. Chap. xxv. H.—He began to prophesy when he was very young, A. 3375, in the 13th year of Josias, (C.) before that prince had brought his reformation to any great perfection. H

CHAPTER I.

The time and the calling of Jeremias: his prophetic visions. God encourages him.

THE words of Jeremias, the son of Helcias, of the priests that were in Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin.

2 The word of the Lord, which came to him in the days of Josias, the son of Amon, king of Juda, in the thirteenth year^a of his reign.

3 And which came to him in the days of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, unto the end of the eleventh year of Sedecias, the son of Josias, king of Juda, even unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive, in the fifth month.

4 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying:

5 Before I formed thee in the bowels of thy mother, I knew thee: and before thou camest forth out of the womb, I sanctified thee, and made thee a prophet unto the nations.

6 And I said: Ah, ah, ah, Lord God: behold, I cannot speak, for I am a child.

7 And the Lord said to me: Say not: I am a child: for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee: and whatsoever I shall command thee, thou shalt speak.

8 Be not afraid at their presence: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord.

9 And the Lord put forth his hand, and touched my mouth:^b and the Lord said to me: Behold, I have given my words in thy mouth:

10 Lo, I have set thee this day over the nations, and over kingdoms, to root up, and to pull down, and to waste, and to destroy, and to build, and to plant.

11 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying: What seest thou, Jeremias? And I said: I see a rod watching.

12 And the Lord said to me: Thou hast seen well: for I will watch over my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the Lord came to me a second time, saying: What seest thou? And I said: "I see a boiling cauldron, and the face thereof from the face of the north.

14 And the Lord said to me: "From the north shall an evil break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.

15 For behold I will call together all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the Lord: and they shall come, and shall set every one his throne in the entrance of the gates of Jerusalem, and upon all the walls thereof round about, and upon all the cities of Juda.

16 And I will pronounce my judgments against them, touching all their wickedness, who have forsaken me, and have sacrificed to strange gods, and have adored the work of their own hands.

17 Thou, therefore, gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak to them all that I command thee. Be not afraid at their presence: for I will make thee not to fear their countenance.

18 "For behold I have made thee this day a fortified city, and a pillar of iron, and a wall of brass, over all the land, to the kings of Juda, to the princes thereof, and to the priests, and to the people of the land.

19 And they shall fight against thee, and shall not prevail: for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee.

CHAP. II.

God expostulates with the Jews for their ingratitude and infidelity.

AND the word of the Lord came to me, saying:
2 Go, and cry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying: Thus saith the Lord: I have remembered thee, pitying thy youth, and the love of thy espousals, when thou followedst me in the desert, in a land that is not sown.

3 Israel is holy to the Lord, the first-fruits of his in-

VER. 19. Prevail. God does not promise peace, but victory. W.

CHAP. II. VER. 2. Espousals. He speaks ironically. Theod.—Yet the Israelites at first showed greater proofs of love than they did afterwards. It is true they often prevaricated in the wilderness. Exod. xxxii. 1; Amos v. 25; Psal. lxxvii., &c. C.

VER. 3. Increase; most desirable. Osee ix. 10. God punished those who attempted to injure his people: yet they abandoned his service.

crease: all they that devour him, offend: evils shall come upon them, saith the Lord.

4 Hear ye the word of the Lord, O house of Jacob, and all ye families of the house of Israel.

5 Thus saith the Lord: "What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain?"

6 And they have not said: Where is the Lord, that made us come up out of the land of Egypt? that led us through the desert, through a land uninhabited and unpassable, through a land of drought, and the image of death, through a land, wherein no man walked, nor any man dwelt?

7 And I brought you into the land of Carmel, to eat the fruit thereof, and the best things thereof: and when you entered in, you defiled my land, and made my inheritance an abomination.

8 The priests did not say: Where is the Lord? and they that held the law knew me not, and the pastors transgressed against me: and the prophets prophesied in Baal, and followed idols.

9 Therefore will I yet contend in judgment with you, saith the Lord, and I will plead with your children.

10 Pass over to the isles of Cethim, and see: and send into Cedar, and consider diligently: and see if there hath been done any thing like this.

11 If a nation hath changed their gods, and indeed they are not gods: but my people have changed their glory into an idol.

12 Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and ye gates thereof, be very desolate, saith the Lord.

13 For my people have done two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living water, and have digged to themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.

14 Is Israel a bondman, or a home-born slave? why then is he become a prey?

15 The lions have roared upon him, and have a noise, they have made his land a wilderness: his cities are burnt down, and there is none to dwell in them.

16 The children also of Memphis, and of Taphnes, have deflowered thee, even to the crown of the head.

17 Hath not this been done to thee, because thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God at that time, when he led thee by the way?

18 And now what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt, to drink the troubled water? And what hast thou to do with the way of the Assyrians, to drink the water of the river?

19 Thy own wickedness shall reprove thee, and thy apostacy shall rebuke thee. Know thou, and see that it is an evil and a bitter thing for thee, to have left the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not with thee, saith the Lord, the God of hosts.

20 Of old time thou hast broken my yoke, thou hast burst my bands, and thou saidst: I will not serve. "For on every high hill, and under every green tree, thou didst prostitute thyself."

21 "Yet I planted thee a chosen vineyard, all true seed: how then art thou turned unto me into that which is good for nothing, O strange vineyard?"

22 Though thou wash thyself with nitre, and multiply to thyself the herb borith, thou art stained in thy iniquity before me, saith the Lord God.

23 How canst thou say: I am not polluted, I have not walked after Baalim? see thy ways in the valley, know what thou hast done: as a swift runner pursuing his course.

24 A wild ass accustomed to the wilderness in the desire of his heart, snuffed up the wind of his love: none shall turn her away: all that seek her shall not fail: in her monthly filth they shall find her.

25 Keep thy foot from being bare, and thy throat from thirst. But thou saidst: I have lost all hope, I will not do it: for I have loved strangers, and I will walk after them.

26 As the thief is confounded when he is taken, so is the house of Israel confounded, they and their kings, their princes, and their priests, and their prophets.

27 Saying to a stock: Thou art my father: and to a stone: Thou hast begotten me: "they have turned their back to me, and not their face: and in the time of their affliction they will say: Arise, and deliver us."

28 Where are the gods, whom thou hast made thee? let them arise and deliver thee in the time of thy affliction: "for according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Juda."

29 Why will you contend with me in judgment? you have all forsaken me, saith the Lord.

30 In vain have I struck your children, they have not received correction: your sword hath devoured your prophets, your generation is like a ravaging lion.

31 See ye the word of the Lord: Am I become a wilderness to Israel, or a lateward springing land? why

VER. 15. Lions: kings of Assyria, &c. The decree for the devastation of Juda had already passed, though it was not put in execution.

VER. 16. Taphnes, sixteen miles from Pelusium, in Egypt. The nation proved only detrimental to the Jews, by engaging them in their abominations, instead of affording relief.

VER. 18. Troubled. Heb. sichor, or Nile water, (Jos. xiii. 3,) which was thought as good as wine, and grew better for keeping. Strabo, xvii. God often reproached the Jews for distrusting in his protection, and seeking aid from the Egyptians, who deceived them. We know not that Josias did so. C.

VER. 20. Thou. Sept. Yet Heb. and Chal. have. "I have permissively broken," or foretold this infidelity.

VER. 21. Chosen. Heb. Sorek. Judg. xvi. 4; Isa. v. 2, and xvi. 8. C.

then have my people said: We are revolted, we will come to thee no more?

32 Will a virgin forget her ornament, or a bride her stomacher? but my people hath forgotten me days without number 33 Why dost thou endeavour to show thy way good to seek my love, thou who hast also taught thy malices to be thy ways.

34 And in thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor and innocent? not in ditches have I found them, but in all places, which I mentioned before.

35 And thou hast said: I am without sin, and am innocent: and therefore let thy anger be turned away from me. Behold, I will contend with thee in judgment, because thou hast said: I have not sinned.

36 How exceedingly base art thou become, going the same ways over again! and thou shalt be ashamed of Egypt, as thou wast ashamed of Assyria.

37 For from thence thou shalt go, and thy hand shall be up on thy head: for the Lord hath destroyed thy trust, and thou shalt have nothing prosperous therein.

CHAP. III.

God moves the rebel Jews to return to him, with a promise to receive them: he foretells the conversion of the Gentiles.

IT is commonly said: If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and marry another man, shall he return to her any more? shall not that woman be polluted, and defiled? but thou hast prostituted thyself to many lovers: nevertheless, return to me, saith the Lord, and I will receive thee.

2 Lift up thy eyes on high: and see where thou hast not prostituted thyself: thou didst sit in the ways, waiting for them, as a robber in the wilderness: and thou hast polluted the land with thy fornications, and with thy wickedness.

3 Therefore, the showers were withholden, and there was no lateward rain: thou hadst a harlot's forehead, thou wouldst not blush.

4 Therefore, at the least, from this time, call to me: Thou art my father, the guide of my virginity.

5 Wilt thou be angry for ever, or wilt thou continue unto the end? Behold, thou hast spoken, and hast done evil things, and hast been able.

6 And the Lord said to me in the days of king Josias: "Hast thou seen what rebellious Israel hath done? she hath gone of herself upon every high mountain, and under every green tree, and hath played the harlot there.

^a Supra, ii. 20.

7 And when she had done all these things, I said Return to me, and she did not return. And her treacherous sister, Juda, saw,

8 That because the rebellious Israel had played the harlot, I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce: yet her treacherous sister, Juda, was not afraid, but went and played the harlot also herself.

9 And by the facility of her fornication she defiled the land, and played the harlot with stones and with stocks.

10 And, after all this, her treacherous sister, Juda, hath not returned to me with her whole heart, but with falsehood, saith the Lord.

11 And the Lord said to me: The rebellious Israel hath justified her soul in comparison of the treacherous Juda.

12 Go, and proclaim these words towards the north, and thou shalt say: Return, O rebellious Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not turn away my face from you: for I am holy, saith the Lord, and I will not be angry for ever.

13 But yet, acknowledge thy iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the Lord thy God: and thou hast scattered thy ways to strangers under every green tree, and hast not heard my voice, saith the Lord.

14 Return, O ye revolting children, saith the Lord: for I am your husband: and I will take you, one of a city, and two of a kindred, and will bring you into Sion.

15 And I will give you pastors, according to my own heart, and they shall feed you with knowledge and doctrine.

16 And when you shall be multiplied, and increase in the land in those days, saith the Lord, they shall say no more: The ark of the covenant of the Lord: neither shall it come upon the heart, neither shall they remember it, neither shall it be visited, neither shall that be done any more.

17 At that time Jerusalem shall be called the throne of the Lord: and all the nations shall be gathered together to it, in the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem, and they shall not walk after the perversity of their most wicked heart.

18 In those days the house of Juda shall go to the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land which I gave to your fathers.

19 But I said: How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a lovely land, the goodly inheritance of the armies of the Gentiles? And I said: Thou shalt call me father, and shalt not cease to walk after me.

20 But as a woman that despiseth her lover, so hath the house of Israel despised me, saith the Lord.

VER. 4. Guide. Husband. Prov. ii. 16; Joel i. 8.

VER. 6. Days, before the eighteenth year. God now pronounces sentence (C.) on all. H.—Rebellious, a faithless wife. The kingdom of Israel gave way to idolatry first. But the people were less favoured than Juda, which had many prophets and good kings, the temple, &c. Moreover, the misfortunes of Israel did not open the eyes of their brethren. C.

VER. 10. Falsehood. Their reform was only apparent, under Joas, &c. C.

VER. 13. Ways, dividing thy love, and adoring idols with me.

VER. 14. Kindred. Only few Israelites returned under Cyrus. The rest came by degrees; though this was more fully accomplished by the conversion of the Gentiles.

VER. 16. Ark. It was no longer at Jerusalem. The law and its figures cease.

VER. 17. All. Many might embrace the Jewish religion. But the predictions of the prophets on this head were not verified till the gospel was preached. C.

VER. 18. North. Sept. add, "and from all places" where the Jews were in captivity. H.—Many thus returned to their own country. Ver. 14. C.

VER. 19. Gentiles, which they all covet, or to which they are invited in the Church. C.—Me On these conditions thou shalt be restored. H.

21 A voice was heard in the high ways, weeping and howling of the children of Israel: because they had made their way wicked, they have forgotten the Lord their God.

22 Return, you rebellious children, and I will heal your rebellions. Behold, we come to thee: for thou art the Lord our God.

23 In very deed the hills were liars, and the multitude of the mountains: truly, in the Lord our God, is the salvation of Israel.

24 Confusion hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth, their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 We shall sleep in our confusion, and our shame shall cover us, because we have sinned against the Lord our God, we and our fathers, from our youth, even to this day: and we have not hearkened to the voice of the Lord our God.

CHAP. IV.

An admonition to sincere repentance, and circumcision of the heart, with threats of grievous punishment to those that persist in sin.

IF thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, return to me: if thou wilt take away thy stumblingblocks out of my sight, thou shalt not be moved.

2 And thou shalt swear: As the Lord liveth, in truth, and in judgment, and in justice: and the Gentiles shall bless him, and shall praise him.

3 For thus saith the Lord to the men of Juda and Jerusalem: ^a Break up anew your fallow ground, and sow not upon thorns:

4 Be circumcised to the Lord, and take away the foreskins of your hearts, ye men of Juda, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem: lest my indignation come forth like fire, and burn, and there be none that can quench it: because of the wickedness of your thoughts.

5 Declare ye in Juda, and make it heard in Jerusalem: speak, and sound with the trumpet in the land: cry aloud, and say: Assemble yourselves, and let us go into strong cities.

6 Set up the standard in Sion. Strengthen yourselves, stay not, ^b for I bring evil from the north, and great destruction.

7 The lion is come up out of his den, and the robber of nations hath roused himself: he is come forth out of his place, to make thy land desolate: thy cities shall be laid waste, remaining without an inhabitant.

8 For this, gird yourself with hair-cloth, lament and howl: for the fierce anger of the Lord is not turned away from us.

^a Osee x. 12.—^b Supra, i. 14.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord: That the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes: and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall be amazed.

10 And I said: Alas, alas, alas, O Lord God, hast thou then deceived this people and Jerusalem, saying: You shall have peace: and behold the sword reacheth even to the soul?

11 At that time it shall be said to this people, and to Jerusalem: A burning wind is in the ways that are in the desert of the way of the daughter of my people, not to fan, nor to cleanse.

12 A full wind from these places shall come to me: and now I will speak my judgments with them.

13 Behold, he shall come up as a cloud, and his chariots as a tempest: his horses are swifter than eagles: woe unto us, for we are laid waste.

14 Wash thy heart from wickedness, O Jerusalem, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall hurtful thoughts abide in thee?

15 For a voice of one declaring from Dan, and giving notice of the idol from Mount Ephraim.

16 Say ye to the nations: Behold, it is heard in Jerusalem, that guards are coming from a far country, and give out their voice against the cities of Juda.

17 They are set round about her, as keepers of fields: because she hath provoked me to wrath, saith the Lord.

18 ^c Thy ways and thy devices have brought these things upon thee: this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it hath touched thy heart.

19 My bowels, my bowels are in pain, the senses of my heart are troubled within me, I will not hold my peace, for my soul hath heard the sound of the trumpet, the cry of battle.

20 Destruction upon destruction is called for, and all the earth is laid waste: my tents are destroyed on a sudden, and my pavilions in a moment.

21 How long shall I see men fleeing away, how long shall I hear the sound of the trumpet?

22 For my foolish people have not known me: they are foolish and senseless children: they are wise to do evils, but to do good they have no knowledge.

23 I beheld the earth, and lo it was void, and nothing: and the heavens, and there was no light in them.

24 I looked upon the mountains, and behold they trembled: and all the hills were troubled.

25 I beheld, and lo there was no man and all the birds of the air were gone.

26 I looked, and behold Carmel was a wilderness: and all its cities were destroyed at the presence of the Lord, and at the presence of the wrath of his indignation.

27 For thus saith the Lord: All the land shall be desolate but yet I will not utterly destroy.

28 The earth shall mourn, and the heavens shall lament from above: because I have spoken, I have purposed, and I have not repented, neither am I turned away from it.

29 At the voice of the horsemen, and the archer, all the city is fled away: they have entered into thickets, and have climbed up the rocks: all the cities are forsaken, and there dwelleth not a man in them.

30 But when thou art spoiled, what wilt thou do? though thou clothest thyself with scarlet, though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, and paintest thy eyes with stibic-stone, thou shalt dress thyself out in vain: thy lovers have despised thee, they will seek thy life.

31 For I have heard the voice as of a woman in travail; anguishes, as of a woman in labour of a child. The voice of the daughter of Sion, dying away, spreading her hands: Woe is me, for my soul hath fainted because of them that are slain.

CHAP. V.

The judgments of God shall fall upon the Jews for their manifold sins.

GO about, through the streets of Jerusalem, and see, and consider, and seek in the broad places thereof, if you can find a man that executeth judgment, and seeketh faith: and I will be merciful unto it.

2 And though they say: The Lord liveth; this also they will swear falsely.

3 O Lord, thy eyes are upon truth: thou hast struck them, and they have not grieved: thou hast bruised them, and they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than the rock, and they have refused to return.

4 But I said: Perhaps these are poor and foolish, that know not the way of the Lord, the judgment of their God.

5 I will go therefore to the great men, and will speak to them: for they have known the way of the Lord, the judgment of their God: and, behold, these have altogether broken the yoke more, and have burst the bonds.

6 Wherefore a lion out of the wood hath slain them, a wolf in the evening hath spoiled them, a leopard watcheth for their cities: every one that shall go out thence, shall be taken, because their transgressions are multiplied, their rebellions are strengthened.

7 How can I be merciful to thee? thy children have forsaken me, and swear by them that are not gods: I fed them to the full, and they committed adultery, and rioted in the harlot's house.

8 They are become as amorous horses, and stallions: every one neighed after his neighbour's wife.

9 Shall I not visit for these things, saith the Lord? and shall not my soul take revenge on such a nation?

10 Scale the walls thereof, and throw them down, but do not utterly destroy: take away the branches thereof, because they are not the Lord's.

11 For the house of Israel, and the house of Juda, have greatly transgressed against me, saith the Lord.

12 They have denied the Lord, and said, It is not he, and the evil shall not come upon us: we shall not see the sword and famine.

13 The prophets have spoken in the wind, and there was no word of God in them: these things therefore shall befall them.

14 Thus saith the Lord, the God of hosts: Because you have spoken this word: behold, I will make my words in thy mouth as fire, and this people as wood, and it shall devour them.

15 Behold, I will bring upon you a nation from afar, O house of Israel, saith the Lord: a strong nation, an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou shalt not know, nor understand what they say.

16 Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all valiant.

17 And they shall eat up thy corn, and thy bread they shall devour thy sons, and thy daughters: they shall eat up thy flocks, and thy herds: they shall eat thy vineyards, and thy figs: and with the sword they shall destroy thy strong cities, wherein thou trustest.

18 Nevertheless, in those days, saith the Lord, I will not bring you to utter destruction.

19 And if you shall say: Why hath the Lord our God done all these things to us? thou shalt say to them: As you have forsaken me, and served a strange god in your own land, so shall you serve strangers in a land that is not your own.

20 Declare ye this to the house of Jacob, and publish it in Juda, saying:

21 Hear, O foolish people, and without understanding: who have eyes, and see not: and ears, and hear not.

22 Will not you then fear me, saith the Lord? and will you not repent at my presence? I have set the sand a bound for the sea, an everlasting ordinance, which it shall not pass over: and the waves thereof shall toss themselves, and shall not prevail: they shall swell, and shall not pass over it.

23 But the heart of his people is become hard of belief, and provoking, they are revolted and gone away.

24 And they have not said in their hearts: Let us fear the Lord our God, who giveth us the early and the latter rain in due season: who preserveth for us the fulness of the yearly harvest.

25 Your iniquities have turned these things away, and your sins have withholden good things from you.

26 For among my people are found wicked men, that lie in wait as fowlers, setting snares and traps to catch men.

27 As a net is full of birds, so their houses are full of deceit: therefore are they become great and enriched.

28 They are grown gross and fat: and have most wickedly transgressed my words. "They have not judged the cause of the widow; they have not managed the cause of the fatherless, and they have not judged the judgment of the poor.

29 Shall I not visit for these things, saith the Lord? or shall not my soul take revenge on such a nation?

30 Astonishing and wonderful things have been done in the land.

31 The prophets prophesied falsehood, and the priests clapped their hands: and my people loved such things: what then shall be done in the end thereof?

CHAP. VI.

This evils that threaten Jerusalem. She is invited to return, and walk in the good way, and not to rely on sacrifices without obedience.

STRENGTHEN yourselves, ye sons of Benjamin, in the midst of Jerusalem, and sound the trumpet in Thecua, and set up the standard over Bethacarem: for evil is seen out of the north, and a great destruction.

2 I have likened the daughter of Sion to a beautiful and delicate woman.

3 The shepherds shall come to her with their flocks: they have pitched their tents against her round about: every one shall feed them that are under his hand.

4 Prepare ye war against her: arise, and let us go up at mid-day: woe unto us, for the day is declined, for the shadows of the evening are grown longer.

5 Arise, and let us go up in the night, and destroy her houses.

6 For thus saith the Lord of hosts: Hew down her trees, cast up a trench about Jerusalem: this is the city to be visited, all oppression is in the midst of her.

7 As a cistern maketh its water cold, so hath she made her wickedness cold: violence and spoil shall be heard in her, infirmity and stripes are continually before me.

8 Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul depart from thee, lest I make thee desolate, a land uninhabited.

9 Thus saith the Lord of hosts: They shall gather the remains of Israel, as in a vine, even to one cluster: turn back thy hand, as a grape-gatherer into the basket.

10 To whom shall I speak? and to whom shall I testify, that he may hear? behold, their ears are uncircumcised, and they cannot hear: behold, the word of the Lord is become unto them a reproach: and they will not receive it.

11 Therefore am I full of the fury of the Lord, I am weary with holding in: pour it out upon the child abroad, and upon the council of the young men together: for man and woman shall be taken, the ancient, and he that is full of days.

12 And their houses shall be turned over to others, with their lands and their wives together: for I will stretch forth my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the Lord.

13 For from the least of them even to the greatest, all are given to covetousness: and from the prophet, even to the priest, all are guilty of deceit.

14 And they healed the breach of the daughter of my people disgracefully, saying: Peace, peace: and there was no peace.

15 They were confounded, because they committed abomination: yea, rather they were not confounded with confusion, and they knew not how to blush: wherefore they shall fall among them that fall: in the time of their visitation they shall fall down, saith the Lord.

16 Thus saith the Lord: Stand ye on the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, which is the good way, and walk ye in it: and you shall find refreshment for your souls. And they said: We will not walk.

17 And I appointed watchmen over you, saying: Harken ye to the sound of the trumpet. And they said: We will not hearken.

18 Therefore, hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what great things I will do to them.

19 Hear, O earth: Behold, I will bring evils upon this people, the fruits of their own thoughts: because they have not heard my words, and they have cast away my law.

20 To what purpose do you bring me frankincense from Saba, and the sweet-smelling cane from a far country? your holocausts are not acceptable, nor are your sacrifices pleasing to me.

22 Thus saith the Lord: Behold, a people cometh from the land of the north, and a great nation shall rise up from the ends of the earth.

23 They shall lay hold on arrow and shield: they are cruel, and will have no mercy. Their voice shall roar like the sea: and they shall mount upon horses, prepared as men for war, against thee, O daughter of Sion.

24 We have heard the fame thereof, our hands grew feeble: anguish hath taken hold of us, as a woman in labour.

25 Go not out into the fields, nor walk in the high way: for the sword of the enemy, and fear, is on every side.

26 Gird thee with sackcloth, O daughter of my people, and sprinkle thee with ashes: make thee mourning as for an only son, a bitter lamentation, because the destroyer shall suddenly come upon us.

27 I have set thee for a strong trier among my people: and thou shalt know, and prove their way.

28 All these princes go out of the way, they walk deceitfully, they are brass and iron: they are all corrupted.

29 The bellows have failed, the lead is consumed in the fire, the founder hath melted in vain: for their wicked deeds are not consumed.

30 Call them reprobate silver, for the Lord hath rejected them.

CHAP. VII.

The temple of God shall not protect a sinful people, without a sincere conversion. The Lord will not receive the prayers of the prophet for them; because they are obstinate in their sins.

2 Stand in the gate of the house of the Lord, and proclaim there this word, and say: Hear ye the word of the Lord, all ye men of Juda, that enter in at these gates, to adore the Lord.

3 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: 'Make your ways and your doings good: and I will dwell with you in this place.

the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, and walk not after strange gods to your own hurt:

7 I will dwell with you in this place: in the land, which I gave to your fathers from the beginning, and for evermore.

8 Behold, you put your trust in lying words, which shall not profit you:

9 To steal, to murder, to commit adultery, to swear falsely, to offer to Baalim, and to go after strange gods, which you know not.

10 And you have come, and stood before me in this house, in which my name is called upon, and have said: We are delivered, because we have done all these abominations.

11 'Is this house then, in which my name hath been called upon, in your eyes become a den of robbers? I, I am he: I have seen it, saith the Lord.

12 Go ye to my place in Silo, where my name dwelt from the beginning: and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel:

13 And now, because you have done all these works, saith the Lord: and I have spoken to you rising up early, and speaking, and you have not heard: and I have called you, and you have not answered:

14 "I will do to this house, in which my name is called upon, and in which you trust, and to the place which I have given you and your fathers, as I did to Silo.

15 And I will cast you away from before my face, as I have cast away all your brethren, the whole seed of Ephraim.

16 'Therefore do not thou pray for this people, nor take to thee praise and supplication for them, and do not withstand me: for I will not hear thee.

17 Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

18 The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead the dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to offer libations to strange gods, and to provoke me to anger.

19 Do they provoke me to anger, saith the Lord? is it not themselves, to the confusion of their own countenance?

20 Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: Behold, my wrath and my indignation is enkindled against this place, upon men and upon beasts, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruits of the land, and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

21 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel:

23 But this thing I commanded them, saying: Harken to my voice, and I will be your God, and you shall be my people: and walk ye in all the way, that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you.

24 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear: but walked in their own will, and in the perversity of their wicked heart: and went backward and not forward,

25 From the day that their fathers came out of the land of Egypt, even to this day. And I have sent to you all my servants, the prophets, from day to day, rising up early, and sending.

26 And they have not hearkened to me: nor inclined their ear: but have hardened their neck, and have done worse than their fathers.

27 And thou shalt speak to them all these words, but they will not hearken to thee: and thou shalt call them, but they will not answer thee.

28 And thou shalt say to them: This is a nation which hath not hearkened to the voice of the Lord their God, nor received instruction: faith is lost, and is taken away out of their mouth.

29 Cut off thy hair, and cast it away: and take up a lamentation on high: for the Lord hath rejected, and forsaken the generation of his wrath,

30 Because the children of Juda have done evil in my eyes, saith the Lord. They have set their abominations in the house in which my name is called upon, to pollute it:

31 And they have built the high places of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Ennom, to burn their sons, and their daughters, in the fire: which I commanded not, nor thought on in my heart.

32 Therefore, behold the days shall come, saith the Lord, and it shall no more be called Topheth, nor the Valley of the son of Ennom: but the Valley of slaughter: and they shall bury in Topheth, because there is no place.

33 And the carcasses of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the air, and for the beasts of the earth, and there shall be none to drive them away.

Other evils that shall fall upon the Jews for their unpenitence.

AT that time, saith the Lord, they shall cast out the bones of the kings of Juda, and the bones of the princes thereof, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves.

2 And they shall spread them abroad to the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and adored: they shall not be gathered, and they shall not be buried: they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth.

3 And death shall be chosen rather than life, by all that shall remain of this wicked kindred in all places, which are left, to which I have cast them out, saith the Lord of hosts.

4 And thou shalt say to them: Thus saith the Lord: Shall not he that falleth, rise again? and he that is turned away, shall he not turn again?

5 Why then is this people in Jerusalem turned away with a stubborn revolting? they have laid hold on lying, and have refused to return.

6 I attended, and hearkened: no man speaketh what is good, there is none that doth penance for his sin, saying: What have I done? They are all turned to their own course, as a horse rushing to the battle.

7 The kite in the air hath known her time: the turtle, and the swallow, and the stork have observed the time of their coming: but my people have not known the judgment of the Lord.

8 How do you say: We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us? Indeed, the lying pen of the scribes hath wrought falsehood.

9 The wise men are confounded, they are dismayed, and taken: for they have cast away the word of the Lord, and there is no wisdom in them.

10 Therefore will I give their women to strangers, their fields to others for an inheritance: because from the least, even to the greatest, all follow covetousness: from the prophet, even to the priest, all deal deceitfully.

11 And they healed the breach of the daughter of my people disgracefully, saying: Peace, peace: when there was no peace.

The prophet laments the miseries of his people: and their sins, which are the cause of them. He exhorts them to repentance.

WHO will give water to my head, and a fountain of tears to my eyes? and I will weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people.

2 Who will give me in the wilderness a lodging-place of wayfaring men, and I will leave my people, and depart from them? because they are all adulterers, an assembly of transgressors.

and not for truth: they have strengthened themselves upon the earth, for they have proceeded from evil to evil, and me they have not known, saith the Lord.

4 Let every man take heed of his neighbour, and let him not trust in any brother of his: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every friend will walk deceitfully.

5 And a man shall mock his brother, and they will not speak the truth: for they have taught their tongue to speak lies: they have laboured to commit iniquity.

6 Thy habitation is in the midst of deceit: through deceit they have refused to know me, saith the Lord.

7 Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts: Behold I will melt, and try them: for what else shall I do before the daughter of my people?

8 "Their tongue is a piercing arrow, it hath spoken deceit: with his mouth one speaketh peace with his friend, and secretly he lieth in wait for him.

9 Shall I not visit them for these things, saith the Lord? or shall not my soul be revenged on such a nation?

10 For the mountains I will take up weeping and lamentation, and for the beautiful places of the desert, mourning: because they are burnt up, for that there is not a man that passeth through them: and they have not heard the voice of the owner: from the fowl of the air to the beasts, they are gone away and departed.

5 That I may accomplish the oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. And I answered, and said: Amen, O Lord.

6 And the Lord said to me: Proclaim aloud all these words in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying: Hear ye the words of this covenant, and do them:

8 And they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear: but walked every one in the perverseness of his own wicked heart: and I brought upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do, but they did them not.

9 And the Lord said to me: A conspiracy is found among the men of Juda, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

10 They are returned to the former iniquities of their fathers, who refused to hear my words: so these likewise have gone after strange gods, to serve them: the house of Israel, and the house of Juda, have made void my covenant, which I made with their fathers.

11 Wherefore thus saith the Lord: Behold I will bring in evils upon them, which they shall not be able to escape and they shall cry to me, and I will not hearken to them.

12 And the cities of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall go, and cry to the gods to whom they offer sacrifice, and they shall not save them in the time of their affliction.

13 For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Juda: and according to the number of thy streets of Jerusalem, thou hast set up altars of confusion, altars to offer sacrifice to Baalim.

14 Therefore do not thou pray for this people, and do not take up praise and prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time of their cry to me, in the time of their affliction.

CHAP. XII.

The prosperity of the wicked shall be but for a short time. The desolation of the Jews for their sins. Their return from their captivity.

THOU indeed, O Lord, art just, if I plead with thee, *but yet I will speak what is just to thee: *Why doth the way of the wicked prosper: why is it well with all them that transgress, and do wickedly?

2 Thou hast planted them, and they have taken root: they prosper and bring forth fruit: thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins.

10 Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot: they have changed my delightful portion into a desolate wilderness.

11 They have laid it waste, and it hath mourned for me. With desolation is all the land made desolate: because there is none that considereth in the heart.

12 The spoilers are come upon all the ways of the wilderness, for the sword of the Lord shall devour from one end of the land to the other end thereof: there is no peace for all flesh.

13 They have sown wheat, and reaped thorns: they have received an inheritance, and it shall not profit them: you shall be ashamed of your fruits, because of the fierce wrath of the Lord.

14 Thus saith the Lord, against all my wicked neighbours, that touch the inheritance that I have shared out to my people Israel: Behold, I will pluck them out of their land, and I will pluck the house of Juda out of the midst of them.

15 And when I shall have plucked them out, I will return, and have mercy on them: and I will bring them back every man to his inheritance, and every man into his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, if they will be taught, and will learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name: The Lord liveth, as they have taught my people to swear by Baal: that they shall be built up in the midst of my people.

17 But if they will not hear, I will utterly pluck out and destroy that nation, saith the Lord.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Girdle, usually worn by women. S. Jer. Exod. xxviii 42.—It denoted the Jews, who became more corrupt during the captivity (ver. 7, 11); so that God delivered them out of his pure mercy. Thus He explains this prophetic action. C.—Loins. God cherished his people M.

thy loins, and arise, go to the Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 And I went and hid it by the Euphrates, as the Lord had commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the Lord said to me: Arise, go to the Euphrates, and take from thence the girdle, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 And I went to the Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle out of the place where I had hid it: and behold, the girdle was rotten, so that it was fit for no use.

8 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying:

9 Thus saith the Lord: After this manner will I make the pride of Juda, and the great pride of Jerusalem to rot.

10 This wicked people, that will not hear my words, and that walk in the perverseness of their heart, and have gone after strange gods to serve them, and to adore them: and they shall be as this girdle, which is fit for no use.

11 For as the girdle sticketh close to the loins of a man, so have I brought close to me all the house of Israel, and all the house of Juda, saith the Lord: that they might be my people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear.

12 Thou shalt speak therefore to them this word: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Every bottle shall be filled with wine. And they shall say to thee: Do we not know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?

13 And thou shalt say to them: Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, and the kings of the race of David that sit upon his throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with drunkenness.

14 And I will scatter them every man from his brother, and fathers and sons in like manner, saith the Lord: I will not spare, and I will not pardon: nor will I have mercy, but to destroy them.

15 Hear ye, and give ear. Be not proud, for the Lord hath spoken.

16 Give ye glory to the Lord your God, before it be dark, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains: you shall look for light, and he will turn it into the shadow of death, and into darkness.

17 But if you will not hear this, my soul shall weep in secret for your pride: ^aweeping, it shall weep, and my eyes shall run down with tears, because the flock of the Lord is carried away captive.

18 Say to the king, and to the queen: Humble yourselves, sit down: for the crown of your glory is come down from your head.

19 The cities of the south are shut up, and there is

VER. 4. Euphrates, above 150 leagues distant. Some think this was only to be done in spirit: but it is generally supposed that the prophet made this long journey twice.—Such prophetic actions make a deeper impression than words. Heb. i. The ingratitude of the people is here described, to chap. xxi. W.

VER. 9. Rot. I will bring them low. M.—They shall see that all their dependence must be on the Divine mercy.

none to open them: all Juda is carried away captive with an entire captivity.

20 Lift up your eyes, and see, you that come from the north: where is the flock that is given thee, thy beautiful cattle?

21 What wilt thou say when he shall visit thee? for thou hast taught them against thee, and instructed them against thy own head: shall not sorrows lay hold on thee, as a woman in labour?

22 And if thou shalt say in thy heart: Why are these things come upon me? ^bFor the greatness of thy iniquity, thy nakedness is discovered, the soles of thy feet are defiled.

23 If the Ethiopian can change his skin, or the leopard his spots: you may also do well, when you have learned evil.

24 And I will scatter them as stubble, which is carried away by the wind in the desert.

25 This is thy lot, and the portion of thy measure from me, saith the Lord, because thou hast forgotten me, and hast trusted in falsehood.

26 Wherefore I have also bared thy thighs against thy face, and thy shame hath appeared.

27 I have seen thy adulteries, and thy neighing, the wickedness of thy fornication: and thy abominations, upon the hills in the field. Woe to thee, Jerusalem, wilt thou not be made clean after me: how long yet?

CHAP. XIV.

A grievous famine: and the prophet's prayer on that occasion. Evils denounced to false prophets. The prophet mourns for his people.

THE word of the Lord, that came to Jeremias, concerning the words of the drought.

2 Juda hath mourned, and the gates thereof are fallen, and are become obscure on the ground, and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up.

3 The great ones sent their inferiors to the water, they came to draw, they found no water, they carried back their vessels empty: they were confounded and afflicted, and covered their heads.

4 For the destruction of the land, because there came no rain upon the earth, the husbandmen were confounded, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, the hind also brought forth in the field, and left it: because there was no grass.

6 And the wild asses stood upon the rocks, they snuffed up the wind like dragons, their eyes failed, because there was no grass.

7 If our iniquities have testified against us, O Lord, do thou it for thy name's sake, for our rebellions are many, we have sinned against thee.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Drought, during the last siege, (ver. 18. S. Jer.), or after the captivity of Jechonias (chap. viii. 13); though the famine might happen in the days of Josias. Joel i. C.—This scourge was in punishment of sin, and signified the privation of grace. W.

VER. 3. Water. Siloe was the only spring near, and it was often dry, (S. Jer.) though it was formerly abundant, (Jos. Bel. vi. 6,) as well as the fountain of Gehon. The city was furnished with cisterns. C.—But all was now dry. H.—Heads; mourning. 2 Kings xv. 30.

8 O expectation of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble : why wilt thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man turning in to lodge ?

9 Why wilt thou be as a wandering man, as a mighty man that cannot save ? but thou, O Lord, art among us, and thy name is called upon us, forsake us not.

10 Thus saith the Lord to this people, that have loved to move their feet, and have not rested, and have not pleased the Lord : He will now remember their iniquities, and visit their sins.

11 And the Lord said to me : "Pray not for this people for their good.

12 When they fast I will not hear their prayers ; and if they offer holocausts and victims, I will not receive them : for I will consume them by the sword, and by famine, and by the pestilence.

13 And I said : Ah, ah, ah, O Lord God : the prophets say to them : "You shall not see the sword, and there shall be no famine among you, but he will give you true peace in this place.

14 And the Lord said to me : "The prophets prophesy falsely in my name : I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, nor have I spoken to them : they prophesy unto you a lying vision, and divination and deceit, and the seduction of their own heart.

15 Therefore, thus saith the Lord, concerning the prophets, that prophesy in my name, whom I did not send, that say : Sword and famine shall not be in this land : By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy, shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem, because of the famine and the sword, and there shall be none to bury them : they and their wives, their sons, and their daughters, and I will pour out their own wickedness upon them.

17 And thou shalt speak this word to them : "Let my eyes shed down tears night and day, and let them not cease because the virgin daughter of my people is afflicted with a great affliction, with an exceedingly grievous evil.

18 If I go forth into the fields, behold the slain with the sword : and if I enter into the city, behold them that are consumed with famine. The prophet also, and the priest, are gone into a land which they knew not.

19 Hast thou utterly cast away Juda, or hath thy soul abhorred Sion ? why then hast thou struck us, so that there is no healing for us ? "we have looked for peace, and there is no good : and for the time of healing, and behold trouble.

20 We acknowledge, O Lord, our wickedness, the iniquities of our fathers, because we have sinned against thee.

21 Give us not to be a reproach, for thy name's sake, and do not disgrace in us the throne of thy glory : remember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 Are there any among the graven things of the Gentiles that can send rain ? or can the heavens give showers ? art not thou the Lord our God, whom we have looked for ? for thou hast made all these things.

CHAP. XV.

God is determined to punish the Jews for their sins. The prophet's complaint, and God's promise to him.

AND the Lord said to me : If Moses and Samuel shall stand before me, my soul is not towards this people : cast them out from my sight, and let them go forth.

2 And if they shall say unto thee : Whither shall we go forth ? thou shalt say to them : Thus saith the Lord : "Such as are for death, to death : and such as are for the sword, to the sword : and such as are for famine, to famine : and such as are for captivity, to captivity.

3 And I will visit them with four kinds, saith the Lord : The sword to kill, and the dogs to tear, and the fowls of the air, and the beasts of the earth to devour and to destroy.

4 And I will give them up to the rage of all the kingdoms of the earth : "because of Manasses, the son of Ezechias, the king of Juda, for all that he did in Jerusalem.

5 For who shall have pity on thee, O Jerusalem ? or who shall bemoan thee ? or who shall go to pray for thy peace ?

6 Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord, thou art gone backward : and I will stretch out my hand against thee, and I will destroy thee : I am weary of entreating thee.

7 And I will scatter them with a fan in the gates of the land : I have killed and destroyed my people, and yet they are not returned from their ways.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. If. The Geneva Bible reads corruptly, "Though Moses stood," contrary to Heb. and Gr. W.—And Samuel. These two had shown a particular love for the people. Exod. xxxii., and 2 Kings xii. C.—Ezechiel (xiv. 14) specifies Noe, Daniel, and Job, who were eminent for sanctity. Daniel was still alive. Yet God will not grant their request ; and he forbids his prophet to pray for those who were resolved not to repent. Chap. xiv. 11. H.—Their punishment was fixed, and God will not remit it at the request either of the living or of the dead. Hence it is evident that the dead could and did sometimes make intercession, otherwise they would not here be mentioned. To evade this argument, Prot., in the Geneva Bible, suppose God's "meaning to be," that if there were any man living, moved with so great zeal towards the people as were these two, yet he would not grant their request, for so much as he had determined the contrary." Yet surely Jeremias, Daniel, &c. had a similar zeal ; and therefore the text speaks of Moses and Samuel in a state of happiness, where their charity is greater than in this life, as S. Jer., S. Chrys., (hom. 1, in 1 Thess. i.,) and S. Greg. (Mor. ix. 12) explain it. W.

9 *She that hath borne seven is become weak, her soul hath fainted away: her sun is gone down, while it was yet day: she is confounded, and ashamed: and the residue of them I will give up to the sword in the sight of their enemies, saith the Lord.

10 Woe is me, my mother: why hast thou borne me a man of strife, a man of contention to all the earth? I have not lent on usury, neither hath any man lent to me on usury, yet all curse me.

11 The Lord saith to me: Assuredly it shall be well with thy remnant, assuredly I shall help thee in the time of affliction, and in the time of tribulation, against the enemy.

12 Shall iron be allied with the iron from the north, and the brass?

13 Thy riches and thy treasures I will give unto spoil for nothing, because of all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

14 And I will bring thy enemies out of a land which thou knowest not: for a fire is kindled in my rage, it shall burn upon you.

15 O Lord, thou knowest, remember me, and visit me, and defend me from them that persecute me, do not defend me in thy patience: know that for thy sake I have suffered reproach.

16 Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and thy word was to me a joy and gladness of my heart: for thy name is called upon me, O Lord God of hosts.

17 I sat not in the assembly of jesters, nor did I make a boast of the presence of thy hand: I sat alone, because thou hast filled me with threats.

18 Why is my sorrow become perpetual, and my wound desperate, so as to refuse to be healed? it is become to me as the falsehood of deceitful waters that cannot be trusted.

19 Therefore, thus saith the Lord: If thou wilt be converted, I will convert thee, and thou shalt stand before my face: and if thou wilt separate the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth: they shall be turned to thee, and thou shalt not be turned to them.

20 And I will make thee to this people as a strong wall of brass: and they shall fight against thee, and shall not prevail: for I am with thee to save thee, and to deliver thee, saith the Lord.

21 And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the mighty.

CHAP. XVI.

The prophet is forbid to marry. The Jews shall be utterly ruined for their idolatry: but shall at length be released from their captivity, and the Gentiles shall be converted.

AND the word of the Lord came to me, saying:

2 Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons, and daughters, in this place.

3 For thus saith the Lord concerning the sons and daughters, that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bore them: and concerning their fathers, of whom they were born in this land:

4 They shall die by the death of grievous illnesses they shall not be lamented, and they shall not be buried, they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed with the sword, and with famine: and their carcasses shall be meat for the fowls of the air and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the Lord: Enter not into the house of feasting, neither go thou to mourn, nor to comfort them: because I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the Lord, my mercy and commiserations.

6 Both the great and the little shall die in this land: they shall not be buried nor lamented, and men shall not cut themselves, nor make themselves bald for them.

7 And they shall not break bread among them to him that mourneth, to comfort him for the dead: neither shall they give them to drink of the cup, to comfort them for their father and mother.

8 And do not thou go into the house of feasting, to sit with them, and to eat and drink:

9 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel. Behold, I will take away out of this place, in your sight,

CHAP. XVI. VER. 2. Place. It was going to be destroyed, and the cares of a family might interrupt the prophet. The Fathers believe that Jeremias never married, (see S. Jer. in chap. xxiii. Isidor.) which was then a rare example. C.—He always lived a single life, and not only in time of tribulation. S. Jer. c. Jov. l. W.—The Church enforces this law of God for her sacred ministers, in subdeacons and the higher orders. S. 11 Thou shalt say to them: Because your fathers forsook me, saith the Lord: and went after strange gods, and served them, and adored them: and they forsook me, and kept not my law.

12 "And you also have done worse than your fathers: for behold every one of you walketh after the perverseness of his evil heart, so as not to hearken to me.

13 So will I cast you forth out of this land, into a land which you know not, nor your fathers: and there you shall serve strange gods day and night, which shall not give you any rest.

14 Therefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, when it shall be said no more: The Lord liveth, that brought forth the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

15 But, The Lord liveth, that brought the children of Israel out of the land of the north, and out of all the lands to which I cast them out: and I will bring them again into their land, which I gave to their fathers.

16 Behold, I will send many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them: and after this I will send them many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks.

17 For my eyes are upon all their ways: they are not hid from my face, and their iniquity hath not been hid from my eyes.

18 And I will repay first their double iniquities, and their sins: because they have defiled my land with the carcasses of their idols, and they have filled my inheritance with their abominations.

19 O Lord, my might, and my strength, and my refuge in the day of tribulation: to thee the Gentiles shall come from the ends of the earth, and shall say: Surely our fathers have possessed lies, a vanity which hath not profited them.

CHAP. XVII.

For their obstinacy in sin the Jews shall be led captive. He is cursed that trusteth in flesh: God alone searcheth the heart, giving to every one as he deserves. The prophet prayeth to be delivered from his enemies: and preacheth up the observance of the sabbath.

THE sin of Juda is written with a pen of iron, with the point of a diamond, it is graven upon the table of their heart, upon the horns of their altars.

5 Thus saith the Lord: "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord.

6 "For he shall be like tamaric in the desert, and he shall not see when good shall come: but he shall dwell in dryness in the desert, in a salt land, and not inhabited.

8 "And he shall be as a tree that is planted by the waters, that spreadeth out its roots towards moisture: and it shall not fear when the heat cometh. not lay: so is he that hath gathered riches, and not by right: in the midst of his days he shall leave them, and in his latter end he shall be a fool.

12 A high and glorious throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctification:

13 O Lord, the hope of Israel: all that forsake thee, shall be confounded: they that depart from thee, shall be written in the earth: because they have forsaken the Lord, the vein of living waters.

14 Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed: save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise.

15 Behold, they say to me: Where is the word of the Lord? let it come.

16 And I am not troubled, following thee for my pastor, and I have not desired the day of man, thou knowest. That which went out of my lips, hath been right in thy sight.

17 Be not thou a terror unto me, thou art my hope in the day of affliction.

18 Let them be confounded that persecute me, and let not me be confounded: let them be afraid, and let not me be afraid: bring upon them the day of affliction, and with a double destruction, destroy them.

19 Thus saith the Lord to me: Go, and stand in the gate of the children of the people, by which the kings of Juda come in, and go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem:

20 And thou shalt say to them: Hear the word of the Lord, ye kings of Juda, and all Juda, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates.

21 Thus saith the Lord: Take heed to your souls, and carry no burdens on the sabbath-day: and bring them not in by the gates of Jerusalem.

22 And do not bring burdens out of your houses on the sabbath-day, neither do ye any work: sanctify the sabbath-day, as I commanded your fathers.

23 But they did not hear, nor inclined their ear: but hardened their neck, that they might not hear me, and might not receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass: if you will hearken to me, saith the Lord, to bring in no burdens by the gates of this city on the sabbath day: and if you will sanctify the sabbath-day, to do no work therein:

25 Then shall there enter in by the gates of this city kings and princes, sitting upon the throne of David, and riding in chariots and on horses, they and their princes, the men of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and this city shall be inhabited for ever.

26 And they shall come from the cities of Juda, and from the places round about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plains, and from the mountains, and from the south, bringing holocausts, and victims, and sacrifices, and 'rankincense, and they shall bring in an offering into the house of the Lord.

27 But if you will not hearken to me, to sanctify the sabbath-day, and not to carry burdens, and not to bring them in by the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: I will kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the houses of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

CHAP. XVIII.

As clay in the hand of the potter, so is Israel in God's hand. He pardoneth penitents, and punisheth the obstinate. They conspire against Jeremias, for which he denounceth to them the miseries that hang over them.

THE word that came to Jeremias from the Lord, saying:

2 Arise, and go down into the potter's house, and there thou shalt hear my words.

3 And I went down into the potter's house, and behold he was doing a work on the wheel.

4 And the vessel was broken which he was making of clay with his hands: and turning, he made another vessel, as it seemed good in his eyes to make it.

5 Then the word of the Lord came to me, saying:

6 "Cannot I do with you, as this potter, O house of Israel, saith the Lord? behold as clay is in the hand of the potter, so are you in my hand, O house of Israel.

7 I will suddenly speak against a nation, and against a kingdom, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy it.

8 If that nation against which I have spoken, shall repent of their evil, I also will repent of the evil that I have thought to do to them.

9 And I will suddenly speak of a nation and of a kingdom, to build up and plant it.

10 If it shall do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice: I will repent of the good that I have spoken to do unto it.

11 Now, therefore, tell the men of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying: Thus saith the Lord: Behold I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: let every man of you return from his evil way, and make ye your ways and your doings good.

12 And they said: We have no hopes: for we will go after our own thoughts, and we will do every one according to the perverseness of his evil heart.

13 Therefore, thus saith the Lord: Ask among the nations: Who hath heard such horrible things, as the virgin of Israel hath done to excess?

18 And they said: Come, and let us invent devices against Jeremias: for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet: come, and let us strike him with the tongue, and let us give no heed to all his words.

19 Give heed to me, O Lord, and hear the voice of my adversaries.

20 Shall evil be rendered for good, because they have digged a pit for my soul? Remember that I have stood in thy sight, to speak good for them, and to turn away thy indignation from them.

CHAP. XIX.

Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel, the prophet foreshoweth the desolation of the Jews for their sins.

THUS saith the Lord: Go, and take a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests:

3 And thou shalt say: Hear the word of the Lord, O ye kings of Juda, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem: Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold I will bring an affliction upon this place: so that whosoever shall hear it, his ears shall tingle:

4 Because they have forsaken me, and have profaned this place: and have sacrificed therein to strange gods, whom neither they, nor their fathers knew, nor the kings of Juda: and they have filled this place with the blood of innocents.

5 And they have built the high places of Baalim, to burn their children with fire for a holocaust to Baalim: which I did not command, nor speak of, neither did it once come into my mind.

6 Therefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, that this place shall no more be called Topheth, nor the valley of the son of Ennom, but the valley of slaughter.

7 And I will defeat the counsel of Juda, and of Jerusalem, in this place: and I will destroy them with the sword in the sight of their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives: and I will give their carcasses to be meat for the fowls of the air, and for the beasts of the earth.

8 ^bAnd I will make this city an astonishment, and a hissing: every one that shall pass by it, shall be astonished, and shall hiss, because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will feed them with the flesh of their sons, and with the flesh of their daughters: and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege, and in the distress wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 And thou shalt break the bottle in the sight of the men that shall go with thee.

11 And thou shalt say to them: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: Even so will I break this people, and this city, as the potter's vessel is broken, which cannot be made whole again: and they shall be buried in Topheth, because there is no other place to bury in.

12 Thus will I do to this place, saith the Lord, and to the inhabitants thereof: and I will make this city as Topheth.

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Juda, shall be unclean as the place of Topheth: all the houses, upon whose roofs they have sacrificed to all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink-offerings to strange gods.

14 Then Jeremias came from Topheth, whither the Lord had sent him to prophesy, and he stood in the court of the house of the Lord, and said to all the people :

15 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel : Behold I will bring in upon this city, and upon all the cities thereof, all the evils that I have spoken against it : because they have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.

CHAP. XX.

The prophet is persecuted: he denounces captivity to his persecutors, and bemoans himself.

NOW Phassur, the son of Emmer, the priest, who was appointed chief in the house of the Lord, heard Jeremias prophesying these words.

2 And Phassur struck Jeremias, the prophet, and put him in the stocks, that were in the upper gate of Benjamin, in the house of the Lord.

3 And when it was light the next day, Phassur brought Jeremias out of the stocks. And Jeremias said to him : The Lord hath not called thy name Phassur, but fear on every side.

4 For thus saith the Lord : Behold, I will deliver thee up to fear, thee and all thy friends : and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thy eyes shall see it, and I will give all Juda into the hand of the king of Babylon : and he shall carry them away to Babylon, and shall strike them with the sword.

5 And I will give all the substance of this city, and all its labour, and every precious thing thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Juda will I give into the hands of their enemies : and they shall pillage them, and take them away, and carry them to Babylon.

6 But thou Phassur, and all that dwell in thy house, shall go into captivity, and thou shalt go to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and there thou shalt be buried, thou and all thy friends, to whom thou hast prophesied a lie.

7 Thou hast deceived me, O Lord, and I am deceived, thou hast been stronger than I, and thou hast prevailed : I am become a laughing-stock all the day, all scoff at me.

8 For I am speaking now this long time, crying out against iniquity, and I often proclaim devastation : and the word of the Lord is made a reproach to me, and a derision all the day.

VER. 6. Lie. He was therefore a false prophet, and vexed that Jeremias should contradict him. C.

VER. 7. Thou hast deceived, &c. The meaning of the prophet is not to charge God with any untruth; but what he calls deceiving, was only the concealing from him, when he accepted of the prophetic commission, the greatness of the evils which the execution of that commission was to bring upon him. Ch.—God never promised that he should suffer no persecution. H.—Jeremias might also have supposed that he was to be sent to the Gentiles. Chap. i. 5. S. Jer. in chap. xxv. 18. C.

VER. 8. Day. "They keep asking where are these enemies from the north, the plagues?" &c. C.

9 Then I said : I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name : and there came in my heart as a burning fire, shut up in my bones, and I was wearied, not being able to bear it.

10 For I heard the reproaches of many, and terror on every side : Persecute him, and let us persecute him : from all the men, that were my familiars, and continued at my side : if by any means he may be deceived, and we may prevail against him, and be revenged on him.

11 But the Lord is with me as a strong warrior : therefore, they that persecute me, shall fall, and shall be weak : they shall be greatly confounded, "because they have not understood the everlasting reproach, which never shall be effaced.

12 And thou, O Lord of hosts, "prover of the just, who seest the reins and the heart : let me see, I beseech thee, thy vengeance on them : for to thee I have laid open my cause.

CHAP. XXI.

The prophet's answer to the messengers of Sedecias, when Jerusalem was besieged.

THE word that came to Jeremias from the Lord, when king Sedecias sent unto him Phassur, the son of Melchias, and Sophonias, the son of Maasias, the priest, saying :

Lord will deal with us according to all his wonderful works, that he may depart from us.

3 And Jeremias said to them: Thus shall you say to Sedecias:

4 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, and with which you fight against the king of Babylon, and the Chaldeans, that besiege you round about the walls: and I will gather them together in the midst of this city.

5 And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand, and with a strong arm, and in fury, and in indignation, and in great wrath.

6 And I will strike the inhabitants of this city; men and beasts shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And, after this, saith the Lord, I will give Sedecias, the king of Juda, and his servants, and his people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, and the sword, and the famine, into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and he shall strike them with the edge of the sword, and he shall not be moved to pity, nor spare them, nor show mercy to them.

8 And to this people thou shalt say: Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 *He that shall abide in this city, shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that shall go out, and flee over to the Chaldeans, that besiege you, shall live, and his life shall be to him as a spoil.

10 For I have set my face against this city, for evil, and not for good, saith the Lord: it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

11 And to the house of the king of Juda: Hear ye the word of the Lord,

12 O house of David, thus saith the Lord: "Judge ye judgment in the morning, and deliver him that is oppressed by violence out of the hand of the oppressor: lest my indignation go forth like a fire, and be kindled, and there be none to quench it, because of the evil of your ways.

13 Behold, I come to thee that dwellest in a valley, upon a rock, above a plain, saith the Lord: and you say: Who shall strike us? and who shall enter into our houses?

14 But I will visit upon you according to the fruit of your doings, saith the Lord: and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof: and it shall devour all things round about it.

CHAP. XXII.

An exhortation both to king and people to return to God. The sentence of God upon Joachaz, Joakim, and Sechonias.

THUS saith the Lord: Go down to the house of the king of Juda, and there thou shalt speak this word.

2 And thou shalt say: Hear the word of the Lord, O king of Juda, that sittest upon the throne of David: thou and thy servants; and thy people, who enter in by these gates.

3 Thus saith the Lord: "Execute judgment and justice, and deliver him that is oppressed out of the hand of the oppressor: and afflict not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, nor oppress them unjustly: and shed not innocent blood in this place.

4 For if you will do this thing indeed, then shall there enter in, by the gates of this house, kings of the race of David sitting upon his throne, and riding in chariots and on horses, they and their servants, and their people.

5 But if you will not hearken to these words: I swear by myself, saith the Lord, that this house shall become a desolation:

6 For thus saith the Lord to the house of the king of Juda: Thou art to me Galaad, the head of Libanus: yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities, not habitable.

7 And I will prepare against thee the destroyer and his weapons: and they shall cut down thy chosen cedars, and shall cast them headlong into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city: and they shall say every man to his neighbour: "Why hath the Lord done so to this great city?"

9 And they shall answer: Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord their God, and have adored strange gods, and served them.

10 Weep not for him that is dead, nor bemoan him with your tears: lament him that goeth away, for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the Lord to Sellum, the son of Josias, the king of Juda, who reigned instead of his father, who went forth out of this place: He shall return hither no more:

12 But in the place, to which I have removed him, there shall he die, and he shall not see this land any more.

and his chambers not in judgment: that will oppress his friend without cause, and will not pay him his wages.

14 Who saith: I will build me a wide house, and large chambers: who openeth to himself windows, and maketh roofs of cedar, and painteth them with vermilion.

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou comparest thyself to the cedar? did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice, and it was then well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy for his own good: was it not, therefore, because he knew me, saith the Lord?

17 But thy eyes and thy heart are set upon covetousness, and upon shedding innocent blood, and upon oppression, and running after evil works.

18 Therefore, thus saith the Lord concerning Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda: They shall not mourn for him, Alas! my brother, and alas! sister: they shall not lament for him, Alas! my lord, or alas! the noble one.

19 He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, rotten and cast forth without the gates of Jerusalem.

21 I spoke to thee in thy prosperity: and thou saidst: I will not hear: this hath been thy way from thy youth, because thou hast not heard my voice.

22 The wind shall feed all thy pastors, and thy lovers shall go into captivity: and then shalt thou be confounded, and ashamed of all thy wickedness.

23 Thou that sittest in Libanus, and makest thy nest in the cedars, how hast thou mourned when sorrows came upon thee, as the pains of a woman in labour?

24 As I live, saith the Lord, if Jechonias, the son of Joakim, the king of Juda, were a ring on my right hand, I would pluck him thence.

25 And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, and into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 And I will send thee, and thy mother that bore thee, into a strange country, in which you were not born, and there you shall die:

27 And they shall not return into the land, whereunto they lift up their mind to return thither.

28 Is this man, Jechonias, an earthen and a broken vessel? is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? why are they cast out, he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not?

29 O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord.

30 Thus saith the Lord: Write this man barren, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for there shall not be a man of his seed that shall sit upon the throne of David and have power any more in Juda.

CHAP. XXIII.

God reproves evil governors: and promises to send good pastors: and Christ himself the Prince of the pastors. He inveighs against false prophets preaching without being sent.

WOE to the pastors, that destroy and tear the sheep of my pasture, saith the Lord.

2 Therefore, thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, to the pastors that feed my people: You have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them; behold, I will visit upon you for the evil of your doings, saith the Lord.

3 And I will gather together the remnant of my flock, out of all the lands into which I have cast them out: and I will make them return to their own fields, and they shall increase and be multiplied.

4 And I will set up pastors over them, and they shall feed them: they shall fear no more, and they shall not be dismayed: and none shall be wanting of their number, saith the Lord.

5 Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, and I will raise up to David a just branch: and a king shall reign, and shall be wise: and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 In those days shall Juda be saved, and Israel shall dwell confidently: and this is the name that they shall call him: The Lord, our just one.

7 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, and they shall say no more: The Lord liveth, who brought up the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt:

8 But, The Lord liveth, who hath brought out, and brought hither the seed of the house of Israel, from the land of the north, and out of all the lands, to which I had cast them forth: and they shall dwell in their own land.

9 To the prophets: My heart is broken within me, all my bones tremble: I am become as a drunken man, and as a man full of wine, at the presence of the Lord, and at the presence of his holy words.

10 Because the land is full of adulterers, because the land hath mourned by reason of cursing, the fields of the desert are dried up: and their course is become evil, and their strength unlike.

11 For the prophet and the priest are defiled: and in my house I have found their wickedness, saith the Lord.

12 Therefore their way shall be as a slippery way in the dark: for they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for I will bring evils upon them, the year of their visitation, saith the Lord.

13 And I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria: they prophesied in Baal, and deceived my people Israel.

14 And I have seen the likeness of adulterers, and the way of lying in the prophets of Jerusalem: and they strengthened the hands of the wicked, that no man should return from his evil doings: they are all become unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

15 Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts to the prophets: "Behold, I will feed them with wormwood, and will give them gall to drink: for, from the prophets of Jerusalem, corruption is gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the Lord of hosts: "Hearken not to the words of the prophets that prophesy to you, and deceive you: they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord.

17 They say to them that blaspheme me: The Lord hath said: "You shall have peace: and to every one that walketh in the perverseness of his own heart, they have said: No evil shall come upon you.

18 For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord, and hath seen and heard his word? Who hath considered his word, and heard it?

19 "Behold the whirlwind of the Lord's indignation shall come forth, and a tempest shall break out and come upon the head of the wicked.

20 The wrath of the Lord shall not return till he execute it, and till he accomplish the thought of his heart: in the latter days you shall understand his counsel.

21 "I did not send prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

22 If they had stood in my counsel, and had made my words known to my people, I should have turned them from their evil way, and from their wicked doings.

23 Am I, think ye, a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not a God afar off?

24 Shall a man be hid in secret places, and I not see him, saith the Lord? do not I fill heaven and earth, saith the Lord?

25 I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, and say: I have dreamed, I have dreamed.

26 How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies, and that prophesy the delusions of their own heart?

27 Who seek to make my people forget my name through their dreams, which they tell every man to his neighbour: as their fathers forgot my name for Baal.

28 The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream: and he that hath my word, let him speak my word with truth: what hath the chaff to do with the wheat? saith the Lord.

29 Are not my words as a fire, saith the Lord: and as a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?

30 Therefore behold I am against the prophets, saith the Lord: who steal my words every one from his neighbour.

31 Behold I am against the prophets, saith the Lord: who use their tongues, and say: The Lord saith it.

32 Behold I am against the prophets that have lying dreams, saith the Lord: and tell them, and cause my people to err by their lying, and by their wonders: when I sent them not, nor commanded them, who hath not profited this people at all, saith the Lord.

33 If therefore this people, or the prophet, or the priest, shall ask thee, saying: What is the burden of the Lord? thou shalt say to them: You are the burden: for I will cast you away, saith the Lord.

34 And, as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say: The burden of the Lord: I will visit upon that man, and upon his house.

35 Thus shall you say every one to his neighbour and to his brother: What hath the Lord answered? and what hath the Lord spoken?

36 And the burden of the Lord shall be mentioned no more, for every man's word shall be his burden: for you have perverted the words of the living God, of the Lord of hosts, our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet: What hath the Lord answered thee? and what hath the Lord spoken?

38 But if you shall say: The burden of the Lord: therefore, thus saith the Lord: Because you have said this word: The burden of the Lord: and I have sent to you, saying: Say not, The burden of the Lord:

39 Therefore, behold I will take you away, carrying you, and will forsake you, and the city which I gave to you, and to your fathers, out of my presence.

CHAP. XXIV.

Under the type of good and bad figs, he foretells the restoration of the Jews that had been carried away captive with Jeconias, and the desolation of those that were left behind.

THE Lord showed me : and behold two baskets full of figs, set before the temple of the Lord : after that Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had carried away Jeconias, the son of Joakim, the king of Juda, and his chief men, and the craftsmen, and engravers of Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

2 One basket had very good figs, like the signs of the first season : and the other basket had very bad figs, which could not be eaten, because they were bad.

3 And the Lord said to me : What seest thou, Jeremias ? And I said : Figs, the good figs, very good : and the bad figs, very bad, which cannot be eaten, because they are bad.

4 And the word of the Lord came to me, saying :

5 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel : Like these good figs, so will I regard the captives of Juda, whom I have sent forth out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans, for their good.

6 And I will set my eyes upon them to be pacified, and I will bring them again into this land : and I will build them up, and not pull them down : and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

7 And I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord : and they shall be my people, and I will be their God : because they shall return to me with their whole heart.

8 And as the very bad figs, that cannot be eaten, because they are bad : thus saith the Lord : So will I give Sedecias, the king of Juda, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that have remained in this city, and that dwell in the land of Egypt.

9 And I will deliver them up to vexation, and affliction, to all the kingdoms of the earth : to be a reproach, and a by-word, and a proverb, and to be a curse in all places to which I have cast them out.

10 And I will send among them the sword, and the famine, and the pestilence : till they be consumed out of the land which I gave to them, and their fathers.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Babylon, when he was associated by Nabopolassar, three years before his death, A. 3397. This year Joakim was taken to be conducted to Babylon, though he was afterwards permitted to remain on very hard conditions, while the sacred vessels, Daniel, &c. were taken away, and the seventy years of captivity commenced. They ended in the first of Cyrus, A. 3468. Usher.—This chap. should be placed before the 24th and after the 26th.

THE word that came to Jeremias concerning all the people of Juda, in the "fourth year of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, (the same is the first year of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon,)"

2 Which Jeremias, the prophet, spoke to all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying :

3 From the thirteenth year of Josias, the son of Amon, king of Juda, until this day, this is the three and twentieth year, the word of the Lord hath come to me, and I have spoken to you rising before day, and speaking, and you have not hearkened.

4 And the Lord hath sent to you all his servants, the prophets, rising early, and sending, and you have not hearkened, nor inclined your ears to hear.

5 When he said : "Return ye, every one, from his evil way, and from your wicked devices, and you shall dwell in the land which the Lord hath given to you, and to your fathers, for ever and ever."

6 And go not after strange gods to serve them, and adore them : nor provoke me to wrath by the works of your hands, and I will not afflict you.

7 And you have not heard me, saith the Lord, that you might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands, to your own hurt.

8 Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts : Because you have not heard my words :

9 Behold, I will send and take all the kindreds of the north, saith the Lord, and Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, my servant : and I will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all the nations that are round about it : and I will destroy them, and make them an astonishment and a hissing, and perpetual desolations.

10 And I will take away from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the sound of the mill, and the light of the lamp.

11 And all this land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment : and all these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years.

12 And when the seventy years shall be expired, I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the Lord, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans and I will make it perpetual desolations.

13 And I will bring upon that land all my words, that I have spoken against it, all that is written in this book, all that Jeremias hath prophesied against all nations :

C.—Another period of seventy years is specified, (chap. xxix. 10,) during which the city and temple should remain in ruins, till the second of Hystaspes, A. 3485. Usher.—This system is not without difficulties. The present prediction seems rather to refer to the desolation, (Vatab. Agg. i. 2,) as appears from Zac. i. 12, or the prophet speaks of the same event in both places, dating from the year preceding the capture of Jerusalem, (A. 3415,) till Darius gave entire liberty to the Jews, A. 3485. We differ from Usher in the years allotted to Cyrus, who began to restore the Jews. 1 Esd. i. 5. C.—These seventy years are dated from the 11th of Sedecias. W.

14 For they have served them, whereas they were many nations, and great kings: and I will repay them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their hands.

15 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Take the cup of wine of this fury at my hand: and thou shalt make all the nations to drink thereof, unto which I shall send thee.

16 And they shall drink, and be troubled, and be mad because of the sword, which I shall send among them.

17 And I took the cup at the hand of the Lord, and I presented it to all the nations to drink of it, to which the Lord sent me:

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Beginning, after Joakim had reigned some time. Ver. 21.

IN *the beginning of the reign of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, came this word from the Lord, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord: Stand in the court of the house of the Lord, and speak to all the cities of Juda, out of which they come, to adore in the house of the Lord, all the words which I have commanded thee to speak unto them: leave not out one word.

3 If so be they will hearken, and be converted every one from his evil way; that I may repent me of the evil that I think to do unto them for the wickedness of their doings.

4 And thou shalt say to them: Thus saith the Lord: If you will not hearken to me to walk in my law, which I have given you,

5 To give ear to the words of my servants, the prophets, whom I sent to you rising up early, and sending, and you have not hearkened:

6 ^bI will make this house like Silo,^c and I will make this city a curse to all the nations of the earth.

7 And the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, heard Jeremias speaking these words in the house of the Lord.

8 And when Jeremias had made an end of speaking all that the Lord had commanded him to speak to all the people: the priests, and the prophets, and all the people laid hold of him, saying: Let him be put to death.

9 Why hath he prophesied in the name of the Lord, saying: This house shall be like Silo: and this city shall be made desolate, without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered together against Jeremias, in the house of the Lord.

10 And the princes of Juda heard these words: and they went up from the king's house into the house of the Lord, and sat in the entry of the new gate of the house of the Lord.

11 And the priests and the prophets spoke to the princes, and to all the people, saying: The judgment of death is for this man: because he hath prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your ears.

12 Then Jeremias spoke to all the princes, and to all the people, saying: "The Lord sent me to prophesy concerning this house, and concerning this city, all the words that you have heard.

13 *Now, therefore; amend your ways, and your doings, and hearken to the voice of the Lord your God: and the Lord will repent him of the evil he hath spoken against you.

14 But, as for me, behold I am in your hands: do with me what is good and right in your eyes:

H.—The princes, moved by the elders, (ver. 17,) acquit the prophet, (C.) at the persuasion of Ahicam. Ver. 24. Several priests would probably judge along with the other princes, as the examination of impostors belonged chiefly to their tribunal. H.

VER. 17. Ancients. They declare what happened about a hundred years before, respecting Micheas, iii. 12. C.

VER. 18. Mountain. Sion, on which the house of the Lord was built. Conquerors have seen, names ploughed up cities. C.

15 But know ye, and understand, that if you put me to death, you will shed innocent blood against your own selves, and against this city, and the inhabitants thereof. For, in truth, the Lord sent me to you, to speak all these words in your hearing.

16 Then the princes, and all the people said to the priests, and to the prophets: There is no judgment of death for this man: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the Lord our God.

17 And some of the ancients of the land rose up: and they spoke to all the assembly of the people, saying:

18 Micheas, of Morasthi, was a prophet, in the days of Ezechias, king of Juda, and he spoke to all the people of Juda, saying: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: 'Sion shall be ploughed like a field, and Jerusalem shall be a heap of stones: and the mountain of the house the high places of woods.

19 Did Ezechias, king of Juda, and all Juda, condemn him to death? did they not fear the Lord, and beseech the face of the Lord: and the Lord repented of the evil that he had spoken against them? therefore, we are doing a great evil against our souls.

20 There was also a man that prophesied in the name of the Lord, Urias, the son of Semei, of Cariathiarim, and he prophesied against this city, and against this land, according to all the words of Jeremias.

21 And Joakim, and all his men in power, and his princes, heard these words: and the king sought to put him to death. And Urias heard it, and was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt.

22 And king Joakim sent men into Egypt, Elnathan, the son of Achobor, and men with him into Egypt.

23 And they brought Urias out of Egypt: and brought him to king Joakim, and he slew him with the sword and he cast his dead body into the graves of the common people.

24 So the hand of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, was with Jeremias, that he should not be delivered into the hands of the people, to put him to death.

CHAP. XXVII.

The prophet sends chains to divers kings, signifying that they must bend their necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon. The vessels of their temple shall not be brought back till all the rest are carried away.

IN *the beginning of the reign of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, this word came to Jeremias, from the Lord, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord, to me: Make thee bands, and chains: and thou shalt put them on thy neck.

3 And thou shalt send them to the king of Edom, and

4 And thou shalt command them to speak to their masters: Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Thus shall you say to your masters:

5 I made the earth, and the men, and the beasts that are upon the face of the earth, by my great power, and by my stretched out arm: and I have given it to whom it seemed good in my eyes.

6 And now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, my servant: moreover also the beasts of the field I have given him to serve him.

7 And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son: till the time come for his land and himself: and many nations and great kings shall serve him.

8 But the nation and kingdom that will not serve Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and whosoever will not bend his neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon: I will visit upon that nation with the sword, and with famine, and with pestilence, saith the Lord: till I consume them by his hand.

9 "Therefore, hearken not to your prophets and diviners, and dreamers, and soothsayers, and sorcerers, that say to you: You shall not serve the king of Babylon.

10 For they prophesy lies to you: to remove you far from your country, and cast you out, and to make you perish.

11 But the nation that shall bend down their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and shall serve him: I will let them remain in their own land, saith the Lord: and they shall till it, and dwell in it.

12 And I spoke to Sedecias, the king of Juda, according to all these words, saying: Bend down your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, and his people, and you shall live.

13 Why will you die, thou and thy people by the sword, and by famine, and by the pestilence, as the Lord hath spoke against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?

14 Hearken not to the words of the prophets, that say to you: You shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they tell you a lie.

15 "For I have not sent them, saith the Lord: and they prophesy in my name falsely: to drive you out, and that you may perish, both you and the prophets, that prophesy to you.

17 Therefore, hearken not to them, but serve the king of Babylon, that you may live. Why should this city be given up to desolation?

18 But if they be prophets, and the word of the Lord be in them: let them interpose themselves before the Lord of hosts, that the vessels which were left in the house of the Lord, and in the house of the king of Juda, and in Jerusalem, may not go to Babylon.

19 For thus saith the Lord of hosts 'to the pillars, and to the sea, and to the bases, and to the rest of the vessels that remain in this city:

20 Which Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, did not take, when he carried away Jechonias, the son of Joakim, the king of Juda, from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the great men of Juda and Jerusalem.

22 They shall be carried to Babylon, and there they shall be until the day of their visitation, saith the Lord: and I will cause them to be brought, and to be restored in this place.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The false prophecy of Hananias: he dies that same year as Jeremias foretold.

AND it came to pass in that year, in the beginning of the reign of Sedecias, king of Juda, in the fourth year, "in the fifth month, that Hananias, the son of Azur, a prophet, of Gabaon, spoke to me, in the house of the Lord, before the priests, and all the people, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.

3 As yet, two years of days, and I will cause all the vessels of the house of the Lord to be brought back into this place, which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon.

4 And I will bring back to this place, Jechonias, the son of Joakim, king of Juda, and all the captives of Juda, that are gone to Babylon, saith the Lord: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 And Jeremias, the prophet, said to Hananias, the prophet, in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the Lord:

6 And Jeremias, the prophet, said: Amen, the Lord do so: the Lord perform thy words, which thou hast prophesied: that the vessels may be brought again into the CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Juda. So far Sanctius joins with the former chapter, improperly.—In the fourth year, seems rather an interpolation; though the Sept. omit in the beginning, &c., to reconcile the passage; and others date the fourth year from the last sabbatical one, which is quite unusual. nouse of the Lord, and all the captives may return out of Babylon to this place.

7 Nevertheless, hear this word, that I speak in thy ears, and in the ears of all the people :

8 The prophets that have been before me, and before thee from the beginning, and have prophesied concerning many countries, and concerning great kingdoms, of war, and of affliction, and of famine.

9 The prophet that prophesied peace : when his word shall come to pass, the prophet shall be known, whom the Lord hath sent in truth.

10 And Hananias, the prophet, took the chain from the neck of Jeremias, the prophet, and broke it.

11 And Hananias spoke in the presence of all the people, saying : Thus saith the Lord : Even so will I break the yoke of Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, after two full years, from off the neck of all the nations.

12 And Jeremias, the prophet, went his way. And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, after that Hananias, the prophet, had broken the chain from off the neck of Jeremias, the prophet, saying :

13 Go, and tell Hananias : Thus saith the Lord : Thou hast broken chains of wood, and thou shalt make for them chains of iron.

14 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel : I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, to serve Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and they shall serve him : moreover also I have given him the beasts of the earth.

15 And Jeremias, the prophet, said to Hananias, the prophet : Hear now, Hananias : the Lord^a hath not sent thee, and thou hast made this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore, thus saith the Lord : Behold, I will send thee away from off the face of the earth : this year shalt thou die : for thou hast spoken against the Lord.

17 And Hananias, the prophet, died in that year, in the seventh month.

CHAP. XXIX.

Jeremias writeth to the captives in Babylon, exhorting them to be easy there, and not to hearken to false prophets. That they shall be delivered after seventy years. But those that remain in Jerusalem shall perish by the sword, famine, and pestilence. And that Achab, Sedecias, and Semeias, false prophets, shall die miserably.

11 For I know the thoughts that I think towards you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of affliction, to give you an end and patience.

27 And now why hast thou not rebuked Jeremias, the Anathothite, who prophesieth to you?

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying: Thus saith the Lord to Semeias, the Nehelamite: Because Semeias hath prophesied to you, and I sent him not: and hath caused you to trust in a lie:

32 Therefore, thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will visit upon Semeias, the Nehelamite, and upon his seed: he shall not have a man to sit in the midst of this people, and he shall not see the good that I will do to my people, saith the Lord: because he hath spoken treason against the Lord.

CHAP. XXX.

God will deliver his people from their captivity: Christ shall be their King. and his Church shall be glorious for ever.

THIS^b is the word that came to Jeremias from the Lord, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, saying: Write thee all the words that I have spoken to thee, in a book.

3 For behold the days come, saith the Lord, and I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Juda, saith the Lord: and I will cause them to return to the land which I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 And these are the words that the Lord hath spoken to Israel and to Juda:

5 For thus saith the Lord: We have heard a voice of terror: there is fear, and no peace.

6 Ask ye, and see if a man bear children? why then have I seen every man with his hands on his loins, like a woman in labour, and all faces are turned yellow?

7 ^cAlas, for that day is great, neither is there the like to it: and it is the time of tribulation to Jacob, but he shall be saved out of it.

8 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst his bands: and strangers shall no more rule over him:

9 But they shall serve the Lord, their God, and David, their king, whom I will raise up to them.

10 ^dTherefore, fear thou not, my servant Jacob, saith the Lord, neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from a country afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity : and Jacob shall return, and be at rest, and abound with all good things, and there shall be none whom he may fear :

11 For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee : for I will utterly consume all the nations among which I have scattered thee : but I will not utterly consume thee : but I will chastise thee in judgment, that thou mayest not seem to thyself innocent.

12 For thus saith the Lord : Thy bruise is incurable, thy wound is very grievous.

13 There is none to judge thy judgment to bind it up : thou hast no healing medicines.

14 All thy lovers have forgotten thee, and will not seek after thee : *for I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with a cruel chastisement : by reason of the multitude of thy iniquities, thy sins are hardened.

15 Why criest thou for thy affliction ? thy sorrow is incurable : for the multitude of thy iniquity, and for thy hardened sins, I have done these things to thee.

16 Therefore, all they that devour thee, shall be devoured : and all thy enemies shall be carried into captivity : and they that waste thee shall be wasted ; and all that prey upon thee, will I give for a prey.

17 For I will close up thy scar, and will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord. Because they have called thee, O Sion, an outcast : This is she that hath none to seek after her.

18 Thus saith the Lord : Behold, I will bring back the captivity of the pavilions of Jacob, and will have pity on his houses, and the city shall be built in her high place, and the temple shall be founded according to the order thereof.

19 And out of them shall come forth praise, and the voice of them that play : and I will multiply them, and they shall not be made few : and I will glorify them, and they shall not be lessened.

20 And their children shall be as from the beginning, and their assembly shall be permanent before me : and I will visit against all that afflict them.

21 And their leader shall be of themselves : and their prince shall come forth from the midst of them : and I will bring him near, and he shall come to me : for who is this that setteth his heart to approach to me, saith the Lord ?

7 For thus saith the Lord : Rejoice ye in the joy of Jacob, and neigh before the head of the Gentiles : shout ye, and sing, and say : Save, O Lord, thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and will gather them from the ends of the earth : and among them shall be the blind and the lame, the woman with child, and she that is bringing forth together, a great company of them returning hither.

13 Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, the young men and old men together: and I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them joyful after their sorrow.

14 And I will fill the soul of the priests with fatness: and my people shall be filled with my good things, saith the Lord.

CHAP. XXXII.

Jeremias, by God's commandment, purchases a field of his kinsman: and prophesies the return of the people out of captivity; and the everlasting covenant God will make with his Church.

THE^b word that came to Jeremias, from the Lord, in the tenth year of Sedecias, king of Juda; the same is the eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor.

2 At that time the army of the king of Babylon besieged Jerusalem; and Jeremias, the prophet, was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the house of the king of Juda.

3 For Sedecias, king of Juda, had shut him up, saying: Why dost thou prophesy, saying: Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it?

4 And Sedecias, king of Juda, shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans; but he shall be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon; and he shall speak to him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall see his eyes.

5 And he shall lead Sedecias to Babylon; and he shall be there till I visit him, saith the Lord. But if you will fight against the Chaldeans, you shall have no success.

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 1. Tenth. The city had been besieged about a year, (chap. xxxix. 1.) and the prophet continued to admonish the king and people of their fate. Chap. xxxiv. 3.

6 And Jeremias said: The word of the Lord came to me, saying:

7 Behold, Hanameel, the son of Sellum, thy cousin, shall come to thee, saying: Buy thee my field, which is in Anathoth, for it is thy right to buy it, being next akin.

8 And Hanameel, my uncle's son, came to me, according to the word of the Lord, to the entry of the prison, and said to me: Buy my field, which is in Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin; for the right of inheritance is thine, and thou art next of kin to possess it. And I understood that this was the word of the Lord.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel, my uncle's son, that is in Anathoth: and I weighed him the money, seven staters; and ten pieces of silver.

10 And I wrote it in a book, and sealed it, and took witnesses: and I weighed him the money in the balances.

11 And I took the deed of the purchase, that was sealed, and the stipulations, and the ratifications, with the seals, that were on the outside.

12 And I gave the deed of the purchase to Baruch, the son of Neri, the son of Maasias, in the sight of Hanameel, my uncle's son, in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, and before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 And I charged Baruch before them, saying:

14 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these writings, this deed of the purchase that is sealed up, and this deed that is open, and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Houses, and fields, and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

16 And, after I had delivered the deed of purchase to Baruch, the son of Neri, I prayed to the Lord, saying:

17 Alas, alas, alas, O Lord God, behold thou hast made heaven and earth by thy great power, and thy stretched-out arm; no word shall be hard to thee.

18 Thou showest mercy unto thousands, and returnest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them; O most mighty, great, and powerful, the Lord of hosts is thy name.

21 And hast brought forth thy people Israel, out of the land of Egypt, with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and a stretched-out arm, and with great terror.

22 And hast given them this land which thou didst swear to their fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey.

23 And they came in, and possessed it; but they obeyed not thy voice, and they walked not in thy law: and they did not any of those things that thou didst command them to do, and all these evils are come upon them.

24 Behold works are built up against the city to take it: and the city is given into the hands of the Chaldeans, who fight against it, by the sword, and the famine, and the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is all come to pass, as thou thyself seest.

25 And sayest thou to me, O Lord God: Buy a field for money, and take witnesses, whereas the city is given into the hands of the Chaldeans?

26 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, saying:

27 Behold I am the Lord, the God of all flesh: shall any thing be hard for me?

28 Therefore, thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will deliver this city into the hands of the Chaldeans, and into the hands of the king of Babylon, and they shall take it.

29 And the Chaldeans that fight against this city, shall come and set it on fire, and burn it, with the houses upon whose roofs they offered sacrifice to Baal, and poured out drink-offerings to strange gods, to provoke me to wrath.

30 For the children of Israel, and the children of Juda, have continually done evil in my eyes from their youth: the children of Israel, who even till now provoke me with the work of their hands, saith the Lord.

31 For this city hath been to me a provocation and indignation from the day that they built it, until this day, in which it shall be taken out of my sight.

36 And now, therefore, thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, to this city, whereof you say that it shall be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon, by the sword, and by famine, and by pestilence:

37 Behold I will gather them together out of all the lands to which I have cast them out, in my anger, and in my wrath, and in my great indignation: and I will bring them again into this place, and will cause them to dwell securely.

38 And they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

God promises reduction from captivity, and other blessings: especially the coming of Christ, whose reign in his Church shall be glorious and perpetual.

Jerom "the greatest doctor in expounding the sacred Scriptures," as he translated and illustrated the greater part of them (H.); and indeed he seems to have been best qualified for the undertaking of all the Fathers. CHAP. XXXIII. VER. 1. Time. Soon after the former. C.

3 Cry to me, and I will hear thee: and I will show thee great things, and sure things, which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, to the houses of this city, and to the houses of the king of Juda, which are destroyed, and to the bulwarks, and to the sword.

5 Of them that come to fight with the Chaldeans, and to fill them with the dead bodies of the men whom I have slain in my wrath, and in my indignation, hiding my face from this city because of all their wickedness.

6 Behold I will close their wounds and give them health, and I will cure them: and I will reveal to them the prayer of peace and truth.

7 And I will bring back the captivity of Juda, and the captivity of Jerusalem: and I will build them as from the beginning.

8 And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me: and I will forgive all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned against me, and despised me.

9 And it shall be to me a name, and a joy, and a praise, and a gladness before all the nations of the earth, that shall hear of all the good things which I will do to them: and they shall fear and be troubled for all the good things, and for all the peace, that I will make for them.

10 Thus saith the Lord: There shall be heard again in this place, (which you say is desolate, because there is neither man nor beast: in the cities of Juda, and without Jerusalem, which are desolate without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast,)

11 The voice of joy and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that shall say: Give ye glory to the Lord of hosts, for the Lord is good, for his mercy endureth for ever: and of them that shall bring their vows into the house of the Lord: for I will bring back the captivity of the land as at the first, saith the Lord.

12 Thus saith the Lord of hosts: There shall be again in this place, that is desolate without man, and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, an habitation of shepherds, causing their flocks to lie down.

13 And in the cities on the mountains, and in the cities of the plains, and in the cities that are towards the south: and in the land of Benjamin, and round about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda shall the flocks pass again under the hand of him that numbereth them, saith the Lord.

22 As the stars of heaven cannot be numbered, nor the sand of the sea be measured: so will I multiply the seed of David, my servant, and the Levites, my ministers.

23 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, saying:

24 Hast thou not seen what this people hath spoken, saying: The two families which the Lord hath chosen, are cast off: and they have despised my people, so that it is no more a nation before them?

25 Thus saith the Lord: If I have not set my covenant between day and night, and laws to heaven and earth:

shalt surely be taken, and thou shalt be delivered into his hand: and thy eyes shall see the eyes of the king of Babylon, and his mouth shall speak with thy mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon.

4 Yet hear the word of the Lord, O Sedecias, king of Juda. Thus saith the Lord to thee: Thou shalt not die by the sword,

5 But thou shalt die in peace; and according to the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings that were before thee, so shall they burn thee: and they shall mourn for thee, saying: Alas, Lord: for I have spoken the word, saith the Lord.

6 And Jeremias, the prophet, spoke all these words to Sedecias, the king of Juda, in Jerusalem.

7 And the army of the king of Babylon fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Juda that were left, against Lachis, and against Azecha: for these remained of the cities of Juda, fenced cities.

8 The word that came to Jeremias from the Lord, after that king Sedecias had made a covenant with all the people in Jerusalem, making a proclamation:

9 That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being a Hebrew man or a Hebrew woman, go free: and that they should not lord it over them; to wit, over the Jews, their brethren.

10 And all the princes, and all the people, who entered into the covenant, heard that every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, go free, and should no more have dominion over them: and they obeyed, and let them go free.

11 But afterwards they turned: and brought back again their servants and their handmaids, whom they had let go free, and brought them into subjection as men-servants and maid-servants.

12 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias from the Lord, saying:

13 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, saying:

14 *At the end of seven years, let ye go every man, his brother, being a Hebrew, who hath been sold to thee, so he shall serve thee six years: and thou shalt let him go free from thee: and your fathers did not hearken to me, nor did they incline their ear.

15 And you turned to-day, and did that which was right in my eyes, in proclaiming liberty every one to his brother: and you made a covenant in my sight, in the house upon which my name is invocated.

16 And you are fallen back, and have defiled my name: and you have brought back again every man his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, whom you had let go free, and set at liberty: and you have brought them into subjection to be your servants and handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the Lord: You have not hearkened to me, in proclaiming liberty, every man to his brother, and every man to his friend: behold, I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the Lord, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine: and I will cause you to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, and have not performed the words of the covenant, which they agreed to in my presence, when they cut the calf in two,^b and passed between the parts thereof:

19 The princes of Juda, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs and the priests, and all the people of the land, that passed between the parts of the calf:

20 And I will give them into the hands of their enemies, and into the hands of them that seek their life: and their dead bodies shall be for meat to the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And Sedecias, the king of Juda, and his princes, I will give into the hands of their enemies, and into the hands of them that seek their lives, and into the hands of the armies of the king of Babylon, which are gone from you.

22 Behold I will command, saith the Lord, and I will bring them again to this city, and they shall fight against it, and take it, and burn it with fire: and I will make the cities of Juda a desolation, without an inhabitant.

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups: and I said to them: Drink ye wine.

6 And they answered: We will not drink wine; because Jonadab, the son of Rechab,* our father, commanded us, saying: You shall drink no wine, neither you nor your children, for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build houses, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyards, nor have any: but you shall dwell in tents all your days, that you may live many days upon the face of the earth, in which you are strangers.

8 Therefore we have obeyed the voice of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, our father, in all things that he commanded us: so as to drink no wine all our days: neither we, nor our wives, nor our sons, nor our daughters:

9 Nor to build houses to dwell in, nor to have vineyard, or field, or seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have been obedient according to all that Jonadab, our father, commanded us.

11 But when Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came up to our land, we said: Come, let us go into Jerusalem, from the face of the army of the Chaldeans, and from the face of the army of Syria: and we have remained in Jerusalem.

12 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, saying:

13 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Go, and say to the men of Juda, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Will you not receive instruction, to obey my words? saith the Lord.

14 The words of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, by which he commanded his sons not to drink wine, have prevailed: and they have drunk none to this day, because they have obeyed the commandment of their father: but I have spoken to you, rising early and speaking, and you have not obeyed me.

15 And I have sent to you all my servants, the prophets, rising early, and sending and saying: ^bReturn ye every man from his wicked way, and make your ways good: and follow not strange gods, nor worship them, and you shall dwell in the land which I gave you and your fathers: and you have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened to me.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Jeremias sends Baruch to read his prophecies in the temple: the book is brought to king Joakim, who burns it. The prophet denounces his judgment, and causes Baruch to write a new copy.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, that this word came to Jeremias by the Lord, saying:

2 Take thee a roll of a book, and thou shalt write in it all the words that I have spoken to thee against Israel and Juda, and against all the nations, from the day that I spoke to thee, from the days of Josias even to this day.

3 If so be, when the house of Juda shall hear all the evils that I purpose to do unto them, that they may return every man from his wicked way: and I will forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 So Jeremias called Baruch, the son of Nerias: and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremias, all the words of the Lord, which he spoke to him, upon the roll of a book.

5 And Jeremias commanded Baruch, saying: I am shut up, and cannot go into the house of the Lord.

6 Go thou in, therefore, and read out of the volume which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the Lord, in the hearing of all the people in the house of the Lord, on the fasting day; and, also, thou shalt read them in the hearing of all Juda, that come out of their cities:

7 If so be, they may present their supplication before the Lord, and may return every one from his wicked way; for great is the wrath and indignation which the Lord hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch, the son of Nerias, did according to all that Jeremias, the prophet, had commanded him, reading out of the volume the words of the Lord, in the house of the Lord.

9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the Lord to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that were come together out of the cities of Juda to Jerusalem.

10 And Baruch read out of the volume the words of Jeremias, in the house of the Lord, in the treasury of Gamarias, the son of Saphan the scribe, in the upper court, in the entry of the new gate of the house of the Lord, in the hearing of all the people.

11 And when Micheas, the son of Gamarias, the son of Saphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the Lord,

12 He went down into the king's house, to the secretary's chamber; and behold all the princes sat there; Elisama, the scribe, and Dalaïas, the son of Semeias, and Elnathan, the son of Achobor, and Gamarias, the son of Saphan, and Sedecias, the son of Hananias, and all the princes.

13 And Micheas told them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read out of the volume in the hearing of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Judi, the son of Nathanias, the son of Semeias, the son of Chusi, to Baruch, saying: Take in thy hand the volume in which thou hast read in the hearing of the people, and come. So Baruch, the son of Nerias, took the volume in his hand, and came to them.

15 And they said to him: Sit down and read these things in our hearing. And Baruch read in their hearing.

16 And when they had heard all the words, they looked upon one another with astonishment, and they said to Baruch: We must tell the king all these words.

17 And they asked him, saying: Tell us how didst thou write all these words from his mouth.

18 And Baruch said to them: With his mouth he pronounced all these words as if he were reading to me: and I wrote in a volume with ink.

19 And the princes said to Baruch: Go, and hide thee, both thou and Jeremias, and let no man know where you are.

20 And they went in to the king, into the court; but they laid up the volume in the chamber of Elisama, the scribe; and they told all the words in the hearing of the king.

21 And the king sent Judi that he should take the volume: who, bringing it out of the chamber of Elisama, the scribe, read it in the hearing of the king, and of all the princes that stood about the king.

VER. 21. Read it. This was the third time. It was in vain afterwards to destroy the book.

22 Now the king sat in the winter-house, in the ninth month; and there was a hearth before him, full of burning coals.

23 And when Judi had read three or four pages, he cut it with the penknife, and he cast it into the fire that was upon the hearth, till all the volume was consumed with the fire that was on the hearth.

24 And the king, and all his servants that heard all these words, were not afraid, nor did they rend their garments.

25 But yet Elnathan, and Dalaïas, and Gamarias spoke to the king, not to burn the book; and he heard them not.

26 And the king commanded Jeremiel, the son of Amelech, and Saraias, the son of Ezriel, and Semeias, the son of Abdeel, to take up Baruch, the scribe, and Jeremias, the prophet: but the Lord hid them.

27 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, the prophet, after that the king had burnt the volume, and the words that Baruch had written from the mouth of Jeremias, saying:

28 Take thee again another volume: and write in it all the former words that were in the first volume, which Joakim, the king of Juda, hath burnt.

29 And thou shalt say to Joakim, the king of Juda: Thus saith the Lord: Thou hast burnt that volume, saying: Why hast thou written therein, and said: The king of Babylon shall come speedily, and shall lay waste this land; and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the Lord against Joakim, the king of Juda: He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out to the heat by day, and to the frost by night.

31 And I will punish him and his seed: and his servants for their iniquities, and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Juda, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: but they have not heard.

32 And Jeremias took another volume, and gave it to Baruch, the son of Nerias, the scribe; who wrote in it, from the mouth of Jeremias, all the words of the book which Joakim, the king of Juda, had burnt with fire; and there were added besides, many more words than had been before.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Jeremias prophesies that the Chaldeans, who had departed from Jerusalem, would return and burn the city. He is cast into prison. His conference with Sedecias.

CHAP. XXXVII. VER. 1. Sedecias. He was less impious than his two predecessors: but too weak to do good.

2 *But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did obey the words of the Lord, that he spoke in the hand of Jeremias, the prophet.

3 And king Sedecias sent Juchal, the son of Selemias, and Sophonias, the son of Maasias, the priest, to Jeremias, the prophet, saying: Pray to the Lord, our God, for us

4 Now Jeremias walked freely in the midst of the people; for they had not as yet cast him into prison. And the army of Pharaoh was come out of Egypt; and the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem, hearing these tidings, departed from Jerusalem.

5 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, the prophet, saying:

6 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: Thus shall you say to the king of Juda, who sent you to inquire of me: Behold the army of Pharaoh, which is come forth to help you, shall return into their own land, into Egypt.

7 And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

8 Thus saith the Lord: Deceive not your souls, saying: The Chaldeans shall surely depart and go away from us: for they shall not go away.

9 But if you should even beat all the army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there should be left of them some wounded men; they shall rise up, every man from his tent, and burn this city with fire.

10 Now, when the army of the Chaldeans was gone away from Jerusalem, because of Pharaoh's army, 11 Jeremias went forth out of Jerusalem, to go into the land of Benjamin, and to divide a possession there in the presence of the citizens.

12 And when he was come to the gate of Benjamin, the captain of the gate, who was there in his turn, was one named Jerias, the son of Selemias, the son of Hananias: and he took hold of Jeremias, the prophet, saying: Thou art fleeing to the Chaldeans.

13 And Jeremias answered: It is not so; I am not fleeing to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Jerias took Jeremias, and brought him to the princes.

14 Wherefore the princes were angry with Jeremias; and they beat him, and cast him into the prison that was in the house of Jonathan, the scribe; for he was chief over the prison.

15 So Jeremias went into the house of the prison, and into the dungeon: and Jeremias remained there many days.

16 Then Sedecias, the king, sending, took him: and asked him secretly in his house, and said: Is there, thinkest thou, any word from the Lord? And Jeremias said: There is. And he said: Thou shalt be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon.

17 And Jeremias said to king Sedecias: In what have I offended against thee, or thy servants, or thy people that thou hast cast me into prison?

18 Where are your prophets that prophesied to you, and said: The king of Babylon shall not come against you, and against this land?

19 Now therefore hear, I beseech thee, my lord the king; let my petition be accepted in thy sight; and send me not back into the house of Jonathan, the scribe, lest I die there.

20 Then king Sedecias commanded that Jeremias should be committed into the entry of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread, beside broth, till all the bread in the city were spent: and Jeremias remained in the entry of the prison.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

The prophet, at the instance of the great men, is cast into a filthy dungeon: he is drawn out by Abdemelech, and has another conference with the king.

NOW Saphatias, the son of Mathan, and Gedelias, the son of Phassur, and Juchal, the son of Selemias, and Phassur, the son of Melchias, heard the words that Jeremias spoke to all the people, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord:^d Whosoever shall remain in this city, shall die by the sword, and by famine, and by pestilence: but he that shall go forth to the Chaldeans, shall live, and his life shall be safe; and he shall live.

3 Thus saith the Lord: This city shall surely be delivered into the hand of the army of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it.

4 And the princes said to the king: We beseech thee that this man may be put to death: for on purpose he weakeneth the hands of the men of war, that remain in this city, and the hands of the people, speaking to them according to these words: for this man seeketh not peace to this people, but evil.

5 And king Sedecias said: Behold he is in your hands: for it is not lawful for the king to deny you any thing.

6 Then they took Jeremias, and cast him into the dungeon of Melchias, the son of Amelech, which was in the entry of the prison: and they let down Jeremias by ropes into the dungeon, wherein there was no water, but mire. And Jeremias sunk into the mire.

7 Now Abdemelech, the Ethiopian, an eunuch that was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremias in the dungeon: but the king was sitting in the gate of Benjamin.

8 And Abdemelech went out of the king's house, and spoke to the king, saying :

9 My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done against Jeremias, the prophet, casting him into the dungeon to die there with hunger, for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Abdemelech, the Ethiopian, saying : Take from hence thirty men with thee, and draw up Jeremias, the prophet, out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Abdemelech, taking the men with him, went into the king's house that was under the storehouse ; and he took from thence old rags, and old rotten things, and he let them down by cords to Jeremias, into the dungeon.

12 And Abdemelech, the Ethiopian, said to Jeremias : Put these old rags, and these rent and rotten things, under thy arms and upon the cords : and Jeremias did so.

13 And they drew up Jeremias with the cords, and brought him forth out of the dungeon. And Jeremias remained in the entry of the prison.

14 And king Sedecias sent and took Jeremias, the prophet, to him to the third gate, that was in the house of the Lord : and the king said to Jeremias : I will ask thee a thing ; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremias said to Sedecias : If I shall declare it to thee, wilt thou not put me to death ? and if I give thee counsel, thou wilt not hearken to me.

16 Then king Sedecias swore to Jeremias, in private, saying : As the Lord liveth, that made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, nor will I deliver thee into the hands of these men that seek thy life.

17 And Jeremias said to Sedecias : Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel : If thou wilt take a resolution, and go out to the princes of the king of Babylon, thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burnt with fire ; and thou shalt be safe, and thy house.

18 But if thou wilt not go out to the princes of the king of Babylon, this city shall be delivered into the hands of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire ; and thou shalt not escape out of their hands.

19 And king Sedecias said to Jeremias : I am afraid, because of the Jews that are fled over to the Chaldeans ; lest I should be delivered into their hands, and they should abuse me.

20 But Jeremias answered : They shall not deliver thee ; hearken, I beseech thee, to the word of the Lord, which I speak to thee, and it shall be well with thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou wilt not go forth : this is the word which the Lord hath shown me :

22 Behold, all the women that are left in the house of the king of Juda, shall be brought out to the princes of the king of Babylon : and they shall say : Thy men of peace have deceived thee, and have prevailed against thee, they have plunged thy feet in the mire, and in a slippery place, and they have departed from thee.

23 And all thy wives, and thy children, shall be brought out to the Chaldeans ; and thou shalt not escape their hands, but thou shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon ; and he shall burn this city with fire.

24 Then Sedecias said to Jeremias : Let no man know these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes shall hear that I have spoken with thee, and shall come to thee, and say to thee : Tell us what thou hast said to the king, hide it not from us, and we will not kill thee : and also what the king said to thee :

26 Thou shalt say to them : I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not command me to be carried back into the house of Jonathan, to die there.

27 So all the princes came to Jeremias, and asked him : and he spoke to them according to all the words that the king had commanded him : and they left him : for nothing had been heard.

28 But Jeremias remained in the entry of the prison, until the day that Jerusalem was taken : and it came to pass that Jerusalem was taken.

CHAP. XXXIX.

After two years' siege, Jerusalem is taken. Sedecias is carried before Nabuchodonosor, who kills his sons in his sight, and then puts out his eyes. Jeremias is set at liberty.

IN the ninth year^a of Sedecias, king of Juda, in the tenth month, came Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his army, to Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the^b eleventh year of Sedecias, in the fourth month, the fifth day of the month, the city was opened.

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate : Neregel, Sereser, Semegarnabu, Sarsachim, Rabsares, Neregel, Sereser, Rebmag, and all the rest of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 And when Sedecias, the king of Juda, and all the men of war, saw them, they fled : and they went forth in

6 And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Sedecias, in Reblatha, before his eyes: and the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Juda.

7 He also put out the eyes of Sedecias, and bound him with fetters, to be carried to Babylon.

8 And the Chaldeans burnt the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire; and they threw down the wall of Jerusalem.

9 And Nabuzardan, the general of the army, carried away captive to Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and the fugitives that had gone over to him, and the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nabuzardan, the general, left some of the poor people, that had nothing at all in the land of Juda; and he gave them vineyards and cisterns at that time.

11 Now Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had given charge to Nabuzardan, the general, concerning Jeremias, saying:

12 Take him, and set thy eyes upon him, and do him no harm; but as he hath a mind, so do with him.

CHAP. XL.

Jeremias remains with Godolias, the governor; who receives all the Jews that resort to him.

THE^a word that came to Jeremias from the Lord, after that Nabuzardan, the general, had let him go from Rama, when he had taken him, being bound with chains, among all them that were carried away from Jerusalem and Juda, and were carried to Babylon.

2 And the general of the army taking Jeremias, said to him: The Lord, thy God, hath pronounced this evil upon this place.

3 And he hath brought it: and the Lord hath done as he hath said: because you have sinned against the Lord, and have not hearkened to his voice, and this word is come upon you.

4 Now then, behold I have loosed thee this day from the chains which were upon thy hands: if it please thee to come with me to Babylon, come: and I will set my eyes upon thee: but if it do not please thee to come with me to Babylon, stay here: behold all the land is before thee, as thou shalt choose, and whither it shall please thee to go, thither go.

5 And come not with me: but dwell with Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Juda: dwell, therefore, with him in the midst of the people: or whithersoever it shall please thee to go, go. And the general of the army gave him victuals and presents, and let him go.

6 And Jeremias went to Godolias, the son of Ahicam, to Masphath: and dwelt with him in the midst of the people that were left in the land.

7 And when all the captains of the army that were scattered through the countries, they and their companions, had heard that the king of Babylon had made Godolias, the son of Ahicam, governor of the country, and that he had committed unto him men and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, them that had not been carried away captive to Babylon:

8 They came to Godolias, to Masphath: and Ismahel, the son of Nathanias, and Johanan and Jonathan, the sons of Caree, and Sareas, the son of Thanehumeth, and the children of Ophi, that were of Netophathi, and Jezouias, the son of Maachati, they and their men.

9 ^bAnd Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, swore to them, and to their companions, saying: Fear not to serve the Chaldeans; dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

11 Moreover, all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the children of Ammon, and in Edom, and in all the countries, when they heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judea, and that he had made Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, ruler over them :

12 All the Jews, I say, returned out of all the places to which they had fled, and they came into the land of Juda, to Godolias, to Masphath ; and they gathered wine, and a very great harvest.

13 Then Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the army, that had been scattered about the countries, came to Godolias, to Masphath.

14 And they said to him : Know that Baalis, the king of the children of Ammon, hath sent Ismahel, the son of Nathania, to kill thee. And Godolias, the son of Ahicam, believed them not.

15 But Johanan, the son of Caree, spoke to Godolias privately in Masphath, saying : I will go, and I will kill Ismahel, the son of Nathania, and no man shall know it, lest he kill thee, and all the Jews be scattered, that are gathered unto thee, and the remnant of Juda perish.

16 And Godolias, the son of Ahicam, said to Johanan, the son of Caree : Do not this thing : for what thou sayest of Ismahel is false.

CHAP. XLI.

Godolias is slain : the Jews that were with him are apprehensive of the Chaldeans.

AND^a it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ismahel, the son of Nathania, the son of Elisama, of the royal blood, and the nobles of the king, and ten men with him, came to Godolias, the son of Ahicam, into Masphath : and they eat bread there together in Masphath.

2 And Ismahel, the son of Nathania, arose, and the ten men that were with him, and they struck Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, with the sword, and slew him whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ismahel slew also all the Jews that were with Godolias in Masphath, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the soldiers.

4 And on the second day after he had killed Godolias, no man yet knowing it,

5 There came some from Sichem, and from Silo, and from Samaria, fourscore men, with their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and mourning : and they had offerings and incense in their hand, to offer in the house of the Lord.

6 And Ismahel, the son of Nathania, went forth from Masphath to meet them, weeping all along as he went : and when he had met them, he said to them : Come to Godolias, the son of Ahicam.

7 And when they were come to the midst of the city, Ismahel, the son of Nathania, slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them, that said to Ismahel : Kill us not ; for we have stores in the field, of wheat, and barley, and oil, and honey. And he forbore, and slew them not with their brethren.

9 And the pit into which Ismahel cast all the dead bodies of the men whom he slew, because of Godolias, is the same that king Asa made, for fear of Baasa, the king of Israel : the same did Ismahel, the son of Nathania, fill with them that were slain.

10 Then Ismahel carried away captive all the remnant of the people that were in Masphath ; the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Masphath ; whom Nabuzardan, the general of the army, had committed to Godolias, the son of Ahicam. And Ismahel, the son of Nathania, took them, and he departed, to go over to the children of Ammon.

11 But Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the fighting men that were with him, heard of the evil that Ismahel, the son of Nathania, had done.

12 And taking all the men, they went out to fight against Ismahel, the son of Nathania, and they found him by the great waters that are in Gabaon.

13 And when all the people that were with Ismahel, had seen Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the fighting men that were with him, they rejoiced.

14 And all the people whom Ismahel had taken, went back to Masphath : and they returned, and went to Johanan, the son of Caree.

15 But Ismahel, the son of Nathania, fled with eight men, from the face of Johanan, and went to the children of Ammon.

16 Then Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the soldiers that were with him, took all the remnant of the people whom they had recovered from Ismahel, the son of Nathania, from Masphath, after that he had slain Godolias, the son of Ahicam : valiant men for war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought back from Gabaon :

CHAP. XLII.

Jeremias assures the remnant of the people, that if they will stay in Juda, they shall be safe: but if they go down into Egypt, they shall perish.

THEN all the captains of the warriors, and Johanan, the son of Caree, and Jezonias, the son of Osaiah, and the rest of the people, from the least to the greatest, came near:

2 And they said to Jeremias, the prophet: Let our supplications fall before thee: and pray thou for us to the Lord, thy God, for all this remnant, for we are left but a few of many, as thy eyes do behold us.

3 And let the Lord, thy God, show us the way by which we may walk, and the thing that we must do.

4 And Jeremias, the prophet, said to them: I have heard you: behold I will pray to the Lord, your God, according to your words: and whatsoever thing he shall answer me, I will declare it to you: and I will hide nothing from you.

5 And they said to Jeremias: The Lord be witness between us of truth and faithfulness, if we do not according to every thing for which the Lord, thy God, shall send thee to us.

6 Whether it be good or evil, we will obey the voice of the Lord, our God, to whom we send thee: that it may be well with us when we shall hearken to the voice of the Lord, our God.

7 Now, after ten days, the word of the Lord came to Jeremias.

8 And he called Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the fighting men that were with him, and all the people, from the least to the greatest.

9 And he said to them: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me, to present your supplications before him:

10 If you will be quiet and remain in this land, I will build you up, and not pull you down: I will plant you, and not pluck you up: for now I am appeased for the evil that I have done to you.

11 Fear not, because of the king of Babylon, of whom you are greatly afraid: fear him not, saith the Lord; for I am with you, to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

13 But if you say: We will not dwell in this land neither will we hearken to the voice of the Lord our God.

15 For this now hear the word of the Lord, ye remnant of Juda: Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: If you set your faces to go into Egypt, and enter in to dwell there:

16 The sword which you fear, shall overtake you there, in the land of Egypt: and the famine, whereof you are afraid, shall cleave to you in Egypt, and there you shall die.

17 And all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt, to dwell there, shall die by the sword, and by famine, and by pestilence: none of them shall remain, nor escape from the face of the evil that I will bring upon them.

18 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: As my anger and my indignation hath been kindled against the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so shall my indignation be kindled against you, when you shall enter into Egypt, and you shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and you shall see this place no more.

19 This is the word of the Lord concerning you, O ye remnant of Juda: Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have adjured you this day.

20 For you have deceived your own souls; for you sent me to the Lord our God, saying: Pray for us to the Lord our God, and according to all that the Lord our God shall say to thee, so declare unto us, and we will do it.

21 And now I have declared it to you this day, and you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord your God, with regard to all the things for which he hath sent me to you.

22 Now, therefore, know certainly that you shall die by the sword, and by famine, and by pestilence, in the place to which you desire to go to dwell there.

The Jews, contrary to the orders of God, by the prophet, go into Egypt, carrying Jeremias with them. He foretels the devastation of that land by the king of Babylon.

4 So Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the soldiers, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the Lord, to remain in the land of Juda.

5 But Johanan, the son of Caree, and all the captains of the soldiers, took all the remnant of Juda, that were returned out of all nations, to which they had before been scattered, to dwell in the land of Juda :

6 Men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every soul, which Nabuzardan, the general, had left with Godolias, the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan, and Jeremias, the prophet, and Baruch, the son of Nerias.

7 And they went into the land of Egypt, for they obeyed not the voice of the Lord : and they came as far as Taphnis.

8 And the word of the Lord came to Jeremias, in Taphnis, saying :

9 Take great stones in thy hand, and thou shalt hide them in the vault that is under the brick wall at the gate of Pharaoh's house in Taphnis : in the sight of the men of Juda.

10 And thou shalt say to them : Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel : Behold, I will send, and take Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, my servant ; and I will set his throne over these stones which I have hid, and he shall set his throne over them.

11 And he shall come and strike the land of Egypt : such as are for death, to death ; and such as are for captivity, to captivity ; and such as are for the sword, to the sword.

12 And he shall kindle a fire in the temples of the gods of Egypt, and he shall burn them, and he shall carry them away captives ; and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment ; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 And he shall break the statues of the house of the sun, that are in the land of Egypt ; and the temples of the gods of Egypt he shall burn with fire.

You have seen all this evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Juda ; and behold they are desolate this day, and there is not an inhabitant in them

3 Because of the wickedness which they have committed, to provoke me to wrath, and to go and offer sacrifice, and worship other gods, which neither they, nor you, nor your fathers knew.

4 And I sent to you all my servants, the prophets, rising early, and sending, and saying : Do not commit this abominable thing, which I hate.

5 But they heard not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their evil ways, and not to sacrifice to strange gods.

6 Wherefore my indignation and my fury was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem : and they are turned to desolation and waste, as at this day.

7 And now thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel : Why do you commit this great evil against your own souls, that there should die of you man and woman ; child and suckling, out of the midst of Juda, and no remnant should be left you :

8 In that you provoke me to wrath with the works of your hands, by sacrificing to other gods in the land of Egypt, into which you are come to dwell there : and that you should perish, and be a curse, and a reproach to all the nations of the earth ?

VER. 6. Forth, drop by drop. Chap. xlii. 18. I have repeatedly warned them by punishments. H.

VER. 8. Gods. Their blindness and malice was inconceivable. They attribute their past miseries to the neglect of worshipping the moon ! Ver. 18.

VER. 11. Face, to punish grievously. Ezech. iv. 3, and xx. 35. C.—All did not perish, but the far greater part. Ver. 14, 28. W.

14 And there shall be none that shall escape, and remain, of the remnant of the Jews that are gone to sojourn in the land of Egypt: and that shall return into the land of Juda, to which they have a desire to return, to dwell there: there shall none return but they that shall flee.

15 Then all the men that knew that their wives sacrificed to other gods: and all the women, of whom there stood by a great multitude, and all the people of them that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Phatures, answered Jeremias, saying:

16 As for the word which thou hast spoken to us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken to thee:

17 But we will certainly do every word that shall proceed out of our own mouth, to sacrifice to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings to her, as we and our fathers have done, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem: and we were filled with bread, and it was well with us, and we saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to offer sacrifice to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings to her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword, and by famine.

19 And if we offer sacrifice to the queen of heaven, and pour out drink-offerings to her: did we make cakes to worship her, to pour out drink-offerings to her, without our husbands?

20 And Jeremias spoke to all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying:

21 Was it not the sacrifice that you offered in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem, you and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, which the Lord hath remembered, and hath it not entered into his heart?

22 So that the Lord could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which you have committed: therefore your land is become a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 Because you have sacrificed to idols, and have sinned against the Lord: and have not obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have not walked in his law, and in his commandments, and in his testimonies: therefore are these evils come upon you, as at this day.

24 And Jeremias said to all the people, and to all the women: Hear ye the word of the Lord, all Juda, you that dwell in the land of Egypt:

25 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, saying: You and your wives have spoken with your mouth, and fulfilled with your hands, saying: Let us perform our vows which we have made, to offer sacrifice to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings to her: you have fulfilled your vows, and have performed them indeed.

26 Therefore, hear ye the word of the Lord, all Juda, you that dwell in the land of Egypt: Behold I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord: that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Juda, in the land of Egypt, saying: The Lord God liveth.

27 Behold I will watch over them for evil, and not for good: and all the men of Juda that are in the land of Egypt, shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine, till there be an end of them.

28 And a few men that shall flee from the sword, shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Juda: and all the remnant of Juda that are gone into the land of Egypt, to dwell there, shall know, whose word shall stand, mine, or theirs.

29 And this shall be a sign to you, saith the Lord, that I will punish you in this place: that you may know that my words shall be accomplished indeed against you for evil.

30 Thus saith the Lord: Behold I will deliver Pharaoh Ephree, king of Egypt, into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life: as I delivered Sedecias, king of Juda, into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

CHAP. XLV.

The prophet comforts Baruch in his affliction.

THE word that Jeremias, the prophet, spoke to Baruch, the son of Nerias, when he had written these words in a book, out of the mouth of Jeremias, in the fourth year of Joakim, the son of Josias, king of Juda, saying:

2 Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, to thee, Baruch:

3 Thou hast said: Woe is me, wretch that I am, for the Lord hath added sorrow to my sorrow; I am wearied with my groans, and I find no rest.

4 Thus saith the Lord: Thus shalt thou say to him: Behold, them whom I have built, I do destroy; and them whom I have planted, I do pluck up, and all his land.

5 And dost thou seek great things for thyself? Seek not; for behold I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the Lord: but I will give thee thy life, and save thee in all places whithersoever thou shalt go.

CHAP. XLVI.

A prophecy against Egypt. The Jews shall return from captivity.
